"If a wife be a spendthrift, or if she otherwise neglects her duties, her husband may put her away without compensation; but if a man put away his wife for no other reason than that she has no children, he shall return her whole dowry.

"If a betrothal be rescinded, the man shall pay the woman compensation.

Municipal Ownership in England.

A comprehensive return of the financial workings of the "public utilities" undertakings in British towns and cities has just been given to the public in the form of a government blue-book. It covers the four years ended March, 1902. The principal undertakings carried on by 299 corporations were: Markets, 223; waterworks, 193; cemeteries, 143; baths, 138; electricity, 102; gasworks, 97; tramways, 45; harbors, 43. The aggregate net profits were $23,417,552.

Size of Families.

William E. Curtis contributes to the "race suicide" question some real figures. Consulting the census statistics, Mr. Curtis finds that the average number of persons in a family has fallen from 5.6 in 1850 to 4.7 in 1900. The decline has been gradual but steady. In 1850 the average number in a family was 5.6; in 1860, 5.2; in 1870, 5.1; in 1880, 5; in 1890, 4.6; in 1900, 4.7.

DRESSY AFTERNOON GOWNS

Hand Painted Muslins—Chine Effects Very Smart.

Hand painted muslins and chiffons are the favorite materials for those who can afford them, but good imitations are to be seen in the printed nets and muslin. Many of the latter introduce chine effects, and these soft materials lend themselves admirably to gaugings and tuckings.

Rough hats of yellow straw are very smart trimmed with black ostrich plumes.

A particularly up to date gown seen recently was of white crepe de chine with a deep flounce of openwork black silk fringe decorated with cream lace motifs and studded with emerald and gold and silver sequins. The top of the skirt was gauged slightly over the hips. With this was worn a wide belt of old rose damask silk with a bolero coat of the same knotted fringe studded with lace and sequins and finished with inner folds of rose chiffon. The hat to be worn with this was a big picture shape in chip trimmed with waving ostrich plumes, the brim being lined with pink roses. Certainly cream or ivory white is one of the best foundations for a smart gown.

The dainty costume shown is of gray velling trimmed with fringe and bands of old rose embroidery.

PETTICOAT STYLES.

Handsome Models In Brocades and Useful Ones In Gingham.

Silks, satins and brocades predominate in fashionable underskirts, though there is something dainty about a white cambric lace befrilled petticoat on a hot day. China silk, too, is used for underskirts as well as colored satins and mervelleux of different shades, often stitched by hand in a contrasting color. Nothing is daintier than an inexpensive white silk petticoat edged with black chantilly and further decorated with black motifs and insertions.

Pretty petticoats for useful wear are made of colored gingham trimmed with ecru lace.

Pongee and mohair petticoats are prettily finished with a flounce of buttonhole embroidery.

White cambric petticoats are made with wide flounces headed by a beading, through which is run a colored ribbon. These flounces are inserted with open lace either in straight or bias lines.

Black taffeta petticoats are always smart trimmed with chantilly lace.

The three-quarter coat in the cut is of black peau de soie trimmed with silk braid and lined with white silk.

WOMAN LASSO EXPERT.

She Hurls a Lariat With the Skill of a Cowboy.

"You think," said the man from the ranch, "that a cow puncher is a drunkard and a reckless shooter. It's not so. It is this way: Six weeks at a time he may be alone on the treeless plains with his cattle and not see a soul to speak to."

"Is he lonely?"

"No," replied Frank Chamberlin. "He learns to be interested in very little things. Maybe an antelope crosses the plain. He watches it an hour till it goes out of sight. Perhaps some Indians pass by on their way from one reservation to another, and that, too, diverts him. He looks after his steers, sleeps outdoors and maybe gets into town once a year. If he happens to get hilarious and raise things this once a year, then all the world says cowboys are drunken desperadoes. The fact is there is no more temperate man living than the cow puncher. Now, for myself, I never drink, smoke, chew or gamble. Once I smoked two years, but didn't care for it, so gave it up. There's my wife Myrtle, who was with me on the plains. She is a teetotaler too. Neither of us ever touches anything intoxicating, though we're both show people."

Mrs. Chamberlin is one of the few women in America who can spin a lariat and lasso a steer as well as any man cow puncher can do. She can perform with the best of the cattle men their tricks with rope and noose.

Some of her feats seem like sleight of hand. She begins with the merest loop in a rope, spins it round and round in a gradually widening circle, jumping into the circle and out of it again, meanwhile keeping up the motion steadily. She can gradually raise that whirling rope without marring for an instant the perfect circumference, throw it over her shoulders and leap out from under it again, it spinning, spinning all the while in a way to make you dizzy. One trick is to whirl the rope by a wrist motion; also a forearm movement, leaving the hand quite free. All this looks easy as smiling when Myrtle Chamberlin does it, but if you think it is easy try it. It is impossible for an animal or a human being to escape the lasso in the hands of an expert.

The picture shows Myrtle whirling a rope around her husband, Frank. She was a Michigan girl who went west to live on a Montana ranch. She and her husband became inseparable comrades and chums outdoors as well as in. He coached her in rough riding, cow punching and lariat throwing till he confessed she was as good at rope tricks as he himself was, and he was for awhile one of Buffalo Bill's riders. The pair after a time began to give exhibitions because that paid better than taking care of cattle for other owners. But after awhile—

"Then what are you going to do?"

"We are going directly back to Montana and get a ranch of our own and run it. We like that life best. Where you have your own ranch you can double your money in five years."

Myrtle is a noble specimen of physical womanhood, with arms like marble pillars. She is 5 feet 8½ inches in height and weighs 220 pounds, yet is active as a cat. She is a woman athlete. She told me she always rides astride at her home in Montana.

"It wouldn't be safe any other way, with the steep places you have to go up and down. At home on the ranch I never wear anything but a short skirt or out and out trousers, never a long dress. I have one suit with leather breeches just like that the cow punchers wear. I like that the best of all. Oh, trousers are altogether the best dress.

"Physical culture? I never open a Sunday paper that I don't see columns of stuff about it. I don't believe in 'physical culture.' I can do every one of these things these women can and I never had any training in my life. Work, that's what they want, something useful, that will exercise the whole body all over at once. If they would get out and do a good washing—that's the kind of exercise. But these ladies—they make this sort of motion, and this and this"—moving her arms. "What good? After exercising they squeeze themselves up into a corset like a vise, and fifteen minutes' of corset will upset and destroy two hours' physical culture."

In her public performances this nobly developed young woman wears knickerbockers and no skirt at all. On the plains, riding alone, she always carries a knife and "gun," as the cowboys call a pistol. The gun is carried partly because some accidental may make it necessary to shoot a steer or even the horse one is riding.

LITTLE ARTICLES OF DRESS.

Elastic Belts, New Fans and Veils Seen In the Shops.

The neck ruffles, stoles, little capes or whatever one may chose to call them are very smart and are calculated to set off the lines of the figure. The foundation may be of any fluffy material, caught here and there with little bunches of ribbon, artificial flowers, etc.

The wide elastic belt is also a feature of the season, and it is especially designed for wear with the short sack coat effects so much in vogue. One of the newest is of gold and silver elastic worked in a Russian design and held in place by jeweled clasps and slides.

Veils are simpler in texture and less closely figured than formerly. Pale blue chiffon veils are much affected with plain sailor hats.

Washable gloves are worn by all smart women during the hot weather.

TAILOR MADE OF RED CHEVIOT.

The favorite glove, however, for those who have dainty hands is made of silk in black or white, with double finger tips and snug fitting wrists.

Pretty fans are being sold in the shops. They are made to resemble when open bunches of flowers or a huge single flower, and they are most effective when worn with a gown which they match.

The simple tailor made sailor shape is being revived and is just the thing for outdoor summer wear.

The tailor made in the cut is of deep red cheviot trimmed with ecru and black applications of velvet and lace.

one, and for those who may not wear it the French sailor is designed in different sizes and trimmings.

The smart hats nearly all tilt off the face, but are brought well to the front to throw a shadow into the eyes.

A chic way of trimming a French sailor is to encircle the crown with a wreath of small flowers held together with a ribbon bow.

Scarlet touches in a rather deep shade appear on much of the white millinery.

The ecru hat trimmed with a single ecru ostrich plume is very pretty worn with a pongee gown.

The sailor shape of white linen simply trimmed with folds of china silk or a white breast is always smart and becoming.

In the cut are shown the latest bolero and a smart hat of coarse Italian straw.

STICKS TO OLD CUSTOMS.

The Supreme Court of the United States Is Wedded to Its Traditions.

The supreme court of the United States does business on an antiquated plan. While it undoubtedly is the most dignified body of men in this country, if not in the world, it has its peculiarities, and they are striking ones, says the Indianapolis Sentinel. One of the traditions of the court prevents newspaper correspondents from attending the sessions of the court in their professional capacity. Provision is made for a representative of each of the great press associations, but the correspondents have to push and crowd in behind the rear railing with the hundreds of other spectators. Usually they have to stand up, and if they are seen taking notes an attendant escorts them to the door. The result is that the 200 or more correspondents have to depend on their memory for their reports of proceedings in the supreme courtroom.

There is another custom of the court which prevents correspondents from seeing the opinions handed down until they have secured authority from the judges who severally deliver them from the bench. This authority is not always given, the judges exercising his own discretion about it. Not infrequently the correspondent has to go to the home of the judge to get the written authority, and perhaps by the time he gets back to the capitol the office of the clerk of the court is closed.

PLACED DUTY BEFORE WORK.

Man in Need of Employment Refused Job to March with the Unemployed.

A London preacher had an interesting experience not long ago with a hungry man. The mendicant explained that he had found it absolutely impossible to get work. He had applied everywhere, always to be turned away, and at last nothing remained for him but to beg from door to door for the food that was necessary to keep life in his body.

The clergyman's heart was filled with pity. The poor man seemed to be honest, and after being furnished with a good meal he was asked where a message would reach him. He gave an address and went away.

Then the preacher sat down to think the matter over. He knew of no work that he could find for the man, but he decided to invent a job.

Accordingly the next day the preacher sent a message to the luckless man, saying:

"Come at once. I have a position for you. We need a man to clean our school house and keep it in order."

He received an immediate reply as follows:

"Sorry I can't come. I have to march with the unemployed to-day. Would to-morrow do?"

PITTSBURG WITHOUT THE "H."

Variation in Spelling the City's Name Is Often Puzzling to Railway Men.

Is it Pittsburg or Pittsburgh, anyway? Of 23 companies indexed in the official guide with the names of that city forming a part of their title, five say "burg" and 18 say "burgh." The stitches, or old-stylers, appear to have it, supposing the official guide to be as inerrant as usual, says the Railway Age. The city papers differ, the majority aspiring to the aspirate—to which the progressive Post seems in its title to say Gee! But referring again to the guide, it appears that 16 cities named in railway titles, which have the disputed final syllable, those beginning with New, Pratts and Middle call themselves burghs, where Fitch, Blooms, Rose, Flemings, Gettys, Harris, Ham, Lords, Ogden, Stras, Philips, Vick and Waynes are plain burgs—13 against three. So the Gees appear to have it here. But aggregating the Pitts and other burgs and burghs in the 39 railway titles examined it is found that the burghs have a majority of three. Nevertheless the Railway Age votes for the commonsense burg, and demurs to wasting paper and ink on the superfluous h.

MOONSHINERS OF FRANCE.

Hundreds of Thousands of Families Distill Liquors for Household Consumption.

The recent agitation of the bouilleurs de cru, or private distillers, of France, against the proposals of M. Rouvier, the minister of finance, to tax their franchise has disclosed the immense power of this vested interest among the peasantry. It is estimated that no fewer than 1,000,000 to 1,800,000 families avail themselves of the privilege to distill from the pears, apples, damsons and cherries of their orchards spirituous liquors for household consumption, says the London paper. But as every hectoliter of nonexempt liquor —worth, perhaps, some $10—is taxed to the tune of $44, there is every inducement to the enterprising peasant to distill more than his household can consume, in order to do an illicit business with his neighbor, and in this way some $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 per annum escapes the treasury. In the orchard land of Normandy the privately distilled liquor is, indeed, quite a recognised article of trade, and most of the bouilleur de cru often pays his workmen, his tailor, his butcher, and his land in terms of alcohol.

Linen Coats—The Question of Petticoats and Shoes.

The linen coat of short or three-quarter length lends itself to a variety of elaborations. Very smart motor coats are made of linen and simply strapped. Needless to say, they must be extremely well cut.

There are some linen coats made in three-quarter effects, and these are very smart and useful for traveling, especially in the iron gray mixtures which come in the better linens this year.

Skirts which just escape the ground demand smart shoes, and in Paris fancy footwear is the rule, even red and pale blue kid being worn, but nothing can be smarter than the bronze or patent leather Louis XV. shoe, fastening with a buckle or a bow of grosgrain ribbon.

White cambric petticoats are the thing for muslin frocks, but foulards, plain taffetas and wash silks are to be preferred woolen gowns.

The old fashioned brown holland is being revived, and it is trimmed with torchon lace and embroidery. When this material is well made and worn with right accessories it forms a charming costume.

The evening dress in the cut is of dotted muslin trimmed with bands of shirring and bonilon lace.

Batiste Frocks—Foulard Utility Gowns—Some New Sunshades.

Young girls wear a good deal of hand embroidered batiste or muslin, and this is very dainty. These little gowns are made simply with openwork lace collars and ribbon belts or sashes.

Spotted and figured foulards make ideal shirt waist costumes. They are designed with the skirts and waists tucked perpendicularly with lines of fagoting or smocking for trimming.

Petticoats of dark blue and white and green and white gingham are smart to wear with blue serge or cheviot tailor made suits.

With a full dress a very full frou-frouing petticoat is a necessity. The red underskirt holds its own in a soft dull shade for wear with all black gowns.

Sunshades are returning to their old shapes and are for the most part unlined. The latest notion is a hand painted handle, the wreath creeping on to the ball top. Flowered chine moire is very artistic. White lace with black leaves in transparent work is also chic. Many of the handles have rosettes of chiffon or soft ribbon.

The pretty dress in the cut is of white veiling trimmed with fine white lace.

THE SELFISH WOMAN

And the Unselfish One

"THERE is a type of woman who goes through life getting the best and giving the worst," remarked the old bachelor. "My friend Jones married just such a one. He loved her to distraction, and she was one of those wishy washy maidens who simply look on and simper while a man tears up his heart for her benefit and rips up things generally."

"Such slangy expressions!" commented the society woman, with a lift of her eyebrows.

"Well, I don't care," he returned. "When I get to talking about that type of woman my vocabulary becomes brutal. She was pretty and dainty and always cool and serene. She had all the virtues because she was too neutral to have any faults. She would have married Jones or Tom or Dick or Harry or any of the eligible men who crowded around her. It didn't make any difference to her, but Jones happened to propose first, and he was a good catch. her parents told her, so she married him. Love? She didn't know the faintest meaning of it. Oh, waft; yes, she did; she knew the love of her own self. To be pretty, to be admired, to dress well, to get a good husband, to occupy a high place in this world, to be loved, to be petted, to be taken care of—these were parts of her creed. The mere fact of her marrying Jones and allowing him to provide for her until the end of her days, she considered, entitled her to absolute worship. In her own house she reigns absolute. Even her friends wait on her hand and foot. Of sympathy, generosity, she has none, but when but the least thing happens to her, ah, how she cries out! Every one must sympathize. And Jones, poor man, realizes at last what he has married. He might perhaps have been a great man if he had had a little sympathy and consideration. As it is, he is merely a hard plodder.

"Yes," said the society woman slowly, "but there is the other side to consider. For my part, my experience in the world has taught me rather to applaud the selfish woman. In fact, I will say even more. I will say that I think the harm done by the selfish woman great as it is, is not so great as that done by the unselfish one."

The bachelor only gasped, and his friend went on.

"One of my friends is a thoroughly unselfish woman. Her idea of dividing an orange is to give the orange and keep the peel for herself. Well, in the house where she lives are five of the most selfish people in this town—her husband and her four children. And they are selfish simply and solely for the reason that she always thinks of them before herself, so that they have grown to have an exaggerated idea of their own importance. If her husband has a toothache she may be dying ill herself, but she will get up and walk around with him. She forgives him everything because she understands him so well and sympathizes with his weaknesses. Result, he feels he can do about as he pleases, and he does. If some day that little woman were to assert herself I believe the family would drop dead. If they didn't do that they would certainly consider themselves the most injured people in the world. Now isn't she doing an enormous amount of harm? The greatest deeds in this world have been done by men for utterly selfish women.

"The generous woman, on the other hand, has hardly ever provoked a great deed. The more she has given the less she has received from the beginning of the world to this day."

"Why not, then, make a rule for women," put in the bachelor—"be unselfish to your own sex and be selfish to the men?"

"Because that wouldn't be always fair. There are some men who are so big and strong in their natures that they never could be selfish under any circumstances. They are the ones who make allowances for a woman's weakness, who give continually, almost mechanically, because they are the stronger, and it is the part of the stronger to give without counting the cost and never to take. They are the ones who make us realize the real meaning of the word unselfish. For their sake no woman should be entirely selfish."

YACHTING COSTUMES.

Serge Is Always Useful—Rough White Hopsacking Skirts.

Yachting costumes are among the considerations of the moment. French women are having a great deal of deep crimson serge made up in this way. The average woman, however, looks best in a costume of navy blue trimmed with touches of red or white.

Costumes of white serge and brilliantine are also smart trimmed here and there with touches of dull green.

A blue yachting costume seen recently was of blue serge decorated with crochet applique in scarlet with dark blue and red tassels. The skirt just escaped the ground and was cut very full. The jacket was loose braided and lined with scarlet silk. With this was worn a white tailor made shirt waist with a red leather belt and a tie of red silk.

Rough white hopsacking skirts are very smart cut with a wide flare and trimmed with five rows of military braid.

Flat military braid is very good also for linens.

Orange linen is a new shade. It is usually trimmed with black and white braid.

The yachting costume illustrated is of serge. The jacket is blue and the skirt cream with a blue band.

Entire dresses of white linen are the latest thing. These dresses are of two descriptions, those intended for walking costumes and the dressy variety. They are ornamented with tucks and with tailor made applications.

White china silk costumes are smart and almost universally becoming. They are trimmed with lines of fagoting and wide bands of antique lace.

Judge Kirkpatrick declares that "suckers are born every hour." Well where do the others come from?

That "Iowa idea" is forgotten for the time being and the Delaware idea is the leading figure in the public drama.

Sir Thomas Lipton visited Coney Island on Sunday. Possibly he was looking for a place to exhibit the Shamrock III.

The statement of Edward H. Southern that women rule the destiny of the theatre is too narrow. "All the world's a stage" when one considers the sphere of her authority.

No wonder Hanna declines to run the chances of being nominated for the presidency, when one realizes what work devolves upon the chief executive of this Nation. The strenuous life isn't to his fancy.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, not only boasts that it is the largest single body of Fythians in the State but that it has the youngest chancellor commander. Effervescent Thomas Muir, notwithstanding his youthfulness, should make a capable and creditable commander.

People like to know how they're rated in this world. Sometimes you can find out though your name is not in Bradstreet's or Dunn's. For instance the suit instituted by a husband against his parents-in-law, tells his young wife how much he thinks of her. Just $50,000. Don't you think she ought to live with him after that?

The Chicago Maternity Hospital has prepared a table showing how much babies should weigh. Once a year old, according to this authority, should tip the scale at twenty and a half pounds. Any weight over this is superfluous flesh. Strange to relate no suggestion is made as to a course in physical training. Dieting is recommended.

Scotch Plains is wrestling with the police question. At present the department there consists of one man. How many of its citizens express the opinion that a police officer is an ornamental and costly fixture of the municipality and should be abolished. Others take exceptions, wishing to have an imposing force, say for instance of two men. It's a weighty question, but possibly the Scotch Plains Council will be able to dispose of it on Wednesday evening without appointing a commission.

Bishop Potter has notified Rev. R. C. Fillingham, a priest of the Church of England, that if he or his associates interrupt the services at the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, New York, as proposed, he will be thrown into the street. The prelate declares that he has instructed the rector of the church to apply for a police detail to do the throwing. He adds that happily there is a law in New York to cope with such disorderly persons. The English priest is no doubt following in the footsteps of that fanatic Kensit, who was jailed time and again in England for the same offense. The Anglican communion unfortunately within its fold a few of these men who overstep the law in protesting against what they term idolatrous practices. Whether it be in the Anglican Church or any other such men as these should receive severe punishment. There is no orderly way for them to proceed in all such cases without resorting to a breach of the peace.

The foolish practice of many institutions of learning in conferring degrees without any regard to the worth of those receiving the honor has to a great extent cheapened their value. Many men have done nothing to entitle them to such honors flaunt their degrees on every possible occasion and the PH.D., LL.D., M.A., S.T.D. D.D., and D.C.L. are becoming commonplace. Little "one-horse" colleges scattered throughout the country seem to make it a practice to barter the honorary degrees for some financial assistance or special gift.

The big institutions, such as Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Columbia and Cornell, however, furnish a marked exception to this silly practice. The honors they confer upon the public men are generally well earned and well deserved. It is for this reason that Plainfielders welcome the announcement that Yale University has attached a D.D. to the name of Rev. William B. Richards, for many years the pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church. Rev. Dr. Richards is recognized as an able preacher whose utterances and writings have won him well merited distinction. He is a leader in his field of work; he is worthy of being called a doctor of divinity.

SCOTCH PLAINS, 6; ALIA, 2.

It was a bitter disappointment for Plainfield, Saturday, to see Alia go down to defeat before Scotch Plains on Crescent Oval. The home team made a pinchy fight, however, in one of the best exhibitions of the season. In the first inning, the first man up for Scotch Plains, was hit by the ball and the next man walked. These gifts together with a couple of opportune hits, gave Scotch Plains three runs. Three more were added while Alia was scoring twice. "Lefty" Davis, the Scotch Plains pitcher, was effective, keeping the sight hits made off his delivery well scattered.

Staub for Alia, pitched well and was finely supported by Page behind the bat. He was touched up for nine hits.

The playing of Henriues was a feature. The new shortstop contributed a three-bagger, one of the longest hits ever made on the oval. The other members of the team distinguished themselves more or less, except in the batting department.

The game was witnessed by the largest crowd of the season. A big crowd from Scotch Plains rejoiced in the success of their pets. The same teams will play two games next Saturday, one on the oval and one at Scotch Plains.

Game Forfeited by Ironsides.

Because Adair, the pitcher for the Ironsides of Newark, the Saturday's game between Hope and Ironsides on Hope Common, stepped outside his box in the ninth inning and the umpire awarded the batter his base, the visiting team refused to play out the game and forfeited it to Hope, 9 to 0. The score when the dispute arose was 11 to 9 in favor of Ironsides, with no one on base and nobody out in the first of the ninth. Adair had been warned against the offense several times previously in the game. Both teams played poor ball, a star catch by Hope relieving the otherwise featureless contest. The summary:

ST. MARY'S, 11; DUNELLEN A. C., 0.

Dunellen people who saw their pets play St. Mary's on the latter's field Saturday afternoon had no occasion to root themselves hoarse. The game that was all one sided, the score ending 11 to 0 in favor of St. Mary's.

The eleven runs were well earned, Dunellen men doing good field work. The exceptionally clever work of the short stop, Monahan, and the excellent command, change of pace, and variety of curves of St. Mary's pitcher, Hughes, were features. In the seventh inning, Monahan caught a sizzler off Hughes' bat after a hard run of nearly 60 feet.

At the opening of the eighth a change was made in the visiting team. Cushing went into the box and Stillinger covered second. Rangers at second base swapped with Cushing, better work resulting from the change.

Hughes for St. Mary's scored fifteen strikeouts against Hilinger's four and Cushing's one. Malloy at center played good ball for the home team and "freezing" onto several hot ones. Fred Winn, at first played an exceptionally good game in spite of a sprained ankle.

The score in detail follows:

MRS. CLAWSON BORNE TO REST

REV. DR. WILLIAM R. RICHARDS OFFICIATES AT FUNERAL.

Beautiful Flower Tributes—Interment at Hillside Cemetery—The Pallbearers.

The funeral services of Mrs. Frank T. Clawson were held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the late home in West Seventh street, where a large number of relatives and friends had gathered. Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, a former pastor of the dead woman, officiated at the services and offered tender words of sympathy to the family and friends. Three selections, Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," "O, Paradise, O, Paradise," and "The Hymn of the Homeland," were sung by the Lotus Glee Club, of New York.

There was a profusion of floral tributes from friends and relatives, including a large bunch of cut roses from nine associates forming a social club of which Mrs. Clawson was a member, and a similar wreath festooned with pink roses from a similar association composed of six young women. There were also a bank of roses and sweet peas tied with lavender ribbon and a large number of cut flowers. Perhaps, the most touching tribute was a bunch of roses from Mrs. Clawson's five-year-old son. These were placed within the casket.

The interment was in Hillside Cemetery and these were the pallbearers: Alfred Holmes, John Faxon, Frederick Nichols, Dr. Marcus L. Clawson, Asa E. Randolph and Frank J. Hubbard.

SCALE OF INCREASE.

Proportionate Advances in Wage of Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway Employes.

In giving the employes of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company an increase of wages, the new men will receive an increase of three cents an hour, making a total of 19 cents; two-year men receive 20 cents an hour, an increase of four cents; five-year men receive 21 cents an hour, an increase of five cents, and ten-year men receive 23 cents an hour, an increase of six cents.

COACHMEN AID HOSPITAL.

Send Check to Governors, Who Ask for More Money.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital met last Monday in regular session, but only routine business was considered. A check for $200 was received from the Coachmen's Union, of Plainfield, the profits from a recent ball given for the hospital benefit. The governors still feel the need of money with which to go on with the work at the new hospital.

SONG AND SPEECH

Local M. E. Churches Observed the Anniversary of Birth of the Founder of Methodism.

HIS LIFE AND HIS WORK

FIRST M. E. AND MONROE AVENUE CHURCHES HOLD SPECIAL EXERCISES.

Pastors and James R. Joy Speak—Sunday-Schools Observe the Day—Dr. Halleron at Monroe Avenue M. E.—All Day Worship.

Hymn and prayer and sermons combined to celebrate the bi-centenial of the birth of John Wesley in the local M. E. churches Sunday. The exercises were held in the morning and evening, consisting of special sermons by the pastor and observances at the Sunday-school session by the teachers and pupils.

At the First M. E. Church, the pastor, Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, preached a special sermon in the morning on "John Wesley's Work." The sermon treated of the founding of Methodism and its rapid growth from the time when Wesley started as a missionary among the Indians.

The session of the Sunday-school was a combination of the quarterly service and a celebration of the birth of the "Father of Methodism." Parallels were drawn between the lives of Paul and John Wesley. Ten teachers of the school told of some one characteristic of the great preacher corresponding with a similar trait of the Apostles. Charles and John Wesley's hymns were sung by the school.

At the evening hour of worship James R. Joy, the author of a biography of the great divine, delivered an address on "How John Wesley Awakened England." Mr. Joy told of the awakening of Wesley to his personal responsibilities to God. He told of the man's birth, his education and characteristics of industry and common sense, physical and moral courage and the singleness of his purpose in life and his strength of purpose. He referred to his introduction of congregational singing in his churches. He quoted McCauley's characterization of Wesley as an ecclesiastical statesman.

At the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church yesterday morning special services were held during the Sunday-school session. The exercises were in charge of Walter McGee, the superintendent of the school. Each teacher read a short sketch of the work of Wesley. Papers were read by Mrs. J. C. Pearson, Clarence Booard, Miss Fay Beekman, Mansfield Smith, J. C. Pearson, Edward Beekman and Miss Cumerson.

"Wesley and his time" was the theme of a sermon by the pastor, Rev. John McMurray. The religious beliefs of the English people at the time of the great preacher's birth were described. The pastor also spoke of the missionary work of Wesley, at the meeting of the Epworth League.

An address was given by the presiding elder of this district, Rev. Dr. Daniel Halleron, at the evening service. The fact that there are millions of Methodists in this and other countries shows convincingly, said Dr. Halleron, that a firm foundation was laid by Wesley upon which Methodism will continue to build until the world shall be redeemed.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Man Arrested at Elizabethport Accused of Killing Hoplock.

Frederick F. Williams was arrested at Elizabethport, N. J., yesterday, on suspicion of having caused the death of Joseph E. Hoplock, whose body was found floating in Staten Island Sound on June 23. Hoplock was a widower and leaves four children. The police theory is that he was attacked by Williams on a tugboat and then thrown overboard.

Quietly Married.

Miss Hannah Burton, of England, and George Bridge, of Grove street, were married at the First M. E. Church, Saturday afternoon. The couple have known each other since childhood. The groom is an employe at the Aluminum Plate Works. The affair was a quiet one, only the intimate friends of the couple being present.

the bride's mother, received their friends on the porch, in front of a marriage bell of white marguerites, screened with clematis. The mantles in the house were banked with maiden hair fern and bride roses. Charles Thorley, of New York, was the decorator.

Music was furnished by a large New York orchestra, and dancing was enjoyed on a platform on the lawn. The wedding supper was served along the brook banks.

The wedding gifts cost probably thousands of dollars. The groom's gift to the bride was a chain of pearls with a diamond pendant. The bride's mother gave the bride a chest of silver and a diamond tiara. The groom's brother gave the groom a gold loving cup, and the bride a diamond and emerald bracelet. Each of the ushers was presented by the groom with a diamond horseshoe pin, and Miss Hyde gave her maid-of-honor and flower girls bracelets with diamond hearts.

Over 1,000 wedding invitations were issued. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd and Mr. and Mrs. W. Palmer Smith, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Kepler, of Lancaster, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Godfrey, Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Godfrey, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bettle, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Mead, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. A. Wright Post and Mr. and Mrs. Girard Herrick, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Colby, of Orange; Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Griscom, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bettle, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Laffarre, Mr. and Mrs. James Kerlaly and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Brueon, of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Colby will take a wedding trip abroad, after which they will reside at Llewellyn Park, Orange.

The bride is the daughter of the late Charles Hyde, the Standard Oil magnate and president of the City National Bank of this city. The groom is one of the members of the State Assembly representing Essex County and is in line for the senatorship. He is vice chairman of the army branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, of New York.

"Let us taste of his quality. Let us drink the health of one who is great in many things but greatest as a man. One who is

'Of manners gentle, of affections mild. In wit a man; simplicity, a child.'

The health of Joseph O. Osgood."

Mr. Osgood, who followed, expressed his appreciation of the efforts of his friends and give an interesting description of the work now being done by the Jersey Central in building the Newark Bay bridge.

Mr. Hunt, secretary of the A. S. of C. E., spoke very highly of Mr. Osgood who has been a member of that organization since 1879 and a director for the past eighteen months, and briefly outlined its objects. Dr. Waldo had a few words to add about personal experiences with engineers and Mr. Besler, of the Jersey Central, concluded the speaking.

Before and after the speeches, Charles L. Lewis sang, rendering "Gypsy John," "My Love Nel," and "The Two Grenadiers." He was accompanied by Stephen Haff. Dr. Waldo also gave a 'cello solo from "Tannhauser."

ACTRESS TO WED.

Miss May Yale Announces Engagement to One Who Admired Her on the Stage.

May Yale, of East Front street, who appeared at the Central Theatre in this city some time ago, has announced her engagement to Dr. Bernard Lazarus, of New York.

Miss Yale says she met Dr. Lazarus while she was playing at Hyde & Behman's theatre, in Brooklyn. He presented her with a bouquet while witnessing a performance. The wedding day has been set for January 1.

Mr. Lazarus says he has been connected with Bellevue Hospital, New York, for four years and says he is the vice president of the allied William R. Hearst Associations in New York. A reception is to be given this evening in New York in honor of the engagement.

GREATEST PRECIPATION FOR JUNE SINCE 1887.

Facts and Figures of Interesting Nature Concerning This Month's Weather.

June, 1903, breaks all records since 1887, according to the weather bureau man. In 1887 the reports showed that it rained nearly all the month and rained hard. When the weather man for Plainfield got the dampness computed the rainfall for the month was scheduled at 10.12 inches.

June, 1903, has 7.42 inches of moisture to its credit. For fifty-two days before the rainfall of the present month started there had hardly been enough rain to keep the dust settled. here was less than one inch of rainfall and in some districts prayers were offered for rain that the crops might be benefitted. While this was true of the East generally the West was being deluged. Rain was the rule nearly every day in the great grain-growing districts of the West.

Then came the storm that had been waited and praped for. It came and with little intermission it has been here ever since. The average rainfall in the month of June for the past thirty-two years has been 3.16 inches. The years of 1887, 1871 and 1903 helped to bring up this average. The month of June, 1903, will increase it. But even with this average the rain of yesterday up till 4 o'clock had registered 2.49 inches. There was a greater rainfall in the few hours that it poured yesterday than there was in the whole month of June in several years. In 1896 there was 1.28 inches and less than two inches in 1899, while in 1901 there was less than an inch.

A MERCHANT DISAPPEARS

WILLIAM SCADDEN LEAVES HOME, AND WHEREABOUTS ARE UNKNOWN.

Englishman Starts for Homesdale, and His Store Is Closed in Consequence.

William Scadden, who has a shoe store at Peapack, N. J., disappeared on June 2, and his friends think that he may have been murdered. On that date he told some friends that he was going to Honesdale, Penn., to purchase stock, and would be back the next day. He borrowed about $30—enough, with what he had, to make up $1,000.

That is the last which has been seen or heard of Scadden by his friends. He has not been to Honesdale, which has been discovered by writing to the shoe factory in that town with which he dealt. His store in Peapack is closed. All the stock in the store is paid for, and the missing man does not owe much money in that town. It is feared that he may have met with foul play owing to the fact that he carried a large sum of money. Scadden is an Englishman about forty years old. He walks with the assistance of a cane held under his right knee.

CAREER OF HONOR AND USEFULNESS

ing the life of Henri-Frederic Amiel, author of the now famous "Amiel's Journal," translated into English by Mrs. Humphrey Ward. He had always been greatly interested in Amiel of whose personal history little has ever appeared. He passed two weeks in Amiel's home and with his friends, Mr. Zellie was the first stranger who had ever entered the house of the Genevan recluse who became so famous after his death, to make inquiries about his life and work. There he read his manuscripts, and talked with his friends.

In February of the present year he gave two lectures at Yale Divinity School on "Amiel and the Literature of the Inner Life" and is now at work on an article describing his visit in his home. Later he hopes to bring out a translation from the French of a biographical sketch of Amiel with much additional matter as he discovered in his home.

NETHERWOOD BRIDE FOR NEWARK GROOM

Miss Florence Reynolds Beals and Frederick Nicholls Watts Are Married.

IN ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

WEDDING CEREMONY LARGELY ATTENDED BY OUT-OF-TOWN PEOPLE.

Rev. S. F. Simpson Officiates—Reception follows at home of bride's parents — Honeymoon in Canada—To live here.

Miss Florence Reynolds Beal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Beal, of South avenue, Netherwood, was married on June 24 to Frederick Nicholls Watts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Campbell Watts, of Newark, the ceremony taking place in St. Stephen's Church. It was one of the most largely attended weddings ever held in the church edifice, and only a portion of the invited guests were able to witness it. The officiating clergyman was Rev. S. F. Simpson, of New York, formerly rector of the Netherwood parish.

The church was beautifully arranged with daisies and greens. The aisles were marked by long, heavy chains of daisies and greens and the chancel resembled a veritable flower garden. A mass of flowers adorned the altar.

Miss Eleanor Thurston Van Deventer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Agustus Van Deventer, of North Plainfield, was maid-of-honor. W. Standish Nicholls, of Pittsburg, Pa., acted as best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. James Buckley played the wedding marches. The ushers were William R. Beal, 2nd, a brother of the bride; Fred E. Reshing, of Newark; R. Watkins Ford, of Buffalo and William T. Church, of Newark.

The bride wore a gown of white imported Brussels lawn chiffon over duchess satin and caught at the forehead with a tulle veil. She carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley. The maid-of-honor wore white silk mulle over pink silk and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. Mrs. Beal, the mother of the bride, wore a gown of black [illegible]-cola lace and the groom's mother, Mrs. Watts, wore gray crepe de chine.

A reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony. In the dining room the decorations were of red and green with daisies interspersed. The parlors were arranged with bouquets of daisies and greens with here and there a group of sweet peas. At 10 o'clock the bride and groom left for their honeymoon which will be spent in Canada. They will reside for the summer at Caldwell, N. J. Later, it is expected, they will live in this city.

To each of the ushers the groom gave gold cuff buttons with their initials engraved. A pair of cuff buttons was the groom's gift to the best man. A diamond and pearl brooch was the groom's gift to the bride and the bride gave the groom a set of gold and pearl cuff and collar buttons. A set of gold pins was the gift of the bride to her maid-of-honor. Included in the wedding presents were sets of cut glass, jewelry and several checks of large proportions.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. Spencer Clark, Frank M. Clark, William B. Beal, Miss Mary Beal, Reynolds Beal, Thaddeus Beal, Albert Beal, Gifford Beal, Frank C. Wasse, Miss Evelyn Watts, Miss Kathleen Watts, Raymond H. Watts, J. W. McLaughlin, Walter S. MISS BRANTINGHAM MARRIED

WEDS HARRY EDWIN KLINGER, OF NEWARK, AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Rev. A. Cubberly, Pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist Church Officiated—The Attendants.

Harry Edwin Klinger, of Newark and Miss Georgia E. Brantingham, daughter of Thomas Brantingham, of South Plainfield, were married June 24 in the South Plainfield Baptist Church by the pastor, Rev. J. A. Cubberley, in the presence of a large number of guests from Plainfield, Dunellen, Fanwood, Newark, Elizabeth, Easton, New Market, Hazelton, Metuchen, New Brunswick.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in peau de crepe, trimmed with tulle and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She wore a veil of tulle, fastened with smilax and bride roses. The maid-of-honor, Miss Lizzie V. Schenck, of Plainfield, and the bridesmaid, Miss Daisy V. Houston, of Plainfield and Miss Bessie Soper, of Metuchen, were gowned in white organdie and carried pink carnations. The flower girl, Miss Marian Bigley, was dressed in dotted Swiss and carried a basket of carnations and smilax.

The best man was Stanley A. Klinger, a brother of the groom and the ushers were Harry J. Manning, Frank Faulks, Scott Klinger and Frease Klinger. The wedding march was played by Miss Stella Sofield, of New Market. The bride's gifts to the maid-of-honor and the bridesmaids were gold brooches and the groom's gifts to the ushers and best man were chipped diamond and opal pins.

About fifty guests attended the reception at the home of the bride's parents, which was elaborately decorated for the occasion. The church decorations were arranged by Mrs. Peter Johnson and Mrs. J. A. Cubberley.

Duke's Salary.

James Buchanan Duke is president of the Consolidated; he is also president of the American and of the Continental Companies. His year's salary is $50,000 from each of the two tobacco companies proper. Once a shareholder, turning callon, asked Mr. Duke what he did for these salaries of an aggregate one hundred thousand dollars.

"I'm not paid those one hundred thousand dollars," said Mr. Duke, "for what I do, but for what I don't do. I'm paid for the mistakes I fail to make."—Everybody's Magazine.

SHAPED HIS DESTINY

Career of Senator Nelson an Inspiration to Young Men.

Poor Norwegian Boy Who Rose from Deepest Obscurity and Now Is One of the Great Statesmen of the Hour.

The life of Senator Knute Nelson, of Minnesota, has in it the elements of a purpose novel of twofold intent. The themes, which are closely interwoven, are the powerful influence which the early inspiring of a definite ambition has in shaping a life, and how success is gained despite the most untoward conditions. These points are clearly brought out in a clever little sketch, contributed by Antonnette Van Hoesen to the Cosmopolitan.

A foreign-born American, Knute Nelson came to this country from Norway with his widowed mother when he was less than five years old, and earned his first money by selling newspapers upon the streets of Chicago. Later, when he and his mother were settled on a little sandy farm out in Wisconsin, his life was given a definite direction by one Mary Dillon, who taught the district school. Miss Dillon was a cultivated woman who came with her family to this country from Belfast, Ireland, to mend their broken fortunes. She became interested in the little, virile, eager-minded Norwegian boy, and, as stated intervals, invited him to her home. There, for the first time he saw the table-napery in use and a tastefully ornamented with flowers. On one of these occasions, in talking with him of the famous personages of history, Miss Dillon said:

"You, too, may become a distinguished man, Knute. You've a good mind, and all you have to do is to be industrious and persevering. You can't be president, for you were not born in this country, but you can be a United States senator." This was long before there was a "New Education," but one of its foundation methods was used by Miss Dillon in thus relating young Nelson's life to the vital facts in the lives of men of success. From this time on he studied them with keen personal interest, seeking to find just how they had achieved. He realized that the first step was to learn more than a country district school taught.

HON. KNUTE NELSON.
(Statesman Who Succeeded Despite Most Untoward Conditions.)

Senator Nelson tells that he journeyed in an ox-cart of home construction, the wheels of which were sections of a big log, to the little village academy from which he graduated. On this cart was a large wooden chest which contained, in addition to his scanty wardrobe, sufficient provision from the farm to last him half the term. He did his own cooking, living as simply as did Daniel when he was in training to stand before Babylon's triumphant king. At this time he bore, without the slightest thought of relinquishing his object, the constant slights and ridicule of his fellow students.

Senator Nelson's personality announces the staying qualities which enabled him to realize the ambition inspired by his first teacher. He walks short, sits tall, and has the sturdiness of those not easily overthrown. His wide, firm mouth closes evenly; his iron-gray hair and beard are cropped to coordinate with the square-turned lines of his head and face; and his ear, which, according to de Maupassant, indicates one's origin far more accurately than any certificate of birth, is sizable, with elaborate, well-defined convolutions.

In a small way he entered the arena of politics shortly after he had finished his academic course, and has filled almost every office in the gift of the people, once or more, up to the one he now occupies. Meanwhile, he found time to serve as a soldier during the civil war, and to become an able lawyer.

The woman who opened the world of books to the senator, and the scarcely less important world of the amenities of life, was a guest at his home while he was a congressman. After her death, among her effects was found, carefully dated and arranged, almost every thing that had been published, up to that time, about him. It is one of the regrets of his life that Miss Dillon, the inspirer of his attainments, did not live to see him a senator.

Walks Paved with Cornecobs.

A man who has been traveling in Iowa has hit upon an odd use of cornecobs. He says: "I made a trip through a big part of Iowa recently, and I found several grain shipping towns that had cornecob sidewalks. Yale University Confers Degree of Doctor of Divinity Upon Clergyman.

SCHOLARLY PREACHER

UNITED STATES MINISTER BOWEN MADE A MASTER OF ARTS.

Failed to Receive a Degree As Bachelor of Arts When Graduated—Other Distinguished Men Also Honored.

Rev. William Rogers Richards, an alumnus of the institution was one of two to receive the degree of doctor of divinity at the two hundredth and second commencement of Yale University, at New Haven, Conn., June 24. Dr. Richards was for seventeen years pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, where his powers as a preacher and pastor were developed. He is now pastor of the Brick Church, New York. Some years ago the College of the City of New York honored him in a similar way. Rev. Lyman Abbott, pastor of the Plymouth Church, New York, was the other clergyman to receive the degree.

Herbert Wolcott Bowen, United States Minister to Venezuela, a brother of H. E. Bowen, of this city, was restored as a member of the Class of '78. Mr. Bowen failed to get his bachelor's degree in that year because of a boyish prank. The degree of master of arts was conferred upon him, carrying with it all the privileges of an alumnus. Mr. Bowen has had a distinguished career in diplomatic and consular departments of the Government, having been for many years Consul General of the United States at Barcelona, Spain, before receiving his present appointment.

The degree of doctor of law was conferred upon Wm. Henry Brewer, Norton professor of agriculture in the Sheffield Scientific School, and George Gray, Judge of the United States Circuit Court for the Third district.

EVANGELIST SUNDAY.

Former Ball Player Is Ordained a Minister by Vote of the Chicago Presbytery.

William A. Sunday, former baseball player, was formally ordained as a minister of the Gospel by the Chicago presbytery a few days ago. He had applied for ordination as an evangelist on the advice of several ministers who had carefully observed his work during the past year.

He was pied with questions for an hour by the professors of theology and the learned members of the body before his application was finally passed upon favorably. He came out of the ordeal smiling. Occasionally some erudite professor would ask him a question he could not answer, and he would reply: "That's too deep for me," or "I will have to give that up." He created an excellent impression by his frank, honest manner and the rapidity with which he replied to questions.

"What are your motives in desiring to become an ordained evangelist of the Presbyterian church?" asked Dr. Herrick Johnson.

"To give me a prestige with men and the indorsement of the Christian church so that I may do more effective service for God in winning men's souls," replied the candidate.

Mr. Sunday then told the story of his life and how he happened to become converted. He began by denying a newspaper story which quoted him as saying that he quit playing ball to become an evangelist because there was more money in winning souls than winning ball games.

Mr. Sunday is a native of Iowa, and is now in his forty-first year. He was graduated from the Marshalltown (Ia.) high school and soon afterward joined the old Chicago ball club under Capt. Anson. For the past 12 years Mr. Sunday has devoted himself exclusively to religious work, and during the past seven years he has won a widespread reputation as a revivalist of striking power and piety.

MISS KATHERINE CARTY WEDS EDWARD FEIRING

Assemblage of Friends at Ceremony in St. Mary's R. C. Church.

A RECEPTION AT HOME

YOUNG COUPLE WELL KNOWN IN CITY AND BOROUGH.

Bride Sings in St. Mary's Choir—Groom a Machinist—Now on Their Honeymoon—To Reside in This City.

Miss Katherine T. Carty, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Carty, of Orchard place, and Edward Feiring, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Feiring, of Harrison avenue, were married in St. Mary's R. C. Church June 24, Rev. Andrew M. Egan, assisted by Father Delahanty, officiating.

Many friends witnessed the ceremony. The church was decorated attractively with flowers and greens. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Maria Carty and the groom was accompanied by his brother, William Feiring, as best man. Miss Carty wore a gown of ivory colored silk mulle trimmed with white taffeta silk. The bridesmaid wore silk batiste. Both carried bouquets.

Miss May Smith, the church organist, played the wedding march from Mendelssohn as the bridal party entered the church. Mr. Carty gave his daughter in marriage. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played as the bridal couple left the church. The ushers were John T. Carty, Thomas F. Carty, George F. Blackburn and Edward Blackburn.

At the home of the bride's parents a reception was held and a wedding supper served. One hundred guests were present. The dining room was decorated as the parlor with daisies and greens.

Niagara Falls and points in New York State will be visited on the honeymoon and upon their return to this city Mr. and Mrs. Feiring will make their home temporarily at the residence of the bride's parents in Orchard place.

The groom is a machinist in the Campbell Press Works and his bride is prominent in the work in St. Mary's parish. She is a member of a number of societies connected with the church and sings in the choir. Many gifts of useful and fancy articles were received by the bride, including some handsome checks.

NEW PROVIDENCE WEDDING

FIFTY HAPPY YEARS OF MARRIED LIFE

Rev. and Mrs. H. T. Duensing Celebrate Half Century of Union.

CAREER OF MINISTER

CLERICAL AND LAY FRIENDS OFFER CONGRATULATIONS.

Affair Arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Peter's German Lutheran Church—Many Tokens of Esteem.

Rev. and Mrs. Henry Theodore Duensing, of Liberty street, observed the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, June 24, and in the evening a celebration appropriate to the occasion was enjoyed at the home by the pastor and wife and a large number of friends. Among the ministerial friends present were Rev. Mr. Fisher, of Elizabeth; Rev. Otto Heidenreich, of Rahway, and Rev. Mr. Peterson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Rev. Mr. Peterson was accompanied by his congregation. There were also guests from Brooklyn, New York, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., including a number of persons who had attended school in New York, where Mr. Duensing was an instructor.

During the evening there were short addresses by the various divines and Mr. Duensing made a happy response to the pleasant words spoken in behalf of himself and his wife. The young people of Mr. Duensing's church, the German Lutheran in Grove street, took part in the festivities by singing. A happy feature of the affair was the presentation to the pastor and his wife of a purse of gold. The presentation was made in behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society and trustees of the German Lutheran Church by George Schmidt, a trustee. Some of the women also made handsome individual presents. Among the gifts were some valuable ones sent from Germany.

It was the Ladies' Aid Society and the trustees that arranged the celebration. Since coming to Plainfield in October, 1901, Pastor Duensing and his wife have endeared themselves to their people and many expressions of kindly thought and well-wishes were extended last evening. A bountiful collation was served by the women of the church and it was a late hour when the event terminated.

Rev. and Mrs. Duensing were both born in the Province of Hanover, near Hamburg, Germany. They became acquainted at that place while Mr. Duensing was a tutor in a private family, but it was fifty years ago yesterday that they were married in New York City by Rev. Dr. Stohlmann, at that time pastor of one of the two most prominent Lutheran churches in New York. Before coming to this country, Mr. Duensing graduated from a seminary in Germany and he then continued to teach both in St. Mark's and St. Matthew's Academies in New York. Between the years of 1868 and 1868 he taught languages and mathematic in New York, Brooklyn and Williamsport. He was at one time principal of the German-American School, New York. He was principal of the public schools at Mt. Vernon for two terms.

In 1876 Mr. Duensing was ordained a minister in the Lutheran Church, at Philadelphia, and he afterward held two charges in that city. He then went to Tamaqua, Pa., where he remained for five years doing mission work in the coal regions. From there he went to a place called Potter, N. Y., where he continued his mission work for five years. For ten years he lived in retirement in Brooklyn, occasionally doing mission work. During his very active career, Mr. and Mrs. Duensing has found time to cross the Atlantic three times, visiting the land of his birth. Mr. Duensing's only illness was an attack of the cholera in 1849, during the epidemic in New York.

During his varied and active life, Mr. Duensing has had the support and faithful help of his wife, and now at the completion of their first half century of married life they are hale and hearty and bid fair to live many years.

COMMENCEMENT DAY AT ST. MARY'S SCHOOL

Entertainment Under Auspices of Sisters in Charge of Parochial School.

SOME GOOD ADDRESSES

EXERCISES HELD IN THE SCHOOL HALL THURSDAY EVENING.

List of Those Taking Part in Affair —Father Egan Makes Address— Large Crowd in Attendance Well Pleased.

St. Mary's Parochial School closed its sessions for the term last Thursday when suitable exercises were held in the school hall at the corner of West Sixth and Liberty streets. Over a hundred pupils took part in the exercises.

The hall was decorated with bunting and greens. Miss Mary Smith opened the exercises with an overture on the piano and Miss Mary Murray, the salutatorian, read an address. A chorus of "Sea Fairies" opened a really clever pantomime entitled "The Lotos Eaters." Those taking part in the sketch were Miss Katherine Harding, Miss Helen Hanrahan, Miss Ellen Callahan, Miss Mary McCarthy, Miss Elizabeth Bebout, Miss Mary Wilber, Miss Lillian Finnessy and Miss Catherine Galbraith.

Miss Adele Von Ohl entertained with a reading and Miss Elizabeth McInerny sang "Dolly's Mama" with effect. William Holmes and his pupils, Miss Anna Daly rendered a vocal duet which proved to be one of the musical treats of the evening. An operetta entitled "The Fairies of the Seasons" was the main part of the performance. Every part was taken exceptionally well and was a credit to the pupils and to the Sisters of Mercy who spent much time in coaching them in their parts.

Selections by the school mandolin club proved to be an interesting part of the programme. The club consists of Miss Mary Smith, Miss Helen Hanrahan, Miss Katherine Harding, Miss Ellen Callahan. Miss Katherine Quinn entertained with several piano selections and the programme closed with a chorus "The Gleaners" by the entire school. Those taking part in the operetta were: Brownies — Patrick Powers, James Casey, John Curran, James Geary, William Sullivan, Lions Rhodier, Frank Donnelly, James Kyle, John Sullivan, Thomas Kilbride, Charles Bystrus, Frank Casey, Joseph Daedy, Louis Mattox, Charles Rhodes. MRS. F. T. CLAWSON DIES SUDDENLY Wife of Dr. Frank T. Clawson Unexpectedly Passes Away At Her Home.

FUNERAL IS ARRANGED

LEAVES HUSBAND, SON AND LITTLE TWIN DAUGHTERS.

Daughter of Captain Holmes—But Thirty-Four Years of Age—Funeral Services at House Monday Afternoon at 3 o'Clock.

The death of Mrs. Frank T. Clawson occurred Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, at her home in West Seventh street. She had been critically ill for four days. Dr. Marcus L. Clawson and Dr. Hedges, were at her bedside at the time, but had little warning of the untimely end. Yesterday she was unusually well and hopes were held out for her recovery.

Mrs. Clawson was formerly Miss Augusta Holmes. She was the daughter of Captain Holmes, for many years a resident of East Fifth street, and was born at Newburyport, Ma., thirty-four years ago. She had lived in Plainfield since a child. Nine years ago she was married to Dr. Frank T. Clawson, Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, officiating. Their union was a particular happy one. Mrs. Clawson was a member of the Crescent Avenue Church and for some time was a member of the church choir. She was also a member of the Plainfield Choral Society and the Monday Afternoon Club.

She leaves a husband, a son five years old, and two daughters each four days old. Two sisters, Mrs. John Fazon and Mrs. Frederick Nichols, of Fitchburg, Mass., and a brother, Alfred Holmes, of Long Island, who was married a few weeks ago, also survive her.

The funeral services were held from the late home on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The interment was at Hillside.

Fourth of July.

Everyone just now is making plans for some kind of an outing on the Fourth of July. Too often in the past has the day been followed by vain wishes that it had been spent in some other way than the one selected, but no such regrets ever attend the trip to Manch Chunk. Many people travel half over Europe without viewing more romantic scenery than in this, the so-called "Switzerland of America." Rugged mountain peaks are in awe-inspiring contrast to deep chasms and gorges while there is hardly a spot in this section where the artist does not long to plant his easel or the amateur photograher to expose a plate. And the beauty of it is that the jaunt may be made at very moderate expense and within the limit of a day's outing. The New Jersey Central announces an excursion on July 4th to Manch Chunk, Glen Onoko and the Switchback, the round-trip costing only $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children. It is alone worth making the trip to have experienced the novel ride of 14 miles over the gravity road known as the Switchback. There is nothing quite like it anywhere in the country. While it is exciting, the most timid have nothing to fear for the trip is quite safe. A fast special express train will leave Plainfield at 9:22 a. m., and arriving at Manch Chunk about noon. There is ample opportunity to see and enjoy everything as the return train does not leave until 8:06. The reserved ticket agent will supply circulars giving full details. People who decide to make this excursion will have something to remember all their lives and much to tell their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, of West Front street, sail tomorrow for Europe, where they will visit relatives during the next two months.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 3. "The Safeguard of a Nation"—Text, Prov. xiv, 34.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

Carlyle said, "Man is the born enemy of lies." However that may be, it is certain that all falsity is unprofitable. The wrong thing is the evil thing for man. Our good lies ever on the side of right. No permanent advance can be made by the individual or the nation except in the path of righteousness. To be immoral is to be dangerous. Sin against the person is crime against the state. The firm base of national prosperity is in the integrity and freedom of its citizens.

The oppression of any body of the people is a menace to the stability of the government. The danger lurks not altogether in the risk of resentment and revolt on the part of the wronged ones, but is ever present in the lawlessness of the oppressors. Those who defraud in one direction and oppress any one are likely to steal and abuse wherever they may have the chance to do so for their own ends. When honor is lost the defense of the nation is gone. The idea of the state is a union of persons for the common weal. The association is called the commonwealth. The aims are mutual defense, prosperity and happiness. If one class may be allowed to disregard the rights of any other the bond which unites all is severed and there is no protector in case the best he can, and there is then no national life, but anarchy, which is the opposite of society.

The impulse to get together is natural to men. Co-operation is the necessity if any work is to be done beyond that possible to the one person alone. But in co-operation the ability and needs of each one must be considered and provided for. To deny to any one his just dues is to hinder him from doing his part of work and robs the community of some benefit of his labor. The sin against him becomes the crime against the whole society, and the interest of all is in aiding him to get his just dues and doing his proper share of the common toil. Unrighteousness is an industrial, economical and political as well as a moral and religious wrong.

The principle reaches still further than this. For one nation to oppress another is as unwise as it is unjust. The consequences may not be seen at once, but the fruit of oppression will appear in disaster sooner or later. History proves beyond all doubt the truth of this text from the old wisdom book of the Hebrews. Spanish oppression of Cuba and the other American colonies is shown to be disastrous, not so much by the defeat of Spanish navies and armies, by revolt of colonies and dependencies, as by the decay of Spanish national life and prosperity at home. Goodness is strength.

Christ Only.

It was a great delusion of some in Paul's day that after they had begun in the spirit they hoped to be made perfect in the flesh, and there are some nowadays who begin as sinners resting upon Christ, but they want to go on as independent sinners, resting on themselves. That will never do, brethren. It is not "Christ and company" anywhere in the Bible. We know that to be Christ only, because he has nothing of his own, and the saint ought to know that it must be Christ only, because he has less than nothing apart from Christ. I believe that if we grow out of Christ we grow up in an unhealthy, mushroom fashion. What we need is to grow up into Christ in all things, knowing Him more and more and being more and more satisfied that He is what we need.—C. H. Spurgeon.

The Grateful Heart.

If one should give me a dish of sand and tell me there were particles of iron in it I might look for them with my eyes and search for them with my fingers and yet be unable to detect them, but let me take a magnet and sweep through it and how it would draw to itself the most invisible particles by the mere power of attraction! The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies, but let the thankful heart sweep through the day as the magnet finds the iron so it will find in every hour some heavenly blessings, only the iron in God's sand is gold.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Inner Life.

It is easy to be heroic when there is no crisis. It is very difficult to say before a few friends that we would give up all for Christ. But the spontaneous deed reveals the character. When the inner life of the man shows itself it is more than lip profession. A man who could be an extreme need think more of helping his enemy than of his own comfort must during his life have made it his habit to put others' interests above self, and he must have felt and loved the spirit of Him who died for those who hung Him on the cross. —American Friend.

What Evil Will Do.

The Lord often brings His people away from their sins by giving them such trials and experiences of what evil will do for them. If such be the present consequences of sin they begin to guess what sin will bring them when they come into judgment and condemnation.—Episcopal Recorder.

Trust In Him.

Would you trust your life to a stranger whom you had never tried? How can you have faith to calmly commit your soul to God if the angel of death should visit you tonight, if you have not trusted Him day by day? Cast all your cares upon Him, for He careth for you.—Christian Statesman.

WEDDING BELLS RING FOR MISS MARY VAIL

Former Plainfield Girl Becomes the Wife of William Walker Ware.

WEDDING AT COUSIN'S

REV. DR. HARCOURT, UNCLE OF THE BRIDE, OFFICIATES.

Mrs. C. S. Langdon as Matron-of-Honor — Couple Live in Tacoma, Va.—Married in This City— Sketch of Bride's Family.

Miss Mary Kline Vail and William Walker Ware, of Tacoma, Virginia, were married on June 24 at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's cousin, Mrs. C. S. Langdon, in East Ninth street. Rev. Dr. Richard Harcourt, of Asbury Park, uncle of the bride, officiated. The house was attractively decorated with palms, roses and daisies, green and white being the chief colors.

The bride was attended by Mrs. C. S. Langdon, as matron of-honor, and the best man was Edward Geddy, of Virginia. Harold Kline Wheeler, cousin of the bride, acted as page. The wedding march was played by Miss Daisy Belle Kline. After the ceremony and during the reception piano solos were rendered by Miss Roxana Love.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late Dr. Stephen M. Vail, first president of Pennington Seminary and the founder of the first Methodist Theological Seminary in America, now Boston University. As a professor he was considered the Adam Clark, of America, because of his proficiency as a Greek and Hebrew scholar. He was United States Minister to Germany during President Grant's administration. Miss Vail and Miss Jennie Vail, son and daughter, are now missionaries in Japan.

Among the guests from New York, Washington and Richmond were Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Vail, C. Milton Vail, Ernest Vail, Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Mooney, Miss Billa Jones, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wheeler, Chester Wheeler, Harold Kline Wheeler, H. F. Thomas, Mrs. Kruser, Mrs. Hellman, Mrs. J. M. Gardner, Mr. Deakle, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Daggy, Miss Isaac, Miss Mc Clernan, Mr. and Mrs. P. V. Masters, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard VanName, Miss Maud Applegate, Mrs. Riddle, Miss Riddle and Edward J. Kline.

The gifts received by the bride comprised cut-glass, silverware, table linen, and many other things of value and use.

CHARLES E. BUELL HAS PASSED AWAY

Prominent Former Resident of North Plainfield Dead at Atlantic City.

WELL-KNOWN INVENTOR

PATENTED TELEPHONE AND STREET SPRINKLER DEVICES.

Civil War Veteran—Secretary to Porto Rican Commissioner — Married Twice—Leaves Wife and Two Sons.

Charles E. Buell, formerly of the borough, is dead at 331 Atlantic avenue, Atlantic City, paralysis causing his end. He had been at the seashore since last May, having gone there from his home in Camden, for his health.

Mr. Buell was born in Torrington, Conn., in 1841. He moved to North Plainfield in 1890. At the outset of injuries sustained in the Civil War he was obliged to give up farming and he then entered the telegraph service of the Government. In 1900 he accompanied Dr. H. K. Carroll, special commissioner to Porto Rico, as secretary to the commission. He remained in the islands about six months and after returning to Plainfield assisted Dr. Carroll in preparing his report to President McKinley.

As an inventor, Mr. Buell won distinction, having been a patentor of improvements in the telephone systems. He was also the first inventor of the street sprinkler. As a writer on special subjects he gained much attention. He was a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Mr. Buell was married twice and by the first marriage leaves a son, who is a patent lawyer at Washington. He is also survived by a second wife and a son, Wm. C. Buell, by that marriage.

Herbert Richardson, of Stamford, Conn., is visiting friends in Dunellen.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 3.—Comment by Rev. R. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Endeavorers in training for public life.—Gen. xli, 39-42; Acts vii, 9, 20; Dan. vi, 1-4.

National anniversaries should not only speak to us of the past, but also of the present. They should not only recall the splendid achievements of those who wrought well for God and country in days gone by, but should impress us with the necessity of our performing in our day the duties that devolve upon us. They should be inspirations to present noble action as well as memorials to past noble action. The writer of the book of Hebrews recalls in the eleventh chapter of that book the wonderful achievements of the heroes of the past not simply to commemorate them and their deeds, but that we also, under the influence of their example, might "run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

Public life is as important as any other phase of life. A man not only owes a duty to himself and to his family and to the social circles in which he moves, but also to his state. And this duty is an important one. God has raised up human governments for the execution of his will, and He calls upon His people everywhere to be interested in them and to perform their duties toward them. "Render unto Cæsar," said Christ, "the things that are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's." God should hold the supreme place in our lives, yet at the same time there is an important place for the state and for civic duties. Nor is it enough to point out the impurities of political life and beg to be excused. That the name of God is not expressly written in the constitution of the United States is no excuse for a body of Christian people for refusing to vote. By their votes they could help stamp the name and character of God upon the government itself, which is better even than to have it written in our constitution. If politics is impure, there is all the more reason that Christian people should be interested in it, that it may be purified. God can sustain His people even in adverse surroundings. He kept Joseph and Moses pure in high places in Egypt and Daniel faithful even in idolatrous Babylon. Statesmen and politicians can be Christians if, like all other Christians, they depend upon the grace of God to sustain them.

God often trains His people for public service and calls them to it. He trained Joseph and Moses in Egypt, Daniel in Babylon and thousands of others in other ways. And when the crisis came and they were needed men recognized their wisdom and placed the reins of power within their hands. God still wants his people to rule this world. It is His world and should be governed in accordance with His will and by His people. Endeavorers, young and old, should keep themselves in touch with public life. We should be informed upon the questions of the day and by voice and ballot cast our influence upon the side of right and conscience and in favor of Christian citizenship — for "righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach unto any people." Our forefathers were faithful to God and to their country. They built a little world, His home, His name, His day, and they impressed His will upon the nation that they founded. Let us follow in their footsteps, rendering "unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's."

YALE MAN MARRIES DIPLOMAT'S NIECE

Miss Elizabeth Plummer Bowen Wed to Pierrepont Beers Foster.

YALE MEN AS USHERS

REV. DR. RICHARDS, WEARING NEW HOOD, OFFICIATES.

Bride Charmingly Gowned—Sister Acts As Maid-of-Honor—Reception at House—To Sail for Europe July 3.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Plummer Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elliott Bowen, of Watchung avenue, to Pierrepont Beers Foster, of New Haven, took place this afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church. Rev. Dr. William R. Richards officiated, wearing his doctor's gown and hood for the first time since receiving his degree of D. D. at the recent Yale commencement.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. The usual wedding marches was played, Frank J. Smith, of Newport, R. I., acting as organist. Preceding the ceremony, Mr. Smith played the Yale hymn and some New Haven marches, the groom having been graduated from the New Haven University this week. The church was decorated with palms and white daisies.

The bride was gowned in white satin and lohiffon with point duchesse lace. Her tulle veil was fastened with lilies of the valley and she carried a shower bouquet of the same flower. She wore a diamond pendant, the wedding gift of the groom. Miss Ethel Plummer Bowen, the bride's sister, was maid-of-honor. She was attired in white organdie, wearing a picture hat and carrying a shower bouquet of pink roses. The flower girl, little Miss Edythe Milliken, cousin of the bride and granddaughter of John F. Plummer, of New York, was dressed in a frock of pure white, with a large picture hat. She bore on her arm a Leghorn hat filled with white sweet peas.

The best man was Alfred Trecartin Ogden, of Yonkers, and the ushers were Henry Chandler Holt, Porter Steele, Ralph H. Nesmith, Ziegler Sargent, Carroll J. Waddell and Alfred Lucius Hart, classmates of the groom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents on Watchung avenue. The wedding breakfast was furnished by St. Denis, of New York. The house decorations consisted of sweet peas and smilax. One of the rooms was reserved for the display of wedding gifts.

Among the out of town guests were: Judge and Mrs. George C. Holt, Prof. and Mrs. Rufus B. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Bowen, and Hamilton Holt, of New York; Dr. and Mrs. John Pierpont Foster, of New Haven; Mr. and Mrs. John F. Plummer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Milliken, Dr. and Mrs. Brainard Hunt Whitbeck, Franklin A. Plummer, Jr., and John F. Plummer, Jr., Howard Plummer, Mr. and Mrs. Albert T. Plummer, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Schley, Miss Schley, Seney Plummer, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Talmadge, of New York; Mrs. Horace Loring, of Boston; Judge and Mrs. Hiram R. Steele, Miss Betty Steele, Mrs. William H. Williams, Miss Henrietta Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Heinrichs and the Misses Heinrichs, of Brooklyn; Miss Ogden, of Yonkers, and Miss Helen Currie, of Glen Ridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster will sail for Europe on the Cymric, July 3.

Catarrh of the Stomach.

When the stomach is overloaded; when food is taken into it that fails to digest, it decays and inflames the mucous membrane, exposing the nerves, and causes the glands to secret mucin, instead of the natural juices of digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach. For years I suffered with Catarrh of the Stomach, caused by indigestion. Doctors and medicines failed to benefit me until I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure.—J. R. Rhea, Coppell, Tex. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

Just As a Fire

spreads in dry grass and weeds, so does an inflammation of the throat—the result of a cold—grow down into the sensitive air-passages of the lungs. The cold, like the fire, should be promptly dealt with. When you begin to cough, use Allen's Lung Balsam. It will certainly heal the sore throat and lungs and it may save you from consumption.

Mrs. E. E. Runyon and son, Kenneth, and Mrs. T. F. Budlong and daughter, Miss Lucie Budlong, of Madison avenue, have returned from a sojourn at Lebanon, Hunterdon County.

ARTHUR W. VAIL WEDS MISS P. B. EMMONS

Marriage Takes Place Quietly at Home of Bride's Parents in the Borough.

DR. YERKES OFFICIATES

ONLY THE NEAR RELATIVES OF BRIDE AND GROOM PRESENT.

Now Enjoying Honeymoon—To Reside in This City—Many Handsome Gifts Presented to the Bride.

Miss Priscilla Beatrice Emmons, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Emmons and Arthur Wilbur Vail, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Vail, of East Seventh street, were quietly married Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, corner of Washington avenue and Prospect place, North Plainfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist Church, in the presence of the near relatives of the bride and groom. The couple were unattended.

The decorations at the home were very effective, but simple, consisting chiefly of vines and daisies. This scheme was carried out in the parlor, reception and dining rooms. In the parlor there was an improvised altar, with a profusion of daisies and vines leading up to handsome jardinieres. It was here that the ceremony was performed. Miss Myra Emmons, the bride's sister, played the wedding march.

After the wedding, an informal reception was held and supper was served. Later Mr. and Mrs. Vail left the city to enjoy a honeymoon. They will return home in about a week's time and will reside in Putnam avenue, where the groom has furnished a home adjoining that of his brother, E. Frank Vail.

The couple received a great many handsome gifts from relatives and friends, including silver and goldware, cut-glass, furniture, paintings, banquet lamp and a substantial check from the bride's father. An appreciative gift was a solid silver set of knives, forks, spoons, etc., from the groom's employers, Saxe Brothers & Company, bankers and brokers at 35 Broad street, New York.

THE WORKERS.

State Federation of Labor to Meet in Annual Session at Bridgeton in August.

The twenty-fifth annual convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor will be held in the Cumberland County Court House at Bridgeton, N. J., commencing Monday, August 17.

The aim of the State Federation is the establishment and promotion of local, national and international trade unions and the combination of all such trades unions in the American Federation of Labor, for the purpose of aiding and assisting each other, and securing State and National legislation in the interest of the wageworkers, and influencing public opinion by peaceful and lawful methods in favor of organized labor.

KODOL
Digests What You Eat.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Kodol

Digests What You Eat

Mrs. Lottie Nichols of Penn Yan, N. Y., writes: "I was a sufferer from weak heart, and was induced by reading my heart paper to try Kodol. It has done me very much. Finally I got a bottle of Kodol and it gave me immediate relief. After using a few bottles I am cured."

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders, and gives the heart a full, free and untrammeled action.

Bottles only. $1.00 Size holding 2½ times the trial size, which sells for 50c.

"FOURTH ESTATE" ON THE ASBURY PARK

Newspaper Men Guests of Railroad Company Aboard Its New Vessel.

PRESENTATION OF CUP

"TRIP UP THE HUDSON AND DOWN THE BAY."

Mayor of Asbury Park Presents Cup on Behalf of Common Council and Board of Trade—Many Park Residents Aboard.

One continuous ovation from the crafts along its course marked the initial trip of that splendid example of steam-boat construction, "The Asbury Park," Thursday afternoon. The vessel bearing some 1300 passengers plied its way up the Hudson and down again in a fashion that made the officials of the New Jersey Central Railroad Company as enthusiastic as were their guests. The outing was tendered by the railroad company to prominent citizens of the seaside resort for which the boat is named and the editors along the lines of the rejuvinated road.

Early in the day the Asbury Park steamed down to Atlantic Highlands and took aboard the guests borne by special train from the southern sections. Turning its head the boat set out for Jersey City, a signal from the pilot house to the engine room being given for "full steam." Then and there a record was made—the fastest time yet heard of for boats plying between those two points.

When the gang-plank was thrown out at Jersey City, Vice President Besler, General Superintendent Huntington, General Passenger Agent Burt and others, who have achieved a heroic task in wiping out the unhappy condition of the former administration, were there to greet the guests living along the main line of the road in this State and in Pennsylvania. The efficient Chief of Detectives Dougherty was "on the spot" as usual.

At 12:45 the start was made and for nearly two hours it seemed as if the passing boats were trying to drown the instrumental music furnished by a corps of Asbury Park school pupils, by endless salutes. Just opposite Tarrytown the vessel was turned about and allowed to drift down stream with the tide.

Frogs among the crowd of merry-makers, Bruce S. Keator, mayor of Asbury Park, stepped forward and in the name of the Common Council and Board of Trade of that place presented a handsome solid silver loving cup as a token of appreciation of the honor conferred on that city. Incidently he said:

"We desire that you shall accept this as a very slight token of our appreciation of what you have done for us and for our city. We have selected the loving cup in preference to anything else which we might have given you because it is emblematic of love and symbolic of friendship, and it is given to you by our citizens in this very spirit.

"I trust that as we sail to and from New York on this beautiful steamer in years to come, this spirit of friendship now existing between our people and the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey may grow stronger and stronger. It is with this hope and expectation that I now present you with this very slight token of our friendship and regard."

Upon receiving the gift, Vice President Besler said:

"On behalf of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, I accept and sincerely thank you for this beautiful cup, and wish to reciprocate the thought that this token may be but the beginning of a friendship lasting —not only so long as the good ship "Asbury Park" plows the briny waters of Old Ocean—but through all time.

* * * * * * *

"For the past year it has been the constant aim and endeavor of the present management of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey to make its line the popular, and so to speak—the home-road of the communities which it serves. We wish, if possible, to do the greatest good to the greatest number, and if we succeed, we probably have accomplished all that we can reasonably hope to achieve.

* * * * * * *

"And now in conclusion, allow me to again thank the citizens of Asbury Park for this beautiful loving cup, and may the sentiment which has inspired it remain forever indelibly and indissolubly implanted in our minds and hearts. May the 'Central Railroad Company of New Jersey'—The 'City of Asbury Park'—and 'Progress' stand linked together, synonymous,—one for all,—all for one."

A collation was enjoyed at the conclusion of the speechmaking and the guests were allowed to view the loving cup. Cheers rent the air for the officials of the road, when the editors and others from the main line of the Central stepped ashore at Jersey City promptly at 4:30 o'clock.

Among the guests were 286 citizens of Asbury Park; fifty officials and employes of the road, including Assistant General Passenger Agent W. C. Hope, Claims Agent J. R. Large, District Passenger Agent Ira E. Whyte, and Walter Hendry Hayden; 312 editors, with their wives and families, including A. L. Furce, editor and proprietor of The Daily Press; H. W. Webb, of the North Plainfield Weekly Review and wife, and R. F. B. Huntsman, advertising manager of the Brooklyn Standard Union; representatives of the Associated Press and New York newspapers and a party of special friends of the road.

MISS GIDDES' PIANO RECITAL

THE PUPILS ENJOY AN INFORMAL PROGRAMME.

Refreshments Were Served—Those Taking Part in the Recital.

Miss Adelaide L. Giddes' pupil recital at her studio in Manning avenue proved to be a delightful affair. While the entertainment was informal in nature yet the members rendered by the apt pupils clearly demonstrated the skill and thoroughness of Miss Giddes as an instructor.

After the recital was concluded refreshments were served. Among the pupils participating on the well varied programme were Ras Warnock, Annie Martin, Ada Dennis, Ethel Pope, Burt Pope, Ethel Manchester, Agnes Manta, Annie Giddes, Nellie Giddes and Arthur Ross.

MRS BREEN DEAD.

Fracture of Leg Causes Shock Which Proves Fatal.

Mrs. Ann Breen, aged sixty-three years, wife of Paul Breen, died last Thursday at her home in East Second street. Three weeks ago she fell down stairs and fractured her leg and she was unable to overcome the shock from the injury. Mrs. Breen was born in Wales, Eng., and has lived in this country where she was eighteen years of age. She was a resident of Plainfield for five years. Surviving her are a husband, Paul Breen and two sons, William H. Breem and Frederick Breem, the latter a member of the fire department.

R. B. Finch, Speechmaker.

At the ovation given to Postmaster Cornelius VanCott and his son, Richard VanCott, by the Lincoln Club, of the Fifth Assembly district, New York, a handsome silver loving cup was presented the younger VanCott. Edward B. Finch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Finch, of Park avenue, was chosen to make the presentation speech, which he did in a felicitous manner.

Miss Mary Judson, of Montgomery, N. Y., and Miss Lucy Smith, of John street, have returned home, after a week's visit with friends at Freehold. While there they attended the 125th anniversary exercises commemorative of the Battle of Monmouth.

THEATRICAL.

One of the catchiest songs in "The Wizard of Oz" the successful extravaganza now running at the Majestic Theatre, New York City, is the sensational "Sammy" song which is being whistled and hummed from one end of the metropolis to the other. Miss Lotta Faust trips down to the footlights and sings "Sammy" with so much gesture and such an excess of languishing facial expression that many people in the audience doubtless imagine that she must really be in love with some man of that plebian name. But it is not until two score of pretty girls forming a background for Miss Faust's serenade begin to really work that the excitement starts. Imagine forty of the prettiest girls in "The Wizard of Oz" singing this ode to Eros and duplicating Miss Faust's amorous pantomime.

The magic of a name was never more clearly demonstrated than in the case of Miss Fay Templeton with "The Runaways" at the Casino. "The Runaways," massive, spectacular, colorful and tuneful, was playing to more money each week than any of the former big successes of that popular play house. Miss Templeton has now been with the company two weeks and there has not been an unoccupied seat in the theatre at any performance in that period. Her every appearance on the Casino stage is greeted with the most enthusiastic applause.

Among the guests present at the one hundred and fiftieth performance of "The Earl of Pawtucket" at the Manhattan Theatre, were C. M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel Company, and Sir Percy Sanderson, British Consul general, who, with their families, occupied boxes; Captain Wrings, who will sail "Shamrock III;" Captain Watson who sailed "Shamrock II" and the sailing master of "Shamrock I" in another box; and George C. Boldt, of the Waldorf-Astoria and assistant manager Barse and their families in another box. At the close of the first act the house burst into enthusiasm over the acting of the star, Lawrence D'Orsay. Mark Twain arose in his box and made a characteristic speech, in which he eulogized "The Earl of Pawtucket" and the company, making humorous remarks about the author of the play.

For a delightful trolley ride and a pleasant afternoon beside the winding Raritan river no pleasanter trip can be taken than a ride to Riverside Park. The boisterous element is an absent quantity, the management making it a point to preserve perfect order. High class vaudeville performances every evening.

Pain inaugurated and amusement season at Manhattan Beach last Thursday evening with her magnificent new spectacle, "Last Days of Pompeii" followed by a gorgeous display of the world-renowned Manhattan Beach fireworks. The opening went off in a blaze of glory. The fame of the attraction drew a crowd of 2,500 people, despite the fact that the weather was still unsettled and the air uncomfortably cool. It is universally conceded by patrons whose memories run back a score of years that Pain has excelled himself in this season's production.

COMPANY INSOLVENT

Judge Appoints Receiver For Shipbuilding Concern.

DRIFTING ALONG WITHOUT GUIDANCE

Directors Are Not Striving to Relieve the Shareholders, and Protection Can Only Come From the Courts.

NEWARK, N. J., July 1.—Judge Kirkpatrick of the United States court has announced to counsel representing complaining bondholders of the United States Shipbuilding company that after having read all the papers in the case he has decided that the corporation is insolvent and that its directors have failed to take proper steps to protect the bondholders and seem to be without ability to raise funds. The judge has therefore ordered the appointment of a receiver.

The judge's opinion, just given out, enters very fully into the merits of the controversy.

"It would appear that the directors of the company have abdicated their powers and that the company is drifting along without any guidance. Not only are the directors not striving to relieve the company from embarrassments, but they are advising the stockholders to submit to numerous extortions to procure present funds and threatening foreclosure to those bondholders who refuse to relinquish the security of their mortgages. These people are entitled to the protection of the court, and that protection can only be had by the interference of the court and the appointment of a receiver."

Referring to the affidavits filed by the directors the court says:

"If taken literally they would have a tendency to mislead the court. As, for instance, Mr. Gary admits the truth of the allegations contributed to him in the complainants' bill, that the bills payable of the shipbuilding company maturing between now and Aug. 1 next, independent of maturing accounts current, are $410,021.14, but says that liabilities from an indorsement of the notes of the constituent companies and that all of the maturing and pressing accounts in the bill and mentioned in his statement therein referred to are obligations incurred by the constituent companies and are not acts chargeable to the United States Shipbuilding company or that it is liable for them and adds that there are no notes or bills payable against the United States Shipbuilding company."

THE BUILDING TIE UP.

Fuller Company Expects to Resume Immediately.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The agreement between the Fuller Construction company and the United Board of Building Trades has been signed, and the company expects to resume building operations today.

The Building Trades Employers' association declared the Fuller agreement fatally defective and insists that its own elaborate plan of arbitration must be accepted by the labor unions in the general tie up is ended. I. K. Prince, of the board of governors denied that a committee had asked the lumber dealers to renew their lockout. Charles L. Eidlitz said:

"We have all the financial backing we want, and most of us have decided that this thing may not be over until September or October. We are ready and have taken precautions to that effect."

Members of the conciliating committee of the National Civic Federation are not in sympathy with the Fuller company agreement, as they desire a general agreement of all employers and employees.

Lorens and Wife Committed.

TOLEDO, O., July 1.—United States Commissioner B. F. Brough committed Theodor Lorens and his wife to the jurisdiction of the United States supreme court of the District of Columbia. Mr. and Mrs. Lorens were arrested here last week upon indictments issued by the federal grand jury at Washington in connection with the post office scandal. When they were taken before Commissioner Brough their attorney made an effort to have the commissioner conduct a preliminary hearing of the case. The United States attorney held that that was not within the jurisdiction of the commissioner, and the commissioner took the same view of the case, and the defendants were committed.

France Increases Duty on Meat.

PARIS, July 1.—The chamber of deputies passed M. Debussy's bill increasing the duties on cattle and fresh meat. They were duties on oxen will be 30 francs in the general tariff and 20 in the minimum tariff; sheep, 40 francs and 25 francs, and pigs, 25 francs and 15 francs. A clause in the bill empowering the government to suspend the duties without consulting the chambers in the case of a rise in the price of meat was rejected at the request of the government.

Lamphire's Victim Is Dead.

LOWELL, Mass., July 1.—Miss Georgianna Goddu, the victim, it is alleged, of the jealous rage of Joseph A. Lamothe, is dead as the result of bullet wounds inflicted Sunday night. Dr. Payette, the other victim of the shooting, continues to show favorable symptoms. Lamothe is still at large, and it is believed he is trying to reach Canada.

American Treated by Pope's Doctor.

ROME, July 1.—Mgr. McEwan of the archdiocese of St. Paul, Minn., is seriously ill at the hospital of the Fate Bene Fratteli. He is being treated by Dr. Lapponi, the pope's physician, who is a member of the board of directors of that institution.

KAISER'S TRUE COURTESY.

British War Ships Would Join In Celebrating Fourth of July.

KIEL, Prussia, July 1.—The American officers, though interested in the proceedings here, were glad to get away from the necessity of changing uniforms three or four times a day and from long periods of duty. Rear Admiral Cotton and the captains of the American ships were also relieved to depart without any untoward incident having occurred. They, with Ambassadors Tower and Meyer, had been daily in contact with Emperor William and were impressed with his sincerity and earnestness. They all said that they felt he could have done nothing more to show his appreciation of the visit of the squadron to Kiel or his desire to win American good will.

The presence of the squadron from the side of the German public is regarded as a demonstration of friendliness, especially as the battle ship Kearsarge was sent at five days' notice to join the squadron and also because the administration at Washington expressed definite sentiments toward Germany through Ambassador Tower's speech.

Personally the emperor's bearing was unaffected and even jovial. He has often spoken with singular openness.

German observers await with curiosity reports of the American squadron's entertainment at Portsmouth. The British foreign office at first desired that the American war ships should arrive at Portsmouth in time to enable the British ships to join them in celebrating Independence day. This, however, became difficult owing to the desirability of the American squadron staying here until June 30; hence the British dates were changed.

RUSSIA OPPOSES TREATY.

Coming Conference May Help Chinese-American Agreement.

PEKING, July 1.—Prince Ching, president of the foreign office, has returned from the summer palace in order to hold a conference with Minister Conger in regard to the commercial treaty between China and the United States. It is understood that the Russian opposition which, the Chinese foreign office insists, prevents its signature, is unchanged, though friends of the American treaty profess to expect that the coming conference between Generals Kuropatkin, the Russian war minister, and M. Lessar, the Russian minister to China, at Port Arthur will result in the removal of the Russian opposition.

An official telegram has been sent to the new viceroy of Canton directing him to order the troops in the field to exterminate the remaining rebels in Kwangsi province, where, it is understood, the suffering from the famine eclipses the losses caused by the rebellion.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT ST. MARY'S SCHOOL

Miss Margaret Lutz Choses Class Motto As Subject for Valedictory.

OPERETTA A FEATURE

FATHER EGAN PRESENTS DIPLOMAS TO THE EIGHT GRADUATES.

Prize Winners Announced—Gold Medals Awarded—Those Taking Part in the Exercises—Large Crowd Present.

With the production of the operetta "The Bell in the Forest" in St. Mary's Parochial School Hall Friday night the last of the commencement exercises was held and diplomas were presented to the graduates by Rev. Andrew M. Egan. Two hundred people were present.

Miss Mary Smith opened the exercises with an overture and Frank Mc Inerney followed with an address. The parts in the operetta were taken by John Donnelly, Joseph Sullivan, John Casey, James Cullen, Edward Carty, Cornelius McCarthy, Thomas Harding, Martin Welsh, Robert Skinner, Warren Seaman, Martin Flatley, Thomas Kennedy, Neil Scott, William Summers. During the play Misses Catherine Galbraith and Elizabeth Brown played a piano duet commendably well and little tots from the primary department sang a motion song.

In the second act of the play, the Misses Elizabeth Brown and Catherine Powers favored with a piano duet and Miss Adele Von Ohl recited. Selections were rendered by the school mandolin club, the members of which are: Miss Mary Smith, Miss Helen Hanrahan, Miss Katherine Harding and Miss Ellen Callahan. Miss Katherine Quinn gave several selections on the piano in a manner which brought forth applause.

The valedictorian, Margaret Lutz, chose for her text the class motto, "Excelsior," illustrating its appropriateness, as encouraging faith, hope and ambition, by incidents from the lives of great men. She said that as long as the class motto holds its influence over the members, there can be no danger from the difficulties and temptations in the way.

Rev. Father Egan presented the diplomas to the graduates. Those receiving them were Miss Margaret J. Lutz, Miss Catherine I. Harding, Miss Helen M. Hanrahan, Miss Ellen F. Callahan, Miss Mary A. King, John P. Kyle, John T. Donnelly and Joseph R. Sullivan.

At the time the diplomas were presented Rev. Father Egan announced the prize winners of the several contests which have been held during the school term. They are:

For general excellence in sewing, Miss Margaret Lutz, a gold medal; for excellence in grammar, Miss Ellen Callahan, gold medal; in Christian doctrine, Miss Catherine Harding, gold medal; in penmanship, Miss Nellie Hanrahan, medal. In the grammar department Louis Dixon was awarded a medal for high standing all studies. Class pins were presented to Miss Margaret King, and Masters John Kyle, John Donnelly and Joseph Sullivan.

The evening's exercises closed with a tableaux entitled "Faith, Hope and Charity" and a chorus "Farewell."

The exercises of Thursday and last nights were arranged by the Sisters of Mercy connected with St. Mary's convent and it is to them that the credit for the success of the affair is due.

Many Conventions.

A BRIDE OF A MONTH

ACTION FOR DAMAGES NOW IN THE SUPREME COURT.

Married in Haste; Repent at Leisure?—Said That Groom Sought Riches—Denial by the Young Husband.

Summons were served last Monday on George Marsh, his wife, Virginia Marsh and Mrs. Hannah Marsh, all of Scotch Plains, in a suit for $50,000 instituted in the Supreme Court by Clifford Schorb for damages and alienation of the affections of his bride of a month. Isaac P. Runyon is Schorb's lawyer.

The suit is the result of the secret marriage of Miss Ethel Marsh to young Schorb, Tuesday, June 9. The wedding was performed by Rev. Dr. Fenton, of Metuchen. On Wednesday, June 17, the young couple announced that they were man and wife. The parents of the bride opposed the match and, it is said, threatened reports about to the effect that young Schorb enticed her away.

It is claimed that he forced her to marry him, wealth being his real object. In the suit Mr. Schorb denies these allegations and makes a counter claim against the defendants for enticing his bride away from his house under false pretenses.

It is alleged that Schorb has in his possession certain billets doux tending to prove the young wife urged a hasty marriage.

PRELIMINARY RACES.

Driving Park the Scene of Some Sharp Encounters—Many Enjoyed the Sport.

The Plainfield Driving Association's races at the driving park Saturday afternoon were all hotly contested in spite of the fact that they were merely preliminary to the more elaborate even of the Fourth. A large crowd attended and enjoyed some keen sport. The principal race was won by J. W. Jackson's Woven Wind; with A. J. Smalley's Belle second; Jessie, owned by Mr. Woodbridge, third. The time for the mile was 2:29¼. J. H. Greene's two horses, Jerry Red and Wonder, trotted two heats in a mile race, Wonder coming in a winner in 2:34 and 2:32. N. B. Smalley's Prince won by a nose from Stonewall Jackson's May Queen in two out of three heats, for the mile. There was much of a closeness about all the races although the horses were allowed to save their strength until next Saturday.

BOROUGH COUNCIL MAY TEST THE LAW

Inability to Make Appropriation for Back Taxes Leads to Action.

SCHOOL NEEDS MONEY

NORWOOD AVENUE OFFICIALLY ACCEPTED AS A STREET.

Flag Stone Sidewalk Legislation—Chief Marshal to Kill Stray Dogs — Many Bills Ordered Paid—Other Business.

A report regarding the money alleged to be due the North Plainfield Board of Education for back taxes was received from Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed at the adjourned meeting, of the North Plainfield Common Council last Tuesday. The question was a brief one and but few matters of importance were discussed.

The amount due for back taxes is said to be $2,450.21. At the last meeting the matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel for his written opinion. In his report Former Senator Reed declares that the Board of Education is entitled to the money and that the Council according to the new law must appropriate the amount whether the money has been collected or not. If the sum is not in the collector's hand it will have to be borrowed. The only course left open to the Council is to make a test case of the law.

Heretofore the taxes have been payable only as they have been collected by the borough. Senator Reed said that the enforcement of the law is unfair to the Mayor and Council because it places them in the position of raising the tax rate when they are not responsible for it. His report was placed on file and a copy of the opinion and resolution passed by the Council will be sent to John Valiant, chairman of the Board of Education's finance committee.

All the members were present except Councilman Northrop. In his report Collector George F. Brown stated that interest on taxes for the past month amounted to $432.63; Board of Health, $4.56; Recorder, fines, $7; Clerk, for macadamizing, $10; Clerk, license, $5; balance on hand June 1, $13,539.63; total receipts, $14,008.81; disbursements, $3,732.53; balance on hand, $10,275.29; engine house fund, $5,973.58; borough fund, $1,302.71.

Councilman James F. Arnold, chairman of the street committee, reported expenditures for street work, $335.15, and for street sprinkling, $74. For stone, for macadamizing, these expenditures were made: Belmont avenue—$39.55; Somerset aities — $305.25; Manning avenue—$59.20, amounting in all to $904. The fire committee reported expenditures amounting to $718.37.

Claims amounting to $2,518 were ordered paid. It was reported that $60 had been received for the macadamizing of Walnut street and that $70 was in the hands of the borough for the macadamizing of Deer street from Linden avenue to Greenbrook road. The Union County Investment Company asked the Council to accept the road dedicated to the borough some time ago which is known as Norwood avenue and volunteered to pay two-third of the cost of grading and macadamizing it. The street was officially accepted and will be graded and macadamized.

From the trustees of the First M. E. Church a communication was received asking the borough to appropriate a sum to be use for the maintenance of the paupers' plot in the cemetery. This was referred to the street committee. D. N. Groendyke, of Mercer avenue, entered a complaint regarding the practice of allowing the dogs to run at large on his property and about the streets of the borough. Mr. Lee, of the police committee, assured him that the matter would be placed in the hands of Chief Marshal Campbell with instructions to shoot on sight all dogs running at large without tags or muzzles.

The amendment to the ordinance relating to the extension of the boundary lines for flagstone sidewalks was passed on its third reading. It includes Somerset place, Howard street, from Somerset street to Grove street, Norwood avenue, from Brook avenue to Mountain avenue, Franklin avenue, Farragut avenue and Manning avenue, from Franklin avenue to Belmont avenue.

BOARD OF EDUCATION DISCUSSES FINANCES

School Expenses for Past Year Slightly Increased Over Preceding Year.

THE ROUTINE BUSINESS

DRS. TOMLINSON AND VAN HORN RE-APPOINTED MEDICAL INSPECTORS.

Building Committee Reports—Judge Ashman Thanked for the Commencement Address—Good Registration Record of Teachers.

Routine business was transacted at the July meeting of the City Board of Education, last Tuesday, the presenting of the annual financial reports being the most important feature. There were present at the meeting Dr. J. B. Probasco, president, E. M. Cave, L. N. Lovell and F. T. Woodhull.

The annual report of the financial committee showed the total disbursements for the year to be $63,960.21, compared with $60,657.53 for the year preceding, and making an increase of about $3,300. Of the increased expenditure, $1,400 was due to rentals including that of the Epworth League house of the Monroe Avenue Church; $900 for fuel, caused by the coal strike; $1,200 for repairs; the total amounting to $3,500, a reduction of other items bringing the net increase down to $2,300. The report of the custodian of school moneys tallied with that of the finance committee, showing a balance on hand of $25.50.

Doctors T. H. Tomlinson and A. F. VanHorn, medical inspectors, reported eleven pupils examined during June and a total of 1,236 pupils examined during the entire year. Both inspectors were reappointed for the ensuing school year at the same salary.

The finance committee were authorized to borrow $6,000 to meet necessary expenses in the event of obtaining material supplies. The committee on buildings announced that work on the pinnacle of the Bryant School which had been insecure and in need of repairs was completed and the building ready for inspection. It was also stated that Pease & Ayers who had contracted to paint the Franklin School were unable to meet their contract. Their work had proceeded only so far as scraping the building. The matter was laid over until the next meeting.

Reference was made to the fact that of all the teachers' registration blanks which had been sent to the State Board of Education, 4,000 had been returned for corrections, not one of them, however, to a Plainfield teacher. The matter reflected much credit upon the teachers and upon Superintendent Maxson.

Hearty thanks and high appreciation were extended to Judge William N. Ashman, of Philadelphia, for his able commencement address before the High School graduates. Judge Ashman was especially generous in refusing any compensation for his services.

Week End Party.

Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., and wife, and A. L. Force and wife and daughter, Miss Lillian Force, were the guests of Mrs. J. F. Grandin and daughters, the Misses Susan and Elizabeth, at their charming home in Hamden, from Friday until Monday night. Grandin Mere, as they call it, is one of the many delightful spots in old Hunterdon County. Far from the noise attendant upon the Fourth in more thickly populated districts, the merry party spent an enjoyable time.

Mother Laid to Rest.

Mrs. McKee, the aged mother of Mrs. A. J. Leader, of Dunellen, died at her home in Brooklyn, Thursday evening, in the eighty-eighth year of her age, after a lingering illness. The funeral services were held on Sunday evening and interment was made in Cypress Hill Cemetery on Monday. The handsome display of flowers was one of the evidences of the high esteem in which Councilman Leader's mother was held in by friends and neighbors.

HAS MR. SAUNDERS VIOLATED ORDINANCE?

Borough Board of Health Claims That Manure Pile Is a Menace.

FORMER MAYOR TALKS

AND THE SECRETARY OF THE BOARD MAKES A REPLY.

Interesting Because of Local Conditions in North Plainfield—Mr. Saunders Liable to a Fine If Found Guilty.

Former Mayor W. L. Saunders, on whose property the North Plainfield Board of Health has found manure that is said to be in a position where it can be washed into Stony brook, made a statement this morning regarding the action taken at the meeting of the Board Monday night.

"I have not received any communication from the Board of Health and know nothing about the matter except what has been published and which I am told was given to the papers by the board. It is to be regretted that such tactics should be resorted to.

"There is no connection of any kind between my drains and the brook. There is about a quarter of a ton of manure in my chicken yard, and situated just sixty-five feet from the brook with soft dry sand in between. The whole matter is so transparent that it is amusing. Nobody has complained, of course, because there is nothing to complain about."

Dr. W. E. Honeyman, the secretary of the Board, was informed of Mr. Saunders' statement and willingly made an answer. To a reporter for The Daily Press he said:

"He has not received any communication because it was mailed to him this morning. He will receive it this evening. About the manure pile, he is right when he says that there is less than a ton of manure in his yard and he is also correct about the sand.

"The Board in the notice sent him calls attention to the fact that a large pile of cow manure (from which typhoid germs are said to rise) is dumped by his man on the crest of a forty-five degree grade fifty or more feet from and above the surface of Stony brook. It is therefore apparent that during heavy rains the manure will be washed into the stream.

"Besides the manure there is a quantity of swill and garbage in the chicken yard which also washes into the brook. The sand referred to by Mr. Saunders is not fine enough to filter the washing from the pile in heavy storms.

"The pile of manure situated on the hill is a violation of the health ordinance governing such matters and in the State law it is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than two years."

FARMERS' VERDICT.

The Selling of Mustard Seed for Oats Is Nothing to Them.

The case in tort between Joseph King and Jonathan Ayres which was heard Tuesday at Basking Ridge was dismissed on the ground of no cause for action. The defendants were represented by Codington & Swackhamer.

The action was brought to recover damages for placing mustard seed in oats bought of the defendant by the plaintiff. It was originally brought in Justice Mattison's court but the plaintiff wanted a farmers' jury to hear the testimony and took it to the country.

Pigs Won't be in Clover.

A notice has been sent to Charles Wyckoff, of Dupont street, by the North Plainfield Board of Health, informing him that he must remove pigs from his property and clean the pen and grounds around it. The board refuses to give him a permit to keep hogs.

Death of Mrs. Tingley.

Mrs. Mercy S. Tingley, widow of Lewis R. Tingley, died Tuesday at the residence of her niece, Mrs. Lizzie Reynolds, 313 West Second street. She was eighty-seven years old and for a long time had been a member of the Crescent Avenue Church.

Miss Fanny R. Luckey, of West Second street, leaves today for Monsaap Valley, New York, where she will remain during July.

Mrs. William H. Addis and son, Edwin Herbert, of East Second street, leave today for Kenona Lake, N. Y., where they will remain one month.

PATHETIC TALE OF A LOVE THAT WAS LOST

Course of True Love Rudely Interrupted at the Crucial Moment.

MOSQUITOES INTERVENE

ALGERNON AND HIS AMANDA SUFFER VARIOUS KINDS OF PANGS.

Lovers Battled With Winged Pest—Plainfield Has Never Suffered From the Mosquito Plague So Much As Now.

The sun had set in a golden blaze of glory—like a bun on a basket of smashed eggs. It was eventide. The pale moonlight filtered caressingly through the interlacing foliage, seeking out the shadowy outlines of Algernon and his Amanda who were engaged in billing and likewise cooing on a secluded veranda in a New Jersey suburban town. Suddenly the oppressive stillness of the hot July night *was broken by uncouth sounds. Por*tending what? Perchance some deed of darkness, some arch villian venting his evil fury on an innocent victim? Listen.

Swish—slap—bang!

Followed the silence, disturbed only by the low murmur of voices in tones soft and caressing. The crucial moment had arrived. It was Algernon who was speaking:

"Amanda, will you be my—infernal little cuss!"

Squash—slap—smash!!

Likewise biff, and sundry references to Helen Blazes, Ki-Ram, blanket and similar undesirable and irrelevant subjects.

(Intervening space occupied by Amanda who grabs frantically at both ankles, while her infatuated lover, now well nigh desperate, again screws his courage to the sticking point.)

"Will you, I?—blast you!" he announces fiercely, striking himself in an insane fashion upon the neck and other unprotected portions of his anatomy.

"Sir!!"

"O, Amanda, darling, forgive me, you are my—confounded peaky little beast!"

"Algernon, Mr. Sniffkins, I think you are perfectly horrid. I shan't listen to such language. I shall never speak to you again. I am going to leave you this minute."

At this point Amanda disappears within the house beating the air ferociously with both hands, leaving her dejected lover alternately beseeching and anathematizing on the stoop and putting in his spare moments getting up a friction on ankles, arms, legs, hands, face, back, neck, etc., etc. (See anatomical dictionary.)

M-m-m-m-m-m-bzzzz-m-m-m.

Curtain.

* * * * * *

All of which is by way of introduction to the statement that Plainfield is in the grasp of the mosquito pest. Not in years have the "peaky critters" proved so troublesome as now. They come in swarms, in droves. They bore through shoe leather. They penetrate the closest fitting screen ever manufactured. They attack and they never retreat.

They are the enemy, and we are theirs.

Probably the combination of hot and wet weather is the cause of their presence in such large quantities. A high wind will probably drive them away eventually, but there seems no sign of immediate relief.

CHARITABLE CITIZENS.

Pledging Sums to Enable Pastor to Renovate Church Edifice.

Rev. E. E. Jackson is meeting with encouraging response in his efforts to raise funds for the repair of the Mt. Olive Baptist Church edifice. The members of his congregation are unable to subscribe the amount needed to do the work and support is asked of the public. One philanthropic borough ite has given his check for $160 while another citizen has subscribed a like amount. No matter how small the contribution it will be gladly welcomed by the pastor who is canvassing the city.

THE DIRECTORS RENAMED

MAYOR REAPPOINTS TALMADGE, TRACY AND TYLER AS LIBRARY DIRECTORS.

Fifty-Six Volumes Added to the Library—The Reports Read at Meeting.

General business occupied the attention of the Board of Directors of the Public Library at their regular meeting last Tuesday. The library committee reported the purchase of a set of the Journal of the Iron and Steel Institute, fifty-six volumes, for the Babcock library. All bills against the library were ordered paid by the treasurer from the general and Babcock funds.

The treasurer's report was approved and a communication from the Mayor appointing Messrs. Tyler, Talmadge and Tracy as members of the board for the next three years was ordered on file. These committees were named for the ensuing year: Library committee, J. H. Tracy, chairman, W. H. Larrabee, Dr. Leonard Waldo; art committee, Messrs. Gilbert, Talmadge and Stillman. The members present were Mason W. Tyler, J. Herbert Case, William H. Larrabee, J. Evarts Tracy and Leonard Waldo.

HORSE RACING PROFITABLE

THE PLAINFIELD DRIVING ASSOCIATION MEET A SUCCESS.

Another Meet to be Held Before Fall—To Make Repairs to the Track.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley announces that between $300 and $400 was realized at the race meet Saturday. The money received will be used to maintain the grounds and buildings. Heretofore the place, including the track, has been kept in repair by J. Wesley Johnson, president of the First National Bank. The track will be put in first class order and several minor changes made on the grounds during the summer.

It is probable that another race will be arranged at the local driving park before Labor Day. The Westfield Driving Club is arranging to conduct a meet in that town on Labor Day and consequently the local horse fanciers will probably hold one a week or two before that holiday.

SAUERSACKER HELD.

Man Who Assaulted Michael Doyle in Jail Awaiting Action of Grand Jury.

Charles Sauersacker, who confesses to having assaulted Michael Doyle, was held by Justice Huff this morning in $500 bonds to await trail by the Grand Jury. He was taken to Elizabeth in default of bail. Doyle, his victim, is reported to be improving although never likely to recover fully from the effects of the blow. Sauersacker is represented by Lawyer Francis J. Blatz, who waived examination when the case was called this morning.

UNUSUAL APPENDAGES.

Operation to Make Francis Truman's Hands and Feet Normal.

Francis Truman, the infant son of J. Frank Truman, has undergone an operation for the removal of two superfluous thumbs and great toes. The child was born about three weeks ago with the unusual appendages. Dr. Marc L. Clawson was the surgeon. The boy is doing as well as could be expected. The father of the child is the agent of the Union News Company at the North Avenue depot. When a youth he underwent a similar operation.

Bridge Work.

The Union County Board of Freeholders, in conjunction with the Board from Somerset county, has decided to make necessary repairs to the Westervelt avenue bridge. New planking will be put down and otherwise the bridge will be made stronger. Freeholder William A. Westphal will supervise the work.

The Hustling Mr. Blatz.

The contract case of Antone Ammon against Frank and Burk Carrara was given a hearing by Justice Cooper, of Warrenville, yesterday. Suit was brought for $50 and a verdict of $3.80 returned, a virtual victory for the defendants represented by F. J. Blatz.

Prize Choristers.

The prize choristers of Grace P. E. Church for June are these: Edward Schiller, Alfred Manley, Hudson Burr, Elmer Bohan, Harold Miller and Miss Ethel Weesman.

RIGHT TO TRANSFER PROPERTY QUESTIONED

The Borough Council Doubts Legality of Method Used to Escape Taxes.

A DIFFERENCE IN RATE

NORTH PLAINFIELD WOULD LOSE $1,600 IN TAXES.

Said That A. J. Brunson Has Transferred Personalty to Avoid High Rate—To be Investigated.

The action of A. J. Brunson in transferring from North Plainfield to this city eight hundred and fifty shares of the First National Bank stock is said to be illegal and the Borough Council, at its meeting last Tuesday, decided to ascertain the correctness of the reports. The committee on taxation was authorized to look into the matter and inform itself in the low governing such cases.

A resolution was adopted giving that committee full power to go ahead with the investigation and to report its findings. This is the resolution:

"Whereas, It is reported that the largest stockholder of the First National Bank of Plainfield, who is a legal resident of this borough, has transferred about eight hundred and fifty shares of said stock to a county where the tax rate is lower;

"And whereas, If such report is true, the result will be the withdrawal from the borough rateables of something like $65,000 of taxable property, (equal to the loss of about $1,600 of taxes) and to make the tax rate about six points higher than it otherwise would be:

"And whereas this Council is in doubt whether such transfer as reported can legally be made, and the borough thus be deprived of taxable property to its injury:

"Therefore be it resolved the Committee on Taxation investigate said subject, ascertain whether or not said report is founded on fact, and the provisions of law relating thereto, and report to this Council.

"And be it further resolved that the Corporation Counsel co-operate with and assist said Committee in said investigation whenever called upon by them so to do."

CALL TO BOUND BROOK.

Presbyterian Church Congregation Chooses Rev. J. S. Hogan.

Bound Brook, N. J., July 8—At a largely attended meeting of the congregation of the Presbyterian Church of this place, last evening, an unani*mous call was extended to Rev. J. S.* Hogan, of the Reformed Church of Pompton Plains, N. J. Rev. W. C. Brooks, D. D., of Trenton, presided. The pulpit has been vacant since March first, when Rev. T. E. Davis resigned after a pastorate of thirteen years, hoping to improve his health by a change of occupation and climate. This church has had but four pastors since 1830, Rev. R. K. Rodgers, D. D., having served over forty-four years; Rev. A. E. Baldwin, eight years; Rev. H. B. Macauley, six years and Mr. Davis thirteen years.

CLERKS' EXCURSION.

Employes in Local Shops to Spend Evening at Riverside Park.

The committee from the Retail Clerks' Mutual Aid Association, having charge of the arrangements for the annual outing to Riverside Park on Thursday, July 16, is composed of A. C. Hoagland, chairman; Charles Greer, Griffith Jenkins, Caspar Waglow and Albert Kock. The special trolley cars engaged to take the clerks and their friends to the park will leave the Watchung avenue trolley station at 7 o'clock.

Praise for O. B. Leonard.

The New Jersey Baptist Bulletin for July, referring to the sixty-second anniversary of the East Association of Baptist churches held recently at Perth Amboy, says of O. B. Leonard, of Madison avenue, who was chosen moderator of that meeting: "Mr. Leonard, the moderator, was for ten years the efficient clerk of the Association, and gave much attention to matters of historic interest. The elec*tion this year was a very fitting and* happy recognition of valuable service."

NEW WOMAN IDEAS

What They Stand For

HERE is a story of the old woman and her ways. It was to a girls' boarding school—strictly old fashioned kind, girls fenced off to themselves, taught to be weak, defenseless, submissive, never to let anybody know they had physical strength or courage, even if they possessed any, because it was "unwomanly" to be otherwise than cowardly. No girl was allowed to have a hatchkey. Every one must be in at nightfall and tell the matron just what she had been doing all day. One morning the girls and one of their female bosses were in the library at prayers. The female boss was reading the prayers. Not a he creature was ever allowed in the house, and the girls were kept away from them as from monsters, strictly according to old woman notions. That morning, however, a small little man was down at the front door repairing the bell. He weighed 120 pounds. Suddenly two drunken fellows saw the door open and in a crazy freak ran past the bell hanger, past the old woman who stood guard and on into the library where the girls were hearing prayers read. The drunken men pulled off their coats and talked big. Of girls, boxers and women servants in that house there must have been at least twenty. But they had all been brought up in old woman ways; therefore all they could do was to screech like cats and tumble over one another. Seeing their utter demoralization, the drunken men grew bolder and more bullying. If three new women had been there trained in athletics and taught to keep their heads on they would have simply collared the intruders and marched them out to the street. Their moral force would have given them physical strength even if that had been lacking. But, no! All those twenty women thought they could do was to screech and tumble over one another. Meantime the one little bell hanger ran into the room, seized hold of the two big fellows and threw them out before they knew what had struck them. Is it not time the new woman was here?

Miss Edith J. Griswold, the patent attorney of New York, is an enthusiastic bicyclist. She has now prepared a cycling calendar. It will contain 365 hearty indorsements of cycling, one for every day in the year, from that number of distinguished individuals in the industrial and professional world.

The fine ladies were having afternoon tea with a friend. All was costly and aesthetic; all the nerval fads even in afternoon teas were manifest. A little boy three years old peeped shyly through the open door and gazed, wide eyed, on the scene. He was a rarely fine child, perfectly formed, with all the radiant loveliness of normal childhood about him, beautiful as one of Raphael's baby angels. "Oh, oh, oh!" exclaimed the ladies. "How exquisite! Who is he? Come here, you little cherub, and let me kiss you!" "Do they think poor people can't have beautiful children?" grimly muttered the cook to herself as she snatched up her boy and took him back to where he had strayed from the kitchen.

Are you sure you are getting your right share of sunshine and outdoor air these days?

No neighborhood is so poor that it cannot have a common clubhouse for lectures and social gatherings, even weddings. Jewish people have a good example in this matter. If a grand social event, like a wedding or large reception or ball, is on, a suitable hall is hired for the occasion even among the wealthy. Thus all the nerve racking worry is taken out of the home to a more convenient place.

One of the most efficient sanitary inspectors in this country is Mrs. Joanna von Wagner of Yonkers, N. Y. She is a refined woman and a linguist and can talk to the slum people in their own various languages. This gives her great advantage. She takes all a woman's sympathetic interest in helping people and in cleaning up things. This has enabled her to work a marvelous change among the poorer, consequently dirtier, quarters of Yonkers. There ought to be women sanitary inspectors in every town and city in the Union.

Woman only wants new interior illumination of mind and soul to make her equal to her opportunities. She must know she is no longer to be the ensnaring, irresponsible creature of the dime novel harem, but a reasoning, thinking individual with a soul which she herself must save if it is saved at all.

Dr. Lyman Abbott roars against woman suffrage in the columns of the Outlook, but when a woman wishes him to print a brief article in reply from the other side he answers that he will not discuss the question in his paper. This conspicuous example of the fairness and logicalness of the masculine mind tends to induce women to trust their interests to men, does it not?

John Bickfer, a powerfully built ox foster, said a judge in court that he'd be hanged if he'd work; he'd go to jail first, because his wife was a jailtress, had a "good, easy job" and was able to support him and the children too. The woman who is willing to support an able-bodied husband ought to have to do it fifty years.

THIN GOWNS.

Dainty Lawn Dresses—Some Traced Taffeta Costumes.

Linen and lawn gowns are among the pressing considerations of the hour. The last are very elaborate, embroidered affairs for the most part, made of the finest material, decorated with beautifchings and mounted on the sheerest of linings.

Taffeta for linings seems to have given way to softer silks, but whole dresses are made of it and are considered very smart.

A gown of white taffeta seen recently was inset with medallions of lace and had a sack coat worn over a lace blouse. This was a very effective toilet.

The fluffy, soft gowns of mull show lace and tucks, trellis work of ribbon and applications of lace flowers, while floral patterned taffetas are to be seen made in the simplest fashion, with a perfectly plain, narrow skirt, a wide waistband of black satin and a slightly full bodice.

Elbow sleeves are again seen on many models, and they have huge drooping frills.

The dress shown is of deep scarlet taffeta trimmed with soft ecru mull tucked and embroidered.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

Foulard For Simple Gowns—Gray Linen Is Smart.

Foulard continues in high favor, white with brown spots being considered especially smart. The bodices of these foulard dresses are made overhanging a wide belt. Sometimes the sole trimming of these gowns consists of a ruche edge of lace. Those fortunate enough to possess it use bits of old lace and line them with chiffon, employing shirrings of the chiffon to fill in with. Good effects are also to be obtained by puffings of tulle and narrow strips of lace.

Pale blue and pale lavender vie with old rose for pretty summer toilets.

DEBUT BLACK HAT.

Gowns of pale lavender linen are trimmed with bands of cream linen decorated with French knots in black.

Iron gray linens are used for traveling costumes consisting of a kilted skirt and a three-quarter unlined coat.

Gray linen canvas is one of the season's novelties, and when trimmed with gray and white braid it looks very dressy.

Foremost among the decorative details of the hour to be chronicled are ribbon quillings—narrow, broad, regular or in graduated widths, whichever appeals as more convincingly appropriate to the occasion. As the finish to the hem of a plaited skirt these quillings are particularly happy in a narrow width of satin ribbon, repeated two or at most three times round the hem. On a pastel blue cloth they created a distinctive outline in a delicate French gray ribbon, the short really incidental bolero being sewn over a pale gray accordion kilted chiffon blouse, inlet down the front and along the shoulders with an exceptionally healthy patterned hot light cream guipure lace, cuffs of the same lace running up into a deep point on the inside of the arm of the graceful full sleeves.

The black hat shown is simply trimmed with a single ostrich plume. It is suitable for wear with silk or jersey gowns.

THE CANARY.

How to Keep Him Happy and In First Class Condition.

Be sure above everything else that your canary has plenty of room for exercise. A square cage is much better than a round one, and the perches, which should be only two in number, are best one on each side, so that the bird can jump back and forth.

These perches should be carefully rounded, not less than half an inch in width and not stationary, for they must be taken out to be cleaned frequently.

Give plenty of fresh water every day. In warm weather change the water twice a day. Spanish canary seed is the best all around food. Do not mix several kinds of seed in one dish.

Give the bird green food every day, water cress, chickweed or lettuce, and hang a piece of cuttlefish to the wire bars.

Canaries are very cleanly, and a blood warm bath is a necessity at least twice a week.

The cage must be cleaned every day and coarse river sand should be sprinkled all over the bottom whenever this is done.

Sunshine is necessary to the happiness of a canary, but do not leave it in the strong light without covering a section of the cage so that it can find shade if it needs it.

PERSONAL PRIDE.

Foster It In Your Children If You Wish Them to Succeed.

There is more harm done by lack of conceit than because of it. Parents, praise your children and make them think they are of some importance. I suppose I am raising a storm of protest with this anathema, perhaps, but I have my reasons. Many a failure in this world—in fact, most of the failures—may be attributed to lack of self confidence. It we don't have confidence in ourselves who is to have confidence in us?

The parents are to blame for this. They are always lowering the child in its own estimation. Some parents even carry the thing so far as hardly ever to utter one word of praise, but only take notice of the blunders a child makes in order that they may correct them.

Don't do that!

If the child has any particular talent, any genius, let him know it in order that the thought may give him happiness and that he may cultivate that particular bent. Foster carefully the smallest signs of talent and do this by means of praise.

Another thing. I believe in fostering a girl's personal pride. If she dresses prettily, if she looks well, tell her so. It is far better she should hear it from your lips than from those of outsiders. It will show her that you appreciate her and will increase her love for you. Teach her to be proud of herself and to hold her own personal worth very high. Don't always be trying to make her humble and self deprecating. The more a girl thinks of herself the better she will be treated in this world, and it has a marked effect, too, on her own moral nature.

If personal pride were instilled into more girls one would certainly see less silliness and running after men.

You cannot make your boys and girls too proud of themselves. Pride is a great thing, and the man who loses his pride is only a degree less to be pitied than the woman who loses hers.

Praise the children as much as possible, teach them to hold their heads up, to fear nothing and nobody and above all not to distrust their own strength.

MAIL ORDER FRAUDS.

Clever Schemes for Bleeding Gullible Newspaper Readers.

Post Office Bureau of Inspection Kept Busy Investigating All Sort of Dishonest and Alluring "Ads."

[Special Chicago Letter.]

THE alleged frauds in the post office department now being aired at Washington are supposed to involve hundreds of thousands of dollars. The whole country was surprised when the enormous sum—$10,000 here, $50,000 there—were mentioned as fractions in the supposed corruption fund. Yet this is but a bagatelle compared with the simply gigantic frauds investigated every year by the inspection of Uncle Sam's mail.

Swindles aggregating $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 are unearthed every year by the post office inspectors, and proven in court. Thefts by letter carriers or post office clerks constitute only a small portion of this. The greater part of the frauds is perpetrated by so-called business men, who use the mails for schemes that draw the dollars out of the pockets of gullible folks month after month, year after year, by the same old schemes.

A corps of 299 inspectors, as species of special detectives, is employed all over the country hunting down these swindlers.

The post office bureau of inspection has 15 divisions. By far the largest of these has its headquarters at Chicago. Col. Stuart, inspector general here, has 23 inspectors under him and investigated last year 19,000 cases of alleged frauds. New York city, the second largest, had 10,000 cases, handled by 16 inspectors. The enormous work of the Chicago department is due partly to the fact that the city handles more mail than any other.

"We closed up the business of thousands of swindlers right around Chicago last year," said Chief Clerk R. J. Holmes, of the Chicago department. "It is no exaggeration to say that the swindlers get several million dollars out of the pockets of the people."

It is also no exaggeration to say that the swindles are going on at this very minute to the amount of hundreds of thousands of dollars. "Fake" oil companies, investment schemes, "sure ten per cent." propositions, etc., etc., are being advertised in the papers and are flourishing more than ever. The post office inspector gets some of them into court and prosecutes. Occasionally the federal court sends a culprit to the penitentiary, but the majority of them escape in the fines that do not represent ten per cent. of the money they have made in their schemes.

Here's an advertisement:

YOUR LIFE'S FATE in love, business and marriage. Picture of future husband or wife. Birthstone pin and life's chart for 10 cents and this ad.

This is the advertisement, with the name omitted, as it appeared this week in many of the mail order papers. I showed the clipping to an employe of the Chicago bureau of post office inspection.

"Is this a fraud or isn't it?" I asked.

"That remains to be proven," was the calm reply. "The way to do is to send the ten cents in reply to the ad and then file your complaint here if you think you have been defrauded."

"Will you prosecute them?"

The explanation was that it required five such complaints to establish one cause for an investigation. And finally the official came out with the bold statement:

"These ten-cent schemes don't amount to much," he said. "We are tremendously busy here on big cases, trying to put a stop to thousand-dollar swindles. Better save your ten cents for not writing for the photo of your future wife."

The task of the post office inspectors is indeed a very difficult one and the path to prosecution is more than devious. A strict law prevents the opening of any private mail by inspectors or others. No matter how certain the government may be that a firm is swindling, letters are not tampered with under any circumstances. So the inspectors must resort to many tricks to get proof. Sometimes they go into the country, and send in their money in the fraudulent firms until they have enough letters to establish positive proof. If the swindlers get an inkling that a post office inspector is trying to "lead them up" they may hide their schemes and throw the inspector off the track. Girls are often used in the guise of stenographers to get evidence. Sometimes the detectives themselves get positions in a firm suspected of frauds. Many other methods, I know, are used, but the post office department is very secretive. Their inspectors work more quietly than any other detectives and when they finish their case, they quietly pack up and go—so one ever knew that the person with whom he dealt was the post office inspector himself.

"The biggest frauds by all odds have been in the get-rich-quick lines. It is such an old scheme, but it is always being worked again. The plan is very simple—the same as in the case of the notorious Franklin syndicate in the east. Some 'con-man' starts to advertise that he will pay enormous profits on investments—two, three, five or ten per cent. a week. When the 'suckers' begin to send their money, he actually pays out the dividends. A man may send $100 and before long he has $200 back. He tells his friends, and they tell others. Pretty soon the money rolls into the coffers of the 'financier' by the thousands. Of course he pays the interest out of the capital. When he has accumulated enough the crash comes. The financier disappears, the money is gone.

"Fully $500,000 was sent to Chicago in the last 12 months in get-rich-quick schemes of this character. The victims have been of all classes, city people no less than villagers and farmers, women as well as men, rich and poor alike.

"Land and improvement swindles are being worked to-day on an enormous scale. Do you remember the U. S. Land Co.? We hunted that scheme down and punished it. This company owned some practically worthless land in Tennessee, way up in the mountains, where we could hardly get at it. The fake oil, rubber and gold-mining companies have secured millions—yes, millions of dollars—for land not worth a dollar an acre.

"Lottery and gambling schemes are brought to our notice each month after month. There are hundreds of thousands of people ready to give up their cash again and again when a lottery of some kind is advertised, and we can't always nip these 'fakes' in the bud."

In the last year something has been done to put a stop to "divine healing," absent treatment by mail and one of the most successful quacks in the lot—Francis Truth, of Boston,—who it was said was doing a business of $30,000 a week, was stopped by the law. Meanwhile others who do only $3,000 a month continue to flourish, and by a court decision recently made, nothing can be done to prevent people sending their money by mail to be cured by any process they choose.

Have you seen in recent issues of a Chicago mail order paper an advertisement of a magic gold dip needle that finds hidden treasures for ten cents? Possibly this reminds one of the "lucky box" scheme of Lynn, Mass. Francis Parker manufactured a little wooden box with a brass ring in which were stamped three stars. It cost him from one to five cents, and he sold it for 99 cents. Everybody who bought the box became lucky, said Parker's advertisements; "one broker made $17,000 in one hour after buying the lucky box; a spinster won a lover; a woman was cured of rheumatism; a gentleman hobbled in on crutches; got a box; walked off with crutches under his arm." The advertisements ran in glaring headlines, and nobody interfered with Parker's business until the authorities noticed his enormous mail. When the post office inspector appeared at the lucky box factory Parker fled. Twenty-seven thousand letters were waiting for him at the Boston post office with 7,000 money orders that day.

LACES AND TARTANS.

Black Chantilly In Vogue—Wee Macgreegors Will Soon Be Numerous.

When a pendulum has swung as far as it can in one direction it must swing back, and that is just what is happening to white lace. People are beginning to grow weary of so much white lace, and the last few days have shown us several new and beautiful gowns of black chantilly made up over white chiffon with a white silk slip under that. The handsomest one was not made of a width of the beautiful lace, but the different designs were either woven separate or cut out so that directly around the bottom was a vine design. Above that were festoons and lozenges large and small. Next came a row like an insertion and then more festoons and lozenges nearly to the waist line. The arrangement showed that this was all applied to the chiffon. The lozenges were quite heavy and bold in design for that delicate lace, and the whole was a model of lightness and beauty. The waist was made in the same general style, and one thing noticeable was that the bi se was not very baggy or full. There is a pointed velvet belt with a jeweled buckle. The sleeves ended at the elbow with a ruffle of the lace. At the throat was a velvet collar, but the lace, which formed a V, did not reach to the throat. It would be difficult to imagine a more exquisite dress than this or one more delicate and refined.

All the other dresses of black lace are made so that the pattern is clearly defined by having white beneath it, and silk mull or chiffon is generally the medium. These two ethereal fabrics are well designed to show the delicate beauty of the black lace pattern.

Among the dainty new materials for elegant wear one finds the new silk and wool crepe cloths, matting cloths, sallcloths and voiles in all wool and also colienes in silk and wool. The colienes and silk and wool china crape are produced in delft blue, china blue, light green, pink, a most pleasing shade of steel gray and a few of the pastel shades on the biscuit order and also champagne, oyster, putty and castor. Any one of these tints and shades in such fabrics is sure to produce a beautiful effect if rightly made up.

The long Monte Carlo short coats are still in great vogue, and the blouse waist is still with us and, what is more, intends to remain. Still, the blouse is not so blousy as it was. The pointed belt is now reserved mostly for the very stout woman, who finds it imagines that it makes her waist look trimmer and smaller. The rest of the fair ones are now picking out straight leather belts, some of which are very handsome and finely wrought with stitching and even cut out work. The draped velvet or ribbon belt has recently been much admired, especially for the thin gowns.

The other day I happened into a store where children's waists are considered to the exclusion of everything else. Here I found no end of what have been very cleverly called "Wee Macgreegor" suits. As may be supposed, they are national Scotch suits, with everything complete from the buckled shoes to the "glengarry," as Wee Macgreegor himself called that style of bonnet.

That mothers may know just what is needed for their wee laddies for a complete highland costume I took special pains to learn, and here is the list: First comes the cap, or "bonnet," in black velvet, with a cap crest and black cock's feather; next a black velvet doublet and vest, and then a tartan kilt in any plaid preferred. Right here I must say that there are few mothers who cannot claim a certain degree of relationship with some Scotch family, and the tartan of that clan is what she should choose for her boy's kilt. The crews, shoulder plaid and hose should all be of the clan plaid, which it is not difficult to obtain, for a specialty is made of plaids. The brogues are of patent leather. The sporran for full dress is covered with fur, and there is a chain hung across the middle in front. The finishing touch to the costume is given by the calrngorm shoulder brooch and lace ruffle. A short sword really belongs to the suit; but, as a rule, mothers seem to like to forget the sword.

Since the advent of the charming little book called "Wee Macgreegor" the always dormant fancy for the Scotch outfit for little boys from four to six has sprung into life again, and I suppose that American mothers will soon be answering to the same never ending "whit weys" of the active but fine little chap who turned his adoring father around his finger openly and in face of everything and who also managed to make his stenser mother give him his way.

HENRIETTE HOUSSEAU.

THE TRAINED NURSE

An Angel of Mercy

THE prettiest women to be seen in London are the trained nurses walking in the park paths in their neat and becoming uniform. Whether it is the uniform that makes them so attractive looking one cannot say; probably not. Probably it is something in the women themselves and in the profession which dignifies them that gives them the air of refined gentleness and yet of self poise and strength that hovers around them. They are also very fair and graceful. If one had to be ill, among those is the woman one would choose to have around.

The woman who founded the trained nurse's profession lately passed her eighty-third birthday at her quiet country home in England, Florence Nightingale. She was also herself the first woman army nurse, fifty years ago in the Crimean war. A born philanthropist, she brooded over the bloodshed and horrors of the war in the inhospitable climate of the Crimea till she could endure no longer to refrain from helping the suffering soldiers. She knew what trained nursing meant, for she was connected with a school where it was taught.

She went to the Crimea in person. A howl of derision, as usual when any reform begins, went up from the commonplace and the old fogy, who in the inscrutable rulings of Providence seem to constitute a majority of the inhabitants of this planet. Nevertheless she went and won the greatest victory of the Crimean war, a victory for womankind over blind prejudice.

What Florence Nightingale did in the Crimean war belongs to another story. What she did for her sex was to open the way for woman army nurses, up to that time undreamed of even as a possibility.

The change came slowly. England, knowing what Miss Nightingale and her aids had done on the battle field, was naturally the first nation to officially adopt the innovation. In our civil war there were women nurses devoted and brave, some of whom gave their lives for the sick and wounded soldiers, but they were only volunteers, unpaid ones, alas, at that! When the war was over and they went home broken in health, many of them, there were those among them reduced to actual poverty because of the years they had given to their country.

Yet these heroic women, too, performed a mission. They, too, showed how valuable in the relief of suffering is the work of a strong, capable woman in war. Woman is a natural nurse. When she knows her business thoroughly she rejoices for active service the ablebodied soldier whose place she takes in the care of the disabled ones. It was not till the outbreak of the war with Spain, however, that women nurses became an official adjunct of the American army. They were sent to Cuba, they were sent to the Philippines, where some are to this day.

Congress enacted a law providing for the establishment of a "nurse corps (female)," as the bill has it. A noble and respected industrial occupation for capable women was thus inaugurated. They must, however, be thoroughly capable. There is no nonsense in the qualifications of an army nurse. She must of course be of the highest character morally and must know how to maintain her womanly dignity. She must be constitutionally strong and healthy and able to endure long hours and hard work. Sometimes a woman nurse must remain in an army surgeon's operating room many hours at a stretch on the most horrible wounds for attention. There must be no weak minded squeamishness or shrinking of nerves. The nurse must be a graduate from a hospital training school.

The female nurses' corps of the United States army is under the lady superintendent, appointed by the secretary of war; chief nurses, nurses and reserve nurses. Reserve nurses serve only when special occasion requires them; the rest serve all the time except during an annual furlough of thirty days during which they receive pay. All nurses receive transportation and food and necessary expenses when traveling under orders, as the soldiers do.

The pay, as women's wages go, is not bad. The superintendent gets $1,800 a year and expenses. Ordinary nurses get $40 a month, quarters and subsistence when on duty in the United States, $50 a month outside of it. Chief nurses receive about $25 a month more than these. Appointments are made by the surgeon general of the army, with the approval of the secretary of war.

DO RICHES CORRUPT?

Question Discussed by Senator Depew and Dr. Hillis.

Senator Attempts to Explain Why Sons of Rich Men Are Safer from Temptation Than Poorer Boys Who Go to the City.

Senator Chauncey M. Depew has taken issue with Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, who said at the annual conference of Orthodox Pastors that "We all go to the devil on $50,000 a year—at least a great many men I know are going to the devil on that sum and few are escaping it."

"It all amounts to this," said Senator Depew, "that a man who has first an inclination to go to the devil, or, secondly, with power enough to resist the temptations that take him there. If a man possesses the first or lacks the second condition he can just as well go to the devil on $10,000 a year as $50,000 in these days.

"Families of large incomes give sons a liberal education and it is not from the ranks of these that those are recruited who throw themselves into dissipation. The sons of those who attend college who go to the devil is so small as scarcely to be appreciable. It is rather those who come to large cities from the country, sons of families of moderate means, who are apt to go to the devil. This is owing to the discomforts of boarding houses, the attractions of saloons, and the coldness of the churches. A young man who has been accustomed to be petted in his own town and who on coming to the city and going to the church of his own denomination does not find the congregation running to greet him is likely to look for solace elsewhere, and I tell you it takes a greater will than most men are gifted with to resist the social influences of the saloon.

(Brooklyn Preacher Who Believes That Riches Cause Corruption.)

"The reason so few sons of families of wealth go to the devil is because family influences hedge them in until they are old enough to stand alone, which is when they are about 28, at which age there is little danger of their going astray. The tone of the colleges in which they are brought up nowadays is as hostile to dissipation as formerly it was otherwise. A man who is addicted to drink now is a social outcast. Not one per cent. of the sons of those who have $50,000 a year go to the devil."

Dr. Hillis was speaking on Oliver Cromwell's protection of religious liberty, and said: "He was the greatest lover of liberty and righteousness that ever led troops into the field to enforce his ideals. To-day we are raising pampered sons and daughters and surrounding them with a very luxury and idle satisfaction of desire, and they are rotten before they are ripe.

"I repeat it, they are rotten before they are ripe, and boys in many cases are sinful before they are bearded. Sunday has to a great extent ceased to be a day of worship."

Mr. Hillis continued: "Men rise at ten o'clock and drive until 12, eat a dinner of 12 courses, and in the evening hold a reception for their friends. Women and children follow much the same plan. They practice the ten commandments with the 'shall nots' left out, and I wager them that in the end they will find that God and nature practice the ten commandments, but the 'shall nots' are left out.

"I cannot pick up a paper but that I see the 400 of this city engaged in divorce suits. Even the oldest families of Boston are in the divorce courts. I tremble for my country when all the work a preacher does at one end is marrying the judge undoes at the other end in the divorce court.

"Culture does not stand for all. You cannot make a bad man good by culture and education any more than you can improve a well of water polluted with typhoid germs by painting the pump with harmonious colors. If the women of my congregation who are suffering from nervous prostration had the will power to take nine out of every ten of their frocks into the back yard and burn them I do not think they would longer be troubled with their nervous prostration."

Will Not Marry Vapors.

Young men who have acquired a taste for strong liquor need not look for wives among the young girls of Waremme, in Belgium, since they have solemnly vowed that they will not marry men who drink. The pledge they took after they had formed a society, which is known as the "Union of Swallows," and the sole object of which is to ward off undesirable suitors. The members are quite as willing to marry as other girls, but they vow that they will remain old maids to the end of their days sooner than give their hands and hearts to men who betray even a moderate liking for strong liquor.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

Gives Up Temperance Work for the Time Being on Account of Her Failing Health.

Lady Henry Somerset, president of the National British Women's Temperance association, and president of the World's Women's Christian Temperance union, has resigned from the former office and will, for the present at least, do no more work. Lady Henry has taken this important step, it is said, solely on account of her health, which for some time past has been failing. She is in hopes that an entire rest for an indefinite period will restore her health and her power to work.

Lady Henry Somerset is well known in Chicago, where she has been a guest of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and a personal visitor to the late Frances E. Willard, of whom she was an intimate friend. She is the eldest daughter and co-heiress of the late Earl Somers, and is the wife of Lord Henry Somerset, the son of the eighth duke of Beaufort. She has one son, Henry Somerset, who in 1890, was married to the daughter of the duke of St. Albans. As a girl Lady Somerset took a sympathetic interest in charities of various kinds, and in her later life was attracted to the temperance cause, in which she soon assumed a rank of the first importance. In 1890 she was elected to the position from which she has just resigned, and in the years she has had control of it the great British association has grown with enormous strides and has done wonderful work in all parts of the United Kingdom. At Miss Willard's death in 1898 she took her place at the head of the International union, and for two years worked as the editor of the Woman's Signal. She also contributed liberally to the magazines and has published, besides, a book of short stories entitled "Black and White." In 1895 she founded the Industrial Farm colony at Duxhurst, and this institution had a surprising success. On the death of her father she succeeded to his rich estates in Worcestershire, Hertfordshire, Surrey and London, and has used this vast wealth very largely for the betterment of the poor.

FREDERICK W. HOLLS.

Famous New York Lawyer and Publicist Who Has Declined a Post of Great Honor.

President Roosevelt has a happy faculty of delighting to honor the really great and brainy men of the nation. Not long ago he tendered to Frederick W. Holls, of New York, the position of umpire in the settlement of the claims of Germany and Italy against Venezuela. Under the terms of the settlement effected by Minister Bowen the fixing of damages for Germany has to be left to one person representing Germany and another representing Venezuela, with an umpire to be appointed by the president of the United States. A similar method of arbitration was accepted by Italy. The question of preferential treatment of Germany, Great Britain and Italy is left to The Hague court. It is to be regretted that Mr. Holls, who is one of the foremost living authorities on international law and one of the founders of The Hague court, declined to accept the place of umpire, which has subsequently been bestowed upon Gen. Henry Martin Duffield, of Detroit, Mich., also an authority on international law and a soldier with a fine record.

THE LOBSTER'S ENEMIES.

When That Food on the Sea Bottom Prey Upon and Destroy Many of Them.

"The lobster," said an old fisherman, according to the New York Sun, "has no greater enemy than the bottom-feeding fishes—blackfish, codfish, haddock, and the like.

"They eat the lobster entire when they find one that has just shed its shell, when it is not only soft but powerless, and they may disable a lobster and then destroy it even when it is in fighting trim. Half a dozen blackfish, for instance, might come across a lobster and manage to bite off its legs and so partially disable it.

"The lobster is agile, a quick and long jumper through the water, but the blackfish is quicker and it can easily keep up; and the lobster finally disabled, it quickly finishes it. In this way a blackfish might get away with a lobster of considerable size.

"The codfish gets many—very likely the codfish gets the most—parts of the lobster better than men do. The skate, clumsy as it is, gets some; if it can blanket a lobster, get one of its big flap-like pectoral fins over it, the skate gradually works the lobster up to its mouth, and bolts it, or while the struggle for existence, and the lobster among them has no greater enemy than the bottom-feeding fishes."

WON HER OWN PROMOTION.

Young Woman Who Has Been Appointed to Office in the Philippines.

One of the recent appointees of the department of justice is that of Miss Floy V. Gilmore to be an assistant attorney in the office of the attorney general of the Philippines. She is the first woman ever appointed from the department to such an important position. She owes her distinction entirely to her ability and ambition. She was born in Indiana and is 28 years old. Army officers who knew her in the Philippines say she is very pretty, says a Washington report.

Miss Gilmore was clerk and secretary to E. Finley Johnson when he was professor of law at Michigan university. She devoted her spare time to studying law and graduated from the university law school. When the Philippine judiciary was established in 1901 Prof. Johnson was appointed judge of a court of the first instance.

Miss Gilmore went with him. She took a high civil service position and was appointed stenographer in the attorney general's office. There she displayed such marked legal ability that Gov. Taft appointed her to her present position and she was unanimously confirmed by the commission. Her salary as stenographer was $1,400. She now draws twice that much.

BOARD ON HOUSEBOATS.

Accommodations Offered New Yorkers Who Like to Live on the Water.

The fact that board can now be got on houseboats near New York puts the bachelor maid and the single man boarder in a position to test a new order of domestic accommodation, says the New York Sun.

Two sorts of houseboats offer summer accommodations to boarders. First, there is the boat of comparatively primitive description, which does not rent for a large sum, on which the boarder gets merely a berth and a locker, and the boat furnishings in the various departments are of the simplest and plainest.

Then there is the houseboat of high class English pattern, with all modern house conveniences, antique fittings, library, smoking-room, etc., and a liberal amount of deck room. The rates of board on the two kinds correspond with the accommodations offered.

The water facilities for houseboating within 75 miles of New York are such as to arouse enthusiasm for this sort of summer lodging.

Doubtless in addition to houseboat boarding colonies there will soon be houseboats offering furnished rooms and apartments to the public and others making a specialty of providing meals for the neighboring roomers.

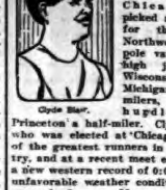
SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Intercollegiate track and field meets among the larger colleges are about over for the season, and the new captains for the teams of '04 have been selected. Chicago has picked a sprinter for the place, Northwestern a pole vaulter and high jumper, Wisconsin and Michigan a two-milers, Yale a hurdler and Princeton a half-miler. Clyde Blair, who was elected at Chicago, is one of the greatest runners in the country, and at a recent meet established a new western record of 9:09 4-5 with unfavorable weather conditions. He succeeds Jerome Magee, the pole vaulter. Arthur Baird was the unanimous choice of Northwestern he is the star center of the football team of the Evanston institution, and is a weight man as well as a jumper. At Michigan N. S. Kellogg succeeds former Capt. Robinson. He is the best two-miler in the west, and has won the event three years in succession. Yale's choice is Wilcoxonsin has also selected a two-miler in Edgar J. McEachron to succeed Capt. Keachie. Edwin J. Clapp, who has been elected to the position of honor at the head of the Yale track team, has been a consistent champ...ionships for both the 120 and the 220-yard hurdles. At Princeton the Tigers have selected Lynn M. Adsit as track captain for the coming year.



Clyde Blair.

Yale has declined Cambridge's challenge for an athletic meet between the two universities. Yale decided that inasmuch as the original plan for a joint meet has proved impossible, and as it would be rather late in the season, they would have to decline the challenge of the Cambridge university.

Alfred Shrubb, of England, recently broke all records for two miles for both grass and cinder tracks by going the distance in nine minutes, 11 seconds, on a grass track.

Although the venerable game of golf has been played across the water for a great many years, not more than 20 years ago there was not a regular golf course in America; to-day there are thousands. R. B. Mc...tenald was one of the first Scotchmen to come to this country with his bag of clubs, but his play was confined to driving a few balls in the outskirts of Chicago. The first course in the vicinity of Chicago was laid out at Lake Forest in 1901, but it was only a small affair. The first golf club regularly organized in the country was the Old Apple Tree brigade at Yonkers, N. Y. The St. Andrew's Golf club was formed in 1888, and after the game became more generally known championship tournaments were started. The Newport Golf club ran off the first one, and W. Lawrence took the honor. In 1895 the United States Golf association was formed and the first championship event was won by Mc...ighlin, who defeated H. J. Whigham has captured the honor twice, winning in both 1896 and 1897; Findlay Douglas won in 1898, while the fifth championship went to Herbert Harriman. Travis won the year following, and the tournaments since then, Lonnie James, who won his title last year at Glenview. The progress of the game in this country has been remarkable since its inception, and it is impossible to give with any degree of accuracy the number of followers of the game to-day or the number of clubs in existence. Phelps B. Hoyt is the popular captain of the Glenview club. He has done much to further the game in the west, and has figured prominently in championship events in recent years.

Barney Oldfield, of Toledo, O., recently broke the world's record for a mile on an automobile. During a five-mile match race at Yonkers, N. Y., he reeled off the second mile in 1:01 3-5 and won the race. This is the world's record for a mile for steam automobiles was also recently broken when F. E. Stanley went the distance at Readville, Mass., in 1:02 4-5.

Jack Root, light heavy-weight champion of the world, and Georgy Gardner, a claimant for the honor, have been matched to fight for the honor before the International Athletic club of Fort Erie, Canada, on the afternoon of July 4.

Among the entries for the famous Henley regatta, which is held yearly on the Thames river, London, appear the names of two Americans and one Canadian: Titus, of the Atlantic boat club, of New York; Juvenal, of the Vesper Boat club, Philadelphia, and Scholes, of the Don Rowing club, of Toronto. The Argonauts, of Toronto, are also entered in the regatta.

There is a lively fight on for Sunday ball in Ohio. The ministers of Tiffin, Fostoria and Findlay held a meeting recently and decided to do their best to abolish the evil, but have thus far failed in their efforts.

HARRY MARTIN.

WHAT MAKES A GENTLEMAN.

Qualities That Neither Wealth Nor Education Can Impart to Any Man.

Archbishop Temple, the recently deceased primate of the established Church of England and a man of the highest character, gave a short time before his death the following outline of what he considered really gentlemanly conduct:

"The man who is thoroughly unselfish in all small things, he is the man in regard of whom it is quite impossible for you not to feel, that man is a gentleman. Let his rank in society be what it may, let him be ignorant of the ordinary conventionalities of social intercourse, still, if the man is truly self-sacrificing, if in his ordinary relations with his fellows there is true and genuine unselfishness, it is impossible for any man who has much to do with him not to feel 'That man is a gentleman.' I don't care whether he is learned or not, whether he is educated or not; I don't care how reserved he may be or how low he may stand; I don't care if he be ever so poor; the man who constantly shows that he is giving himself up for the sake of other people, that man is at heart and in the sight of nature's gentlemen and this is the way in which he shows it."

RACE SUICIDE IN AUSTRALIA.

Birth Rate Has Dropped to Small Figure and Marriages Are Few.

A colonial newspaper has drawn attention to the decline in the affairs of Australia that are calculated to give pause to those who are looking forward to the future of this dependency, says London Sketch. One of these is what he calls the total arrest of immigration, and the other is the steady shrinkage of the birth rate. He puts the point very cogently thus:

"Here is a continent equal in area to the whole of Europe, if Russia in Europe be excluded; it is only a little less than the United States."

The richness of the country does not require to be enlarged upon, "yet," our correspondent goes on to say, "at the end of nearly 120 years of colonization, its population is less than 4,000,000, or about equal to that of a couple of London suburbs." The annual increase of population has fallen from 11 per cent. to two per cent. The marriage rate has shrunk from 8.64 to 6.87, and, while the average number of children for each marriage used to be six, it is now only a little over four.

AN EAR FOR MUSIC.

Unconscious Relations That Exist Between Musical Art and the Human Organism.

According to a new theory advanced by Fere and Jaell, two French investigators, the influence of musical tones and intervals on the physical organism is exactly the same with all persons, says Success. The only difference between a musical and an unmusical person is that the former is able to realize the esthetic relations of these reactions, while the other is not. By means of Mosso's "ergograph," a sensitive device by which the exciting or depressing effect of any influence on the organism can be measured, the experimenters have ascertained which are stimulating combinations of sounds and which are depressing ones.

Thus they find that a discord has just the same depressing physical effect on a person who "has no ear" as on one who is exquisitely sensitive to tones. "These experiments seem to prove," says the writers, "that our musical culture makes more and more perceptible to us the unconscious relations that exist between musical art and the human organism."

UNCLE SAM'S GIRL ARMY.

Five Thousand Young Women Work at Typewriters for Him Every Day.

From eight o'clock in the morning until close to six in the evening there are 5,000 typewriters grinding out letters for the United States government. During these hours there are, of course, 5,000 typewriter girls busily hammering the machines, says the Chicago Tribune.

Uncle Sam is the largest employer of typists in the country and should be the patron saint of the typewriter girl. The number of manuscripts his workers turn out would make even Clyde Fitch look dizzy.

Uncle Sam is the nicest kind of a man for typewriter girls to work for. His pay is always on hand and he never kicks on workers with everything they want. If a girl expresses a preference for a certain kind of a machine she gets it. She does not have to sit down and try to pound a typewriter she does not like.

Then, too, when a typewriter girl is employed in one of the departments she names the machine and it is purchased for her.

Monks Purchase Iona Island.

It is understood that the duke of Argyll has sold Iona island, Hebrides, to the Carthusians, who were recently expelled from the monastery of the Grande Chartreuse in France. The terms of the sale provide for the preservation of the sacred and historical associations of the island.

The Caper of Commerce.

The caper tree is a bush which is grown in some parts of Spain and in Algeria, as well as in this portion of France. The commercial caper is the flower bud, which is gathered before its development and preserved in vinegar.

MINT IN THEIR COFFEE.

Mistake of a Society Leader Taken for the Real Thing by Ambitious Emulators.

That the advice, "Watch how others do and then do likewise," is not always good to social aspirants, was illustrated the other evening at a dinner given by a young matron in honor of a guest of acknowledged social standing, relates the Chicago Tribune.

When coffee was served, and with it the indispensable chocolate mints, the guest was seen to take one of the sweets and toy with it gracefully over her coffee cup. Instantly every woman at the table did likewise. Evidently some new wrinkle of fashion was about to be exhibited. Every eye was on the guest and on the mint drop. Determination to follow the leader and give no sign that they were not in the habit of doing this new trick every day was written on every face. The sudden calm caused the guest to look up, and as she did so she inadvertently dropped her mint into the tiny cup. To her surprise and chagrin she found that the table as each of the rural ones followed her mistake.

Appreciating the situation, the guest hastily gulped down her coffee to hide her mirth.

Later in the evening she heard one woman remark to another:

"I don't care if it is a swell, I don't like mint in my coffee."

"Oh, dear," replied the other, tefully, "it is really delicious. I never think of taking my demitasse without it."

THE COUNTRY NEGRO.

Some of the Advantages He Enjoys Which Are Denied to His City Brother.

The average city negro grows up in the shade. He is completely overshadowed by his overtowering environment. As one walks along the streets of our great cities and views the massive buildings and aky-seeking structures, he finds no status for the negro above the basement floor. The city negro of education and culture is forced into menial employment because higher forms of occupation are preempted by the more favored class. There are a dozen competitors for every dollar in sight, and in the great majority of cases, the negro is handicapped by his color, says the Southern Workman.

The country negro, on the contrary, is on terms of equality with his environment. He is not confronted by suggestions of inequality at every turn. Nature is a mother who is equally kind and beneficent to all of her children. An acre of ground will yield as much for the black as for the white tiller. The markets are colorblind. No one inquires into the color of the producer of the best produce in the market, except as a matter of idle curiosity. No labor organization has yet placed its ban upon the work of farm labor. The farm offers for the negro the only really unhampered field which is open to him on an unlimited scale.

DOG WITH GOLD TOOTH.

Philadelphia Canine of the "Bull" Breed Has Remarkable Mouth Adornment.

A well-known Philadelphia pet stock dealer some years ago bit upon a very odd and effective way to identify his dogs, says the Philadelphia Record. The owner of this dog called on him and said:

"Jack, my valuable bull, is running away all the time. So far he has been traced and found in each of his flights, but it has been a matter of difficulty, and I am afraid that some day he will be irretrievably lost because of the lack of some positive and striking mark of identification."

"You want," said the dealer, "a good identifying mark. Well, I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll go to a dentist and have a gold crown put on one of the dog's front teeth. The crown won't hurt the tooth; on the contrary, it will preserve it; and always it will be a mark whereby your dog will be readily known."

The other did as the dealer advised, and since then there have appeared from time to time advertisements in the newspapers that began:

"Lost—A bulldog with a gold front tooth."

Cradle of American Genius.

Eight governors, three United States senators, three generals of the civil war, one of the world's greatest engineers, a distinguished painter and sculptor, two novelists who are read wherever the English tongue is known, a poet whose songs have thrilled millions of hearts, a rear admiral and a gallant commander whose heroic and tragic death is known to everyone, together with almost innumerable statesmen, jurists and makers of financial magnates, constitute Brookville's (Ind.) contribution to the genius of the world, writes Landon Knight, in National. Of the eight governors, James B Ray was the first.

About the Pepper Plant.

The pepper plant—piper nigrum—which produces the white and black pepper of commerce, is a climbing vine-like shrub, found growing wild in the forests of Travancore and the Malabar coast of India. Pepper is entirely tropical in its requirements. The white pepper is the result of pepper decorticated by maceration and rubbing.

New X-Ray Machine.

A nickel-in-the-slot X-ray machine has been invented. The observer places a coin in the slot, moves a lever, puts his hand, or whatever he wishes to examine, into a box without any sides, and looks down at it through a fourscent screen which forms the top of the box.

COMPOSITE PICTURE.

Faces of Twenty Men of Importance in One Illustration.

Average Age Is Nearly Sixty, But the Composite Is in Its Prime, So Far as Active Effort Is Concerned.

The American whose portrait is shown herewith is 20 men. But each one of the 20 is to-day in his prime, working with unimpaired vigor and with superbly developed faculties at the problems of civilization which still remain unsolved. Taken collectively they represent the typical American, to whose marvelous ability the glory of the epoch is due.

Their counterfeit presentments have been grouped in a composite picture, says the Kansas City Star, to show, as well as facial expression may, the personal traits that make the typical American what he is.

Three of the group are three of the richest men on earth, not by inheritance or by the use of despotic power, such as has been used by monarchs of all time to wring tribute from unwilling subjects, but by sheer business ability. Two of them rank among the highest governors of earth, a president and an ex-president of the United States.

One of them won a great naval battle.

One is head of the concern which does the largest dry goods business of any one concern in the world.

One is ranked as a sculptor and one as an artist in oils, whose work is not for the generation, but for all time.

One is a recognized leader of the transportation business of the country, the president of the Great Northern system.

One is the engineer who built the highest viaduct on earth—in Veragua,

TWENTY MEN IN ONE.

Peru—the great ark bridge at Niagara, and who is now building the second East river suspension bridge.

One is the architect of many of the most stately edifices in the country.

One is a soldier who is nominally at least commander of the American army.

One is the man who harnesses the most subtle force of nature, electricity, and makes it perform wonders at his will, obedient as a trained animal.

One is a leader among the surgeons of the world.

One is chief justice of the court that ranks perhaps highest of any on earth—the supreme court of the United States.

One is speaker of the house and one president of the senate at Washington.

One is a leading prelate of the Roman Catholic church, and another of the Protestant Episcopal church in America.

The oldest of the 20 is W. P. Frye, who was born in 1831; the youngest is Theodore Roosevelt, born in 1858.

The age of the composite man, computed by average, is 58 7-20 years. In other words, he has been busy for just about a quarter of a century since acquiring his preliminary training. So it may be said that he has done what he has in 25 years.

Of his personal appearance the composite photograph is the best evidence, but some individualities are worthy of mention.

Only two of the 20 are clean shaven. The fashion of a quarter of a century ago is still good enough for them, and 12 of them wear the mustache only, as was then the prevailing mode. Five wear full beards and one only the ecclesiastical, side whiskers. A surprising fact, considering the age of the composite man, is that he is not bothered with baldness. The picture combines the features of President Roosevelt, D. B. Henderson, Chief Justice Fuller, Archbishop Farley, Admiral Dewey, John D. Rockefeller, J. J. Hill, Thomas A. Edison, John S. Sargent, Dr. Charles McBurney, Grover Cleveland, Henry Eyre, Bishop Potter, Gen. Miles, J. P. Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, John Claflin, Charles F. McKim, Augustus St. Gaudens and L. L. Buck.

Good Lesson for a Boy.

In New York city, Justice Mayer recently gave a good lesson to an eight-year-old street urchin, who was arraigned before him for the crime of throwing stones. The boy admitted the charge, and said he thought it was fun to see the horses jump when he hit them. The justice ordered the lad to be taken into the court yard, so that no boy might throw stones at him. The little fellow broke down and cried. "The stones will hurt me," he said. This gave the justice the desired chance to draw the obvious moral and, exacting a promise that no boy should be thrown, he discharged the boy.

Chicago boasts of 4,708 lawyers. Chicago must be a very bad city.

Bill Devery has opened headquarters over a saloon in Twenty-eighth street, New York, where he will continue the flow of oratory and beer in the interests of his mayoralty boom.

The King of England has expressed the wish that King Peter will be able to re-establish the good name of the people of Servia. If all accounts are true King Peter can best serve this end by abdicating a crown such as he wears.

Money is needed to assist in defraying the expense of the public band concerts arranged to take place in the City Park. Believing that the Plainfield people will come to his support in the undertaking, Mr. LaVere, the promoter of the scheme, has completed plans for twelve concerts. Send a contribution to Mr. LaVere.

Notice the batch of accidents due to the reckless use of firearms on the Fourth. There is a law in this State prohibiting children under fifteen years of age using such weapons except when in the presence of parent or guardian. This arbitrary age limit should be abolished and the act should be made general. As a rule such accidents are not caused because the person using the weapon is under fifteen years of age, but rather because he acts as if he had reached that time of life.

In declining an invitation to attend the Tammany Society's Fourth of July celebration, Mr. Cleveland wrote that the organization as one of vast influence cannot escape the responsibility which its powers and its glorious traditions create in aiding in the work of good government. The distinguished former President was no doubt mindful of the time when the Tammany crowd sent a solid delegation to a National convention for the purpose of defeating his nomination. Tammany as a reform element would be an anomaly.

Much commendable work is being accomplished by the visitors to the Gospel in the various municipalities of this State in preventing young as well as bringing about needed reforms. The latest instance recorded is the move made by the pastors of Elizabeth churches against any increase in the number of licenses in that city. These "ambassadors of Christ" declare that there are already too many saloons in that place. Elizabeth is not alone in this affliction. In fact there are few municipalities in the State where the number of licenses do not fall this mind poison liquor could not be advantageously lessened.

Associate Justice George Gray, than whom there is no more brighter mind in the American judiciary, made some timely remarks concerning the liberty of the press at a Fourth of July demonstration in Wilkesbarre, Pa. Speaking as he did in the heart of a politically debauched State which is suffering with a press gag law, the remarks of the learned president of the Anthracite Strike Commission were most appropriate. The public may well ponder over these expressions:

"A free and untrammeled press is a potent influence for good. It is a reflex of the public opinion which, on the other hand, it helps to mould and direct. We all live today under its calcium light, and the growing sense of responsibility upon the part of those who conduct it is now ground for hopefulness as to the future. We sometimes resent its invasion of our privacy, its mistakes and false judgments, and in our anger at the individual offender, we are apt to forget the beneficence of the institution and think we pay a high price for the unhampered freedom of the press.

"But do not let us forget that we have received an hundredfold return for the price we have paid. Through it is mainly form public opinion exerts its salutary influence and through it largely are exploited the true defenses of the individualism and personal liberty on which I have dwelt so much. In the arbitrament of which we must all submit in the end, is the outcome of the character, judgment and daily conduct of communities like this. See to it, my friends, that your contribution thereto is wise and virtuous and calculated to uphold and not to tear down the fabric of American civilization.

"Public opinion of which I have been speaking, and to which deference is due and to the end will be commanded, comes from the rucible of discussion and contention among a free people and from an awakened public conscience. Its most powerful instrument and vehicle is, as I have said, a free and untrammeled press."

HILLSIDE GOLFERS' GREAT CELEBRATION

Elaborate Programme Draws Big Crowd on Independence Day.

RESULTS OF THE PLAY

SCORES MADE ON THE PARK GOLF CLUB COURSE.

Band Concert, Dinner and Dance Features at Hillside—Reinhart's Clever Work—The Individual Scores.

Independence Day was celebrated in an elaborate manner at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, the club through various committees, appointed for the purpose, arranging an unusually attractive programme. The clubhouse was decorated with the National colors, while the interior as well presented a patriotic appearance. Directly in front of the clubhouse, beneath a canopy of the National colors was Friedgen's Claremont Park Band, of New York, which gave concerts in the afternoon and evening.

The clubhouse was tested to its capacity, every available bit of room being used to serve dinners and for the dancing which followed a fine display of fireworks given early in the evening.

The first event of the day on the golf course was the play for the club championship, eight lowest gross scores to qualify, with prize cups for the second and third lowest eights. The first eight and the result of the first round match play was:

Robert Abbott beat W. L. Glenney, 4 up and 3 to go; Dudley H. Barrows beat Olaf Saugstad, 2 up; C. W. Abbott beat Frank C. Talmadge, 1 up; Frank O. Reinhart beat H. deP. Wright, 3 up and 2 to go. The semi-finals and finals will be played next Saturday. This event was notable because Frank Reinhart made the lowest score for the course this season, it being a 72. He also won first honors for the Golf Committee cup and scored a win for the Greens' Committee tankard, contested for by those with handicaps less than 18, besides making second place in the bogey handicap.

In the competition for the Greens' Committee tankard, for members with handicaps of 18 or less, these scores were posted:

Frank O. Reinhart, 72, 0—72; Olaf Saugstad, 90, 15—75; W. L. Glenney, 78, 1—77; Howard Huntington, 94, 17—77; Owen H. Fleming, 90, 12—78; Dudley H. Barrows, 85, 6—79; C. D. Stevens, 94, 15—79; L. B. Tweedy, 96, 16—79; C. B. Morgan, 96, 16—80; E. T. Newkirk, 93, 10—83; Walter Peterson, 93, 9—84; Frank C. Talmadge, 86, 2—84; Leighton Calkins, 92, 8—84; Arthur Murphy, 95, 10—85; Robert Abbott, 86, 1—85; C. W. Abbott, 89, 4—85; Dr. F. C. Ard, 91, 6—85; C. C. Burke, Jr., 104, 16—88.

F. W. Frost scored a win for the Holiday cup, for those with handicaps of 18 or over. His net score was 76. The scores:

F. W. Frost, 94, 18—76; J. E. Erickson, 103, 18—84; H. M. Stockton, 112, 27—85; W. L. C. Glenney, 106, 20—86; C. F. Abbott, 115, 27—88; E. E. Reinhart, 108, 18—90; Harold Serrell, 130, 37—93; C. W. King, 134, 37—97; E. E. Shoemaker, 117, 20—97.

One of the chief events of the afternoon was the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup. Low scores were the rule, not one of the net scores reaching the hundred mark. F. O. Reinhart won the first three points, while Olaf Saugstad secured the two points and W. L. Glenney the one remaining point. The scores:

Frank O. Reinhart, 74, 0—74; Olaf Saugstad, 90, 15—75; W. L. Glenney, 78, 1—77; Owen H. Fleming, 90, 12—78; Dudley H. Barrows, 85, 6—79; Lawrence L. Tweedy, 95, 16—79; C. W. Abbott, 87, 4—83; E. T. Newkirk, 93, 10—83; Frank C. Talmadge, 86, 2—84; Walter Peterson, 93, 9—84; Robert Abbott, 86, 1—85; Dr. F. C. Ard, 91, 6—85; W. L. Glenney, 106, 20—86; L. H. VanBuren, 106, 18—87; E. T. Barrows, 103, 15—87; C. B. Morgan, 106, 16—87; Chas. C. Abbott, 115, 27—88; H. R. Stockton, 94, 4—90; Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, 96, 6—90; George T. VanBuskerck, 103, 13—91; J. E. Erickson, 109, 18—91; Morris J. Dumont, 100; 6—94; C. W. King, 134, 37—97.

During the afternoon there were two clock golf tournaments, one for women and the other for men. Miss Waldo won the women's event with a score of 22. In the other W. L. Glenney and Frank O. Reinhart made four the scores, the first and second at 29 the third at 28 and the fourth at 24 and on the play off Glenney won with a 21.

In the bogey handicap Lawrence L. Tweedy made the lowest score, beating "Col. Bogey" and winning the cup offered as prize. He was 5 up on the colonel, making a net score of 73, three better than his opponent. The other scores are these:

Frank O. Reinhart, 2 up; Walter Peterson, 2 down; Frank C. Talmadge, 6 down; Robert Abbott, 7 down; W. L. Glenney, 1 down; Owen H. Fleming, even up; E. T. Newkirk, 4 down; Dudley H. Barrows, 2 down.

This completed the golf events for the day. In each event prize cups were offered. These were exhibited at the clubhouse during the day and evening.

The committees having in charge the programme for the day and evening were these:

Edward H. Ladd, Jr., general chairman; reception—George P. Melleck, chairman; Ernest R. Ackerman, Lewis E. Waring, Lewis G. Timpson, Walter M. McGee; music and refreshments—Lewis G. Timpson, chairman; Lewis E. Waring, Elliot T. Barrows; events—Thomas R. Van Boskerck, chairman. Thomas M. Day, Jr., Elliot T. Barrows, chairman; decorations—Elliot T. Barrows, chairman; Walter M. McGee, Edward H. Ladd, Jr.; transportation and grounds—James W. De Graff, chairman; William S. Tyler, Walter M. McGee; fireworks—Townsend Rushmore, James W. DeGraff; finance—Ernest R. Ackerman, Lewis E. Waring.

At the Park Golf Club there was a bogey handicap and ball sweepstakes in the afternoon. Senator Charles A. Reed and Samuel Townsend were tie for the honors, each being 5 down to "Col. Bogey." There was another tie in the afternoon in the competition for the Holiday cup, when Charles L. Nichols and Henry C. Wells each returned a net score of 80.

The honors for the President's cup went to Henry C. Wells and Charles L. Nichols, who divided the first three points; George T. Rogers, who gets two points and Morgan T. Townsend who receives the one remaining point. For the Park Golf Club cup, scratch play, Morgan T. Townsend receives first honors, while T. U. Morris, Jr., and Charles A. Reed get the two and one points respectively. The scores made counted in all three events, Holiday, President's and Park Golf Club cups. The scores:

Henry C. Wells, 103, 23—80; Charles L. Nichols, 106, 26—80; Charles A. Reed, 99, 18—81; Morgan T. Townsend, 81, plus 3—83; S. St. John Mc-Cutchen, 103, 19—84; Frank Rogers, 103, 19—84; Arthur Peck, 106, 14—86; Leon R. Thurlow, 111, 24—87; T. M. Morris, Jr., 97, 10—87; Nelson A. Miller, 110, 23—87; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 116, 29—87; W. A. Townsend, 101, 11—90; W. R. Faber, 107, 17—90; J. H. Howell, 105, 14—91; T. U. Dudley, Jr., 111, 20—91; H S. Rogers, 108, 16—92; Samuel Townsend, 109, 17—92; C. W. McCutchen, 113, 20—93; George T. Rogers, 117, 25—92; A. W. Anderson, 110, 17—93.

Another event of the afternoon was a putting and approaching contest. There were several teams entered in this competition. Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Morgan T. Townsend won the event with a score of 10.

CARROLL WINS CUP.

Westfield, July 6—The events on the Westfield Golf Club course on Saturday included an Independence handicap, 18 holes, medal play, in the morning, for a net score cup presented by Hugh Talbot and a gross score cup presented by the club. Ray Carroll, of North Plainfield, won the cup for the lowest net score. He made a 75, and Edgar I. Serrell, also of North Plainfield, with a gross score of 90, won the other cup.

In the afternoon J. A. Woodward won the driving contest, making 199 yards. In the putting and approaching contest Edgar I. Serrell and F. P. Crandell were tie with a score of 9. On the play-off Serrell won, making a score of 9, while his opponent made 10

Donations to Hospital.

These donations were received, during the month of June, at Muhlenberg Hospital: Mrs. Danlop, towels and air cushion; Thomas Armstrong, pair of crutches; Mrs. Louise Eyre, one bath robe, one pair slippers, men's clothing; E. B. Clark, hospital supplies, invalid chair; Mrs. H. B. Newhall, two shawls, one blanket; Charles D. Tallman, twelve pineapples; Mrs. F. S. Davis, two dozen tumblers; Mrs. Finnemore, one air cushion, flowers, literature, old linen.

Burial of Infant.

The funeral of Dorothy, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Audley Marsh, of Manning avenue, took place Sunday afternoon from the residence of the parents. The services were conducted by Rev. Edwin L. Earp and the interment was made in the Plainfield Avenue Cemetery.

Nail in Lawyer's Foot.

Isaac F. Runyon, of Somerset street, while visiting at Pluckamin with his family over the Fourth, ran a nail in his foot and had to be brought home Sunday. He is now under Dr. Zeglio's care. The wound has been cauterized and no serious results are anticipated.

Holy Cross Excursion.

The excursion of the Holy Cross Church in North Plainfield will be held jointly with the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, Thursday, July 16, to Asbury Park.

ALIS WINS AND LOSES

ST. MARY'S CRACK TEAM IS TWICE DEFEATED BY OPPONENTS.

Those Depending on Hope Are Disappointed by Results—Other Games in Which the Local Teams Figured.

ALIS DIVIDES HONORS.

Alis split even with Scotch Plains in its Independence Day games. A large holiday crowd witnessed the home team defeat the 'Plains boys on Crescent Oval, in the morning. The score was 9 to 7. During the early part of the game it looked as though the visitors would not get more than two runs as Hope, who pitched for Alis, had perfect control of the ball and prevented his opponents from doing much batting. In the seventh inning the visiting team took on a streak of batting and came close to winning out. The decisions by Umpire Townley were at times disastrous to both teams. The only weak spot in the home team was Worthley at third base. He made several miserable plays. The rest of the nine was up to the standard.

The visitors were not up to their usual form and in the middle of the game Davis the pitcher, was replaced by Kavanaugh, the right fielder. The lineup:

Alis—Flynn, 3b; Pond, rf; Henriques, ss; Richardson, 1b; Hope, p; Page, c; Worthley, 3b; Moore, cf; Lederer, lf.

Scotch Plains—McManus, lf, Brogan, c; Kavanaugh, rf, p; Allen, 1b; Davis, p, rf; Bolsterli, 2b; Cruzius, ss; Williams, 3b; Flannery, cf.

The Scotch Plains boys redeemed themselves in the afternoon, in one of the prettiest contests of the season, the game being won in the ninth inning, by a wild throw of Burt, which went back in the crowd, allowing Cruzius to score the winning run. Dupee in the box for Alis, was relieved by Burt in the sixth. The line up:

Alis—Flynn, 2b; Pond, rf; Henriques, ss; Richardson, 1b; Moore, cf; Page, c; Worthley, 3b; Lederer, lf; Dupee and Burt, p.

Scotch Plains— McManus, lf; Brogan, c; Kavanaugh, rf; Allen, 1b; Davis, p; Bolsterli, 2b; Cruzius, ss; Williams, 3b; Flannery, cf.

ST. MARY'S DEFEATED.

The St. Mary's nine was defeated by the Sixth Ward Athletic Club, of New Brunswick, Saturday morning, by a score of 10 to 5.

For the local team good work was done by Doyle at right field and Winn at first. Monahan at short stop caught some warm ones from the bat and Cooney at first made some star plays.

HOPE CRUSHED TO EARTH.

The Hope Y. M. A. was defeated twice Saturday by the Raritan A. A. In the morning the score was 4 to 0 and in the afternoon the score was 7 to 5. The battery in the morning for the Raritans was Bontelier and Ryster and for Hope, Hewitt and Bolen. In the afternoon Brogan and Ryster were the batteries and Hewitt and Bolen for the home team. Hewitt, of the Hopes, pitched good ball at both games.

The lineup of the home team was: Bolen, c; Hewitt, p; Baldwin, 1b; F. Dodge, 2b; Martin, ss; Shortman, 3b; Rosebery, rf; Greth, cf; Montrose, lf. Credon, umpire.

DOWNED ST. MARY'S.

St. Mary's met defeat at the hands of the Westfield team, Saturday afternoon, on the latter's grounds. Montrose, who pitched a winning game in the morning for Westfield, did the twirling against the Plainfield boys. Although he was hit freely the hits were not bunched, and only one St. Mary player crossed the rubber. Hughes, the St. Mary box artist, was wild, hitting three men and letting eleven walk. Winn relieved him in the ninth.

TENNIS EVENTS AT HILLSIDE

MIXED-DOUBLES AND MEN'S SINGLES THE ATTRACTIONS.

Miss Schuyler and Mr. Taylor Win Doubles—Men's Singles Not Completed.

There were two events in tennis at the Hillside Club Saturday, mixed doubles and men's singles, and the playing throughout was fine.

In the first round of the mixed doubles Miss Margaret Goddard and Charles A. King defeated Mrs. James R. Blake and Howard Huntington; Miss Elsie Burke and Owen H. Fleming defeated Mrs. E. L. Mack and J. P. Murray; Miss Sarah Schuyler and G. H. Taylor defeated Mr. and Mrs. George S. Ring; Miss Mary Whiton and T. M. Day, Jr., defeated Miss Virginia Hegeman and W. L. Glenney.

In the next round Miss Burke and Owen Fleming defeated Miss Goddard and Charles A. King; Miss Schuyler and G. H. Taylor defeated Miss Whiton and T. M. Day, Jr. In the finals Miss Schuyler and Mr. Taylor won from Miss Burke and Mr. Fleming.

In the men's singles, handicap play, the semi-finals were reached but not played. They will be finished this week and the finals will be played off next Saturday.

FOUND DEAD.

Body of Edward Calloway Discovered on Tracks Near Plainfield Avenue.

The body of Edward Calloway, aged 37, colored, was found lying beside the east bound tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey Saturday evening near Plainfield avenue by an engineer. The remains were viewed in George Cole's undertaking parlors by Coroner Bunting. Death was evidently due to a blow on the back of the head caused by a fast freight engine.

Worthy Object.

"There's no excuse for sending money abroad for missionary work when there is work to be done at home," said a member of Mt. Olive Baptist Church as he contributed towards repairs on that church edifice. The structure is now thirty-two years old and the roof is leaking badly. Unless steps are taken to make the necessary repairs. Any donation will be gratefully received. Pastor Jackson is making a personal canvas of the city.

New Series.

A limited number of shares will be offered for sale in the new series to be opened Monday night by the directors of the Union Building and Loan Association. The shares in this association are seldom to be had and no doubt all will be quickly taken, as it is hard to find a safer or better investment.

Found Missing Purse.

Jimmie Janussi, a fruit dealer, of Somerset street, missed a purse Saturday morning containing $312. The packet was lost in his back yard while he was feeding some chickens. Mary Muss, a domestic in the employ of Richard Boyce, found it. She was liberally rewarded for returning the money.

CITY FATHERS ACT ON ROUTINE MATTERS

President Buckle Announces Committee on Proposed New Park.

AID FOR BAND CONCERTS

MONTHLY REPORTS OF CITY JUDGE AND BUILDING INSPECTOR READ.

Muhlenberg Hospital Not Exempt From Taxation — Leasing of Police Headquarters — Poor Insulation of Light Wires.

The July meeting of the Common Council held last Monday, was devoid of particularly interesting features. A petition from the Plainfield Real Estate Company and other business men occupying offices near the corner of North and Watchung avenue, petitioned the Council to secure toilet rooms for the travelling public at the trolley terminus. On Mr. Lee's motion the petition was referred to the Board of Health.

Another petition was received from Benjamin LaVere asking for an appropriation from the city for band concerts. It stated that public spirited citizens had subscribed enough money for three concerts and it was desired to give a series of eight. The cost of each concert is $90. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The Plainfield Produce Commission Company, of North avenue, petitioned for the privilege of erecting an awning in front of its place of business, 133 North avenue, and the erection of a railing leading to the basement. The petition was referred to the fire and building committee.

Residents of Darrow avenue protested against the proposed raising of the grade on that avenue when it is macadamized. They stated that Street Commissioner Gavett had informed them that such a raise could be avoided if a storm sewer is installed in the avenue and the property owners asked that this be done. The matter was referred to the street committee.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company informed the Council that four lights, recently ordered, have been located as directed. The quarterly report of City Judge Runyon showed that 167 cases had been before him and $413 in fines collected. The expenses for the quarter amounted to $4 and the balance was turned over to the city treasurer. Building Inspector Doane reported that during the past month twenty-three permits were granted.

Regarding the request from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital for exemption from tax on its property corner of Park avenue and Randolph road, Mr. Daniel presented an opinion from Corporation Counsel Marsh stating that this cannot legally be done. The clerk was instructed to so notify the Board of Governors.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel, L. Morsiler & Son, the Park avenue jewelers, were given the contract to take care of the town clock for one year for $20. This is practically a renewal of last year's contract and the resolution was adopted.

Mr. Pray reported on the petition of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital asking that Randolph road in front of the hospital property be graded and macadamized, and stated that the work would be done as soon as possible. Mr. Pray also reported on the petition of residents in the West End asking that Dunellen avenue be extended through to Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, and that the name of the thoroughfare be changed to Myrtle avenue. He offered a resolution authorizing that a map of the proposed street and extension be made and that the same be opened and extended provided the borough will do its share of the work. This was assured by Mr. Lee, who stated that Mayor Smalley had informed him that the borough would do its share toward the improvement.

Mr. Lee, chairman of the fire and building committee, reported that one of the condemned fire horses had been sold for $135.

Mr. Randolph, chairman of the police committee, presented a letter from Corporation Counsel Marsh stating that the lease between the city and J. B. Coward and J. W. Murray, owners of the police headquarters' property had been drafted and approved and urging its adoption by the Council. The agreement provides for the leasing of the first and second stories of the building used as police headquarters, a right-of-way from East Front street to the rear of the property, but Mr. Randolph's resolution authorizing the adoption of the lease on the part of the city was laid over for a time for the reason that the instrument fails to give the city the use of the land back of police headquarters. This omission was discovered by Mr. Tyler and upon his recommendation the matter was laid over. The lease also provides for the right to remove the cells in the jail, as well as to erect a stable for the occupancy of the patrol horse and wagon.

In accordance with the request of Mayor Jenkins that a committee of fifteen men, five from the Council and ten from the various wards, be appointed to inquire into the advisability of establishing a city park along the lines as proposed by the Mayor, President Buckle appointed the following: From the Council—J. F. Buckle, W. S. Tyler, Robert L. Lee, Jas. vanHerwerden and R. I. Tolles; First ward—L. V. F. Randolph; Moore Schloss, Second ward—S. A. Ginns, DeWitt C. Irvine, Geo. P. Mellick; Third ward—E. T. Barrows, Alex. Gilbert, P. V. R. VanWyck; Fourth ward—Andrew McCardell and Arthur T. Gallup.

Mr. Buckle stated, by way of explanation, that it would probably be some time before the committee would be prepared to report as there are many things to be many things to be considered regarding the improvement.

Mr. Daniel called up the supplement to the tax ordinance providing for the issuance of the school bond and collection of taxes therefore and on his motion the ordinance was adopted on its third reading. He also offered a resolution providing that H. C. VanEmburgh make the necessary changes in the city map for the past year at an expense not to exceed $100. Another resolution by Mr. Daniel provided for the transfer of $3,800 from the general to the fire fund and $600 from the general to the poor fund. Still another resolution by the same member provided that in the matter of the new school bonds, the finance committee be authorized to confer with the successful bidders Ladenburg, Thalman & Co., for an extension of time in the issuance of the bonds for two months from July 1, last, for the delivery of the same. This action was necessary owing to a delay in getting the bonds ready.

Mr. Pray called up the ordinance providing for the permanent improvement of certain streets and it was adopted on a third reading. He also offered a resolution authorizing Street Commissioner Gavett to prepare profiles and specifications for this work.

Mr. Tyler called the attention of the Council to a letter which he received from Ernest R. Ackerman in which the latter spoke of the poor insulation found in the electric light wires in the city park. Mr. Ackerman believed that the city would be liable in case of any damage or injury therefrom. At the suggestion of President Buckle the matter was referred to the light committee. This committee will make an investigation of the electric wiring about the city streets and have the matter attended to without delay.

CONTESTS FOR SECOND AND THIRD PLACE IN EACH EVENT.

Accident to Highland Laddie—The Mayor's Son Affords Amusement — Complete Details of the Races.

Marred by only one accident, the races at the Driving Park Saturday afternoon, provided keen sport for hundreds of holiday spectators, including many of the fair sex. There wasn't a tame contest on the programme, every race bringing the spectators to their feet with the excitement of the struggle at the home stretch.

The final contests came in the race for second and third honors. Plainfield was represented by some of the victors but each second place in the 2:20 and 3:20 classes and third in the 2:25. The collapse of Highland Laddie, a black gelding owned by W. A. Tucker, of Orange, was caused by excessive heat.

There were three mixed races, trot or pace. A race between mules and a match race between Mayor N. B. Smalley's Prince, with the mayor's son holding the lines and a trotter owned by Stonewall Jackson and driven by Martin Duffy, provided lots of amusement and variety. In Fate of Each Member Foretold in Humorous Vein—All Sorts and Conditions of Occupations—To Scatter to Four Winds.

The class prophecy of 1903, Plainfield High School, has won many praises and is reprinted below at the request of readers. Harold C. Brown was the author.

Colombo, Ceylon, June 3, 1928.

My Dear "Rabbit":—

I cannot tell you how sorry I am that I have not kept up the correspondence which we started, but you know how things crowd into our lives and keep us from doing all we should like. But now I'm going to set everything aside and write. First I must tell of a happy meeting which I have just had with some of our old friends, and of what I learned from them about the others.

The other day as I stood on the wharf watching a launch coming from the U. S. Battleship Plainfield, I was startled by an undignified yell from a staid-looking officer in the stern. As the launch drew nearer I recognized the ne'er-to-befergotten face of Fred VanAuken, who has now become a rear Admiral. You could hardly imagine my delight at seeing him, especially in this out-of-the-way hole, where one never expects to see an old squaintance.

After Fred and I had fallen into each others arms and had slapped each other on the back for about five minutes, we went up to my bungalow, and immediately started to reminisce. Suddenly, I had a thought, (an unusual thing for me, don't you know.) I remembered hearing that one or two '03 fellows were in this vicinity—Bob Meeker at Calcutta, and "Curly" Ulrich at Batavia, in Java; so I suggested to the Admiral that we have a sort of class reunion.

And this we did. Since all the officials here were on their knees to Fred, that mighty man of valor, it was an easy thing to have a revenue cutter sent for the two D. D.'s—the Right Reverend Robert Meeker, Bishop of the Indian Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and Rev. Dr. Carl Ulrich, missionary to the Paphlomian Malays. Don't you laugh at Bob and "Curly" as ministers, for the Vicar of Wakefield isn't in it with them.

Well, they arrived the next day, and along with them Charles Noble "Hiram" Doolittle, a dashing Captain of the 216th Cavalry, U. S. A., who had been shooting mountain lions in northern India, and had happened to be visiting the Bishop when my message arrived.

When we five were gathered together we resurrected old experiences, I can tell you. First of all we had the finest banquet the place could produce; all the fruits and vegetables native to the country were there. I didn't think I had the making of a farmer in me when I was in school, did you? Mike Moynihan first led me to it by some learned articles he brought out in the Atlantic Monthly on "The Pleasure of a Life of Quiet Retirement in the Country." I started in a small way in camphor, and now control the market.

"Hi's" tongue was in it's old-time lumber condition, and he gave us lots of news.

Luther Sheppard, he told us, is one of the leading reporters on the New York American. He runs the sporting column, which fact, the Captain said, accounted for the inaccuracy of the baseball scores.

"Ossy" Moore has gained a reputation for himself as America's greatest humorist, and, sad to relate, still spends his time writing puns of the worst sort. But he laughs less, perhaps because others laugh more.

"Berty" Beers has distinguished himself as professor of Greek in the Brown University for Deaf Mutes, which was founded by Cyril Brown, with the millions which he has amassed from the invention of a sure cure for colic. Flossie Martin, according to rumor, might have been Mrs. Cyril with all the millions, but preferred to devote her life to the physical improvement of womankind. She is President of the New Woman's Club of America, and is Captain of the champion All-American Women's Basket-ball team.

Dorothy Waldo is a virtuoso on the violin. She has played before the Emperor of Germany and George Fifth of England. "Hi" says that when she is at home she resides in Plainfield, and performs her duties as honorary President of the W. C. T. U., in which position she keeps up her old reputation for arguing.

The "Parson" had just received a letter from his sister, in which she told him about some '05 girls. Nellie Rafferty is a shining belle of new Chicago society. Our demure little Friend, Mabel Vail, after graduating from college studied medicine, and is now matron of Muhlenburg Hospital, the largest in the United States. At the same place Edna Long is consulting-physician. Annis Kissman has gone on the stage, and has of late been playing in several Shakespearean dramas, gaining special commendation in her part as Lady Macbeth. Grace Ten Eyck started life as secretary to J. Pierpont Morgan's widow. She began to speculate, and soon made a fortune out of United Universe Airship Preferred.

The Bishop recollected that a year ago he had attended a performance of the United Combined Unalloyed Circus and Hippodrome, run and owned by "Hank" Meeker and "Vin" Miner. The musk-trainer was Clarence Rocap, and the senseless clown, the brainy Hill. The managers, according to Bob, are also owners of the World's Electricity Supply Co., which draws electricity from the clouds. A among the directors of this concern is Ralph Savoy Lane, the sole political light of '03. He is Secretary of State and President of Immigrant Labor. And would you believe it? Mrs. President, who is said to be the power behind the throne, is none other than Louise Montfort Taylor Jones.

Since I have kept somewhat in touch with one or two members of the class still in the States, I myself knew about most of the others. Harriet Randall is renowned as a learned professoress of dancing in the co-educational University of Washington. Ethelyn Davis is instructor of music in the same institution.

But lower Martha Maier and sedate Ethel Rogers have surpassed them all. The first is president of Round Brook University, the largest in the country. The last has won her fame as a great distorian. Among her works are a "History of Mars" and a "History of Plainfield."

Lucie May Coriell, Alice Allegra Pugh, and Majorie La Tourette Burke no longer bear those names, but as mesdames lead the society at Dunellen, the Newport of today.

As to Helen Moodey, we are not sure. The last I heard of her was as a reporter for the woman's page of the Manila Telegraph. "Hi" says she married an army officer, and now lives somewhere in Borneo. The "Parson" is sure she is a missionary in Central Asia.

Mayhap, dear "Rabbit," you have noticed that none of our number has passed away. We five decided that the class owed its longevity to Dr. "Dick" Cossar's "Life-Prolonging Fluid," which has at least tided us over many a critical point. Ours is the greatest class old P. H. S. ever graduated, and I'm glad I'm in it.

Write soon, and tell me when they're going to make you Governor of Alaska. Your old class-mate,

"Doc" Brakely.

THE NEGRO QUESTION.

Colored Orator to Discuss the Problem in Mt. Olive Baptist Church.

Dr. William A. Credit, the "silver tongued orator," who replied to the Governor of Virginia before the great national conventon at Richmond, Va., in 1900, will deliver an address at the Mt. Olive Church, Thursday, July 30. The occasion is the thirty-second anniversary and reunion celebration.

Dr. Credit, who is called the "greatest orator of the colored race," will speak on the question, "Should the Colored People be Content to Remain in America and Solve Their Own Problem? If so, How?" He will be accompanied by Dr. Gordon, of West Philadelphia. Members and pastors of all the churches in the city are invited to be present. Admission, fifteen cents.

NEW PARSONAGE.

Crescent Avenue Church Has Purchased New Property for Pastor.

The members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church have purchased a handsome property on Watchung avenue, very near the church, as a parsonage for their new pastor, Rev. John Sheridan Zelie and his family. The other parsonage on East Front street will be disposed of. For some time past the members have thought the East Front street property too far from the church and, after engaging the new pastor, decided to make a change.

The Foundation of Health.

Nourishment is the foundation of health—life—strength. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the one great medicine that enables the stomach and digestive organs to digest, assimilate and transform all foods into the kind of blood that nourishes the nerves and feeds the tissues. Kodol lays the foundation for health. Nature does the rest. Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and all disorders of the stomach and digestive organs are cured by the use of Kodol. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

Why Many Young Men Fail.

It is the fault and the cause of the allure of so many bright, capable young men that, being put into a certain work-day rut, they make no effort to climb or even crawl out of it; they do not seek the work that is not routine and go beyond the terms of the bond in search of additional labor in order to attract the approving notice of their employers. They do not go to their posts before nor remain at them after the fixed hour. They are content to do enough, and no more than enough, to earn their hire. The life of the average clerk is generally genteel, easy, cleanly; he need not soil his hands nor his clothes, and his ambition is satisfied with these pleasant conditions.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Not Very Consoling.

"Say, I'm in a peck of trouble," remarked the seed-fiend, sympathetically.

"Well," rejoined the village rake, "I suppose it's up to me to listen; so let out your mournful wail."

"I'm up to my neck in debt, that's the trouble," said he of the sorrowful countenance, "and I can't turn a corner without bumping into a creditor. I owe the grocer, the butcher, the coal man, the tailor, my wife's dressmaker and a dozen others. I can see but one way out of it all, and that is via the suicide route."

"You are certainly up against the real thing," remarked the local Solomon. "But whatever you do, cut out the suicide act. That would only add the undertaker to an already lengthy list."—Chicago Daily News.

Andalusian Specters.

Upon a mountain in Andalusia quaint spectral forms are frequently seen. Over the valley they linger mist, and persons are ascending the mountains they appear in all their ghostly splendor, and sometimes so suddenly as to strike dismay into the hearts of those who are there for the first time. Of course, it is a trick played by the sun. When a mist partially shrouds the mountain the sun is naturally observed, and then revenges himself by projecting the shadow of any person who is ascending the mountain, until it appears in the form of a gigantic specter.—N. Y. Herald.

Candidates for Retirement.

The following words have filed application for retirement from active service in the office of the secretary of expression. General debility caused by indiscriminate use in the reason assigned in every case: One, genius; two, gentleman; three, hero; four, strenuous; five, elegant; six, friend; seven, genteel; eight, honorable; nine, statesman; ten, immortal. It is to be hoped that the petitioners' requests will be granted. Information from reliable sources states that many other overworked words are preparing similar applications.

Insinuating.

Harry—I hear you do not speak to Miss Ogle.

Reggie—No, she is too offending. I told her I went to a phrenologist and had my head examined and she said there was nothing in it.

"Did she mean there was nothing in phrenology?"

"She said I could draw my own conclusions."—Chicago Daily News.

Our Balance of Trade.

In 1900 this country was the largest exporter of domestic merchandise in the world, while no longer ago than 1870 her exports were exceeded by three countries, France, Germany and the United Kingdom. In "favorable balance of trade," the excess of exports over imports, the United States also holds first rank among the nations.—N. Y. Sun.

Women in Business.

Women in business on their own account have much in their favor. As a rule they are not speculative, they are far-seeing, they have patience, are more attentive to what they take in hand, and, if they know their business, they can more quickly build up a connection than can a man. But they are less systematic in their bookkeeping.—Drapers' Record.

He Didn't Believe It.

"Do you believe there is anything in the old saw about Dame Fortune knocking once at every man's door?" asked the Mt. Auburn man.

"Not me," replied the Norwood philosopher. "The old lady sends her daughter, Miss Fortune, to call on the most of us."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Charitable Americans.

The Americans are looked upon by the peoples of Europe as the most wasteful persons in the world, and they do spend their money with a freedom unknown elsewhere, because they have the money to spend. But with all their apparent carelessness there is no country in the world, nor is there record of any, in which the people devote so much to the welfare of the unfortunate and the wretched. The practice has become a habit and is looked upon rightly enough as an obligation. No one can free himself from it; every one has a benevolent society, and he will not fulfill his obligation merely by denying himself of some luxury or pleasure unless the self-denial benefits his unfortunate neighbor.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Singular Crime.

An enlisted man on board the British vessel Drake was being tried for the offense of striking his superior officer, who formed one of the crew of H. M. S. Good Hope on the occasion of her recent voyage to South Africa with the colonial secretary, wrote and published a book on his arrival in Cape Town, describing the voyage and containing reflections on some of the ship's officers. Indulgence in authorship being contrary to the regulations governing the lower deck, the authorities ordered that the writer should be arraigned on a charge of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and naval discipline." He was found guilty and sentenced to three months' imprisonment with hard labor.—Army and Navy Register.

Fifty for Western Nations.

The Chinese enjoy the greatest liberty. The laws of the western nation are too numerous and too severe. Instances of their bondage may be given. All the children in the country are bound to attend school at a certain age. When an author wants to print a book he has to ask for a copyright. Before a man can start a newspaper he must apply for a certificate from his government sanctioning him to do so. There are fixed regulations governing all companies and firms. All marriages must be reported to a certain department for registration. Thus there is no liberty between husband and wife.—Peking Sin Pao.

Dust-Fall in British Isles.

A dust fall of February has been traced in the counties in England, eight in Wales and one in Ireland, and it has been reported from numerous places on the continent. The dust overspread the land like smoke, while near Southhampton the cloud was so dense that a person could not see a hundred at noon. Like the falls of 1901 and 1902, the dust is supposed to be of desert origin, probably from northern Africa, and does not appear to be volcanic—Boston Budget.

Pay to Wear Men's Clothes.

The right of women to wear male attire in France is conferred by the government as a great privilege, for which, however, she must pay $10 a year as a tax. The only women to whom the right to wear male attire has been given are George Sand, Rosa Bonheur, Madame Dieulafoy, the Persian archeologist; Madame Pascal, the botanist woman, and Madame Fontreau and Madame de Jeannette, both sculptors.—Toronto Mail and Express.

Beasts Born in Captivity.

The birth of a litter of lions at Haslemere park, a private menagerie in England, leads one of the English papers to note the fact that has for long puzzled biologists, and that is notorious among those who interest themselves in the study of wild beasts in captivity, this being that nearly all the lion, tiger and leopard cubs born in that country have a cleft palate, which prevents them from being properly suckled, and usually leads to their premature death. But, beyond this, a more astonishing fact still—and one that also greatly puzzles biologists—is that while deteriorines that of all the wild animals born in England those born in Bristol are regarded as the finest and as the most likely to live. So well known is this to professional showmen and menagerie keepers that "Bristol born" is a recognized brand in the wild animal trade.

When comes the good old summer time, and heat is next door to crime, then we are cool and selfpossessed. While other people fret and fume we float serenely round the room within the shirt waist neatly pressed.

And, too, it has another charm, one that's dear to us all from all harm; it is a secret most profound, but men prefer shirt waists, we guess, to every other style of dress to slyly put their arms around.

What is more pleasing to the eye than to see shirt waists flutter by? Such visions all too rare occur; the men look after in delight, and say, as vanishes the sight: "I'd leave my happy home for her."—Chicago News.

Germany's Pay Weddings.

Germany has a pay wedding, at which the bride receives her guests with a basin before her, in which each person on entering deposits a jewel, a silver piece or a piece of money. In some parts of Germany the rule is that the expenses of the marriage feast shall be met by each guest paying for what he eats or drinks. The prices paid for viands and drink are high and the young couple often make a handsome profit out of their wedding, realizing a sum quite sufficient to start them nicely in life.—N. Y. Tribune.

MRS. CHAS. W. FOOTE OBTAINS A DIVORCE

Wife of Former Assemblyman Receives the Custody of Children and Alimony.

DIVORCEE A POLITICAN

CRAIG A. MARSH, OF THIS CITY, APPEARING FOR MRS. FOOTE.

Foote Formerly An Assemblyman From Union County—Prominent in Local Politics—Practices Law in New York.

After a stubborn fight of nearly two years duration, Mrs. Mary C. W. Foote Thursday achieved complete success in her suit against her husband, former Assemblyman Charles S. Foote, for absolute divorce. She obtains the custody of her two boys, permanent alimony and costs.

The oral argument on the final questions in dispute were heard by the Chancellor in April, Craig A. Marsh appearing for Mrs. Foote. Former Gov. Foster M. Voorhees for a co-respondent in the case and Frank Borgen for Mr. Foote solely on the question of alimony. Mr. Foote himself had previously appeared with the co-respondent when the testimony was taken, and both testified that their relations were entirely platonic and proper in all respects.

The decree for alimony will date from the beginning of the suit. The defendant is living in New York although he comes to Plainfield to vote.

Mr. Foote is engaged in the practice of law, with offices in New York. He was formerly an assemblyman from Union County. For several years he represented the Second ward in the Republican City Executive Committee and was also a member of the county committee.

HOBART SMOCK, ACTOR.

He Is to Take the Part of the Prince in "The Prince of Pilsen."

Hobart Smock, a gifted singer, who has appeared in several musicales in this city, and is well-known here, has given up society to devote his time to the stage. He made his first appearance last year as Captain Bobby, in "San Toy," and he has now been signed to play the role of the Prince in "The Prince of Pilsen," when that production goes out next fall. Mr. Hobart is a graduate of Rutgers College, receiving his degree with the class of '94. He is a relative of Mrs. Garrett A. Hobart, widow of the late Vice President.

Realty Transfers.

Seven transfers of real estate in North Plainfield were recorded at the office of the county clerks during the weeks of June 1 to June 13. They were: Anna C. DeKlyn to Percival S. Browne, $1; George Hummer to Jane B. DeMott, $1; George Hummer to Jane B. DeMott, $1; Congregation Beth Teleia Inho Yentai to Samuel Dreier, of Plainfield; Marion C. West to Ogden M. Hosfield, $15,000; Nelson W. French to C. Frank French, $350; Carrie Hart and Hart and husband to C. Frank French, 1.

ESCAPE DEATH IN RUNAWAY

THE MISSES SAMPSON, OF NEW MARKET, HAVE CLOSE SHAVE.

Cob Frightened at Approaching Trolley and Dashes Away—Young Women Thrown Out.

The Misses Sampson, of New Market, were the principals in a lively runaway, fraught with considerable danger, which occurred Thursday afternoon at the corner of Grant avenue and West Front street, about 5 o'clock. The young women, in a light runabout and driving a spirited cob, were on their way home from Plainfield. Just as they reached the corner of Grant avenue and West Front street, a trolley car came down the hill at a lively pace. The horse became frightened and made a complete circle in the middle of the road, throwing the two young women to the curb.

The older of the two girls, who was driving, clung to the reins, and was dragged fully a hundred feet on her face and stomach. The younger girl, who was thrown a considerable distance was powerless to help her sister.

The horse finally broke away from the wagon and made tracks for home at a 2:20 clip. James Stryker, who had his fast trotter with him, started in pursuit. Just as the runaway was passing the home of H. C. Thomson on West Front street, Mr. Stryker drove alongside and was successful in getting the animal under control. The se who witnessed the race and the capture of the runaway horse say it was one of the most daring feats they had ever seen. The young women were more frightened than hurt, although they were considerably scratched and bruised.

ITALIAN CELEBRATION.

Sons of Italy to Observe the Feast of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel.

The Feast of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel will be celebrated in this city by local Italians on Wednesday and Thursday, July 15 and 16, with parades, fire-works and special services in St. Mary's R. C. Church.

The exercises will begin at noon on Wednesday with a band concert and parade through the principal streets of the city. Services will be held at S. Mary's R. C. Church at 5:30. Between the hours of 8 and 11, a band concert will be given on James E. Martine's commons on Park avenue. The musical programme embraces selections from well known Italian operas.

At 8 o'clock Thursday morning, services will commence at St. Mary's R. C. Church and will last until 10 o'clock. Another parade will halt at Mr. Martine's park, where fire-works and band music will be a feature. The arrangements are in charge of Salve Veland.

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

TWENTY-FOUR BRIDES LED TO HYMEN'S ALTAR

This Was Plainfield's Record During June, the Month of Marriages.

TEN CHURCH WEDDINGS

FOURTEEN OF THEM WERE IN PRIVATE HOUSES.

Several Were Out-of-Town—Some Quiet and Unpretentious—The Others Were Celebrated Amid Pomp and Splendor.

June, the month of brides, has brought more than the usual quota of marriages to Plainfield this year. Twenty-four young women have been led to Hymen's altar. Fourteen weddings took place in private houses and ten in churches. There were several weddings out of town, in which a Plainfielder figured, either as a bride or groom. Three weddings were announced which had taken place previously. The list of weddings:

June 3—Announcement of the wedding of Miss Bessie Ross, of Bound Brook, to Vernon Waters, of East Third street, at Cranford, in September 1903.

June 3—Wedding of Miss Catherine Parkinson, daughter of F. H. Parkinson, of Lee place, to A. C. Halstead, of West Brighton, N. Y., at the home of the bride in this city.

June 4—Miss May Clawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Clawson, to George H. Smith, of Brooklyn, at the home of the bride. They will reside here.

June 4—Wedding of Miss Jeanette Bird, daughter of Mrs. Jacob Bird, to Elmer D. Walker, at bride's home by Rev. J. O. McKelvey. Will reside here.

June 4—Miss Ada C. Nash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent W. Nash, to Albert L. Wilson, at the home of the bride, by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass.

June 5—Announcement of marriage of Miss Edith Tabor Johnson, daughter of Dr. James Tabor Johnson, of Washington and Henry Davis Bassnell, of Cherrydale, Va., at the home of the bride some months previously.

June 9—Miss Grace Lillian Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ingraham Russell, of Netherwood, to Harry Bennet Machen, of New York, at the bride's home.

June 10—Miss Minnie Kitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kitch, to Peter W. Voorhees, in the First M. E. Church at Springdale, by Rev. James Watson.

June 11—Miss Estella Fulton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeGrand Fulton, of this city, to James W. Price, of Elizabeth at the bride's home, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, of Jersey City, officiating.

June 17—Announcement of the marriage of Miss Ethel Marsh, of Scotch Plains, to Clifford Schorb, of this city at Metuchen, Tuesday evening, June 9, by Rev. Dr. Fenton.

June 19—Miss Anna J. Fogel, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., to Dr. John A. Brooke, of this city, at the bride's home.

June 21—Miss Bessie Bird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Bird, of Dover street, to Elmer Wheeler, at the bride's home by Rev. Charles E. Herring.

June 23—Miss Katherine Kenny to David Morcon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morcon, of this city, by Rev. Father Egan, at St. Mary's R. C. Church.

June 23—Wedding of Miss Katherine Carty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Carty, of Orchard place, to Edward Feiring, by Rev. Father Andrew M. Egan. Will reside here.

June 24—Miss Florence Reynolds Beal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Beal, of Netherwood, married to Frederick N. Watts, of Newark, in St. Stephen's Church, Netherwood.

June 24—Miss Mary Vail, married to William Walker Ware, at the home of Mrs. C. S. Langton, on East Ninth street.

June 26—Miss Georgia E. Brantingham, of South Plainfield, married Harry E. Klinger, of Newark. Rev. J. A. Cubberly was the officiating clergyman.

June 25—Miss F. B. Emmons married to Arthur W. Vail at bride's home, Rev. Dr. Yerkes officiating.

June 26—Miss Elizabeth Plummer Bowen wedded Pierrepont Beers Foster, in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. William R. Richards officiating.

June 30—Miss Edith Hyde to Assemblyman Everett Colby, of Llewelyn Park, Orange, in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. William R. Richards officiating.

June 30—Miss Florence D. Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reid, to Alfred Hoyt Bill, of Farmdale, Minn., at the bride's home, Rev. Dr. Charles Herr, of Jersey City officiating, assisted by Rev. Jerome Graham, of Rochester, N. Y.

June 30—Miss Agnes Bryan to William Wallace Chapman, of St. Louis, Mo., in Calvary M. E. Church, New York, the bride's father, Rev. Dr. James R. Bryan officiating.

June 30—Announcement of marriage of Miss Marguerite Bowne, of this city, to George Inmaan, of Cranford, taking place in Flemington June 27.

LAWYER'S SUCCESS.

Important Case Before Supreme Court Won by W. S. Angleman—Debts Discharged in Bankruptcy.

The Supreme Court has just decided that a debt although incurred by fraud is wiped out by the debtor obtaining his discharge in bankruptcy. Most business men had thought otherwise.

The point was decided in a case brought by Attorney General Robert H. McCarter in behalf of the J. C. Smith & Wallace Co., of Newark, against Isaac H. Lambert, formerly doing business in Westfield. Although Lambert had gone through bankruptcy and had been granted his discharge, Mr. McCarter endeavored to hold him on an account of about nine hundred dollars on the ground that the debt was incurred through fraud. Charles H. Angleman, of Rahway, and W. S. Angleman, of this city, appeared for Lambert and claimed that he debt was barred by the discharge granted by the United States District Court.

The case was argued before the Supreme Court several months ago, and the decision now handed down sustains the point made by Lambert's counsel and holds that the discharge covers the debt even though it was incurred through fraud.

DR. LOVE RETURNS.

Clergyman's Son Signally Honored —May Practice Surgery in This City.

Dr. Wanger Love, of East Ninth street, has returned home from his last appointment as assistant house physician at the New York Lying-in Hospital. He has been away from home for about seven years, passing through Bellevue Medical College, in which he was appointed house surgeon upon obtaining his diploma.

While house surgeon, a special honor was conferred upon him, being chosen by Dr. J. D. Byrant and Dr. Reginald Sayre to assist Dr. Lorenz in his operations at the University of New York and afterwards to take charge of those patients in the wards under his care. His plans for the future are not yet made but he will for the present remain at his home and for the present practice in Plainfield. It is Dr. Love's intention to devote himself as much as possible to surgery and obstetrical work. While a student he spent two of his vacations as assistant in clinical work to Dr. Theodore Janeway.

RAILROAD EARNINGS.

Wall Street Interested in Report of Gains by P. and R. During May.

There has been considerable interest expressed in Wall street in the report of the earnings issued by the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company for the month of May. The increase of $1,430,079 in net earnings was considered striking. The first half of May, 1903, saw good earnings by all the coal roads and particularly by the Reading, which led to a belief that there would be no such increase over that year. May completed the eleventh month of the fiscal year and there is a belief in Wall street that owing to this good showing a dividend of some sort may be made on the second preferred stock, which amounts to $49,000,000.

"Boss" a Minister.

Howard Roland Reiter, Princeton's famous halfback of the '96 and '99 Yale championship football games, who frequently visits here, passed a brilliant examination before the New Brunswick Presbytery. He has received a license to preach. Reiter is at Ocean Grove, where he acts as a life guard during the summer. He will preach on Sundays.

Proceeds of Fair.

The lawn fair given by four young girls at the home of Helen Ryder, 310 Central avenue, netted $61.50 for the Netherwood Fresh Air Home.

Catarrh of the Stomach.

When the stomach is overloaded; when food is taken into it that fails to digest, it decays and inflames the mucous membrane, exposing the nerves, and causes the glands to secret mucin, instead of the natural juices of digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach. For years I suffered with Catarrh of the Stomach, caused by indigestion. Doctors and medicines failed to benefit me until I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure.—J. R. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 12.—Comment by Rev. G. M. Boynton.

Topic.—What the Holy Spirit can do for me.—John xvi, 5-16.

The Holy Spirit is the third person of the Trinity and as such has a distinctive work to perform. The Father planned the only method of salvation, the Son executed it by His death upon the cross, and it is the mission of the Holy Spirit to apply it. The Father is specially manifested in the Old Testament dispensation, the Son in the gospels and from the day of Pentecost we have been living in the dispensation of the Spirit. He came as a result of Christ's going from earth. "It is expedient that I go away; for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you, but if I depart I will send him unto you." Christ in the flesh was to be replaced by Christ in the spirit. In the flesh Christ could be in but one place at the same time, but in the spirit He could be everywhere, performing His work; hence the expediency of Christ's going away that the Spirit might come.

Having come, what is the work of the Spirit in applying the redemption purchased at Calvary? The several phases of the Spirit's work in the world are here suggested by Christ:

1. The Spirit convinces the world of sin. "And when He is come He will convince the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment." The people of the world were loath to believe in Christ, but the Spirit would convince them of their unbelief and would show that righteousness could be obtained in Christ and that Christ had judged and condemned Satan, the prince of this world. Conviction of sin is the first step in the salvation of the soul. No one will cry out "What must I do to be saved?" until he feels that he is a sinner and therefore needs salvation. This conviction is the work of the Spirit, and then He leads to repentance and faith and a complete apprehension of the mercy of God, in Christ. This is the Spirit's work for the sinner, and it is reserved He is the only one who can do it for us.

2. The Spirit guides into spiritual truth. Christ taught the disciples many things, and yet they were often ignorant and full of misunderstanding. But after Pentecost this was not true of them. Their faith was strong and their knowledge certain, because they were guided into the truth by the Spirit. This also is a part of His work in relation to the Christian. "When He, the Spirit of Truth, is come He will guide you into all truth," and the truth which He teaches is the truth as it is in Jesus, "for He shall not speak of Himself, but whatsoever He shall hear that shall He speak, and He shall show you things to come." And in John xv. 26, Jesus says, "He shall testify of Me." The truth of God as revealed in His word is the work of His Spirit. "Holy men spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." And in addition to that, the Holy Spirit enlightens the mind that it may comprehend the truth as it is in Jesus. In all Bible study we should earnestly and prayerfully seek the personal guidance of the Spirit. He wrote the Bible, and no one like Him can help us to understand it.

3. The Spirit glorifies Christ. "He shall glorify Me, for He shall receive of mine and show it unto you." The method of glorification is by the manifestation of the truth. To one who knows the truth Christ cannot but be glorified.

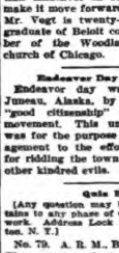
The New General Secretary.

After nearly six months of searching the ideal man has at last been found to succeed Mr. John Willis Baer as general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor. Mr. Von Ogden Vogt of Beloit, Wis., assumed the duties of the office recently. He brings to the work a large experience along similar lines and will throw his splendid personality into Christian Endeavor in such a way as to make it move forward in every branch. Mr. Vogt is twenty-five years old, a graduate of Beloit college and a member of the Woodlawn Presbyterian church of Chicago.



VON OGDEN VOGT.

Endeavor Day In Juneau.

Endeavor day was celebrated in Juneau, Alaska, by emphasizing the "good citizenship" features of the movement. This unusual observance was for the purpose of giving encouragement to the efforts then on foot for ridding the town of gambling and other kindred evils.

[Any question may be asked that pertains to any phase of Christian Endeavor and address Lock Box 67, Binghamton, N. Y.]

No. 79. A. R. M., Birmingham, Ala.—The superintendent of Christian Endeavor for Alaska is appointed by the United society at Boston, presumably because this interesting field promises to have a regularly organized union. The superintendent is Rev. Edward Marsden of Saxman.

No. 80. P. O., Los Angeles, Cal.—If you desire to contribute to a fund for supplying the Christian Endeavor World to missionaries on the foreign field, you should address your gift to Mr. William Shaw, Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass.

A Breakfast Food.

The refined and raised-as-a-pet gentleman from the effete east took his seat at the table of a W. and W. western hotel one pleasant morning and gazed pensively out of the window until some one approached.

"Have you any breakfast food?" he inquired in simple cereal accents.

"Why, I guess yes," responded Boarding Pete, in the vernacular. "We got ham and eggs, fried sausage, chunk steak, spare ribs, mutton chops, corned beef hash, hog and hominy, light bread, heavy bread, hot bread, cold bread, corn bread, toast bread, apple butter, peach butter, cow butter, coffee, tea, buttermilk and beer. Breakfast food? Well, that's our winner. Name your grub."—N. Y. Times.

Cat's Love of Fish.

One of the strange things in nature is the fondness of the cat for fish and its fear of water. There is no animal, not even those which prey upon fish and are adapted by nature to catching them, like the otter and muskrat, which is fonder of fish than the ordinary cat. There is no animal which dislikes the water more. State Press has seen a cat which loafed around a live box, where minnows were kept, and which would sit with her paw in the water as closely as if watching a mousehole, and if a minnow came to the top it would be quickly slapped out of the water by the paw without even wetting the latter. This is not a fish or cat story, either—Galveston News.

Couldn't Find Washington.

The grounds of the department of agriculture at Washington are thickly set with beautiful trees, many of which are rare and imported varieties, greatly admired by visitors. But it was neither their beauty nor their rarity which most impressed a recent visitor from Minnesota. A department clerk met him wandering, evidently hopelessly lost, with Pennsylvania avenue only two blocks off. Seeing the clerk, the visitor hailed him in great excitement.

"Say, which way is Washington? I have been going round trees you hour and half!"—New York Mail and Express.

Alfalfa in California.

It is coming to be recognized that alfalfa is a more reliable profit-maker than fruit in this state, alfalfa having come to be a generic term meaning almost any kind of stock feed. Even wealthy fruit growers and orchards on good ground are turning to alfalfa. A dispatch from Tehama county mentions two men well known to have ample means who are hitching their traction engines to fine peach trees in full bearing and mowing them out by the roots. They will plant alfalfa in their place.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Bicycle in England.

Bicycling is said to be holding its own in England much better than in this country, perhaps partly because the roads are better and the distances smaller, and partly because the English do not tire of a new craze as quickly as Americans. It is said that the demand for new wheels last year was larger than in any previous year since the height of the boom.—Chicago Chronicle.

Sad Case.

"You seem poorly prepared to answer even the simplest question, sir," said the professor, sternly. "Perhaps you cannot even tell me who wrote Caesar's commentaries."

"No, sir, I can't, said the student, miserably. "I know the name of the man just as well as I do my own, but it's gone completely out of my mind for the time being.—Youth's companion.

Mastodons in New York.

Sixty mastodons have been found in New York, mostly along certain well-marked belts. Outside these belts the state is barren. They, therefore, had distinct feeding grounds, and that, too, in a not very remote time. They are usually found resting on the boulders of old streams and in a comparatively thin layer of peat.—Science.

Touchy.

"Beg pardon, madam," said the clerk, "but what did you say your name was?"

"I didn't say," snapped the Chicago woman, who had just completed her seventh matrimonial venture, "all you need to know is what my name is."—Philadelphia Press.

Diffident.

Mary (archly)—Please, ma'am you see, the poor fellow is that bashful for the present that he does nothing but eat.—Smart Set.

Mutual.

Mother—You have accepted George! Why, you know very well that I don't approve of him.

Daughter—That's all right, mother. Neither does he approve of you.—Stray Stories.

Hard to Decide.

Freddie—What's this box of stuff mamma sent home?

Cobwigger—I don't know, my boy, whether it's a new kind of breakfast food or nothing for her soft cushions.—N. Y. Times.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 12, "My Duty as a Christian Citizen"—Text, Matt. xvii, 24-27; 1 Tim. ii, 1, 2; 1 Pet. ii, 13-17.

"Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king."

Reverence for authority belongs to all true religion. Obedience to law is a mark of piety. Impatience of restraint and contempt for rules are not signs of nobleness of nature, but rather of a craven spirit. The thirst for freedom is not an irritability against proper control. It is rather the inner longing for harmony between self and one's surroundings. Liberty is not power to do as one chooses, but ability to do as one ought. Absolute independence is unknown in a world where all are related in work and privilege. Relation to others means mutual dependence upon each other. Each, then, has a right to do as he pleases, only as he pleases to do right. We are born into a world which has fixed conditions of existence which we cannot largely change. We must use things as we find them and make them as much better as we can.

We do not largely have the choice of our fatherland and form of government. We are born into our position. A few may change the land of their residence and the rulers, but the vast majority of men must live and die in the land and under the government where they were born.

Every Christian must settle what is his duty to the state of which he is a citizen.

The first duty of every one under all governments is to have proper respect for the rulers and laws of the realm and to obey them so far as they do not conflict with moral right.

If any certain law be plainly wrong and to obey it would be sinful then one must resist such a law, strive by all just means to have it changed and expect until it is changed to suffer the penalty of violating it and by such suffering patiently original to assist in its repeal and the enactment of the right rule.

Wherever the form of the government allows free discussion and participation of the citizens in election of officers and matter of laws it is the duty of every Christian citizen to use his utmost endeavor and highest ability to secure just and right laws and their proper enforcement.

To consent to any injustice or wrong of any kind to make any private gain is crime and sin. To gain office for self or others by any form of bribery or coercion, by threats or promises of favors is iniquitous and hateful one as much for office or citizenship. To know of such deeds and not to protest and work against them is unmanly and cowardly. We must be upright and make our nation noble.

More Than Your Business.

A man says: "What business is it of any one except myself if I close my eyes and do not see the Lord? Does it hurt any one but me? Who has a right to interfere or urge me?" Indeed it is the business of other men than you; it is the whole world's business whether or not you are a Christian. Indeed it does rob other souls than yours if you will not live spiritually and see the truth which God is showing to your soul. If there are men in whom, being yourself a Christian, you might bring to Christ, then you rob not only yourself, but them, if you refuse to come to Christ. The window which makes itself dark darkens not merely itself, but all the room into which that light might have shone through it.—Philip Brooks.

More Presumption Than Faith.

Some Christians have more presumption than faith. All they think necessary is to whip up a desire for some real or imagined good and then insist on having it regardless of conditions which the Lord has fixed. A certain parable puts the matter thus: Two pilgrims are going to a town with their beast proposed to leave him on the outskirts until they should have accomplished their mission. "Don't tie the horse," said one, "but trust in Providence that he will not run away." "No," said the other, "tie the horse first and then trust in Providence." First obey, then trust.—Lutheran.

How to Obtain Holiness.

Be determined to have it. God does like to see people tremulously in earnest for the right. It will not avail to talk about it. The discussion of technicalities, even in one's own mind, without accepting the truth so far as known only leads to vanity. Do not speculate or philosophize. "There are many points in it that you will never understand till its own light blazes in your soul." Having seen the possibility, do not longer delay, but resolve to have it.—American Friend.

Power For Good.

Multiply your power for good by putting yourself in God's hands to be led and used by Him. Work with God and let God work with you, for by being in harmony with God a man increases his ability by an infinite factor, and God and eternity alone can measure and reveal the result.—Religious Telescope.

Be In Earnest.

A half hearted Christianity is like a nut with a dried up kernel. Like many of a withered apple whether God nor man cares for it is good—for nothing.—Lutheran.

Ye Shall Reap Your Own.

Every sower must tone day reap
From the seed he has sown.
How carefully, then, it becomes us to keep
The watchful eye on the heart and seek
To sow what is good that we may not weep.
To reap.
To receive our own.

—Good Words.

HISTORIC EVENT AT WASHINGTON ROCK

Sketch of Famous Landmark Visited by General George Washington.

BY OLIVER B. LEONARD

WHO DISCUSSES REVOLUTIONARY CAMPAIGNS IN NEW JERSEY.

Interest Awakened by Daughters of American Revolution, Who Are Raising Money to Place a Tablet at the Rock.

Since Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution commenced raising funds to erect a suitable tablet at Washington Rock interest in the historic significience of the stone has been awakened. O. B. Leonard has kindly written an account of the scenes connected with the rock. Mr. Leonard says:

"After the memorable battles of Trenton and Princeton, the American forces encamped in the Jersey hills about Morristown. Here they remained, less than 8000 in number, till the latter part of the spring of 1777. On May 24, this year, Washington broke camp and pitched his tents on the heights at Middlebrook just in rear of the town of Bound Brook. This was a strategic site overlooking the country for many miles and commanding the road to Philadelphia where Congress was in session.

"About the same time and for a fortnight afterwards the British were concentrating on the Raritan river at New Brunswick within eight miles of the American camp. Orders were given by General Howe for his army, 15,000 strong, to start at 11 o'clock of the evening of June 12, 1777 for Philadelphia. The march was begun, but a halt was called at Somerset Court House the next day.

"In this vicinity they entrenched themselves with the Millstone river on their left, the Raritan river all along their front and their right resting unmoved on New Brunswick. Here they remained four days, kept in check by the commanding position of the Americans. The British general was severely criticised by his own officers for putting his army in such a compromising situation. Howe's statement in his defence was, 'My only object was to bring the American Army to a general action. On finding their intention to keep a position which it would not have been prudent to attack, I determined to withdraw my forces from Jersey.'

"Nevertheless Washington strengthened his position at Middlebrook while the enemy were intrenched in his front. He rested under the belief that Howe would not advance any further and leave the Americans in their rear. His argument was, 'they have started on a march as light as possible with no baggage or provisions, which plainly contradicts the idea at present, of pushing for the Delaware.'

"On June 19, Howe broke camp and pretended to return in haste to New Brunswick, burning dwellings and barns on the march. The American light troop, to a limited number, followed in the direction of the enemy and harassed them as much as possible, with the Raritan river between them. The main army kept to their fortified encampments on the heights in complete readiness to support a general movement.

"On June 22, Howe marched out of New Brunswick in an opposite direction towards Perth Amboy, 'intending,' he wrote, 'to cross to Staten Island for embarkation.' Washington at once sent General Greene with three brigades and a few riflemen under Morgan, to annoy the departing enemy. One corps of the Americans got to the north of Bonhamtown, expecting to strike a body of Hessians stationed near there, but the movement proved ineffective. Finding that the whole British army was preparing to move over a bridge of boats to Staten Island, on the 24th of June, the American forces descended from their Middlebrook entrenchments and marched down on the plains as far as Quibblestown near present New Market. General Howe, seeing this pursuit, thought he had gained his long desired object, and would be able to precipitate a general action. At once he formed his troops into two columns, with the right under Cornwallis, marching by way of Woodbridge and the left led by himself, going through Metuchen. By this movement he was planning to surround the Americans by getting into their rear and so cut off their return to Middlebrook camp. Penetrating the design of the British for a general fight, Washington regained his fortified position on the heights and secured the mountain passes at Plainfield and Scotch Plains.

"In the meantime the right column led by Cornwallis fell in with the Americans under Stirling, just after passing through Woodbridge. A spirited engagement ensued, resulting in the hasty retreat of the Americans and a loss, in killed, wounded and prisoners of nearly 200 men and a few field pieces. The enemy reported their losses, 'Five men killed and thirty wounded,' and a pursuit continued as far as Westfield, the day proving so intensely hot, the soldiers, could with difficulty, march no farther.'

"During all the manoeuverings and skirmishes between the contending forces, the Commander-in-Chief made his memorable visit to the famous rock which bears his name. The range of view from this eminence has always been one of the most extended along the brow of the mountains. From this rock Washington could satisfactorily reconnoitre the enemy and watch the movements, of all the troops in the engagements taking place.

"On June 26, the British, giving up all hope of a general battle, began at 10 o'clock in the morning to cross over the sound to Staten Island. By 2 o'clock in the afternoon the rear guard under Lord Cornwallis left Amboy and the military career of General Howe in New Jersey ended.

"Reliable tradition in families of the Fitz Randolphs, Vails and Websters confirm the statement that George Washington was directed to the Rock on the mountain top on the occasion just recited by Edward Fitz Randolph, the grandfather of Mr. Ira F. Randolph and others.

"To localize this historical event in 1867 there was organized in Plainfield the 'Washington Monument and Historical Association,' which the Legislature the same year incorporated. A plot of ground on the brow of the mountain, embracing the distinguished stone known as 'Washington Rock,' was deeded to the society. From some flaw in the title or incumbrance on the property, satisfactory possession was never obtained. On the Fourth of July, 1867, the corner stone of a projected monument was laid with imposing programme. Money was subscribed and paid in towards the expenses. At the first anniversary of the Monument Association held February 22, 1868, a long list of officers was chosen, most of whom are now deceased. Some three or four only survived of those who endeavored to perpetuate the memory of the Revolutionary incident."

BUILDING PERMITS.

Record of Improvements made to Plainfield Realty During Last Month.

Twenty-three permits were granted by Building Inspector T. O. Doane during June. In January there were twenty-five permits, in February seventeen, in March twenty-seven, in April thirty-three, in May twenty and in June twenty-three. The June record is unusual as the applications generally drop off when the warm weather approaches.

During last month nine applications were grandted for frame dwellings; two for frame barns; two for extensions to frame buildings; one for a frame wagon shed; one for a bicycle shed; three for extensions to frame dwellings; one for an extension to a frame barn; one for an addition to a brick gas plant; two for frame green houses, and one for a brick extension to a dwelling.

One permit granted during the last month was for a $150,00 addition to the city gas plant and one for a $16,000 addition and renovation to the store on Front street formerly occupied by Smith Brothers, grocers.

CONDUCTOR WAS TOO "PREVIOUS."

Siegfried Arens, of This City, Narrowly Escaped Severe Injury.

Siegfried Arens, of Rahway road, is carrying his left arm in a sling, as a result of a recent accident which happened while he was attempting to board a trolley car in Brooklyn. Mr. Arens was about to step on one car when the conductor gave the signal to go ahead. The sudden start threw Mr. Arens, and the wrist of his left arm was fractured. Only by the narrowest margin did he escape the car wheels.

The conductor brought his car to a standstill and Mr. Arens climbed aboard. He succeeded in securing the names of a number of witnesses who may be called to testify should a suit result.

Throat Sore?

There's no telling what a sore throat will do if you give it "right of way." Uncertain remedies often cause dangerous delay. Make a cure sure with Painsaller, known for half a century as a specific for sore throat, croup, coughs, and all kindred troubles. Keep it by you for an emergency. It never fails. Avoid substitutes, there is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'. 25c. and 50c.

COUNTY COMMITTEES SHOULD AVOID TROUBLE

Danger That Contested Elections May Result From Technicality of Law.

PETITIONS COMPLICATED

NEW PRIMARY LAW AMENDED THIS YEAR IS CAUSE OF DIFFICULTY.

Definite Form of Petition and Affidavits for Presenting Candidates for Delegates Should be Prepared.

The new primary and election law amended this year is liable to make trouble in some of the rural districts of New Jersey by indirectly causing contested elections. This follows from the fact that the new primary law prescribes the methods of choosing delegates at all elections in which members of the Assembly are chosen. Petitions for the nomination of delegates in primaries are remarkably technical affairs, and the whole trouble, as a newspaper reporter discovered in conversation with a prominent local politician, lies in this fact.

One way to avoid the difficulty would be for the county committees of the respective parties to prepare a form of petition and affidavits for presenting candidates that would hold uniformly throughout the country. If drawn up by the average election officers in country districts, or by anyone not versed in the law, the petitions and affidavits annexed would in all probability be so vague and indefinite that, if the selection of delegates were legally contested, they would have to be thrown out.

Unless some action such as suggested is taken by way of preventative, there will always be the danger of contested elections and the attendant expense and inconvenience. It is rather a complicated matter, involving only the mere chance of trouble and "the law's delay." But the proverbial stitch in time in the political cloth in this case may save nine later in the shape of settling disputed elections.

Moreover, there is a further germ of trouble in the fact that the new primary law does not govern other elections than those in which assemblymen are chosen in the fall of the year, whereas the rural districts, boroughs and townships hold their local elections in the spring.

NEGRO'S SALVATION.

Rev. E. E. Jackson Addresses Fellows of His Blood on Important Topic.

Rev. E. E. Jackson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist Church, addressed a meeting of the colored citizens in Elizabeth last Thursday, making allusion to the recent lynching of the negro, White, in Wilmington, Del. He denounced Rev. Thornton, of Wilmington, who advised his congregation to sell their coats and buy swords. The problem of the negro has been solved but the reason many believe that that is a problem of today is because they do not come in contact with the better element of the race.

"The negro," said he, "does not contend for social equality." As far as marriage is concerned, Rev. Mr. Jackson believes the race should be distinct but he does not think it is possible to be so in religion or business. "Stop finding fault, get out of politics, study economy and practice it, and acquire a trade" was the final advice of the speaker.

NEW HOTEL.

Hostelry to be Built in West Front Street, Near Clinton Avenue.

John Goff, of West Second street, proposes to erect a large hotel on West Front street, near Clinton avenue.

Plans are being drawn up for the building by a local architect, who has submitted them to Building Inspector T. O. Doane for approval.

The building will be four stories in heighth and will contain sixteen rooms each of large size. A large veranda will surround the building on three sides. It will be a frame structure. Mr. Goff was formerly the proprietor of what is now known as the Clark Hotel in the West End.

The King Will be There.

A cablegram from London states that King Edward will visit Bisley, July 13, to present the Palma trophy to the winners of the shooting competition. A peculiar interest will be manifested in this event as the All-America team, of which Captain W. H. Martin, of Company K, is a member, expects to win the trophy.

George A. Horne Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy S. Dyer, of Cincinnati, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edith Hoyt Dyer, to George A. Horne, of North Plainfield.

AMUSEMENTS.

The "shoppers' district" can boast of a most pleasant theatrical retreat in Mr. Proctor's well-known Twenty-third Street house. A woman shopping in this fashionable district can always find at Proctor's a comfortable one in which to rest, a "really good show" to please the eye and ear, and most courteous attendance to her every want.

The Pain Pyrotechnic Co. has six separate shows in America this season. First is the mammoth Pompeii spectacle at Manhattan Beach. A second production of Pompeii is on the road. Three productions of the "Burning of Rome" are travelling and the "Destruction of St. Pierre," first production last summer in Boston, will be sent on tour.

Alexander Clark who plays General Hardtack in "The Runaways," at the Casino, owes part of his success in the role to an ancestral coat. This is part of an old army uniform, the front showing a peculiar cut-away effect, the back being fully six inches too long waisted for its present owner. The old coat which once was worn by a military personage of a New England cross-roads store, fairly exudes comedy, and is an invaluable assistant to the Casino comedian.

"The Wizard of Oz, which holds the record for the longest run achieved by any musical play in New York this season, celebrates its 200th performance in the metropolis next Saturday afternoon, July 11. The occasion will be duly commemorated by the distribution of a unique souvenir typical of this most successful extravaganza. A dainty bronze statuette of the Poppy Queen in "The Wizard of Oz" will be the distinctive memento chosen by the management for distribution at the bi-centennial performance of "The Wizard."

Miss May Heugler, one of the charming dancers with "The Runaways," has a most interesting and complete musical library, which she carries with her wherever she travels. This includes books bearing on musical history, the lives of composers, scores of operas, original manuscripts of compositions and autographed copies of the works of many modern composers. The walls of her drawing room in the Marlborough Hotel are covered with photographs of old and new masters of music, and pictures of prima donnas, Impressarios and the lesser lights of opera.

With the able assistance of Miss Fay Templeton, Arthur Dunn, Alexander Clark, Miss Amelia Stone, Van-Rensselaer Wheeler, Miss Helen Lord, William Gould, the pretty Hengler Sisters, William Wolff and other principals of "The Runaways," Manager Sam. S. Shubert has built into what is beyond doubt the most satisfying performance which has ever been seen on Broadway. There are now no less than twelve musical gems in the more encores, which is a remarkable showing. Probably the three most popular of these twenty are "My Hindoo Belle," as sung by Miss Templeton; "Hiawatha," and "Susannah from Urbana."

The desire to see Howard Thurston perform his wonderful feats of magic and illusion has been so great that Mr. Keith has retained this marvel for another week. This shows that the ability to deceive the senses is as much an attraction as it ever was. Emerson & Omega, in their farce, "Don't Notice It" will add to the comedy as will Mamie Remington and her company. The Bros. Tanean in an acoustic musical turn, and Trask & Gladden, the comedians, will be sure to get their share of the applause. Dolly Jordan, the vocalist; Palfrey & Hilton; James Weitzell, the sensational juggler; the Garrity Sisters, in songs and dances; and the Keith moving pictures with another of those childrens' delights, a fairy story, will complete the bill.

LITERARY.

"How Shall the College Curriculum be Reconstructed"' is the problem which Prof. G. Trumbull Ladd, of Yale, sets before the readers of the July-September Forum. He appends to his discussion a tabular statement of a three-year course which he suggests as a type.

In Modern Athens.

No place is more reknowned as a tourist resort than the glorious City of Boston. First as a seat of learning and second as an historical centre about which is gathered innumerable Revolutionary associations than which none are more renowned or more interesting. The City is famed for its hospitality, and nothing is left undone to make the sojourn of the delegate or tourist a period of delight. Within the confines of the City are the notable landmarks—Faneuil Hall, better known as the "Cradle of Liberty"—the old State House, now a museum of Revolutionary relics—the North and South Churches, which figured prominently in the early struggle—Bunker Hill and its interesting surroundings—the scene of the Boston Massacre and the location of the Boston Tea Party, while within a short distance by rail the historic spots of Plymouth, Salem of witchcraft fame, Lexington and Concord, where that most eventful fray occurred, while Medford, Cambridge, Hudson, Lynn, Marblehead, teem with the memories of events well known in history. The parks in Boston are grand productions of the landscape artist, and these reservations covers hundreds of acres all easily accessible. Cambridge, close to Boston is the seat of famous Harvard while Concord treasures memories of Hawthorne, Emerson, Alcott, Thoreau and others, fully as illustrous. The National Educational Association meets in Boston, July 6th to 10th, and the New Jersey Central is prepared to furnish reduced rate tickets for this occasion from all points on its line. Lightning Stops a Clock.

The house of Mrs. John Carey, of Westervelt avenue, in the borough, was struck by lightning during Friday evening's thunder shower. The bolt passed entirely through the house narrowly missing Mrs. Carey. Among its freaks was the stopping of a clock.

STILL HOPE FOR LEO

After Operation For Pleurisy He Is Better.

MARVELOUS VITALITY AND COURAGE

Dr Mazzoni Says, "When One Considers That the Pope Should Be Dead by This Time There Is Reason to Hope."

ROME, July 8.—Pope Leo has been suffering with pneumonia, and it was complicated with pleurisy, and the pope had paralysis of the fingers. His pulse showed a slight improvement. He left his bed for an armchair.

An operation for puncturing the pleura was performed during the day, and his general condition was then reported as better.

The following bulletin was issued:

"The tast puncture of the pleura has been made, and 800 grams of liquid have been taken off. A rapid examination showed that some mucous wax rattling in the lung which was originally affected. The pope underwent the operation with courage. His general condition is now better, and he is resting.

The marvelous vitality and recuperative energy of the pope were never so forcibly demonstrated as by the series of events preceding, accompanying and following the operation. When first informed that the operation would perhaps be necessary his holiness began to inquire about it. Turning to Dr. Lapponi, with his usual familiarity, he asked:

"Will it be painful? Remember, I cannot stand much pain."

Instead of Dr. Lapponi Dr. Mazzoni answered: "I can assure your holiness that you will feel no pain. A little cocaine will deaden all sensation."

Pope Leo retorted at once, "Remember, you said the same thing when you extracted that cyst a few years ago."

Dr. Mazzoni replied, That operation went very well, but this can hardly be called an operation."

The pope then concluded. "Then do whatever you think best."

When the operation took place nobody was allowed in the room besides the doctors except Pope Leo's valet, Pio Centra. Even his nephew, Count Camillo Pecci, left the room to await with extreme anxiety in an adjoining hall the result.

The doctors, desiring a strong light, had the window widely opened, but as it faces the bed the light offended the weak eyes of the pontiff, so that it was thought desirable that he should reverse his position. As soon as this was proposed the pope himself made a movement, showing such startling signs of activity and determination which seems constantly to inspire him. Dr. Mazzoni, however, did not give him time to leave the bed, but, taking him in his arms, literally turned the pontiff about.

Pope Leo smiled and exclaimed: "Bravo, professor. I congratulate you. Although I have become so light, I must still be rather heavy." Both the doctors laughed and were at the same time astonished at the brightness of the pontiff when surrounded by such a dangerous illness and on the point of undergoing a surgical operation for the extreme necessity of his life.

Pope Leo remained sitting up in bed during the whole time of the operation without the slightest support. Dr. Mazzoni substituted the Pravaz needle with a Potain aspirator the pope did not even notice it, going through the whole affair without emitting the slightest lament and without showing any feeling of pain. He was extremely pale, almost diaphanous and somewhat tremulous. As soon as the operation was closed his holiness felt much relieved. His eye from an expression of languid melancholy assumed its usual vivacity, illuminating the emaciated face. Dr. Mazzoni at once administered a cordial, which the pontiff took willingly, thanking him with a grateful look for the brave struggle to preserve his life. He afterward expressed a desire to see the fluid which had been extracted from his thorax.

After an hour's peaceful and apparently refreshing repose the pope awoke and inquired about the doctors. Hearing they were both in the next room, he said: "I thought they had gone. What do they stay here for? What are they plotting?" Dr. Lapponi, re-entering the room, said, "We were preparing bulletins regarding the operation, saying it was successful in all respects." Dr. Mazzoni added, "We must inform the public, which is waiting with such trepidation, especially as it is so easy to have inexact news spread." "Very well," replied his holiness. "I wish to see myself these bulletins in their exact text. I have already seen and annotated on that of last night." He then went on speaking about the causes of his illness. "I would like to know," he said, "from what it comes. I think I have always followed Dr. Lapponi's advice." "Not always, your holiness," replied Dr. Lapponi gently. "Well," retorted Pope Leo, "you could not expect to remedy my old age."

After a short silence the pope, turning to Dr. Mazzoni said: "In the last consultory I appointed as a cardinal a fellow citizen of yours, Cardinal Taliani, who comes from the Marches. Do you know him?" "Yes, your holiness; I know him. I hope that that will not be your last consistory." "I am afraid so," sighed the pope sadly, after which his head fell upon the pillow as though extremely tired. It lay again in the prey of exhaustion. The benign and cheerful expression of its recent fit at the moment when he was in the very shadow of death astonished the doctors. The pope himself seems confident in his ability to present a calm and bright demeanor and particularly asked the doctors to tell people about the state of his mind. Accordingly the doctors have freely discussed the cheerfulness of the venerable patient, repeating the details of his quick sallies as showing the activity of his mind.

Dr. Mazzoni said concerning present conditions: "When one considers that the pope should be dead by this time the unexpected may happen, and there is still hope. His resisting so long and maintaining perfect lucidity of mind means that notwithstanding the pneumonia, the affection of the kidneys and the difficulty of breathing there is no poisoning of the blood."

Throughout the day a constant stream of visitors besieged the entrance to the Vatican. The guards at the portals kept back the merely curious, admitting only diplomats accredited to the Vatican and high ecclesiastical dignitaries. Among the diplomats were the ministers of Russia and Prussia, the ambassadors of Spain, Austria and Portugal and the charge d'affaires for Brazil. The French ambassador, M. Nisard, has shown a deep interest in the reports from the sick room.

Among the cardinals arriving were Gennaro, Nocella, Mattieu, Respighi, Cassetta, Cretoni and Gotti. It was remarked that Cardinal Oreglia, the dean of the Sacred college, was not among the callers, although it is expected that he will soon be called upon to perform the most important services of the Interregnum. Though not calling personally, Cardinal Oreglia thrice dispatched his secretary, Father Santo, to learn the exact condition of the pontiff. None of the visiting cardinals except Cardinal Gotti saw the pope owing to the rigid directions of the doctors that the patient be spared the cares and excitement of the affairs of the church.

Cardinal Gibbons Awaits News.

BALTIMORE, July 8.—Cardinal Gibbons at his residence adjoining the cathedral in this city is quietly awaiting news from Rome. Bulletins were furnished to him during the day, and all of them had absorbing interest for him. He is prepared to leave for Rome at a moment's notice and is confident that he will be able to reach that city in time to take part in the conclave which will elect a new pontiff in the event of Pope Leo's death.

ROOSEVELT AND HAY.

Conference Held at Sagamore Hill of Grave Importance.

OYSTER BAY, July 8.—Secretary of State John Hay is a guest of President Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill. Matters of grave importance to this country in its international relations were under consideration.

To two subjects of serious concern most of their attention was turned. They considered in all its phases the Russian situation, particularly with respect to the Bund Brith petition, which it has been determined will be forwarded to the Russian government, and the Alaskan boundary question, which next month is to be taken up for what is hoped may be final adjustment by the American and British commission in London.

Secretary Hay arrived here from Newport, R. I., where he has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Payne Whitney. He was accompanied by Senator Fairbanks of Indiana. Senator Thomas Kearns of Utah arrived on the same train. Prior to their arrival at the president's house Senator Hanna of Ohio, accompanied by Mrs. Hanna and their friend, Miss Phelps, and Mr. and Mrs. Clement A. Griscom and Miss Griscom, had reached Sagamore Hill on the private yacht Alvina, owned by Mr. Griscom, who is president of the International Navigation company, the American line.

President Roosevelt discussed with Secretary Hay and Senators Fairbanks, Hanna and Kearns the Alaskan boundary matter. Senator Fairbanks was a member of the joint high commission which had that question under consideration several years ago, and the president and secretary took this opportunity to go over the matter with him. After a pretty full discussion of the question, including consideration of the final instructions to the American commissioners, Senators Fairbanks and Kearns left the president's home.

"This is a pleasant surprise," said Senator Hanna, repeating the inquiry put to him by the newspaper men as he was about to enter the launch at the pier to return to the Alvina. "I should say not. I never retire from anything."

Dog Held In Quarantine.

CLEVELAND, O., July 8.—A dog belonging to a family that has been ill with smallpox is under observation at the city hospital. He has symptoms of smallpox, his hide being covered with pustules. The case is quite rare in medical practice. To satisfy himself as to whether dogs are susceptible to the disease the health officer will inoculate a Yorkshire dog and try to give them the disease. The experiments will begin in a few days.

Accident to Yacht.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., July 8.—The bursting of a cylinder on board the yacht Selicia, owned by Charles Steele, a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., caused severe injury to two firemen. The explosion occurred when the yacht was off Rose's grove on Shinnecock bay. Mr. Steele, their two daughters and a son were on board.

McKnight Will Serve His Term.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 8.—The long fight made by J. M. McKnight, the former banker, to keep out of prison has ended in defeat when in the United States court of appeals today ordered the prisoner to be taken to Atlanta to serve his sentence of eight years.

Boy Ground to Pieces.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., July 8.—William Mitchell, the sixteen-year-old son of John Mitchell, proprietor of the Brunswick hotel, was run over by a freight train on the New York Central and ground to pieces.

Baseball Team of the P. H. S. A. A

P.H.S. RECORD ON DIAMOND

RESUME OF SCHOOL BOYS BASEBALL ACHIEVEMENTS

Harder Battles During Last Season Than Ever before—Next Years's Team.

The baseball team of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association for the season just completed has been the most successful team supported by the school for the past four years. The school team has been victorious in nine out of the thirteen games played and the team has run up against a far stronger class of opponents this year than ever before.

For the first time in three years the school boys won the two games with their old opponents, the Rutgers Preparatory School boys. The home team won out by scores of 8 to 4 and 10 to 2. Aside from this, the team trounced the Westfield High School in two games—8 to 5 and 19 to 2; Newark Academy, 8 to 4; Scotch Plains High School, 14 to 3; St. Francis Xavier Preparatory School, 9 to 4; North Plainfield High Sebol, 4 to 0, and the Montclair High School, 8 to 2. The defeats were administered by the Orange Field Club, 4 to 3; Brooklyn Boys' High School, 16 to 2; Khiani Club, of Princeton University, 13 to 2, and the Stevens Institute Underclassmen, 15 to 11.

Luther L. Sheppard, the team scorer, reports the batting averages of the season to be as follows. "Dago" Walters leads the hitters with 33 per cent., Smith is close second with 31.7 per cent. Munro has a percentage of 29.4 per cent.; Thompson, 28 per cent.; Craig, 26.3 per cent.; Pitcher VanAuken, 25.8 per cent.; Miner, 24.3 per cent.; Recap, 20 per cent.; Ulrich, 19.5 per cent.; Book, 14.7 per cent.; and Brokaw, 12.8 per cent. On the whole the averages are lower this year than last.

"Deacon" VanAuken has done great work for the school boys in the box, and has 116 strike-outs to his credit. His strike-out record for a single game is 19 men. "Scotch" Munro has also made his debut in the box and has left a good record as twirler. It is especially unfortunate that both of these pitchers have left school. VanAuken graduated this year and Munro has moved to Philadelphia. The material is by no means exhausted, however, as Sam Bogart still attends the High School, and can fill the bill with practice.

While Munro, Ulrich, VanAuken and Miner will not be with the team another year, Captain Craig has much material to draw from in the pupil body, and the team will be organized early for the next season and will get plenty of the indoor work found so beneficial this year.

FOURTH OF JULY ACCIDENTS

SOME UNPLEASANT HAPPENINGS OF CELEBRATION.

Charles Frey Fractures Ankle—Edward Gunzleman's Fingers Had to be Amputated.

Edward Gunzleman, aged 18 years, of Manson place, trying to shoot off firecrackers near some cannon powder, caused an explosion. His left hand was so badly injured that Dr. Long had to amputate the first two fingers and the thumb of the left hand.

Charles Frey, of Harmony street, while attending a clambake at New Market, slipped in a hole causing a fracture of the left leg near the ankle. He will be at the hospital for a month.

Everett Rever, of Newark, while riding on a West Front street trolley car Sunday afternoon, suffered from heat prostration. He was taken to the hospital, but was able to return home later.

Charles Leland and Walter Gray collided while riding their wheels along West Front street, Saturday night. Leland sprained his wrist badly and sustained an injury to his stomach.

John Mullen Buried.

The funeral services of the late John Mullen were held Thursday from the home at 7:30 o'clock and from St. Mary's Church at 8 o'clock, Rev. Father Delahanty officiating. The Journeymen Plumbers' Association contributed a handsome wreath to the floral tributes. The interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery; the pallbearers were Michael J. Higgins, James Dadey, Edward Kline, J. P. Motley, James Motley and Wm. Addis.

Want Him Again.

The Republican Club News, of New York, has the statement that Assemblyman Edward R. Finch, who has represented the Fifth District in Albany for two years, is being urged to run again. Mr. Finch is inclined to retire in favor of some other young Republican in the district. Plainfield claims Mr. Finch as one of her sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin, of Rockview avenue, have gone to Norfolk, Conn., for the summer.

Just About Bedtime

take a Little Early Riser—it will cure constipation, biliousness and liver troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are different from other pills. They do not gripe and break down the mucous membranes of the stomach, liver and bowels, but cure by gently arousing the secretions and giving strength to these organs. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

JERSEYMEN CLAIM THE ISLAND

BOARD OF PROPRIETORS START FIGHT TO OUST FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

Board Takes Title From Owners of Grant Made by Charles II of England.

As counsel representing the Board of General Proprietors of the Eastern Division of New Jersey, Howard W. Hayes has brought suit in the United States Circuit Court, New York, to dispossess the United States Government from Ellis Island, now occupied by the Immigration Commissioners.

The Board of Proprietors is an incorporated body, succeeding the East Jersey Proprietors, who were the original owners of the grant made by Charles II, of England to the Duke of New York, and later assigned by him to Colonial Governor Carteret, whose authority then extended over the entire State of New Jersey and the Island of Manhattan

The bill filed in the suit, sets forth these facts, and alleges a valid claim under various grants and assignments to scattered parcels of land of the original grant, which have not passed by sale and quit claim deed to others.

The Board of General Proprietors of the Eastern Division of New Jersey was originally composed of twenty-four members, who held equal interest in the board. The present members are heirs of those who composed the original board. Francis M. Tichenor, of Elizabeth, is the chairman of the board, and Mr. Hayes, who acts as counsel, is one of its members. The board includes some of the oldest families in this State, among them being the Howells, Cobbs, Kirkpatricks, Keans, Stuyvesants, Pierponts, Morrises and Rutherfords. There are about fifty members of the board at present, and they meet semi-annually in Perth Amboy.

A Surgical Operation

is always dangerous—do not submit to the surgeon's knife until you have tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It will cure when everything else fails—it has done this in thousands of cases. Here is one of them: I suffered from bleeding and protruding piles for twenty years. Was treated by different specialists and used many remedies, but obtained no relief until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve Two boxes of this salve cured me eighteen months ago and I have not had a touch of the piles since.—H. A. Tisdale, Summerton, S. C. For Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Protruding Piles no remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

EXHIBITING RARE TIMEPIECE

GENUINE VERGE WATCH OWNED BY H. A. POPE.

Quaint Timekeeper at Least One Hundred Years Old in Doane's Window.

J. Herrey Doane, of Park avenue, has on exhibition in one of his jewelry store windows a rare old-fashioned watch. The time-piece was made in England fully a hundred and fifty years ago and is one of the few Verge models of watch now existing.

The works of the time-piece are of an intricate handgade design and are beautifully chased. They are enclosed in a plain case of heavy gold which shows marks of having been hammered into shape by hand work. This case is again enclosed in a second outer case of German silver, covered with plates of thin tortoise shell, hand carved and burned in an intricate design.

The outer case is studded with small large headed brads of silver. The dial and hands are of quaint old fashioned workmanship. The owner of the watch, Howard A. Pope, of East Fifth street has made inquiries of several jewelers regarding the value of the watch and holds it at a high valuation.

HIS LEG TORN BY MECHANISM

YOUNG CHARLES POST RECEIVES SERIOUS INJURY.

Playing on Circular Railway When Accident Happens—Leg Caught in Cross-Rail.

While riding on the circular railway in the lot on Watchung avenue, opposite Third street, Tuesday afternoon, thirteen-year-old Charles Post, of East Third street, caught his left leg in a cross rail of the mechanism and it was badly torn and lacerated by the cogs of the moving machinery before the engine, which runs the machine, could be stopped.

Young Post, together with about twenty-five other young people of the neighborhood was riding on the unfinished cars of the small railway which is being built by Charles F. Felmer and Winslow Carson for Edward Johnson, who plans to take the thing to the St. Louis Exposition when completed. The car trucks have recently been completed and the perpetual train of cars was in operation yesterday afternoon. The lad had his left leg hanging from the frame of one of the cars when it approached the cogged incline and that member became caught in the machinery. Winslow Carson, who was running the machine, heard the child's shriek and quickly stopped the machinery. Post retaind his consciousness throughout, though it was necessary to unbolt the machinery and derail the car before the leg could be extricated.

The ambulance was immediately telephoned for and Dr. W. Kempton Browning was summoned. The lad was taken to Muhlenberg Hopital where an examination showed that the leg was not broken, although the muscles and legaments were terribly lacerated.

The lad was later removed to his home where he will be confined to his bed for several weeks.

Groggy In First Round.

John Remplies and John Barleycorn had a struggle for supremacy on East Second street, this morning, and the last named John struck the first named John a solar plexus blow that sent him down and out. Patrolman Meeker refereed the bout and escorted the vanquished Mr. Remplies to police headquarters, where he is at present sleeping off the effects. He will make his apologies to the City Judge, this evening.

Hope's Annual Outing.

The Hope Young Men's Association will go on its camping trip to Lake Hopatcong, August 15. This was decided upon at the meeting of the association held last evening at the chapel. Fourteen members have already signified their intention of participating in the expedition. Purchase the number will be largely in excess of the management's expectations.

Passed Examination.

William Callahan, of Netherwood, and Robert Goldman, of South avenue, have passed the civil service examinations. Notice to this effect was received yesterday by Postmaster Bird.

Fisherman's Luck.

Richard Ayers, of Central avenue, caught twenty-six cat fish, five eels and a big snapping turtle at Force's pond, Oak Tree, yesterday morning.

THEIR MARRIED LIFE A "GRAND SWEET SONG"

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Larkin Celebrate Half Century of Their Happy Union.

MANY FRIENDS PRESENT

COUPLE JOIN HANDS WHILE MINISTER MAKES AN ADDRESS.

Presents Received a Token of Joyful Occasion—Letters of Congratulations—Those Calling to Pay Their Respects.

Fifty years ago Tuesday Miss Anna Titsworth and Geo. S. Larkin, of New Market, were married, and Tuesday the golden anniversary of that happy union was celebrated by a large gathering of relatives and friends of the aged couple. Rev. L. E. Livermore, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, was present and conducted a short ceremony. He had the couple join hands and then spoke at some length of the happiness of their life in the past and the hopes for the future. Mr. and Mrs. Larkin received all the afternoon and a constant stream of visitors called to pay their respects. Among those present were the following children and children-in-law of the couple: Dr. Eugene Larkin and wife, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Dunn, of New Market, Mrs. William Barkin, of Dunellen, and Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Whitford, of New Market. Among those present from Plainfield were: D. E. Titsworth and wife, Mr. and Mrs. James Clawson, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Spicer, Mrs. David Randolph, and T. B. Titsworth and wife. From New Brunswick came Prof. Alfred Titsworth, of Rutgers College with his family, Mrs. Mary Wilson and T. S. Alberti. Those present from this vicinity were: James Dunham and family, Rev. L. E. Livermore and family, Mrs. Lucy Titsworth, L. T. Titsworth and family, Mrs. Anna Coon, Miss Florence Coon and Mrs. Joel Dunn, D. L. Green and family from Hartford, Conn., were also present at the happy gathering. During the afternoon an original poem, commemorative of the event, was read by Mrs. L. E. Livermore. The poem was a very clever one and was one of the features of the afternoon. A lunch was served at 3 o'clock. The couple received a number of handsome presents and many letters of congratulations.

AID FOR AFFLICTED DRUGGISTS.

Union County Association Decides to Help Those in Suffering Kansas.

Elizabeth, July 15—Help is to be extended to the afflicted pharmacists in Kansas, the aid coming from the Union County Retail Druggists' Association. That is the decision arrived at yesterday at a meeting of the local organization held in the Alcoyne Club building. The Kansas druggists sent an appeal which met with the approval of the organization here. Thomas Armstrong and L. W. Randolph were the two Plainfield druggists present and they endorsed the scheme.

Street Improvement.

The work of resurfacing and rolling West Front street is being continued under the supervision of Street Commissioner Gavett. One side is being done at a time and it is believed that the street will not need further repairing this summer. The work of macadamizing West Second street is also progressing favorably.

Threaten to Lynch Him.

Charged with attempting to assault the daughter of a farmer at Catskill, N. Y., James Little, colored, of Somerville, is in the custody of the police at that city. Little, it is said, was on his way back to New Jersey when the assault was committed. The farmers in the vicinity threaten to have a lynching bee.

Assistance Needed.

The Woman's Exchange wishes to announce that it is greatly in need of assistance. Over $1,000 was paid to contributors last month, and the demands upon the resources of the association are constant and great.

Miss Hammond's Debut.

A baby girl has arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hammond, of Somerset street. She weighs ten pounds.

—Melons Gliss, of Park avenue, has purchased the milk business of Williams Brothers, of Dunellen.

Mrs. I. K. Prescott, of Brooklyn, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Mary L. Force, 208 Watchung avenue.

NO UNDUE INFLUENCE BY SPIRITUALIST

The Will of Joseph H. Olcott Making Big Bequests to Daughter to Stand.

DISMISSES THE APPEAL

END OF REMARKABLE CASE ATTRACTING UNUSUAL ATTENTION.

Brothers Claim That Mrs. Josephine Korff Played on Father's Superstitions Not Substantiated—Testament Admitted to Probate.

Somerville, July 15—The opinion of Judge Schenck in the celebrated Joseph H. Olcott will case filed with Surrogate William J. DeMond here yesterday, permits the filing of the will for probate. This case, which was tried several months ago, was the most remarkable of its kind in Somerset County because of investigations in spiritualism disclosed.

Frank and Sands Olcott, brothers, claimed that their sister, Mrs. Josephine Korff, was a medium, and through her investigations with the ouija board, receiving messages purporting to be from relatives long since ded, unduly influenced their father, who left the most of his money to her. They asserted that she influenced the old man to such an extent that he would not do anything without her advise.

In his opinion yesterday, Judge Schenck dismissed the appeal and the order of the Surrogate, admitting the will to probate, was affirmed.

VIOLATING THE LIQUOR LAWS

EVIDENCE THAT FRUIT DEALERS IN BOROUGH SELL RUM.

Councilmen on Their Trail for Dispensing "Hard Cider."

Evidence that certain fruit dealers in North Plainfield are doing a rushing Sunday business in the sale of liquor is in the hands of members of the North Plainfield Council. These Councilmen propose to do what they can to stop the illegal traffic.

The work of gathering the evidence has been in progress for nearly two months, but the names of the offenders have not been made public. The names of twenty-two men who have been in the habit of patronizing the places are in the hands of proper officials and these, it is said, will be called as witnesses.

All the places are located on Somerset street from the brook to Manning avenue. There is one store near Chatham street which has been watched but there is not sufficient evidence against the place as yet. The dealers, it is claimed, purchase the liquor on this side of the brook Saturday evenings. It is kept in beer bottles. This is what is known as "proof rum" which is diluted and sold to patrons in bottles labeled "hard cider." According to the evidence secured so far a stranger cannot purchase a drink at any of the stores. Only regular patrons, sworn to secrecy, can obtain the stuff.

A merchant, whose store is on Somerset street, was brought last evening before the Borough Recorder and severely reprimanded for being intoxicated. The man secured the drink in a nearby "joint" masquerading under the name of a fruit store.

Trimming Trees.

Under the direction of Street Commissioner Gavett many trees in West Front street, Liberty street and Washington avenue are being trimmed. They are large shade trees and for the benefit of health in general it has been deemed wise to remove some of the heaviest branches. The work will be continued in other parts of the city.

Before Justice Mosher.

The case of Mary Styles against Mary L. Hope, for possession of premises, will be heard by Justice Mosher, July 20. Summons was issued today. The contract case of Bicknell against Brown in the same court, which was called for yesterday, was adjourned to July 20.

Big Family.

There are now sixteen babies gaining health and strength in the King's Daughters' camp on the mountain.

VITAL STATISTICS FOR THE MONTH OF JUNE

Ten Marriages, Thirty-Seven Births and Fourteen Deaths Reported to Board of Health.

CONDITIONS HEALTHY

SIX CASES OF CONTAGIOUS DISEASE HAD SOURCE OUTSIDE CITY.

Board of Health Met Yesterday Afterday Afternoon—Sources of Ice Investigated—Milk Permits Issued and Dairies Inspected.

Ten marriage certificates, thirty-seven birth certificates, two still birth certificates and fourteen death certificates were received by the Board of Health during the month of June, indicating a healthy excess of births over deaths. The Board of Health met yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in an adjourned meeting, with the members all present excepting Charles J. Fisk, the president, and Dr. R. VanD. Hedges. Report was made of the regular yearly investigation of the city ice supply.

Six cases of contagious disease were reported during the past month, having their source in each case, outside of the city. From the 23d to the 27th of June, Plainfield was entirely free from contagion—not a single house being under quarantine; something that has happened only twice in six years.

It was stated that the present ice supply of Plainfield comes from three sources, Watchung Lake, Seeley's Pond and Hygeia or artificial ice. Watchung lake is an artificial lake, situated in Washington Valley. Its watershed is very lightly populated. The ice is sold in Plainfield by the Natural Ice Company, which is a consolidation of the independent ice companies selling natural ice last year, and by one independent dealer—John Morton.

Some ice is cut from Crystal Lake, a small lake about ½ mile from Watchung Lake in the same valley, but this ice is supplied to the two beef houses for refrigerating purposes and is in no wise used for domestic purposes.

Seeley's Pond is situated about a mile beyond Scotch Plains in what is known as the Scotch Plains Notch. It is fed by three streams, two of which come from only a short distance in the mountain, having their origin in springs, while the third has its origin somewhere in the vicinity of Summit, N. J., flowing through the valley to the pond, a distance of about 5 to 10 miles. The water shed of this stream is fally heavily populated. The ice from this pond is sold by David Dunn, of Scotch Plains, principally in Netherwood.

Hygeia ice is made exactly as it was last year, the same water and same methods for breezing being used.

Samples of the above three ices were taken during the month and subjected to a complete chemical analysis and it was found that they were of fairly good quality and perfectly safe for domestic use. Permits were granted to the above named companies for the sale of their ice.

It was announced that the milk permits have all been issued and the Board of now prepared to prosecute any one selling milk without a permit. Three of the dairymen who were refused permits to sell milk in Plainfield because of the filthy conditions of their dairies, have put their cow stables, cattle and milk rooms in such a condition as to comply with the rules and regulations of the Board of Health, and have renewed their applications for permits. The other two have ceased to sell milk.

Mrs. Newmiller Ill.

Mrs. Peter Newmiller, whose husband died a short time ago following the demise of her son by a few days, is in a serious condition. She is suffering from a cancer. Mrs. Newmiller was taken from her home in Mt. Bethel last evening to Muhlenberg Hospital where an operation will be performed.

Held for Grand Jury.

James Burke, who stole a plow from Mel Mecker and sold it for fifty cents to a junk man named John Hacker, spending the proceeds for "booze," was this morning held for the Grand Jury by Justice Hoff.

Troubles Ended.

The landlord and tenant case of James Shea against Israel Kadish was adjusted amicably this morning in Justice Hand's court. Harry C. Runyon represented the plaintiff.

WANTED—ABLE MINISTERS

THE LOCAL BAPTIST CHURCHES STILL WITHOUT PASTORS.

Committees Find It Hard to Make Selections From Candidates for the Offices.

The committee from the First Baptist Church having in charge the matter of selecting a pastor to succeed Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, has reached no decision as yet. From time to time various divines are heard in widely different parts of the country, but the members of the committee have thus far been unable to agree on any one man. It is quite likely that the rest of the summer will be spent in hearing other ministers, and that an effort will be made to decide the question in the early fall. It is understood that the committee is anxious to secure a comparatively young minister.

A successor to Rev. J. W. Richardson at the Park Avenue Baptist Church has not yet been found by the committee appointed from that church to secure one. Several ministers have been heard at various times, but the committee is acting with due deliberation before making a choice. It is expected that this church will have a minister by the time the fall work begins.

A COW WITH TWO HEADS

ZOOLOGICAL FREAK OWNED BY WILLIAM C. FERGUSON.

Fortunately the Animal Only Feeds Through One of Its Mouths—Healthy Beast.

William C. Ferguson, a farmer living between Coontown and Mt. Bethel, is the possessor of a three-weeks-old calf which has two heads. Few like freaks of nature have been recorded. Barnum exhibited one in his "greatest show on earth," but, outside of that, not more than one or two such instances have been known to the public.

Mr. Ferguson is raising the young cow with the idea of disposing of it eventually to a museum. As such phenomenon seldom live long, particular care has to be exercised in raising them. Thus far, Mr. Ferguson's specimen has done well, and seems entirely healthy and normal with the exception of its two heads attached to one neck. The animal has taken all of its food through one mouth only, allowing the other to fall into complete disuse.

When the story of the monstrosity reached The Daily Press, the office poet was inspired to sing this ballad:

"Thus doth the merry bovine gambol
On nature's fertile sod
And look both ways for Sunday
For she hath two heads to nod."

The police of surrounding towns have been notified but the poet is still at large. His early apprehension is expected.

Renovating Property.

The interiors and exteriors of several houses in this city have been renovated during the past month. Some of those who have been having their dwellings redecorated are O. T. Waring, of Park avenue; H. C. Squires, of Watchung avenue; Charles Clark, of Park place; Mrs. E. Baldwin, of Park avenue, and George C. Squires, of Park avenue. The New York Painting and Decorating Company had charge of the work in each instance.

Poisoning Dogs.

Some dog poisoner has been working overtime. Yesterday morning when the people residing in the neighborhood of East Front street and Watchung avenue woke up they saw three large dogs lying in the street dead. One was a St. Bernard, another a great Newfoundland and the third was a large shaggy dog that appeared to be a mongrel.

Compelled to Close.

The Ideal Cash Register Company, of Bound Brook, has been forced to close down temporarily on account of a suit which crippled the concern. It is said that the factory will soon be open for business again and in the meantime repairs to the machinery will be made.

Inspecting Plant.

C. Layton Ford, of West Sixth street, vice president of the Celadon Roofing Tile Company, leaves this week with his family for Alfred, N. Y., where he will spend a month at the factory of the company.

NO NOTICE TAKEN OF JAIL DELIVERY

Somerset County Board of Freeholders Take No Action on Escape of Prisoners.

OPINION OF MEMBERS

DEPUTY SHERIFF THINKS THE ESCAPE IS MATTER FOR CONGRATULATION.

Board Considers Affair is None of Its Business—Lax Discipline at County Jail—Whereabouts of Escaped Prisoners.

No official notice of the recent jail delivery at Somerville was taken by the Somerset County Board of Freeholders at the regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon. This is a matter within their jurisdiction but although three characters made their escape through the negligence, it is said, of the deputy sheriff, the Board judged from a statement made by one of the Freeholders to a reporter of The Daily Press last evening, took no action "because the deputy sheriff is appointed by the sheriff and not by the Board."

It is known to the Board that on the night of the jail delivery the deputy sheriff was not on duty and that it has been his custom to give all the inmates of the jail the freedom of the corridors at night. Freeholder Demler was seen a Washingtonville last evening, and to inquiries made by a reporter said that he did not hear of any talk among the members of the Board about the jail delivery and did not know of there being any talk of removing the deputy sheriff. He said that the deputy is appointed by the sheriff and that the board had nothing to do with the matter.

It was reported to the Board in session that Hayes, one of the escapes had been seen in the mountains in back of North Plainfield.

Freeholder Andrew Lutkins said last evening that the Board did nothing about the matter and it was not even discussed at the meeting. He said that he was informed that Judge Schenck reprimanded the deputy sheriff and the Board was content to let the matter rest at that.

Deputy Sheriff Anderson, who has charge of the prisoners at night, said to a reporter over the telephone yesterday that the Board of Freeholders did not intend taking any action in the matter. Said he:

"I do not believe there is a person who is not glad the prisoners got away. Why, if they were wanted the authorities could place their hands on them in short order. Most of them were held on charges serious enough to warrant bringing in any indictments."

It is learned on good authority that very little effort is being made by the Somerset County authorities to arrest the criminals. The sheriff has issued no reward for their capture although, it was reported in the open session of the Board of Freeholders yesterday afternoon that one of them was seen near Mt. Bethel yesterday morning. It is alleged that Hayes stopped at the home of a farmer in that vicinity and requested food. It is also reported that no change has been made in the methods in vogue at the jail since the men escaped.

LETTER-CARRIERS' OFF.

Vacations for Men Who Carry the Mail for Uncle Sam.

Four letter-carriers of the local force who are now on their fifteen-day vacations will return to work again Thursday morning. The men now away are Frank Clarkson, whose place is being taken by Dan Shea; Charles Stephens, whom Frank Bailey is "subbing" for; John Hines, whose route George Apgar now has; and Philip Giese, whose place is now taken by James Bailey.

With the return of these men on the sixteenth four others will take vacations.

Fxit the Fish.

Clarence L. Thorn, of Park avenue, and a party of friends, left the city yesterday for a fishing trip to Perth Amboy. They expect to bring home a big catch of weak fish. Mr. Thorn and a couple of friends caught twenty-six pickerel in Green brook, near Sebring's mill, Monday.

Case in Contract.

Justice R. P. F. VonMinden, of New Market, will hear the case tomorrow morning of Rosina Jahn, executrix, against Ira Horton, on contract. The trial will probably be by jury. F. J. Blatz represents the plaintiff and S. S. Swackhamer the defendant.

VICTIM OF MUSKIES.

Being an Over True Tale of a Fishing Expedition.

Discomforts and Disfigurements Count for Naught When the "Striker" Are Numerous—The Story Has a Sad Ending.

I am a sight and I know it.

A week's growth of beard disfigures my face. Beneath it shows a skin of many hues.

My nose is at least four different shades of red, varying from a brilliant crimson to a pink.

My lips are parched, and cracked, and bleeding.

I know these things for several reasons.

First my friends never fail to comment upon my appearance when I meet them.

Secondly I can feel my disfigurement.

Thirdly a mirror hangs on the wall before me as I write.

It will be at least a week before even "store clothes" will make me presentable in good society.

My family shun me. My wife refuses to appear upon the streets in my company, and finds excuses for eating her meals alone. My children evince a decided preference for their mother's society, and I am not called upon to entertain my friends.

But I cast the thoughts of all these things from me, and permit my mind to ponder only on the past pleasures.

"Muskies" were the cause of my disfigurement. Those wolves of the waters that entice many a disciple of Walton from the city and make of him a dime museum attraction for his friends.

I am but one of thousands in this class who brave ridicule and the elements for the sake of the sport these prizes furnish. But one of thousands who listen impatiently to the clicking of the clock until Father Time says to the authorities whose duty it is to protect the fish during the close season: "Take down the bars and let the anglers in. Their day of sport has come."

My "muskies" are, or were, denizens of the waters of Tomahawk lake. (For the unknowing ones I will explain that this bit of water, like many others of its kind, lies in northern Wisconsin, close beside the tracks of the Northwestern railway.

The wind blew at Tomahawk. It troubled its waters into choppy seas that made navigation difficult for Tom, our guide. It blew from the north directly from the ice fields that Perry and others have buffeted unsuccessfully. It came down upon us with a frigidity that congealed the waters the dashing waves cast into our boat.

The sun shone at Tomahawk, but its rays, though intensely bright, had none of the congenial warmth belonging to late May.

I have but a dim recollection of shielding my eyes from the blinding reflection from the water, and my face from the cutting blasts of the wind.

That which I do remember with a vividness which cannot be effaced is the rush of the "muskie" through the water.

The strike!

The leap of the finny prize into the air!

The plunge into the depths of cold water!

The whirr of the reel as he took out line!

The heading, quivering rod!

The tug and pull on the line!

The turning of the little crank that reeled in the line as the "muskie" darted for the boat!

The final landing of the prize as Tom's arm shot out with the gaff and brought him into the boat!

All of these things I remember distinctly. There needs no jogging of the memory to bring them back again, and remembering these what care I for the disfigurement of face; what care I for the jeers of friends; what care I for uncomplimentary comments.

Ah, but I remember one thing more. It was not a pleasant incident. It is with curses that I recall it.

I remember all too distinctly the doom pronounced upon me by the gentle guide.

"Confiscated!"

My "muskies" gone to feed the madding crowd that fish not, neither do they brave the discomforts heaped upon us by the weather man.

"Confiscated!"

And all because the law was stronger than my will or "pull."

Disfigurements count for naught, but this is a sad ending to a pleasing tale. The next time the label will be right. Tom shall be my witness that it is, and I and mine shall eat the next "muskie" that falls a prey to my prowess.

FOR WARM DAYS.

Hats of Rough Straw—Pretty Linen Collars.

Cherries and currants are quite popular on the rough outing hats, and hats in burnt or champagne straw are decorated with a little coarse lace and clusters of foliage.

Linen canvas makes up charmingly with touches of Ingrain embroidery and smart strappings. The pale pastel blue looks well with dark blue and yellow embroidery on a white background. Biscuit canvas is charming with red embroidery. Little tasseled motifs are shown in cotton for wash gowns, and the pale biscuit and beige tints abound well with the coarse lace used on such costumes.

Although the blue gown trimmed with green is no longer modish, yet a pale green lawn or batiste gown is charming with a blue hat, and the prettiest blue hat is of rough straw, with plenty of light grass green foliage and blue silk cornflowers. A gown of pale blue green cambric is also effective with a deep willow green straw trimmed with pale blue forget-me-nots and a deep purple iris or two.

The ruffle is no more, but last season's cape ruffle with longer ends is the fashionable "stole" of the present season. Three or four frills headed with lace or a flat collar put on to form a heading is sufficiently deep to widen the shoulders in the accepted style, and with long ends decorated with frills, ruchings or ribbon, and sometimes with all three, the stole is complete. Soft muslins are good, have capes with numerous frills, and these are already copied in common lace and will have but a brief reign. Flat stoles of ostrich and marabou feathers are very handsome. These have many uses and are altogether fussy and becoming.

The illustration shows a sailor of beige colored straw trimmed with cherries.

GRASS LAWN AND ALPACA.

The Former Makes Smart Dresses and the Latter Model Coats.

An unlined coat of white alpaca is pretty for sailing or seashore wear.

Motoring coats are very smart in pale biscuit or ivory shades, with a chic little collar of velvet, white moire or white kid.

The craze for red is growing in favor. There is a good deal of distinction to it, and its wearing qualities are good. The deeper shades are the most fashionable and also combine best with the ecru tints in straw which are the fad this year.

A good many Parisian dressmakers are turning out skirts of plaited grass lawn with blouse bodices and large collars, adding at the neck and waist a touch of grass green or old rose. These are sure to have a fair share of popularity, owing to the rage for biscuit and brown shades.

Grass lawn can look very charming for a simple frock, combined with entre-deux of coarse lace around the hem of the skirt and a wide lace collar.

Fancy or plush ribbon, fancy and brocaded, is accounted a novelty and is quite a host in itself for trimming purposes. A belt of it worn the other day was in a rich shade of green, with a delicate gray cloth costume, fastening in front through an immense square buckle of plain dull gold. These buckles, by the way, large, massive and severely plain, carry the mind back to the Stuart period. They are details accounted smart in Paris and seem to fit in with peculiar aptness the style of the gathered skirt and waist bodice. Black belts with these great dull gold buckles are immensely chic and are to be worn with all manner of toilets, silk alike with cloth.

BRIGHTER TINTS WORN.

Yellows, Scarlets and Pinks Modish. The Useful Cape Collaret.

The wide collar is a boon to amateur dressmakers, for it covers up a multitude of sins.

Chailles in quaint pompadour designs make up charmingly and are very useful for cool evenings.

The parasol of the moment is most attractive, with its long handle a la Pompadour, very often incrusted with gems and its chine silk inserted with medallions of lace. The simplest parasol of all has a plain silk cover with rows of ribbon woven in black on a light ground in graduated widths and a long, plain colored handle.

Foulard, the old fashioned fabric, has given way to voiles and a still softer make of silk. For dull days cloths trimmed with taffeta as well as a firmer make of canvas and spotted voile are greatly to the fore.

There is a growing tendency toward brighter tints, especially in a soft make of cloth. Scarlet still carries the day, and yellows, pinks and brilliant blues are all tremendously in request.

A wrinkle now resorted to by all the leading blouse specialists is a chiffon veiling to silk underslips, not the costly and hot taffetas of heretofore, but good washing quality, the chiffon lending a soft appearance to any lace that may be inset, while it enhances to an immense extent the value of a muslin blouse.

The picture shows a walking costume of gray. The hat is of white with a scarlet feather.

MILLINERY MODES.

The Indispensable French Sailor. Some Dressy Hats.

The French sailor is indispensable to the smart woman's wardrobe. The prettiest this year is of rough yellow straw trimmed simply with a wreath of foliage or velvet balls.

Hats of ecru straw are often simply trimmed with an application of coarse lace with ends hanging on one side.

The new tailor made hat tilts up in front and fits closely at the back and sides. It is trimmed only with loops and knots of ribbon.

For dressy wear nothing can equal a hat of white tulle trimmed with a single ostrich plume, although rough straw also looks well for the same purpose.

The ever useful toque of black straw is relieved by the pompon or aigret of black and white and black rough straw. French sailors are tastefully trimmed with blackberries and their shaded foliage.

The transparent hat of lace is not seen so much this year, and the stiff shapes of silver seem to have the preference over millinery made of more fancy materials.

The advent of colored hosiery cannot fail to have been remarked, several shades of dark blue and some amazingly pretty reds, spotted and clocked with black, predominating. There is a rumor that these will be worn with white shoes. White shoes at best are a doubtful acquisition, their one saving grace being found in white silk or lace hosiery. The colored fancy, though, is reasonable with the walking skirt, provided they are privileged to find completion in neat black French kid or patent leather shoes. Nor is the notion at all unpleasing of colored hosiery worn with white frocks, these perchance repeating the tone of some pretty skirt and hat.

The chic sailor shape in the illustration is trimmed with two shades of mull and pink roses.

SMART DUST COATS.

They Are Prettily Trimmed With Tassels and Embroidery.

Applique motifs of lace or handsome insertion are liberally used, and tassels, tabs and shaped frills are all popular for dust wraps.

Some of the wraps are full length, but the majority are three-quarters.

There are many cloths now used for coats which have a waterproof surface or some particular finish which renders them impervious to clouds of dust and showers of rain. The smart wraps, however, are in a soft make of taffeta or louisine and may be as beautiful as one pleases. The prettiest perhaps are those draped with capuchin effects of contrasting shades. Thus a pale biscuit wrap has a hood of sky blue and a small over collar of lace, the sleeves being also turned back with sky blue and lace.

A charming dust wrap seen recently was of accordion plaited alpaca in the form of a pelisse caught in at the waist with a fancy embroidered belt. The large sleeves had embroidered cuffs.

The yachting costume shown herewith is of white alpaca trimmed with navy blue taffeta.

Sew and Dainty Shirt Waists—Afternoon Lawn Costumes.

The new batiste and linen shirt waists are particularly charming. They are embroidered in linen thread and, although simple, possess a good deal of style. They are admirably suited for morning wear with the full, short skirt.

A smart little afternoon frock of grass lawn was worn over a pale grass green petticoat made with several rows of gaugings around the waist and finished with five large tucks near the hem. A cape collar of coarse lace and grass lawn was fastened down under a pale green taffeta swathed band, and the blouse underneath was entirely of gauged grass lawn. With this was worn a pale green sailor hat simply trimmed with a wreath of black velvet balls.

Another smart linen costume had a kilted skirt with a yoke of embroidery in a deep red shade, the waist being trimmed to correspond.

Grass lawn mixes well with the new make of mercerne lace or, for that matter, with any coarse lace which has character in its design.

The waist illustrated is of black china silk trimmed with embroidered squares of white.

An Absent Minded Teacher.

Neander, professor of theology in Berlin, was one day overtaken by a thunderstorm. He jumped into a cab, but could not give either the number of his house or the name of the street. The driver thought the man was mad and was about to tell him to get out when the professor, espying a student, called out to him and said, "Just tell the man where I live."

Neander's sister, who kept house for the professor, took fresh apartments nearer the university, as she thought the distance too great for her brother. A few days after their removal he complained of the long and tiring walk, and it then turned out that he had gone first to the old lodgings and so around to the university.

WHAT IS WORN.

Deep Collars a Distinguishing Mark of Smart Garments.

The deep collar or pelerine of lace is worn over plain blouses with strapped linen skirts, and these are quite smart and effective in a deep red or dark blue, the millinery repeating the light tone of the collar. The sack bolero accompanies the lawn and linen gown, and this is a most adaptable costume when completed by a thin blouse.

Tussore silk and tussore linen are the most useful fabrics for dust cloaks, but alpaca, when dressed in the soft, limp style, is also admirable, and the colorings most in vogue are the beige tint, a silvery green and a mignonette tint which is less pronounced than the reseda.

Where more decided effects are wished brighter tints are worn, but these must accord with the hat. For instance, an old rose alpaca edged with ruffled black ribbon has a few medallions of black lace and is to be worn with a large black hat over black or white gowns.

The collar has entirely disappeared from coats—that is, the high collar—for the cape effects now reign supreme, and no garment is smart without one of these. A voluminous sack shape is proper to all long garments. Applique trimmings are popular for these.

The cut shows a tailor made of checked wool goods.

NOVELTIES IN DRESS.

An Attractive Green and Black Effect—A Useful Hat.

A very smart gown seen recently was of hand painted muslin, and from the knees to the feet there was a border consisting of trellis work of woven green ribbons and pink roses. This was much bedounced underneath to give the necessary flare. The trellis work also appeared on either side of the bolero bodice, which was cut short at the back over a green spotted muslin blouse finished with a draped waistband of taffeta. The costume was completed by a hat composed entirely of green leaves over a foundation of tucked pink chiffon finished with two black velvet strings and a black rose resting on the hair, while another rose held the strings in place on the bodice. With this was carried a perfectly plain long handled black parasol with a green lizard crawling up the stick.

The Breton sailor shape will undoubtedly prove a favorite hat for boating.

A deep blue Breton shape in soft straw may be trimmed with white ribbon and wings and used with cream or navy blue gowns.

Belts are of infinite importance now, and some of the newer models are quite charming. The shaped belt with little tabs or tails is exceedingly modish, and a change of belt and chou often gives quite a different aspect to a black or neutral tinted gown. A gold tinsel belt is most useful, especially if made with tabs or arranged with a crossed front and tail back. It can figure on a blue, brown or black gown and is equally at home on white or pale colors, and no better finish to a plain slip under a coffee coat can be devised, even if a black or white skirt is worn. Even on cloth it is attractive, and a flaked woolen trimmed with strappings of plain cloth should have a tabbed and stitched belt to match the strappings.

The tailor made hat in the cut is of scarlet rough straw trimmed with a white bird.

FASHION HINTS.

A New Make of Cluny Lace—Linen and Tussore Silk.

There is a new make of cluny lace in silk which is very effective for a trimming of plain voile frocks, and it is not at all expensive. A charming costume recently seen was in rose pink voile with a bolero of this cluny lace finished with a silk fringe. The bolero really formed a cape and collar in one with a pelerine effect and sleeves ending at the elbow. The gown was eminently suited to race meetings, country gatherings and similar occasions, and, although it was smart, it was very simple. The skirt was made with three plaits on each hip and five folds at the bottom of the hem. The blouse bodice under the lace bolero consisted of tiny box plaits on either side worn with a plain fawn leather band. The whole was surmounted by a neat black straw toque.

Linen closely resembling hopsacking is soft and does not crease readily. A good many tussores and silks of a similar nature are also used for ordinary wear. The ecru tints of tussore and linen require relieving with embroidery or colored ribbon.

The china silk negligee in the cut is trimmed with ecru lace, and the main portion is accordion plaited.

PRETTY EFFECTS.

Some Costly Frocks With Jeweled Lace—Simpler Muslins.

A fichu stole or scarf of lace or embroidered lawn is a useful adjunct to any woman's toilet.

Very beautiful frocks are made of white kilted chiffon veiled with jeweled or spangled lace. These transparencies in evening wear are much in vogue in Paris. They are generally placed over a kilted underskirt of a contrasting shade. Such an idea is very picturesque for a ball frock.

Inexpensive muslins make very pretty evening gowns if chosen in dainty shades and carefully trimmed with inexpensive yellow insertion.

Very pretty are the new scroll patterns in black and white and red and white. These make up charmingly with the plain spotted muslin or lace fichu. The skirts of such frocks look well cut with five frills around the hem and only long enough to touch the ground. The sleeves should be very full. These dresses are not hard to make at home if one has a good pattern.

The illustration shows a pretty waist of black louisine silk trimmed with red and black embroidered bands.

A Body Blow to the Air Ship.

The resistance of the air to moving bodies of various shapes has been tested by M. Canovetti by attaching each form to a carriage sliding down a wire 400 yards long, one of whose ends was seventy-five yards higher than the other. From the time made with and without the load the resistance was calculated. It was shown that more power was necessary for driving an aeroplane through the air than for propelling an automobile of equal weight along a road and that the weight of engine necessary must make this form of air ship impracticable.

Men Who Celebrated Golden Wedding in a Lively Way.

Swiss Guide Carried His Bride of Fifty Years Ago Up a High Mountain — Reindeer Runs a Great Risk.

One of the most remarkable golden wedding celebrations has just taken place outside Paris. Every year a contest in which only those couples who have celebrated their golden weddings during the preceding 12 months can compete is held, and takes the form of a race, each grey-headed competitor having to carry his wife on his back.

This year no fewer than nine couples arrived to endeavor to carry off the prize of a hogshead of wine and a couple of hams which is given to the winner. The course is 450 yards long, and Jean Demorel, who passed the winning post first, covered the distance in 3:17, not bad time considering that his burden turned the scale at 160 pounds.

It is probable that a more unusual celebration, as regards those who took part in it as any rate, will never be witnessed than that held at Magdeburg in December, 1897. Herr William Reidl is the leading executioner in Germany, and on the same day he attained the golden anniversary of his bridal day his only son, Frederick, notched his silver wedding. Accordingly all the executioners of the German principalities were invited to attend a banquet, and no fewer than 230 arrived upon the scene on the day appointed, thus forming the most remarkable assembly of guests on record.

At Grindelwald, in August, 1897, the unusual sight was witnessed of an Alpine guide, Cherbelin Almer by name, toiling up one of the highest peaks with is wife on his back. Curiously enough, despite Almer's fame as a climber, his wife had never previously ascended a mountain of any kind, so to celebrate their golden wedding he accomplished the prodigious task of carrying her to an altitude of 3,000 feet in the presence of a large gathering of spectators.

In La Sante prison at Paris a couple spent their golden wedding anniversary a few years ago, after having traveled half around the world for the express purpose of doing so. It was while undergoing sentence in this prison that John Dorman, an American subject, met the woman whom he ultimately married on his release, whereupon he returned to his native land, taking his bride with him. When their golden wedding anniversary drew near they proposed that they should spend it in this prison, and having traveled to France, managed to bring themselves within the grip of the law on some trifling offence, but had not the facts of the case been revealed their wish would not have been gratified, for they were sentenced to imprisonment in different penitentiaries; but the authorities, struck by the novelty of the request, granted it.

To prove that advancing years had not taxed his strength, William Cantle, a Pennsylvania farmer, on celebrating his golden wedding, offered to wrestle with and throw a youth for each year he had been married, two minutes' breathing space only being allowed between each bout. Each competitor was compelled to stake a dollar, to become the property of the winner; but after throwing no fewer than 18 of the strongest youths the neighborhood could produce, Cantle slipped and broke his collarbone, thus ending the contest.

Richardson, the veteran tight rope walker, distinguished himself in a novel fashion three years ago in order to mark the occasion of his golden wedding. He announced that he would wheel his wife, in a barrow, along the edge of the railway bridge which spans the canal at Springfield, Ill. The track was only 11 inches wide, and all went well until two-thirds of the journey was accomplished, when the strong wind caused him to lose his balance, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that his assistants with from following the barrow into the canal. 180 feet below.

VAST SULPHUR MINE.

It Lies in the Crater of Popocatepetl in Mexico.

The Deposits Are Jet a Higher Commercial Value Than Any Others That Are Known and Are Almost Inexhaustible.

A mine on a mountain top. A climb of over three miles up, up, up, through the heavy timber to the snow line, and then on, and on, until the rugged edges of the crater of Popocatepetl are scaled, and below us in the vast bowl of the extinct crater lies our mine. Sulphur of the purest quality and in inexhaustible quantities, waiting for intrepid, ingenious, enterprising man to carry it forth to the markets of the world. The sulphur found here is of higher commercial value than that which is secured from Mount Etna, being free from both iron and arsenic.

Popocatepetl rears its snow-capped head to the southeast of the City of Mexico. A journey of 45 miles by rail brings us to Amecameca, where horses are secured for the ride up the mountainside to the halfway house. With guides, which are easy to obtain, the long climb to the top is now begun. On the summit of the volcano are two peaks, the highest of which is practically inaccessible; the other is known by the name of "Espinazo del Diablo," Spine of the Devil, a name which may have been given because of the fear of the ancient Aztecs, who believed the crater to be the abode of the wicked spirits of departed rulers. For this reason, the natives could never be induced to climb the mountain, and soldiers under the Spanish general, Cortes, were the first to reach the summit and secure sulphur, of which the adventurers stood in need for the making of gunpowder. The trip was a perilous one, and the soldiers drew lots to see who should be lowered into the crater to secure the coveted article.

The deposits at the present time are worked on a very small scale by Indians, but modern engineering methods and plenty of American capital are soon to waken the old mountain to twentieth century energy. Capt. Charles Holt, representative of a syndicate, has been looking over the ground, and recently a New York capitalist, Mr. Samuel Green, spent a night in the crater. The first plan probably will be the building of an aerial cable train to the summit over the rim and down into the crater. At present this line would only run to the level of the floor of the crater, and a tunnel constructed through the side of the mountain. This will cost about $50,000. Then in connection with this line, at the summit of the mountain, a railroad has been projected to run from Tlamacas, at the base of the mountain, to Amecameca, which, with the necessary refineries, will take half a million dollars.

Gen. Sanchez Ochoa, chief of the department of military engineers of Mexico, is the owner of Popocatepetl. Besides the value of the sulphur deposits, there are almost inexhaustible forests and numerous waterfalls, from which may be developed great electrical energy. Gen. Ochoa acquired title to the mountain by "denouncing" the summit as a mineral prospect and by purchase of lands comprising the sides and base. He is a popular and enterprising Mexican, about 65 years of age. His home is in Mexico City, where he has lived for the past 35 years. Yankee thrift and capital have attracted the general, and the Yankee dollar is soon to transform his lofty possessions into a paying possession.

RIVER TRADING BOATS.

Auto-Bellum Commercial Enterprise Is Said to Be Coming Into Vogue Again.

Queer-looking flatboats, varying in size and capable of carrying many tons of freight, having on board a rude home for the owner, are again beginning to ply up and down the broad expanse of the Ohio river and its tributaries. One in particular has attracted the attention of the farmers through whose lands it occasionally wends its way. It has been fittingly named "The American Trader," in that it is a veritable floating store and junkhouse.

According to river men, the life of the water trader is far more pleasant than that of the average peddler, whose vocation necessitates the frequent cleaning and continual looking after a horse. Then, again, there are enough residents along the larger rivers to make an inland trip altogether unnecessary.

The trading boats are supplied with groceries and provisions of all kinds, and take in exchange such articles as butter, eggs, iron, wool and bones. When laden it puts off to some town and there sells its accumulation of stock.

It is said that long before the war the flatboat was used to take produce down the rivers, but that with its passing came the modern barge, now almost a novelty, yet often a useful one. As a general rule, these "traders" keep to the smaller streams, like the Wabash and White rivers, that are not so easy of navigation by the larger steamers.

JOSEPH B. FORAKER.

Junior Senator from Ohio Who Stands Very Close to the Roosevelt Administration.

One of the most prominent men in Ohio to-day is J. B. Foraker, and he is a self-made man.

Joseph Benson Foraker was born on a farm near Belmsboro, Highland county, O., July 5, 1846. He is said to have been a strong boy, being a leader in all fishing and swimming expeditions. He took an active part in the civil war, having enlisted at the age of 15 with the Eighty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, as a private, and serving clear to the end of the war. In that war he gave some intimation of his future success by his rapid promotion—he was a brevet captain when peace was again declared.

Mr. Foraker graduated from Cornell in 1869, and was admitted to the bar and began practice in Cincinnati during the same year. He was judge of the superior court in Cincinnati from 1879 to 1882, but resigned on account of ill health. He was the republican candidate for governor of Ohio, but was defeated at the election of 1883, to be elected in 1885 and 1887, and again defeated in 1889. He has been a United States senator since 1897.

Bird Which Bites a Hook.

Notable among the denizens of the Balkan mountains is a bird, called by the natives the waspeater. As its name indicates, it is the enemy of the hive, and the scourge of honey-bees, but it has a decided preference for wasps. It pursues its prey with remarkable agility, catching an immense number of insects in its flight through the air in an incredibly short space of time. Strange to say, this bird is caught by means of a line, like a common gudgeon. The children stick a crooked pin through the body of a live wasp, fastening it to a long stout piece of thread. The insect soars aloft, and is presently gobbled up by the bird of prey. It is a humiliating spectacle to see the miserable waspeater struggling at the end of the line like a young carp, while it is being drawn down to earth.

AN OCEAN PATROL.

Project of an English Ship Builder to Provide a Unique Sea Service.

One English ship builder is forwarding a project which, if carried through, will be the means of much saving of life and property in mid-ocean. He calls it the International Blue Cross Ocean Life and Salvage service. It is meant to take the place of the Red Cross in the army, says the New York Herald.

It will consist of a fleet of ten lifeboats and one storeboat to patrol the north Atlantic along the line of travel of the great ocean steamers. The aim is that of saving vessels and crews in distress. They will have a regular schedule of time, which will be sent to all captains of vessels, so that in case of wreck or fire or disablement the officers will know at what exact date and point a Blue Cross boat may be expected, and much may be done to save both life and money.

The salvage is to go to the respective governments which fitted the fleet out in proportion to their shipping tonnage. It expects the various nations who have much traffic on the high seas to appropriate sums necessary to the complete outfitting of the boats and crews. The project seems to have met with approval in high places, and ere long we may expect the Blue, as well as the Red, Cross to the rescue of human lives in danger.

WHERE FLAG FIRST WAVED.

Memorial to Be Erected on Famous Revolutionary Hill in Somerville, Mass.

Work will soon begin on the erection of a memorial observatory on the top of historic Prospect hill, Somerville, a sum of money having already been set aside by Mayor Glines for the carrying out of such a purpose, says the Boston Post of recent date. Prospect hill is noted for the prominent part it took in the revolutionary war and it was from the top of this hill that the first American flag was thrown to the breeze.

The observatory is to take the form of a tower and will closely resemble an old English castle. Situated upon the now unoccupied mound, which has been allowed to remain on the Monroe street side of the parkway, it will greatly add to the artistic beauty of the spot.

The tower will be 45 feet high. The top will be flat and protected to a height of four feet by a parapet, with iron gratings in the embrasures, and will afford a view that cannot be equaled in Boston. The walls of the tower will be of rough granite and will be 30 feet in diameter. Two rooms will be set apart for the exhibition of historic relics and souvenirs. The structure from the second floor will be hexagonal in shape, resting on six columns. The cost of the tower is estimated to be about $6,000.

CAUSE OF FLAT WHEELS.

Brakemen Put on the Brakes Too Suddenly and Start the Trouble.

"Flat wheels," growled the old railroad brakemen, as the trolley car in which he sat went thumping along at 12 miles an hour, shaking the passengers uncomfortably at every revolution of the wheels, relates the New York Times.

"What makes flat wheels?" asked the man sitting next the old brakeman.

"Darn fools," said the brakeman. "It's this way: If a man doesn't know how to stop his car he makes a flat wheel. On the steam roads some brakemen flatten a wheel every time they put on the brakes. When the wheel stops revolving and the momentum of the train carries it on, the wheel slides along the track and a flat is started. Next stop, perhaps, makes it worse, and so the thing goes until the wheel is no good. If a brakeman knows his business he need never make a flat wheel unless he has to stop suddenly to avoid an accident. If he keeps his wheels turning slowly they don't flatten. Now, these fellows on the trolley take no care at all, and every other car in some places has a flat wheel."

An indication of a new tendency in scientific study is furnished by the plan of the Geographical society of Baltimore to send this summer to the Bahama islands a ship carrying a staff of 30 persons, who will study the geology, geography, botany, zoology, climatology, physics and medical and hygienic conditions of those islands. The ship, specially chartered for the purpose, will be fitted and equipped as the home and laboratory of the party during the entire trip.

VEST-POCKET FLATS.

The Possibilities of Two Rooms with Modern Conveniences.

They Easily Satisfy Every Demand Made Upon the Out-of-Date Apartment of Three Times Their Size—How They Work.

The evolution through which the flat building has been passing for the past few years has at last culminated in a triumph of architectural skill. Apartments of two rooms are capable of such marvelous alterations by means of push buttons, obedient springs and combination furniture as to multiply their utility nearly four-fold.

Combination, concentration and condensation have entered into a triple alliance to make of modern life a compact edition of two volumes, where formerly it has taken four, five, six or seven volumes to tell the story of the home and its conveniences. Telescopic chandeliers, folding mirrors within mirrors, movable gas stoves, disappearing doors, unfolding panels in the walls, mantels that gracefully fall to the floor and reveal roomy couches, and little cubbyholes and closets which afford ample accommodations for clothes presses and the commissary department present a picture which would do credit to Fairyland.

Los Angeles, Cal., is the last city to become possessed of such a building. It contains 12 apartments, or suites, of two rooms each. The floor space occupied by each suite is only about 18 by 30, and yet by the various combinations which can be worked the two rooms may be made to serve duty as seven. Here is about the way it works:

Mrs. B——, having finished dusting the two parlors and rearranging the bric-a-brac, bethinks herself of some letters which she must write. She steps to one side of her back parlor presses a button and below a roomy bookcase in the wall there unfolds a secretary, at which she sits herself and is soon deep in her letter writing. Not being burdened with the care of a big flat or house, the afternoon is free for calling and a pleasant stroll. Returning late in the afternoon she busies herself in the preparation of the evening meal. A door in the back parlor library is opened and out swings a gas range connected by a swivel joint with the gas supply pipe. A second door swings out in the other direction, bringing with it a kitchen table of ample proportions, and behind this double door is revealed a recess of five by six feet in which are snugly arranged a cupboard, a china closet and a refrigerator. Sparkling conveniently ventilating shafts draw up and away all odors arising from the cooking, and when hubby's latchkey is heard in the door the meal is ready. His services are enlisted and soon the back-parlor-library kitchen is transformed into a dining-room. The oak table top, which we now observe hanging upon the inside of one of the doors, is removed and quickly adjusted to the top of the center table, and upon dollies placed upon its highly-polished surface the meal is soon invitingly placed. Supper out of the way, and a party of friends coming to spend the evening, the back-parlor-library-kitchen-dining-room is soon adjusted to its original condition and soon the merry party of friends are comfortably placed about the two roomy parlors.

After a delightful evening, the friends at last depart, and the back-parlor-library-kitchen-dining-room again undergoes a change. The gas log underneath the mantel, which has been sending out its warmth and cheer during the evening, for the night was cool, is extinguished and in obedience to the pressure on a button the mantel gracefully sweeps to the floor, revealing a bed, wide and comfortable. Should it chance at any time that a relative or friend come to spend the night, the front room can be transformed in the same manner. But it is time for us to withdraw and give my lady and her good man a chance to retire and secure needed rest.

The vest pocket flats of the cities certainly have their advantages.

YALE'S HALE STATUE.

Mr. Partridge Has Worked Six Years Upon a Noble Figure for the College Green.

Away up on the top of the United Charities building, says the New York Press, ten stories in the air, William Ordway Partridge has in his studio the complete statue of Nathan Hale, a figure that is in some respects one of the most distinguished works created by an American sculptor. In so far as the sculptor's actual labor is concerned it represents six years' toil, but he had begun to think of the statue some time before the year 1897 (when it was actually begun) at the suggestion of several of the alumni of Yale, who were desirous of presenting to their alma mater a statue of the patriot, himself a graduate of that university, of the class of 1778.

HALE STATUE FOR YALE.
(Designed and Executed by William Ordway Partridge.)

The statue, which is of heroic size, represents the young patriot on his way to the scaffold. His head is held high and in his eyes is the expression of a man who is oblivious to the jeers of the mob gathered to witness the execution of a spy.

In his original sketch of the statue Mr. Partridge had his figure standing at the foot of the scaffold. That it was changed to its present state—that of a forward motion, suggesting action without fatiguing the eye—is due to a beautiful thought of Phillips Brooks. He was looking at the first sketch in the sculptor's studio one day when he said that "a man does not remain all his life at a university but passes on to something higher and more worthy of his powers," and so the suggestion of motion in the figure typifies that thought as well as the story of the patriot's heroism. Since no portrait of Hale exists, Mr. Partridge built up his ideal of the face in a manner that is an evidence of the thoroughness with which he works. Acting on the principle that men of one epoch bear a general resemblance to one another, he studied the colonial type faithfully, and used in connection with this type the mask of a Yale student who was much after Hale's manner of thought and purpose in life. The statue is of bronze and will be mounted on a pedestal three feet six inches high. The cost will be about $20,000.

THE ISLAND OF IONA.

It Is to Become the New Home of the French Carthusians.

A Little Sketch of This Odd Corner of the World That Is Filled with Brave Relics of Sacred Associations.

A London calbegram says that the French Carthuseans, who were recently expelled from the monastery of the Grande Chartreuse in France, have succeeded in completing a bargain with the Duke of Argyle for the purchase of Iona, "The Blessed Isle," in the Hebrides, with the condition that the sacred and historical associations of the island be preserved. Perhaps this order might search far and wide and find no refuge more appropriate than this little dot of land off the west coast of Scotland, and it may be taken for granted that the isle's sacred and historical associations will not suffer at their reverent hands.

The isle of Iona is very small—about 3½ miles long and a mile and a quarter wide—but its worn out soil is fairly surcharged with historical interest. In ancient times, so the story goes, when the Druids were driven from Scotland they retired at last to this isle and there continued with their sacred rites and ceremonies. But the isle was consecrated to the cause of Christianity in 565 when one of the kings of the picts of north Scotland gave the spot to Columba, a relative of Scottish and Irish kings, in acknowledgement of his religious zeal among their people. Columba landed at the island in a wicker boat with 12 disciples, in a little bay that is still called the "Haven of the Wicker Boat;" and after having the boat that no one might return in the event of homesickness, he built a monastery that came to be regarded as the mother church of the picts. From this isle Christianity was first introduced into Scotland and the north of England.

A curious legend declares that when St. Columba was building his walls, his daily labor was destroyed each night by the arch fiend who scattered to the ground all the stones the pious monks had been at such trouble to pile up. St. Columba was in a sad dilemma, but after many prayers he was told in a vision that he must bury alive some volunteer among his followers. Later, says the legend, when Columba went as a pilgrim to the tomb, he found that a strange miracle had been performed, that the corpse was fresh and undecaying.

When Columba had completed his work of erecting the holy structure which he built in the isle he gave the isle the name Icolmkill, or the Isle of Columba of the Cell.

Legendary lore would add this incident as indicating the strictness of his purpose: Close to Iona there is a little rock isle called "Wives Island." It is said that Columba became at one time disturbed in his devotions by the repeated contentions of the feminine portion of his population and that he suddenly banished all the women and cows to this barren place.

Columbia died in 597. After his death the monks suffered expulsion from the pictish kings. Pirates overran the island and the Norsemen several times ravaged it. Its history from that time until the seventeenth century is a story of various rebuildings, pilgrimages of kings, disputes among bishroplics as to jurisdiction, and various religious re-generations at the hands of monks and nuns who made the isle their headquarters. In 1617 James VI. placed the monastery under the bishopric of Argyl and in 1631 Charles I. commanded the ruins to be restored. During all of these centuries the isle was regarded as a sanctified place and the bodies of kings were taken there for burial. It is said that 40 Scottish kings, two Irish kings, two Norwegian princes and numberless others of royal blood and high rank are interred in "The Blessed Isle." That the island came to be regarded as peculiarly a burial ground may be gathered from the fact that Duncan I. and his murderer Macbeth, of Shakespeare's tragedy, was interred at "Colm-kill." Among the famous ruins of the island are the Cathedral, the Nunnery, the St. Oran's chapel and various ancient crosses and tombstones. It is doubtful, however, if any of these rank with the half fabled time of Columba; they are the structures erected by enthusiasts of the eleventh century.

Iona to-day is one of the many odd spots, with an historical heritage, which tourists delight to visit. To the latter it has an added interest because of the visit made to the isle by the great Dr. Johnson and his faithful private chronicler, Boswell, and the literary work which resulted therefrom. The few inhabitants of Iona do a little fishing and a little tilling of the ground, but depend chiefly for their support upon the money left by tourists.

MILTON MARKS.

THE HACKNEY HORSE.

A Type in Equine Flesh That Brings Top Prices.

Build and Action of the Genuine—How to Distinguish the Good and Bad in This Class of Horse.

Many a man admires a horse, and yet cannot tell anything exact about the style and conformation which pleases him. What is it that makes one horse worth $1,500 and another worth $100, though they are all the same age, size and weight? The horseman explains the situation in the words "conformation" and "action."

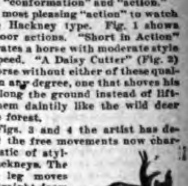
The most pleasing "action" to watch is the Hackney type. Fig. 1 shows two poor actions. "Short in Action" illustrates a horse with moderate style and speed. "A Daisy Cutter" (Fig. 2) is a horse without either of these qualities in any degree, one that shoves his feet along the ground instead of lifting them daintily like the wild deer of the forest.

In Figs. 3 and 4 the artist has depicted the free movements now characteristic of stylish Hackneys. The front leg moves out straight from the shoulder, while the foot turns up easily until it nearly reaches the inside of the shoulder at the finish of each stride. The rear action the truest type is that shown in Fig. 4. The angles are graceful in motion, free and easy, and the propulsive power great. It is this action which makes the typical and true Hackney, and makes of such horses the ready sellers which they are in every market where stylish horseflesh is appreciated.



As a general rule there are more animals defective in the hock than in their fore action, and many a promising youngster has been relegated to the wrong side of the post just because he failed in this, the primary feature of a harness horse. The reason why so much importance has been attached to good action, on the part of the breeder, is that good-looking horses with no action are a drug on the market, while a mean horse with no showy qualities beyond his action can always find a purchaser at a good price. It is action that sells. A hunting man, of course, regards true Hackney action as a thing to be avoided, but then the characteristics and the purpose of the two types of animals are so much at variance that his views have been molded in a different school.

In Fig. 5 two defective styles are shown. One of the commonest defects of Hackney action is that of going wide. Apart altogether from its unsightliness, it is evident that the animal which does not keep its hocks close together has neither the propulsive power, nor are his legs calculated to stand the wear and tear of ordinary work for a lengthened period. Where this weakness is very pronounced, it is frequently the result of internal trouble. Another defect which is sometimes seen is what is known as the cow hock (Fig. 6); it is most unsightly when the animal is in a standing position. It is not, however, such a serious defect as the open hock, yet it very materially lowers the animal's chances in good company. The artist has sketched one or two other positions, and by a simple diagram shows how the correct angle of the hind legs (Fig. 7) may be ascertained.

The conformation of the horse has a great deal to do with the perfection or otherwise of its movements, and the horse, which is narrow in front and turns its toes (Fig. 6) in can never be expected to make a perfect Hackney action. Many a notable animal, which has figured prominently in prize lists, has suffered from this physical defect, which has just been sufficiently apparent to prevent entry into the first flight in the show ring. Conversely the animal which turns its toes out is invariably open at the knees in his action, and that is a very ungainly and reprehensible characteristic.

The Hackney is a beautiful animal, and is rapidly gaining ground as a show animal. Besides, a perfect Hackney will do excellent road work in spite of his flourishes, since there must be range as well as height in the action in order to satisfy modern ideals.

Mayor Seymour, of Bayonne, says he likes our fire department. Well, we like it ourselves.

An exchange asks, "When is a man drunk?" Taking advantage of a legal right, we decline to answer.

A correspondent asks the editor of the Perth Amboy Chronicle when a parson's head stops growing. According to one authority it is on "the cold gray dawn of the morning after."

Turf records are being smashed right and left at Sheepshead, Brighton and other tracks this year. The remarkable feats of Waterboy and Africander have astonished the race goers.

The expenditure of $2,500 for a proposed boulevard in North Plainfield appears unwarranted when there are so many important improvements to be made. Better use the $2,500 in the proposed sewage system work.

"Effective window dressing may induce people who are passing a store to enter it, but good newspaper advertising frequently brings customers to a store who had never even heard of it till they read the advertisement."

Congressman Fowler told the Minnesota Bankers' Association the other day that "if all the farmers and farm laborers and small storekeepers were accustomed to the use of checks, there would be no use for any currency expansion in this country." Who would have thought it?

Samuel S. Swackhamer has leaped into prominence since his appearance on the floor of the Legislature as the Assemblyman from old Old Somerset County. The old leaders did not seem to take him seriously at first, but after his display of ability as a debator and orator they commenced to think. In fact all the other members of the lower house commenced the practice of thinking twice before they spoke for fear that the lanky Assemblyman from Somerset would catch them. Now the Democratic leaders are looking about for a desirable candidate for the gubernatorial nomination and would you believe it that man Swackhamer has already been trotted out. There is no question that he would make a good run when once the voting public became acquainted with him.

The press mentions James E. Martine as a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Although a member of the minority party in Union County, the election returns in the past have demonstrated the "the farmer-orator's" strength as a vote getter and his popularity has not waned in the least. People who know him, admire Martine for his loyalty and aggressiveness. Since the time when he made his first speech many years ago until this day he has worked assiduously for the success of his party and what reward has he received? True it is that at the last State convention he received a complimentary vote for the gubernatorial nomination. On previous occasions he has also been named when there was little or no chance of success. The "farmer-orator" is abreast of the times and were he governor of New Jersey the State would have as chief executive a man of fearlessness, honesty and progressiveness.

The sooner the North Plainfield Council remedies the deplorable condition of the police department the better it will be for that community, which has been without sufficient police protection for a long time. There is only one solution and we advise the borough fathers to lose no time in adopting it. Increase the salaries. It is idle to think that capable men can be obtained to perform the required duties, when the salaries are as low as generally paid laborers. No man wishes to earn a living by patrolling streets at night, when he is able to obtain more congenial employment by day. All that the marshals get now is $50 a month and the chief receives but $65. There is no reason why the men in the borough's department should not be given a salary equivalent paid to the policemen in this city. Their work is just as exacting. Here the lowest salary paid a patrolman is $90 and is is benefitted by a graduated scale, receiving at the end of a certain time $95. We suggest that the borough marshals be given $65 a month at least. As for the chief there should be an increase in his salary as well and $75 is none too much for the work he has to perform.

The Board of Managers of the New Jersey State Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick has awarded contracts for the rebuilding of the State Laboratory, which was partially destroyed by fire in April.

Results of Weekly Competitions—Hillside Finals to be Played This Week—Sangsted Made the Best Score for Golf Committee Cup.

PARK CLUB.

The thunder shower early Saturday afternoon had an effect on the attendance at the Park Golf Club course, where competition for the President's and Park Golf Club cups were continued. For the President's cup, Dr. H. K. Carroll won highest honors, Herbert S. Rogers second and Rev. C. L. Goodrich third. For the other cup, scratch event, Morgan T. Townsend increased his lead by taking first place and a total of 15 points, with second and third honors going to Herbert S. Rogers and Wm. deL. R. Anderson. The downpour of rain thoroughly soaked the course, making it rather slow. The scores:

Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 103, 28—75; Herbert S. Rogers, 96, 17—79; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 100, 18—82; Wm. deL. R. Anderson, 98, 5—98; Morgan T. Townsend, 90, plus 4—94; Gus. Faber, 99, 1—98.

HILLSIDE.

Interest centred chiefly in the play for club championship honors on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course, Saturday afternoon. The semi-finals were played by the survivors of the eight. Frank O. Reinhart beat C. Westley Abbott, 4 up and 2 to play, and Robert Abbott beat Dudley H. Barrows, 3 up.

The survivors of the second eight for the consolation cup also played the semi-finals, when Leighton Calkins beat H. D. Hibbard, 5 up and 4 to play and Walter Peterson beat H. R. Stockton, 3 up and 2 to play. The semi-finals played by those left out of the third eight resulted in Arthur Murphy winning from L. L. Tweedy by default and Dr. R. VanD. Hedges beating Morris J. Dumont, 1 up. The finals will be played off this week.

In the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup some good scores were made. Olaf Sangstad won first honors while Walter Peterson and Robert Abbott secured the two and one points respectively. The scores:

Olaf Sangstad, 87, 18—75; Walter Peterson, 85, 9—76; Robert Abbott, 75, 1—77; H. G. Henderson, 110, 30—80; Leighton Calkins, 95, 5—83; H. D. Hibbard, 97, 12—85; Julius Erickson, 108, 18—85, G. T. VanBokkeveb, 98, 13—86; E. R. Shoemaker, 106, 20—86; E. E. Reinhart, 113, 18—94.

DECLINES CALL.

Rev. L. R. Howard Decides to Remain as Pastor of Hope Memorial Chapel.

It was learned Sunday at Hope Chapel that the pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard, had received a call to engage in mission work in New Mexico, to engage in the work given up by a relative who has gone to another field. The call, which comes from the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, has been declined. Mr. Howard stated Sunday that he would remain in Plainfield, believing that his work is here for the present.

Mr. Howard's uncle, Gen. O. O. Howard, recently made an extended tour through New Mexico, visiting all the mission fields and afterward he wrote a series of articles for The Christian Herald, giving an interesting description of his trip. For some time past Mr. Howard's relatives have been interested in mission work in New Mexico. His congregation at Hope Chapel is pleased over his decision to remain in Plainfield.

MRS. POUND DEAD.

Wife of Edward D. Pound Passes Away Leaving a Husband and Three Children.

Mrs. Amelia Frances Pound, wife of Edward D. Pound, of 330 East Fifth street, died Saturday evening, following a protracted illness. She was born in Brooklyn, but had lived in Plainfield most of her life. She leaves a husband, two daughters and one son. Three brothers, L. E. Hart, of this city; Levi Hart, of Westfield, and Lebbeus Hart, of Jersey City, and three sisters, Mrs. Samuel Burr, of this city; Augusta and Emma Hart, of Asbury Park, also survive her.

Guests of Former Plainfielder.

John A. O'Keefe, J. R. Knowlton, A. E. Kenney, W. J. O'Keefe, Charles Ward, M. J. whalen J. J. Kenney, M. J. Cashin, Joseph O'Keefe and D. J. Carney, all of this city, were guests Sunday of John H. Hillman, formerly of this city, but now of Hillman's Cherry Grove, Flatbush, L. I. The guests were given a good time, the host making every effort to see that they suffered as little as possible from the heat. As souvenirs of the first annual outing, Mr. Hillman presented each guest with a card, suitably inscribed and to which was attached a miniature bucket of coal.

LAID TO REST.

Impressive Services Held Over the Remains of Mrs. Ellen Quass.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ellen Quass, widow of John Quass, who died Saturday, were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 at her late residence, 415 West Second street. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor-emeritus of the First Baptist Church, officiated. "Home Land" and "Some Time We'll Understand" were the hymns sung. The burial was at Hillside Cemetery. Moses Quass, Henry Nischwitz, Frederick Todd, Nathan Pennington and Patrick Lynch were the bearers.

America First.

The American rifle team, competing against teams representative of Great Britain, Canada, Natal, Norway, France and Australia, won the International match for the Palma trophy at Bisley, England, on Saturday. The Americans' aggregate score, out of a possible 1,800 over the 800, 900 and 1,000 yard ranges, was 1,570. That of the British team, which finished second, was 1,555.

Surprise Party.

A party of twenty-five young people from the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, tendered a surprise to Miss Ida Randolph at her home at Mt. Pleasant, Saturday evening. The evening was passed in a pleasant manner and before the party returned refreshments were served.

Champion Water Nymph.

The Asbury Park Evening Press says: "Miss Ida L. Spicer, of Plainfield, is the acknowledged champion water nymph of the bevy of young ladies staying at the Lakelyn."

When Two Equals One.

The marriage of Miss Mary Reynolds and James Block, both of the borough, will be celebrated at St. Joseph's Church on Tuesday, July 21.

Mr. McCutchen at Lake Placid.

Charles W. McCutchen and family, of Washington Park, accompanied by a party of twenty-one, have arrived at "Whiteface Inn," Lake Placid.

ALIS VICTORIOUS IN ELEVENTH INNING

Defeats Scotch Plains on the Latter's Grounds After a Hard Tussle.

ST. MARY'S VICTORIOUS

WESTFIELD'S AGGREGATION DEFEATS THE SUMMIT BALL TOSSERS.

Alis Wins by Score of 5 to 3 and St. Mary's Defeats New Brunswick Sixth Warders 8 to 2—Other Games.

It took Alis and Scotch Plains eleven heart-breaking innings to decide their fourth game of a series at Scotch Plains Saturday afternoon, Alis finally making good, 5 to 3. Considering the fact that the elements were against the game, it was one of the fastest ever played on the local diamond. For some time it looked as though the fans were to be disappointed on account of a wet diamond and outfield, but as the crowd began to arrive about 3 o'clock, it was decided to play ball. Every one expected to see a long game, which usually accompanies such conditions, but after the first inning, when Brogan threw the slippery sphere wild to third base, allowing two men to cross the plate, there were few mistakes. It was really a pitchers' battle, "Warry" MacLaughlin for Alis and Davis for the locals, dividing honors — Davis striking out out seven men to MacLaughlin's five, while Alis touched Davis for eleven hits and Scotch Plains found MacLaughlin for four hits. One of these was a two-base hit by Flannery in the second inning, when a pass to first together with three base hits, netted three runs.

Alis tied the score in their half of the sixth innings. Davis and Burt each made a safe hit and MacLaughlin followed with a hit to second base. Enright in fielding the ball to catch Davis at the plate threw low, and the score was tied. After that all effort to score was futile until Alis' half of the eleventh inning. Davis came up and fanned. Burt was given a free pass to first and MacLaughlin followed with a hot line fly to Enright, taking first to third base. Ledgerwood hit to third base. Williams threw low to Allen, who lost the ball around the bag, and Burt scored. Dupee sent a nice one to centre field and MacLaughlin scored. Kavanaugh flied out to Enright. Henriques struck out and the suspense was over. The locals tried hard to make good in their half of the eleventh, but failed, and Alis won out by a score of 5 to 3. This game makes the teams two to two in the series. The summary:

ST. MARY'S, 8; SIXTH WARD, 2.

Those who took chances on the weather and went to St. Mary's ball field, Saturday afternoon, saw a ball game that has been played in this city this season. The teams battled for nine innings on a sloppy field and Doyle's men got the game by 8 runs to 2 from the famous Sixth Ward baseball team, of New Brunswick. Pitcher Groom, imported from Brooklyn, managed to hold the Sixth Warders down to three hits. Worthley, who formerly played with Alis, covered third base for St. Mary's and showed up in great style, accepting every chance that offered. Many braved the storm to see the game, as a compliment to the old-time favorites, John Harkins and the Francis brothers. The summary:

HENRY W. CARPENTER DEAD

FORMER PLAINFIELDER A VICTIM OF THE HOT SPELL.

Found Dead in Bed Shortly After Midnight Sunday Morning—Funeral Monday Afternoon.

Many Plainfielders will recognize among the recent victims of the heat the name of Henry W. Carpenter, who was found dead in his bed at his hotel in New York City shortly after midnight Sunday morning. Mr. Carpenter came to Plainfield about 1880 and resided here until 1891, when he changed his residence to New York City.

When a young man Mr. Carpenter became identified with the business of insurance and was for about thirty years with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. A few years ago he was forced by ill health to resign his position as cashier of the ordinary department, and since then has spent much of his time in Ramsey, N. J. Death is supposed to have occurred from heart trouble, which had threatened for some years, made suddenly acute by the intense heat.

The funeral services were held Monday p. m. at 5:30 o'clock at the residence of his surviving son, Raymond V. Carpenter, of 33 Manning avenue. The dead man was fifty-seven years of age, and was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church.

CORRAL TRAMPS.

Councilman Lee Heads Police in Raiding Hoboes Camp in Borough.

Councilman Lee, of the Common Council, assisted by marshals and citizens made a rain on a hobo camp in North Plainfield last Sunday. Only three of twenty hobos were captured. The other tramps were tipped off by someone before the officers arrived and made good their escape.

A telephone message to the residence of Councilman Lee from a citizen living near Stony brook, called his attention to the fact that the tramps, located in the woods for the night, had committed petty thefts. Mr. Lee, Chief Marshal Campbell, Walter Smalley, Patrick Regan and several other citizens composed a posse which made a descent upon the camp which they found deserted save for three men who were lying on the ground intoxicated. They were brought to town and placed in the lockup.

Sale at the Inn.

Sheriff C. D. McMurtry, of Somerset County, is advertising for sale the furnishings at the Mountain Park Inn, in accordance with proceedings brought in the New Jersey Supreme Court by E. Frank Vail against the Mountain Park Land Company. The sale will be held Saturday afternoon, July 18, at 2 o'clock at the Mountain Park Inn, in the township of North Plainfield. The sale will include everything from iron bedsteads to silver forks.

A Fire Horse Improving.

The fire horse which was injured in the accident on Park avenue two months ago, and which has since been under Dr. Pocock's care, is now well enough to do fire duty again. He will be kept as an emergency horse for several weeks and will then, in all probability, be put back in the harness. He is the mate to the one recently sold by the department.

Funeral of Infant.

The funeral of William Edmond, the one-year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Edmonds, of 718 West Front street, who died Saturday afternoon was held last Monday. Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope Memorial Chapel, was in charge of the services. Interment was made in the M. E. Cemetery.

Burial of Mrs. Burke.

Mrs. Catherine Burke, wife of Richard Burke, died Saturday evening at her home, 410 East Fourth street, after a long illness. The funeral services were held Monday from St. Mary's Church, and she interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery.

THE HEALTH OFFICER MAKES ANNUAL REPORT

Facts and Figures Pertaining to Public Health During the Past Year.

TWO GREATEST NEEDS

SANITARY SURVEY AND MUNICIPAL CONTROL OF GARBAGE COLLECTION.

Births, Marriages and Deaths Recorded — Plumbing Requirements — The Milk Supply— Ice—Other Work.

The annual report of the Plainfield Board of Health for 1903 just issued indicates a healthy condition for the year. Included are the reports of Charles J. Fisk, president of the board, Fred. W. Dunn, the treasurer, and L. R. Thurlow, health officer.

Mr. Thurlow, in his report states that the two greatest needs of Plainfield at the present time are a thorough sanitary survey of the city and a municipal control of the collection and disposal of the garbage. Mr. Fisk announces that the total cost to the city for the care of the sick and the prevention of disease was $4,983.- 31. Of this sum, the hospital used $935.37; the care of the sick cost $3,346.53; and free vaccination involved a cost of $710.41.

In the vital statistics given by Mr. Thurlow, the death rate for the year is estimated at 16.06 per thousand of the population of 16,000. This is about the usual rate, a slight decrease form the rate of 16.94 for the preceding year. There were 257 deaths during the year, forty-five of infants, forty of persons from one to twenty years of age, fifty from twenty to forty years, forty-eight from forty to sixty, and seventy-four over sixty.

The total number of births reported during the year was 311, of which 271 were white, and forty colored. The birth rate per thousand of the population is 19.44, an excess of 3.38 over the death rate. Twenty-three still births were recorded, ten of males and thirteen of females, giving the low rate per thousand of 1.44.

The marriages for the year numbered 134, 115 of whites and 19 of colored people, a rate of 8.37 per thousand. 189 cases of communicable diseases were reported with 57 deaths resulting. There were fourteen cases of small pox. Mr. Thurlow reported very strongly of the favorable results of vaccination.

In the matter of plumbing, Mr. Thurlow announces that in future all master and foremen plumbers will be held under a bond of $200 and required to provide a smoke test on completed plumbing systems as well as a water test as at present.

During the year there were 229 complaints of nuisances of which 195 were abated. The ice supply, Mr. Thurlow states, proved most satisfactory. It comes from four sources, Watchung Lake, South Plainfield Pond, which is to be abandoned as an ice pond, Lake Hopatcong and the Hygeia or artificial ice. Of milk, there are about 6,000 quarts sold daily by sixty-one retailers supplied in turn by eight-eight dairies. A thorough system of inspection has been instituted upon. The city water is of a most excellent quality. The revision of the sanitary code was an important feature of the year's work, among the improvements not already mentioned being a regulation governing tenement houses and the requiring of all milk dealers to take out permits.

The pamphlets is illustrated by halftones showing conditions at the time of examinations. The Plainfield Isolation Hospital, rubber suits used when handling small pox patients, bacteria in milk and dairy barns are the subjects pictured. The report is now ready for distribution.

All From Seminary.

The pulpit supply at the Crescent Avenue Church, Sunday, will be Rev. Dr. Francis Brown, of the Union Theological Seminary. He will also preach at both services on Sunday, July 26. Since Rev. Dr. Richards left the church four of the pulpit supplies have come from the Union Theological Seminary. The first was Rev. Thomas C. Hall and later Rev. Dr. Frame. The supply for August will be Rev. Dr. George Williams from the same seminary.

Improving Road Bed.

The roadbed of West Sixth street, west of Grant avenue, is being put in condition by the city force of workmen after the work done by the sewer contractor. The street had been in a bad condition and the residents of the locality are thankful for the action of the city.

Germans' Outing.

The German Benevolent Society held its annual outing at Veilant's farm on Rahway road Sunday. There were seventy people at the place. The day was spent in bowling, fishing, and in various other pastimes.

PROPERTY DEAL IN THE PARK

PURCHASE OF TRACT TO BE DIVIDED INTO BUILDING LOTS.

Piece of Ground on West End and Rockview Avenues, Making a Total of Sixteen Acres.

Percival S. Brown and Carlos C. Galley have purchased sixteen one-half acres of desirable property lying along West End and Rockview avenues in the borough, from the DeKlyne state and will divide it into 50 foot building lots.

This property is intended to answer the requirements of those who desire to own their own homes, at moderate cost, within easy access of their business, yet do not care to be located in the vicinity of the factories with the attending inconveniences.

The elevation is high, giving a view of the mountains, a full sweep of the breeze from the West, and insuring drainage. The handsome nearby homes, exclusively residential character of the neighborhood and freedom from nuisances of all description, together with the close proximity to Grant Avenue station and the varied business interests of Plainfield's West End, are among the features of the tract. The man of modest means to obtain an ideal home, at a moderate price, in a section of the borough which has hitherto been considered accessible only to the well-to-do.

Maple and Willow avenues are to be extended through the tract and an avenue sixty feet in width, running parallel with West End avenue, has been dedicated along the western boundary of the land.

NEW SUPERINTENDENTS.

Six to be Chosen by State Board of Education in October.

The quarterly meeting of the State Board of Education will be held at Trenton in October. At that time the Board will elect county superintendents for Bergen, Essex, Monmouth, Morris, Passaic and Salem counties. The Board's committee on education will meet in September to examine applicants for superintendents in the counties named.

Under a recent interpretation of the school law the Board has decided that the application for a superintendent need not necessarily be made by nor be given to the resident of the county, but that the applicant may be a resident of any other county. The essential qualification of the applicant under the new interpretation is that he be the holder of a New Jersey teacher's certificate.

CHURCH DECORATION.

Holy Cross Edifice Being Improved —Services Are Now Held in the Parish House.

Owing to the extensive repairs to the interior of the Church of the Holy Cross of North Plainfield, it has become necessary to hold all services in the parish house. It has been discovered that the entire ceiling of the church was so weakened as to make a new one necessary. At the completion of this work some redecorating will be done.

The work will probably consume several weeks and services in the church building will probably not be resumed until after the first of the month.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

Miss Florence Mabel Thompson to be Bride of A. Mulford in the Fall.

Friends of Miss Florence Mabel Thompson, of Prospect place, learned today of the engagement to Armstrong Mulford, of East Fifth street. The bride-to-be is cashier at Woodhall & Martin's department store and Mr. Mulford is engaged in the real estate business on North avenue. Both are well known. The wedding date has been set for the late fall.

Journeymen Plumbers Here.

The monthly meeting of the New Jersey Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters' helpers, of the Union Association, was held in this city on Sunday, when eighteen representatives from the various local Unions were present. Nothing but routine business was considered. The next meeting will be held at Jersey City on Sunday, August 9.

PARASITE DISCOVERED TO KILL MOSQUITO

Agamomermis Culicis is the Name of the Pesky Creature's Destroyer.

SMITH FINDS SPECIMENS

EXAMINED BY DR. STILES OF U. S. HEALTH AND MARINE SERVICE.

Destroyer Will be Used in Marshy Districts as Soon as it Can be Propagated Inexpensively— Service Already Done.

Dr. Charles Wardell Stiles, of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, discoverer of the parasite in Uncinaria Americana, especially known as the hook worm, or "germ of laziness," has called attention to another discovery in the parasite world, which is considered by government savants as of the greatest importance.

This is the discovery and isolation of what Dr. Stiles has named the Agamomermis culicis, otherwise known as "the mosquito destroyer," a parasite which kills millions of mosquitoes each year and which, it is believed, under artificial propagation, will prove the surest by any means known of ridding infested communities of these pests.

The experiments by Dr. Stiles have resulted in entire success. The parasite has been discovered and isolated. The right of the parasite to its common title of "mosquito destroyer" has been established. All that now remains to be done by Dr. Stiles and his associates is to discover a rapid and inexpensive manner of propagating the parasites in sufficient number for general use in marshes, ponds and localities infested with the insects. The "mosquito destroyer" will do the rest.

Certain forms of intestinal parasites had previously been found in mosquito larvae in India, Italy and Spain, but none had been discovered in American mosquitoes until Professor John B. Smith, of Rutgers College, who is State entomologist of New Jersey, forwarded to Dr. Stiles for examination two worms taken from the abdominal cavity of New Jersey mosquitoes. One specimen was found only in addition to 50 of use for study, but Dr. Stiles determined that both specimens were larval round worms, belonging to mermis or parasmermis. Dr. Stiles christened the parasite "agamomermis culicis."

From what has already been learned, it is apparent that, were it not for this natural enemy of the mosquito, the pests would breed unchecked in such numbers as to make certain sections of the country almost uninhabitable in certain periods of the year.

It is admitted by Dr. Stiles and other government scientists that considerably more difficulty will be experienced in propagating the "mosquito destroyer" in sufficient numbers for general use than was involved in distributing the parasite of "the grasshopper plague" throughout the farming sections of the West. When the researches with regard to the newly discovered parasite have proceeded as far, and the expense of propagating the "mosquito destroyer" has been reduced to the minimum, it is considered very possible that the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service will take an active part in practically exterminating mosquitoes in the United States.

CLERKS INSTALL.

Officers-Elect of Retail Clerks' Association Were Installed by Past President.

Past President A. C. Hoagland last night installed in their respective chairs these newly elected officers of the Retail Clerks Association: President, H. P. Greenwood; first vice president, Casper Waglow; second vice president, W. E. Baker; guide, George Ayres; chaplain, J. R. Sutton; recording secretary, Griffith Jenkins; financial secretary, Charles H. Green; treasurer, W. D. Williams; guardians, Edward Baker; trustee, J. Strobel.

The final arrangements for the trolley ride to Riverside Park Thursday night were made. Three special cars will leave the Watchung avenue terminus at 7 o'clock and will go to the park without change. Reserved seats have been provided at the theatre and dancing will be enjoyed after the performance.

At the close of the meeting the members adjourned to Warnock's where ice cream was enjoyed.

Miss Nellie Messinger, of North avenue, will start next week on a fortnight's vacation.

Albert Cowling, of The Daily Press composing room, is spending a few days at Asbury Park.

Miss Young, of Newark, has returned home after a visit with Miss Brower, of Traeil Court.

FALL FROM LADDER KILLS JOHN DENTZ

While Climbing a Ladder at Sterling Boroughits Loses Balance and is Fatally Hurt.

SON SEES THE ACCIDENT

A WIFE, THREE SONS AND THREE DAUGHTERS SURVIVE HIM.

Dentz's Occupation That of a Mason —Fifty-Three Years of Age and is Well-Known in the Community.

While at work on a building at Stirling Tuesday John A. Dentz, of Summit avenue, North Plainfield, fell from a ladder and was killed. His son, Frank, who was at work near him, rushed to the assistance of his father but in spite of all efforts to revive him he did not regain consciousness and died in an hour.

The man was at work on the De Pew building at Stirling and was mounting the ladder with some tools in his hand. When near the top of the building his son saw him waver and then drop his tools. He seemed to make a frantic effort to keep his hold on the ladder but instead, plunged headlong to the ground below. He struck on his head, fracturing his skull, and died without regaining consciousness.

The dead man is survived by his wife and three sons and three daughter. They are: Franklin, Robert and Howard and Carrie, Lula and Lottie. He was 53 years of age.

JOHN KEELY'S HARD LUCK

STREET SPRINKLING CONTRACTOR ALREADY LOSES TWO HORSES.

Animals Overcome by Heat While Drawing Sprinkling Carts Through Streets.

Two heavy draught horses owned by John Keely, died Tuesday, overcome by the heat. The horses were used to draw one of the city's sprinkling wagons, and fell in their tracks after they had completed their day's work. They were taken to their stables where they died.

The horses had just been purchased by Mr. Keely. One had been in the harness for him three-quarters of a day and the other a day and a half. They were valued at $235.

Mr. Keely reports everything satisfactory in the sprinkling department. All the streets in the city are sprinkled at least twice a day with a very few exceptions in the case of streets little used, and all the main business streets are sprinkled four times a day.

LITERARY.

The Outlook Company has in preparation a notable work by John D. Long, ex-Secretary of the Navy, which will be published this fall under the title "The New American Navy." It will be issued in two volumes, and will deal with the history of our navy before, during and after the war with Spain; will tell of the preparation which made its wonderful achievements, of the Spanish fleet possible; of the great actions in Manila Harbor and Santiago; and of the building up of an effective and worthy navy still going on. It will be fully illustrated.

"DR." WOODS KEEPS POLICE ON THE ALERT

Generally Believed That Fugitive Former Plainfielder is in Canada.

POSSIBLY IN BUFFALO

COL. BEST'S BODY EMBALMED WHEN SEEN BY SON.

Detectives From California on Way With Warrants and Extradition Papers—Mrs. Wood's Conflicting Stories.

It is believed by relatives of the dead man that Dr. John D Woods and his wife, for whom the police of several cities are hunting to answer a charge of stealing property belonging to Colonel William J. Best, who died suddenly in their home, in San Rafael, California, are now in Canada.

This is due to the fact that a letter written to the editor of a newspaper in Easton, Pa., by Mrs. Woods, was mailed in Buffalo on Friday. It was written on the paper of a hotel in Niagara Falls.

One of Colonel Best's sons, Alfred M. Best, yesterday telegraphed to the Chief of Police of Buffalo that a detective from San Rafael was expected here daily with warrants and with extradition papers. Woods was arrested in Olean thirteen years ago on a charge of bigamy, preferred against him by the woman who is now with him.

Alfred M. Best denies that any autopsy had been ordered by his brother William, and added that when his brother reached San Rafael from Seattle his father's body had been embalmed and was in the casket.

According to Mr. Best, Mrs. Woods' statement that Colonel Best had given the keys which he and her husband are accused of stealing to their daughter is the third version she has given of this matter. Mrs. Woods' letter was written on paper of the Imperial Hotel, at Niagara Falls. But the register of that hotel shows that if Dr. Woods and his wife stopped there they must have given an assumed name.

AMUSEMENTS.

Fred Stone, who plays the Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz," has to stand motionless for eighteen minutes at a stretch, perched upon a pole in a cornfield, while a scene is taking place in the foreground. The eyes of the audience are constantly upon him and he must not move a muscle of his face or body or the illusion would be destroyed. His outstretched arms are supported by a cross piece nailed to the pole, and during the first performance of "The Wizard of Oz" both of Stone's arms went to sleep and when Dorothy came to take him from the pole he really needed her support until he could restore the circulation.

Shows come and shows go, but "The Runaways" is going to fill out the time originally set for that magnificent production at the Casino, and, from present indications, with flying colors. Charles Dox, the elongated comedian of long experience and many hits, has replaced John D. Gilbert in the eccentric role of Dr. Fleecem and adds considerably to the fun and smoothness of the performances. He is a most able assistant to Messrs. Arthur Dunn, Alexander Clark, William Gould and the other popular favorites of "The Runaways." Miss Templeton continues to sing "Yes I'm the Same Little Girl," and "My Hindoo Belle" to the most enthusiastic applause and her striking imitations of Miss Lillian Russell and Mrs. Leslie Carter are the most talked about things in town. Van Rensselaer Wheeler and Miss Amelia Stone have a new duet in the first act, which the famous "Hiawatha" song in the second act, gives those capable singers two of the musical gems of the play.

One hundred and forty-two thousand, two hundred and thirty-two persons paid a dime to enter Luna Park on the Fourth of July, and not only has the average daily attendance been greater than that of the Pan-American Exposition, but the total admission for the same period of time is way ahead of that at Buffalo.

To Attend Reception.

Many members of St. Mary's choir will go to Cranford this evening to attend the reception which is to be given them by Rev. Father Westman. Dancing will be enjoyed in the hall at Roselle, the trip between Cranford and Roselle being made by trolley. The members of the choir will leave this city on the 7:15 car at the Watchung avenue terminus.

CORNERSTONE LAYING JULY 30

THE CEREMONIES AT UNION COUNTY'S FINE NEW BUILDING.

Most Worshipful Master Apgar and Former Governor Voorhees to Participate.

The laying of the cornerstone of the new court house at Elizabeth will take place Thursday morning, July 30, at 11 o'clock. The various preliminaries are being arranged as speedily as possible. The programme includes an escort of the Grand Lodge of Free Masons from the Kean building to the court house, headed by a band of music. The cornerstone will be laid by Most Worshipful Grand Master W. Holt Apgar, of Trenton, and former Governor Voorhees will deliver the oration.

Work on the building is slowly progressing. The granite was of the basement facing Rahway avenue is up, and the heavy steel girders for the flooring on that side are being raised to position.

The work of laying the big granite blocks is being pushed as rapidly as circumstances will permit. Not a block of stone has as yet been laid on the northerly side or front, and from what can be ascertained it will be some days yet before there will be any laid.

The cornerstone will be laid on the southeast corner of the front. The stone, so far as can be learned, is not as yet on the ground, but will be when needed.

Stone is slowly arriving, though not in any great quantity. Whether there will be any stoppage in its delivery owing to the contractor having failed, as recently stated in The Daily Press, it is as yet impossible to say.

AFTER THE TROLLEY COMPANY

FREEHOLDERS STOP CARS ON THE M. AND S. TRACTION CO. LINE.

Temporary Injunction Has Been Obtained—A Fight Over Bridge Repairs.

The Freeholders of Middlesex County threaten to tie up the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company, which operates trolley lines in and around New Brunswick, and Willard P. Voorhees, the company's counsel, applied to Vice Chancellor Stevens Monday for an order restraining them from doing so. In making his application Mr. Voorhees read a bill and affidavits, which represented that the Freeholders, some years ago, granted the company the right to run its cars over the bridge which spans the canal and Raritan river at Albany street, New Brunswick, on condition that the company should keep the planking of the bridge and the asphalt approaches in repair.

The company and the Freeholders have split on the question of repair. Mr. Voorhees showed that on June 27 the Freeholders tied the company up for several hours by turning the draw a few inches so that the tracks were disconnected in such a way that the cars could not use them, while pedestrians and vehicles could pass over the bridge without any inconvenience, and said that the Freeholders threatened to do the same thing tomorrow.

The Vice Chancellor gave Mr. Voorhees an order requiring the Freeholders to show cause why they should not be permanently restrained from stopping the cars. The order is returnable July 26 and in the mean time the Freeholders are enjoyed from taking the threatened action.

The Night Was Dark.

The electric lights in that section of the town bounded by Carlton avenue, Kensington avenue, Franklin place and Watchung avenue were plunged in darkness last night through the breaking of an electric light wire. A telephone call was sent in over the new Gamewell system to police headquarters and the company was notified by Sergeant Frederickson.

Dr. Walter B. Probasco, of Chicago, who has been visiting his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Probasco, leaves today for the south where he will spend the summer.

CENTRAL'S BRIDGE OVER NEWARK BAY

Chief Engineer Osgood's Description of the New Span.

ROLLING LIFT TYPE

CONSISTS OF TWO SPANS, WORKED INDEPENDENTLY OR TOGETHER.

How Lifts When Open Will Stand 150 Feet in the Air—How the Work is Being Done.

At the dinner given to Joseph O. Osgood, chief engineer of the New Jersey Central Railroad, by the engineers of Plainfield and North Plainfield, in this city, the other evening, Mr. Osgood gave an excellent description of the building operations now going on at the new Newark bay bridge of that railroad. At the time The Daily Press was able to speak only briefly of his address.

Of the engineering work now being done on the line of the Jersey Central the Newark bay bridge was, Mr. Osgood said, of particular interest. The old bridge has carried the traffic of the railroad safely for fifteen years and is still able to carry the increased loads at a reduced speed. Need of a new bridge has, however, been felt for some time. The new bridge is of the rolling lift type, quite different from anything in this neighborhood at present, but, similar to those being used with success in other parts of the country. It will consist of two spans, each 120 feet long which may be operated independently or together. These will each provide for a clear channel of 85 feet instead of 75 feet as at present.

The Central has encountered various difficulties in erecting this bridge. It was necessary to keep the old bridge in operation while the construction of the new was going on. Then, as the Central has four tracks at each end of the bridge, it is probable that it will eventually be necessary to enlarge the new bridge to accommodate four tracks; in planning the construction this had to be kept in mind. The rolling lift bridge is so planned that while it will be made for only two tracks now it will be comparatively easy to build a similar bridge alongside making room for four and eventually for six if necessary. To build a bridge of the present style it would have been necessary to erect a temporary bridge and draw to operate while the new was being constructed. By building slightly to the west of the present structure it is possible to erect a new bridge without disturbing the traffic through the draw. The westerly span is to be entirely west of the present draw making it possible to tear down one side of the old structure and build the new one. When this is completed it will be used as a simple bridge until the easterly span can be constructed and then both will be operated as originally intended.

Mr. Osgood gave a very interesting account of the buildings of the founda-tion and the difficulties there encountered. Piles were driven and sawed off just above the mud with a circular saw attached horizontally to the pile driver. They were floored over with a grillage four feet thick, the work being done with the assistance of a coffer dam. The pier was then built of concrete inside of the casing. The work has been going along without any hitch and Mr. Osgood reported that four piers had already been built. No steel was used below water in the construction of the concrete piers on account of the possible action of salt water. As a special precautionary measure salt water was used for mixing the concrete up to the low water mark. The concrete used is composed of one part Atlas cement, three parts sand, and five parts of 1½ inch broken stone. The bridge is so designed that under the heaviest possible load, which is hardly probable to happen, it will not be greater than 14 tons to each pile.

The two lifts when open will stand 150 feet in the air but they will be so counter weighted that they will go up and down without trouble. When small craft desire to pass through the draw, unlike the present arrangement it will only be necessary to lift the span slightly. There will be no direct connection between the spans and the steel plates on which they rest, but they will simply be laid down by their weight. There will, however, be holes in the bottom of the bridge, in which will fit projecting pieces in the plate below.

Mr. Osgood described briefly a number of little questions of interest which had come up already during the course of the work. The bridge men, he said, had arrived and were ready to put up the false work to support the new bridge.

The power house will be located on the central tower, above the track, and can operate one side or both. At either end the lift is to be supported on heavy steel girders. It was difficult, Mr. Osgood explained, to tell how long it would take to complete the bridge as there were many questions which would undoubtedly come up during the course of the work which may delay it. The first span is to ready, according to contract, September 1, and he intimates that the chances were that it would be in order about that time.

BATTLE MONUMENT UNVEILING

ARRANGEMENTS FOR PUBLIC EXERCISES ON ANTIETAM BATTLEFIELD.

Surviving Members of New Jersey Troop Engaged in Fight to Be There.

The unveiling of the State monument at Antietam is to take place September 17, and the Legislature has appropriated $7,000 to pay the transportation of the surviving veterans of the First Brigade, Hexamer's Battery, and the Thirteenth Regiment, which were the New Jersey troops in the fight. The appropriation, however, is for transportation only, and the commissioners are puzzling over the question of how to lodge and feed the veterans, of whom there are estimated to be about 500 living in the State.

What makes the problem difficult is that there are not hotels on the battlefield and none at Sharpsburg, the nearest railroad station, capable of furnishing accommodations for so many men. Two plans have been proposed. One of these is to make the trip in special Pullman trains, in which the excursionists can eat and sleep on the trip. The other is to leave New Jersey in the morning, reaching Hagerstown in the evening, and staying there over night, returning to Sharpsburg in the morning and driving to the battlefield, and then, after the dedication, returning to Gettysburg at night and spending the next day there. The veterans will have to pay all their own expenses except transportation, and others will be given a special excursion rate covering all the cost of the trip.

TOY PISTOL CAUSES DEATH

FRED HANSEN SUCCUMBS AS A VICTIM OF LOCKJAW.

Fred Hansen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hansen, of 738 Webster place, died at Muhlenberg Hospital Friday noon, from lockjaw. On Fourth of July young Hansen was playing with a toy pistol. While shooting blank cartridges he sustained an injury to his left hand. It was not considered serious at the time, although the usual home remedies were applied to the wound.

The wound became so serious yesterday that the parent decided that the son should go to the hospital. Soon afterward lockjaw developed and despite all that was done for him, including the use of anti-toxin, the lad died today. Young Hansen was but eleven years of age.

GIRLS FOUGHT WELL.

They Actually Smothered Party of Marauding Youths.

Struggle Follows Efforts to Break Up a Nightgown Party Given by Co-Eds—Scanty Attire No Bar to the Attack.

The St. Paul (Minn.) correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean is authority for the statement that a dozen youths, students of Hamline college, the other night engaged in a close range struggle with the co-eds of the institution, clad in night gowns, and were compelled to retreat after they had been literally smothered in girls and pushed and pulled about in a most heartless manner by their fair opponents.

With the girls wearing their slumber robes, and the boys decked out in Indian and tramp costumes, the struggle was short and decisive.

It all arose over a nightgown banquet. The co-eds had been planning for weeks to enjoy themselves in a novel manner, and elaborate preparations had been made. The dining-room of Ladies' hall had been selected as the scene of festivities, and tables had been surreptitiously prepared. The greatest secrecy was maintained, but in some unaccountable way the boys learned of the affair and planned to raid the banquet hall.

Shortly before midnight the girls in flowing gay-times gathered in the lower hallway of Ladies' hall, and when all were present, marched silently and in a body to the dining-room.

A sight really shocking to the hungry co-eds met their eyes. A dozen young Indians and tramps were hurrying about the tables and helping themselves to the delicacies. Though outnumbered three to one, the marauders felt the strength of their position, and boldly continued their depredations. Many of the more timid of the girls tried to withdraw hastily, but their leaders were more aggressive, and, after a brief but exciting conference at the door, ordered their followers to charge the bold invaders.

And they charged. With a shout that awoke the enthusiasm of the most backward the girls set upon the thieves, and the fun and fighting began. The Indians and tramps seeing the futility of attempting to escape, hastily stowed away what loot they could in their pockets and turned at bay.

Their efforts were of no avail. The fury of the attack made by the amazonian phalanx was irresistible, and each boy found himself surrounded by a large and aggressive crowd of angry girls. The invaders were struck and jerked and pushed and pulled about the tables, and then thrown on their backs by the co-eds, who piled on top of them and held them powerless. The girls showed no mercy and their enemies asked none. One by one the boys were forced to disgorge their plunder, and one by one they were driven through the windows by which they had entered.

In the meantime the tumult had awakened the preceptress, who hurried to the dining-room to discover the cause. When she arrived she found a situation that was startling, to say the least. Almost every girl student residing at the hall was there. Flushed with victory and content with the signal defeat they had administered to the boys, they declared themselves ready to accept any punishment if allowed to proceed with the banquet.

The preceptress was lenient, and told the girls that they were the aggrieved parties. In order to give the nightgown party a semblance of legality, she permitted the festivities to proceed.

The next day the campus at Hamline college was the scene of a number of secret confidences by students discussing the affair. The Indians and tramps declare that they are not disheartened.

All Looking for the Dog.

A Parisian clothes dealer kicked a dog out of his shop. The dog shot out with some rapidity and knocked over a woman with a jug of milk. The woman broke the jug and upset an elderly gentleman, and the jug cut both of them. At that moment a cyclist arrived and was thrown off his machine by the prostrate figures and simultaneously a cart came up and smashed the bicycle. The magistrate blandly advised the entire squad to proceed against the dog and they are now looking for it.

TO PREVENT FRAUDS

ALLEGED OPERATING EXPENSES EAT UP PROFITS.

Was Passed on Recommendation of the Banking and Insurance Department—Its Provisions.

On the first of July, a very salutary law went into effect in New Jersey. It is intended to limit the amount of expenses which a building loan association can carry. The limit fixed for officers and clerical assistants in these institutions is one per cent. of their receipts. This law was passed at the recommendation of the Banking and Insurance department, which now has supervision of the building loan associations of the State.

It was found that there was a certain class of associations professing to do a building loan and practically a savings bank and insurance business which as the law stood could use up any amount of their deposits that they pleased in "expenses" and some of them were found to be virtually maintained for the purpose of furnishing a fat job in the way of salaries to a few men who were on the inside. The banking department had no power to interfere in this matter. The new law will cure this, and hereafter a building loan association that cannot make one per cent. of its receipts pay its working expenses will have to go out of business.

If this law had been in force several years ago it would have saved many thousands of dollars to depositors of humble means in Paterson and other cities who have by the temptation of high interest rates been deluded into putting their money into so-called "National" provident associations, and who, when these concerns, which every man that knows anything about business was sure had promised more than they could ever possibly perform, had to be wound up, found that even with those that were nearest solvency a large share of their deposits had been eaten up in operating "expenses," of which the management had full control and of which nobody outside knew anything.

TROPHY FOR MARKSMANSHIP

SENATOR DRYDEN OFFERS A PRIZE BRONZE BANNER.

To be Competed for Annually by State Military Organization Teams.

Jerseymen are greatly interested in the announcement that United States Senator John F. Dryden has offered a bronze banner costing $5,000 to be contested for annually by teams from State military organizations, the trophy to go to the team making the best record for marksmanship.

Senator Dryden, of New Jersey, by his official and personal acts has furnished the country two of the most valuable trophies ever contested for on the rifle range. It was through Mr. Dryden's personal and persistent efforts that the military committees of Congress last year agreed to insert a clause in the army appropriation bill authorizing for the first time "a national trophy, medals and other prizes to be provided for and contested for annually * * * by the army and National Guard or organized militia of the several States and territories and of the District of Columbia."

In addition to the trophy, Senator Dryden has arranged to give each year $350 as first and second money, to be divided between the members of the second and third teams in the annual contest for the possession of the prize.

The Dryden trophy, the design of which has just been completed by William Hayes, of Newark, who is also making the one for the federal government, is to be shot for on the range at Sea Girt, under the auspices of the New Jersey State Rifle Association.

It is to be of bronze, 5 feet 7 inches high, mounted on an ebony base 18 inches high, making a total height of about 7 feet.

AFTER FORTY YEARS.

Romance Begun During Civil War Finds Happy Ending.

Couple Became Estranged Over Trifling Matter, Parted and Did Not Meet Until Five Years Ago—Then Love Had Its Way.

Love that budded more than 40 years ago, then seemingly died and was forgotten, has come into full bloom after the lapse of all those years. Forgetting gray hairs and time-lined faces, remembering only the old courtship of nearly a half century agone, Capt. Joseph Clymer and Mrs. Katharine French clasped hands in Glen Ridge, N. J., and a clergyman uttered the words they had hoped to hear far back in the past.

Their romance has been like many another sad one—courtship, then estrangement, then drifting apart—but four decades vanished in the happy climax, as if all that period had been only a dream, from which they had just awakened to take up real life again—and together.

Before the outbreak of the civil war Joseph Clymer lived in Brooklyn. His closest chum was William Garvey, and Clymer came to know Garvey's sister Katharine well. Acquaintance grew into love on both sides, and they became engaged. They were to be married early in 1861. But a ship in a southern harbor and in the blaze of wrath that swept through the north Clymer's love for the girl gave way to an even stronger sentiment—love of country.

Nothing would do but he should go for a soldier. His chum, his sweetheart's brother, joined him in that desire. Miss Garvey did not hold them back. She kissed them both—as a vast host of northern women were kissing brothers or sweethearts at that moment—and away they went.

Clymer and Garvey got into the same regiment, the same company. They fought side by side. Through hardships of march and camp and bitter stress of battle they were cheered by the memory of the girl in the north. On the rare occasions when letters came from home there were always two in one packet, and Garvey would look up from his and say: "Well, Joe, she hasn't forgotten you yet."

The war ended. Out of it both Clymer and Garvey came with the rank of captain, earned by bravery. Of all the bronzed, ragged fellows hurrying to home all over the nation's north, none looked forward to happier days than did Capt. Joe and Capt. Bill. The first place to which Clymer went when he reached Brooklyn—save of course, his own home—was the house of his sweetheart. Great was her rejoicing when brother and sweetheart clasped her in their arms, and great her pride in their rank.

Everybody expected a wedding within a few days. Clymer certainly did. But there came a sweethearts' quarrel—a dispute of such small moment that nobody now remembers what it was about, but enough at that time to send Clymer in anger from the house.

He was proud, and Katharine equally so. Neither would take the first step toward a reconciliation. So the wedding bells did not ring, and Capt. Joe went away to nurse his sorrow.

Time healed the wounds in the hearts of both. The captain took a wife. One day he heard that his old-time sweetheart had become Mrs. Katharine French. Then Time drew down his veil.

It did not lift until five years ago. Then one night at a party in Brooklyn somebody said: "Capt. Clymer, let me introduce Mrs. French."

The intermediary wondered at the strange look that came over the faces of the pair, at the involuntary step backward, at the hesitation, and at the timidity with which hand clasped hand. But, left to themselves, the barrier soon gave way and "Joe" and "Kitty" were the words as in the old days.

"And your—your wife?" asked Mrs. French.

"Dead," said the captain. Then, after a pause, "And your husband?"

She told of her husband and he knew the answer was like his.

Capt. Joe felt his age. He was timid about renewing the courtship so sadly broken. But Love had his way. It was no impulsive wooing this time; the old couple were determined to know their own minds. But finally, a few months ago, the question was asked and answered in the good old way, as if they had been one-and-twenty each, instead of close to 60.

TROLLEYS FROM PLAINFIELD TO THE SEA

New Line Between This City and Metuchen Is Being Staked Out.

LAST LINK CONNECTING

WILL BE POSSIBLE TO TRAVEL DIRECT TO AMBOYS BY TROLLEY.

Line Will Include Oak Tree, New Market and Dunellen—Cars Will Be Running Next Summer—Work To Start Soon.

The new trolley line between this city and Metuchen is being staked out by surveyors in the employ of the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company. The new road will connect with the local line at the end of the Arlington avenue route.

Manager Thomas E. Walsh, of the New Brunswick line, when seen by a representative of The Daily Press, stated that, as soon as the laying of the double track between Riverside Park and New Brunswick is completed, the work of preparing the roadway for the new line will be taken up in earnest. It is the company's intention to have cars running by next summer.

The road will have a private right of way, the last grant having been made last week. The original line has been changed to some extent to include Oak Tree, New Market and Dunellen. When completed the road will enable people to go direct from Plainefild to the seaside resorts in and around the Amboys. It will connect for Perth Amboy at Metuchen.

Entertained Class.

Sunday-school class No. 15, of Trinity Reformed Church, which is taught by Miss Mabel Wilcox, was entertained last Thursday by A. P. Bach at his home in Somerset street. The young men remained on the front porch until the mosquitoes drove them in. The evening was spent in playing games, during which refreshments were served.

Arrests in June.

Chief Marshal William B. Campbell, of the borough police department, reports that twenty-six arrests were made during the month of June. Of these, twenty-four are credited to him. During the greater part of the month there were only two men on duty. Chief Campbell in the day time and Walter Smalley at night.

Takes Her Maiden Name.

Miss Clara E. Ulrick, daughter of C. W. Ulrick, of 145 East Fifth street, and wife of John L. Blackford, obtained an absolute decree of divorce from her husband in the New York Courts on June 8. Mr. Blackford made no opposition whatever, and in addition to granting the divorce the courts allowed the plaintiff to take her maiden name.

TRACES OLD GRAVE STONES BENEATH ELM TREE

Inscriptions on Stones Marking Graves Made Long Ago.

THOSE INTERRED THERE

LAST RESTING PLACE OF EARLY MEMBERS OF CORIELL FAMILY.

Street Committee Digs up Bones Which Prove to be Those of a Horse—Detailed Account.

Beneath a spreading elm tree at the rear of the Isolation Hospital on Rock avenue are several graves with dates on the headstones of over a hundred years ago. Few people know of the place although the toppling headstones are in plain view of people riding along the roadway.

A glance at the dates brings to mind the fact that the graves were made only a few years after the Father of his Country stood on Washington Rock and watched his armies advance over the plains below. It is not improbable that the grave general visited the same spot where now rests the remains of early settlers, members of the Coriell family of this city.

Although neglected the names on the sand stones slabs are still discernable. On one are seen the letters: "Mary, daughter of Daniel and Silvia Whitehead, who died June 28, 1772." Another reads: "Levil, son of Ephriam and Sally Coriell. Died October 15, 1813, aged 1 year, 1 month and 10 days." A small headstone marks the grave of another child: "Sarah, daughter of Elisha and Mary Coriell, who died December 3, 1782 at the age of 7 months.

Further away from the other graves is the resting place of "Mary, wife of Elisha and daughter of Luke and Anna Covert who died May 7, 1805, at the age of 41 years."

To the left the closing chapter of the lives of those early settlers are to be read on the tombstones. "In memory of Anne, the wife of Luke Covert. Died October 22, 1790 in the fiftieth year of her age," marks the resting place of Luke Covert's first wife and beside her resting place is another tombstone on which is inscribed, "In Memory of Luke Covert who died January 22, 1822 in his 94th year." Below is the epitaph:

"Come look upon my grave,
All ye that pass by
Where one old man lives to such an age,
Thousands do younger die."

To the right of that grave is another marking, the burial place of Luke Covert's second wife. The inscription on the stone reads: "In memory of Deliah, second wife of Luke Covert, who died June 25, 1818, at the age of 73 years."

To the fore ground is the grave of Mary, the daughter of Levi and Sarah Lenox, who died October 26, 1815 in the 20th year of her age." The inscription on that stone reads:

"How short is life!
How certain is death
How important is Eternity."

Thus ends the necrology.

Some time ago when the street commissioners was at work digging away some earth near the mound where the graves are located some bones were discovered. When the report was circulated that human bones had been unearthed at the place the surviving relatives of the people buried there filed a complaint with the street commissioner about the matter. Investigation proved the bones to be those of a horse.

Around the graves are several bones, but they are evidently those of some animal. The finding of more bones at the place has given rise lately to the rumor that a human skeleton had been discovered in the vicinity but what bones there are on the spot at present indicate that they are part of some dead animal as they are too large to be those of a human being.

OLD DOCUMENTS BROUGHT TO LIGHT

Interesting Papers in the Possession of Alvin R. Hoagland, of This City.

ONE IS 160 YEARS OLD

SOME ARE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY LAND GRANTS.

All of Them in Excellent State of Preservation — One Contains Signatures of Presidents Jefferson and Madison.

Delving in old documents is always interesting work and it is doubly so when the contents refer to the doings of those who were the great grandfathers and grandmothers of friends and neighbors and who lived and died in the same place as ourselves. Alvin R. Hoagland, of West Front street, has a number of documents of this nature, one of them 160 years old and all in a remarkable state of preservation and valuable evidence of the ways in which their fathers lived. Although the papers are worn and yellow with age, the writing is as clear as though done yesterday. The letters are round and distinctly formed.

The documents, all of a legal nature, were handed down to Mr. Hoagland by his grandmother, Mary, wife of Andrew Cadmus, who died in 1900 at the age of ninety-three.

The most valuable document is one containing the signatures of Thomas Jefferson and James Madison. It is a grant of twenty-three acres of land, situated along the road from Scotch Plains to New Brunswick, at the corner of what were Edward Vermeule's lands and running back to Green brook. The grant was made to Andrew Cadmus, Mr. Hoagland's great grandfather, and is dated April 30, 1803, in the twenty-sixth year of the independence of the United States. It is stamped with the great seal of the United States and commercial revenue stamps to the value of four dollars, and is signed by Thomas Jefferson, president, and James Madison, secretary of State. It is inscribed on vellum paper.

Mr. Hoagland states that the Andrew Cadmus referred to was one of the three brothers who owned all the land from the top of the mountain, to the line where East Seventh street now runs, a strip about one mile wide from Clinton avenue to Grant avenue. The original, old, settler's home of one of the brothers, Frederick, still stands between the residences of William J. Buttfield and former Mayor William L. Saunders on Rockview avenue, North Plainfield. The house owned by another of the brothers on Greenbrook road was occupied until ten years ago by Rutgers Cadmus, a lineal descendant.

Another interesting document in Mr. Hoagland's possession reveals minutely careful methods of indicating the boundaries separating farms. This is an indenture dated April 14, 1773, in the thirteen year of the reign of George III. The articles refer to a sale of land to Luke Covert by Elijah and Mary Dunham. The land, in the words of the document, is situated in the "borough of Elizabethtown, in the county of Essex, in the Province of East New Jersey, beginning at the black oak sapling, marked on four sides, standing in the road that leads from Quivelstown (probably what is now Clinton avenue) to Scotch Plains, running to a stake standing in a bog meadow along Cornelius Vermeule's land, to a stake in the northwest corner of a twenty-five acre lot belonging to Reuben FitzRandolph, to a white oak tree, marked on four sides, to a black oak sapling, marked on four sides, to a hickory bush standing in Benjamin Molleson's, to the middle of the road, to a bottom wood tree in the line of Frederick Vermeule's land, to a white oak tree, marked on four sides." The whole contained forty-six and a quarter acres and was sold for 178 pounds "current money of New Jersey."

The Luke Covert mentioned in this paper was the one whose burial place and epitaph were mentioned in a recent article in The Daily Press describing the old burying ground on Rock avenue.

Still another paper, of date November 3, 1794, states that Luke Covert sold to David Killey, Abraham Staats, Jonathan Ford Morris, Jacob Van Deventer, Isaac van Tuyl, James van Duys, trustees of the church and congregation of Bound Brook twenty-eight and three quarters acres of land for fifty pounds "lawful money of the State of New Jersey." A document of June 18, 1772, in dividing an estate among heirs, makes ample provision for the maintenance of the widowed mother of the legatees and devisees, upon whom it was enjoined to procure a house for their mother and also provide her with enough money "in leading sufficiency of fire wood, the supporting of two cows both summer and winter for her use and to be their proportionate share in rendering to her the sum of ten pounds per year during her widowhood."

The wages of farm laborers in this vicinity in 1841 were not greatly lower than at present, as witness a few items selected from a bill rendered May 19 of that year. "Two days' planting corn, $2; mending dam, $0; day's thrashing, $.87½; one and one half days' plowing corn, $1.87½; 7 days' work in hay, $6.75; husking corn, $1 a day.

Mr. Hoagland has several other documents of the same nature. The oldest is a deed dated 1742 and refers in its conditions to another deed dated 1680.

Y.M.C.A. MUSICIANS PERFORM

GIVE EXCELLENT CONCERT FOR BENEFIT OF FRANK MANCHESTER.

Miss Florence Bennett, Soprano Soloist, Assisted and Won Much Applause—The Programme.

Y. M. C. A. students of the art of Orpheus made an offering last Friday in the shape of a testimonial concert in the association hall, for the benefit of Frank Manchester, a member of the association and drum major of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, who has been sick for several weeks. The Young Men's Christian Association orchestra led by Martin A. Kreff were assisted by Miss Florence Bennett, soprano soloist, and by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps.

The programme pleased an audience that filled the hall comfortably. Miss Bennett's solos were the most popular numbers. Her voice is sweet, clear and expressive and won for her applause that lasted several minutes after each selection. The work of the orchestra was most acceptable. The excellence of the entertainment is evidenced by the fact that all of the following numbers were played through with and finish: Encore, "from house to house." We should not only know each other upon the Sabbath day, but upon Monday or any other day of the week. It is a low standard of Christian fellowship that only recognizes a brother or sister in the church upon the Sabbath day and refuses or neglects this recognition during the week.

Contract for Public Stable.

It is quite likely that the Common Council at its next regular meeting will award the contract for the erection of a stable on the plot of ground in the rear of police headquarters, where the police patrol wagon and the horse will be kept. The members decided recently to get bids for the work of building the stable before attempting to put it up, and, besides, it is the desire of the Council that the lease between the city and the owners of the property, J. B. Coward and J. W. Murray, be signed before any work is started.

BOWEN AN ENVOY.

Said That He Has Been Intrusted With Secret Mission.

A despatch has been received at Panama, Colombia, from Washington saying that President Castro, having failed to overthrow the present Colombian government by assisting the Colombian revolutionists, intrusted a secret mission to United States Minister Bowen to re-establish diplomatic relations between Colombia and Venezuela. This despatch further says that the credentials given to Mr. Bowen are not definitive enough to be considered by the Colombian government.

Long Delay.

The contract case in Justice Nash's court of the estate of Kenyon against Staats has been adjourned by consent of counsel to some time in September, pending the return of the Justice from a trip across the continent. F. J. Blats is representing the defendant, and T. W. Nash, Jr., the plaintiff.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 28—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Religion between Sundays.—Acts 8, 26-40.

The Sabbath day is the day specially set apart by God for religious worship and service, but it does not follow from that that it is the only day upon which we are to be religious. Every day of the week is the Lord's day, and there is no day upon which we are not to love and serve Him. These facts are recognized by all people, and yet when it comes to actual practice many seem to think that religion is only for the Sabbath, that it is to be put on and put off with clothes that are worn upon that day, and that between Sundays we can follow our own plans and devices.

But Sunday religion only is not the kind that is taught in the word of God. There it is plainly taught that we are to serve the Lord daily. The sacrifices of the Old Testament were offered daily, although they were doubled in number upon the Sabbath. Christ taught His disciples to pray daily for their daily bread. "Give us this day our daily bread." The Bereans "searched the Scriptures daily" and were commended for so doing. These were more noble than those in Thessalonica in that they received the word with all readiness of mind and searched the Scriptures daily whether these things were so." And Luke, the sacred historian, gives us in the topical reference here the information that one of the religious faith and activity of the early Christians between Sundays.

In this description we can learn many things that should characterize our lives as Christian upon the days of the week:

1. Religious faith should be exercised between Sundays. "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine." It is not only necessary to believe in Jesus upon the Sabbath or when listening to His word in the sanctuary or reading it in the home, but also when amid the duties and cares of everyday life during the week. The test of faith comes oftener between Sundays than upon the Sabbath, and at such times it should be steadfast.

2. Religious fellowship should be exercised between Sundays. The early Christians continued steadfast in the apostles' fellowship as well as doctrine. And the end of this was "from house to house." We should not only know each other upon the Sabbath day, but upon Monday or any other day of the week. It is a low standard of Christian fellowship that only recognizes a brother or sister in the church upon the Sabbath day and refuses or neglects this recognition during the week.

3. Religious worship should be exercised between Sundays. The early Christians worshiped with all their hearts between worshiping God. Praise and prayer were their daily devotions. "They continued daily with one accord in the temple and, breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God." God should be worshiped during the week. Praise and prayer should ascend to Him daily from the home, and if we cannot go every day to His temple we should at least spend a time of the mid-week service held in almost every church for public worship.

4. Religious work should be exercised between Sundays. They assisted each other. "And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." The community of goods proved impracticable, but the principle was sound. Christian people should be interested in each other's daily welfare and should lend a helping hand "to all men, as every man hath need." They also worked for the salvation of the souls of the unsaved. "The Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved," but this is always done as a result of Christian effort. We should have a daily interest in the salvation of the souls of men.

What will be the result of this carrying religion into the days of the week? (1) They had "favor with all the people!" A religion that is put on and off with the Sabbath has little favor among men, but a religion that manifests itself at all times, that is practical and helpful, that is visible daily in the home, in society and in the business pursuits of life will always find favor with men and influence them for good. (2) They found favor with God. God blessed them by giving them souls for their hire. Finding favor with the people and having the daily blessing of God, it is little wonder that these early Christians "did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God." A religion that is consistent will always bring joy and gladness. Let us therefore serve the Lord at all times, and His favor and blessing will be constantly upon us.

WAS BAND MONEY TAKEN FROM BOXES?

Benj. LaVere, Leader of the Band, Authority for the Statement.

MONEY BOXES BROKEN

ONLY NINE DOLLARS RETURNED FROM COLLECTION AT THE CONCERT.

Should Have Been Forty—Prospects for a Continuation of the Season's Concerts—What Member of Council Says.

It has been reported that the boxes circulated among those who attended the concert in the City Park Thursday evening, were robbed and that when they were opened there was only $9 in the eight boxes sent out. It is said that the bottom of the boxes were ripped open and only a few pennies left inside.

Benjamin LaVere, the director and promotor of the concerts in this city, when asked last week about the truth of the report, said that it was true, he said, handed in $5 returns, but all the rest evidently opened the boxes and removed the contents except for a few pennies. Mr. LaVere believed that the contribution should have reached something like $40 but instead all that was received from the tampered boxes was a few cents over $9.

In speaking of the success of the concert Mr. LaVere said: "An active canvass of the city has been made for funds with which to give seven free public concerts in this city during the warm weather. I have received enough money to run three but have not been able to awaken sufficient interest in the matter to warrant me in arranging for others.

"I have placed the matter before the Common Council. In my opinion the City Fathers should appropriate enough money for public concerts during the summer. One of our Councilmen, when I asked him to see what he could do towards pushing the matter said to me that in his opinion the time is not far distant when money will have to be appropriated regularly by the Council for public concerts and that the practice might as well be started now as at any other time. He said that he would do what he could in the matter.

"I have funds on hand which will defray the expense of three more concerts. If no money is appropriated by the Council I will not give any more. I have done my share of the work and it is now time for the Council to act in the matter.

"I am glad that the people braved the heat and the mosquitos to attend the concert three thousand strong shows conclusively that public concerts are as much a need in this city as they are in other cities of this size and even larger."

This evening the two popular airs, "Solambo" and "The Same Old Crowd" will be sung and cornet solos will be rendered by musicians from Edison's Phonograph Company Band.

Going to the Farm.

George Mead, who has held the position of office boy at The Daily Press office, for several months past, will spend the remainder of the summer on a farm at Oak Tree.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 28, "Strong Men and Strong Women the Nation's Hope." Text, Ex. xviii, 13; Deut. xvi, 18; Eph. vi, 10-18.

"Be strong in the Lord."

There is no premium in this world on weakness. Even though the battle may not always be to the strong, as the Bible declares it is not, it is at times fatal to weakness which gives the victory. The helpless may appeal to our sympathy and draw out the traits of tenderness and compassion, but the hard, stern work of the world demands strength, endurance and courage. Timidity may not be a crime, but it may at times bring as serious disaster as treachery. There arise occasions when heroic endurance of suffering, privation and hard toil is needful. Cold, fatigue, hunger and long continued labor must be endured times beyond number by the workers in a hundred different fields of effort. Heat, exhaustion, strain of muscle, brain and soul are the purchase price of many of the luxuries and even ordinary comforts of everyday life in civilized lands. The affairs of the nation herein endeavor is in constant demand. Alertness, integrity, ability to discern the right and equitable measures in legislation are needed in all our assemblies. The power to say no or yes and stick to it when right demands sometimes requires a soul and body of great strength. The pressure brought to bear on one in official position is unrealized and unrealizable by those who have not been there. It is only strong men and women of moral fiber and keen sense to stand against it.

The rush and high speed of much of the work of the present time require strong muscles and nerves to avoid collapse. The strain with a slight increase in the speed of a railway train puts on track and rolling stock is often serious. The same is true of men. A man who can endure certain work breaks completely under a slight increase. Nerves and muscle are overtaxed. Under certain responsibilities men will pass years of faithful service and then "go all to pieces" under a new or unusual charge. Influences to which one has become accustomed make slight impression, but an unusual offer, solicitation or bribe may overthrow in an instant all the defenses and ruin the work of a lifetime.

The hope of the nation, of all nations, lies in strong and wonderful strong in reverence for God and right, strong of intellect, body and soul.

High and Worthy Ends.

These high and precious and holy gifts of God are not given to us end correspondingly high and worthy and holy. Such a high and worthy end is not difficult to find or to realize. It is not necessary to go out of our way in quest of something remarkable, unfamiliar or extravagant. That high and worthy end is secured in the lives of thousands of men and women who are engaged in the plainest and most ordinary routine of duties, duties of the home, duties on the farm, duties of the workshop or duties of the schoolroom. The only indispensable condition for attaining to such an end is that of having a spirit of genuine love to God and love to man, a spirit of consecration, obedience to Christ and service, in one word, the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ. Such a spirit when properly possessed and applied will certainly elevate our lives to that which is truly high and direct them to that which is noble and worthy. And the end, the result of such a life, will be the manifestation and enjoyment of the glory of God, the establishment of His kingdom, the triumph of the true and right and good and the salvation and spiritual welfare of souls.—Christian Intelligencer.

Burdens to Bear.

Life brings only burdens to all humanity. It is not only the Christians who must bear. As a matter of fact, there are many burdens and griefs which press more lightly upon Christians than upon those who do not know Christ. The Christian bears but a part of the load which others must bear alone. With Christ for a yokefellow the heaviest part of the burden is borne by His strength, and only so much of it falls upon us as we are able to bear. Those who have never taken Christ's yoke upon them must bear the burden alone, and we may well marvel that any human strength is sufficient to bear some of the ills which life binds upon us.—Christian Work.

New Theories.

A mere theory of life, that remains but a theory, is about as useful to a man as a gilt edged menu is to a starving sailor on a raft in midocean. It is irritating, but not stimulating. No rule for higher living will help a man in the slightest until he reach out and appropriate it for himself, until he make it practical in his daily life, until that seed of theory in his mind blossom into a thousand flowers of thought and word and act.—William George Jordan.

Inspiration of Hope.

Life needs the inspiration of hope. Amidst loneliness perplexities and family cares and church responsibilities we would sink down in despair did not the future hold out cheering and beckoning prospects.—Presbyterian.

Our Burden Bearer.

The little sharp vexations
And the briers that catch and fret,
Why go and take all to Jesus?
Who has never failed us yet?
Tell Him about the heartache,
And tell Him the time you toil;
Tell Him the baffled purpose
When we cannot know what to do.
Then, leaving all our weakness
With the One divinely strong,
Forget the burden and the burden
And carry away the song.
—Philippa Brooks.

CHOOSE U. S. RIFLE TROPHY

ARMY, NAVY, AND GUARD TEAMS TO COMPETE.

Prizes and Trophies to be Given in General Contests—Design of the Trophy.

A committee of which Lieutenant Frank K. Hill, United States navy, is chairman, appointed from the board for promotion of rifle practice to select a design for a national trophy, has decided upon the design submitted by the Gorham Company of New Jersey. In addition to this national trophy, which is to be competed for each year by the teams representing the army, navy, Marine Corps and National Guard, there will be given medals to each member of the six highest teams.

The design selected for the trophy represents an inverted shell with a shield on the lower part of the shell. The shell and shield are supported by two eagles, representing the army and navy of the United States, which are in turn supported by a globe, the eagles resting on the eastern and western hemispheres. On the upper part of the shell is a figure of Mars holding in leash four dogs of war. In the upper left hand corner is a bar supporting the coat-of-arms of the United States, from which are depended four other bars with the following inscription:

"Army, Navy, Marine Corps, National Guard."

¶ In the upper right hand corner will be placed an inscription, probably this: "National trophy team marksmanship, presented by act of Congress of United States of America, MDCCCCIII."

The material of the shield on which the inscription will be made yearly of the team winning for that year is of silver, the other parts being bronze. The whole is about three and one-half feet high by two and a half feet wide.

The general allotment of prizes and trophies is as follows:

Rifles—United States service, with not less than three-pound trigger pull; ammunition—Service cartridge as manufactured and issued by the ordnance department; entrance fee—Twenty-four dollars per team, except by teams of the American navy and Marine Corps: two days' contest—First day, 800, 900 and 600 yards; second day, 800, 900 and 1,000 yards.

Prizes: To the team making the highest aggregate total in the two days' contest, the national trophy (authorized by act of Congress), to be competed for annually, and cash $500; the team making the second highest aggregate total, the Hilton trophy, presented by the late Henry Hilton, of New York, to be competed for annually, and cash $300; the team making the third highest aggregate total, cash $200; the team making the fourth highest aggregate total, cash $150; the team making the fifth highest aggregate total, $100; the team making the sixth highest aggregate total, $50; also a medal for each member of the winning teams.

PYTHIAN FIELD DAY.

Local Lodges to Participate in Outing at Asbury Park on Labor Day.

Plans for the annual field day of the Knights of Pythias of New Jersey to be held at Asbury Park on Labor Day, are gradually being perfected. It is expected that Perseverance and Unity Lodges, as well as Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R. K. of P., will participate in a body. Hudson County alone expects to send a delegation of five thousand to the contest. Chancellor Commanders Thomas Muir, of Perseverance Lodge, and B. G. H. Rogers, of Unity Lodge, will have charge of the local arrangements.

AMUSEMENTS.

The managements of the Pain spectacle, "Last Days of Pompeii," at Manhattan Beach is arranging for a number of special nights, one of which will be given over to the yachtsmen. Upon this occasion, Sir Thomas Lipton will be a guest of honor. There was a pleasing indication of the popularity Sir Thomas enjoys among New Yorkers a few evenings ago at the theatre. A huge placard portrait of the cup-hunter was shown and as his familiar features and his smile was recognized, the crowd cheered lustily. The Lipton picture will be done in fire several times during the visit of the Shamrocks.

COMPENSATION OF ELECTION OFFICERS

Mixup Caused by Clashing of Amendment to Meeker Act and New Primary Law.

STILL DISPUTING PAY

MEEKER ACT AMENDMENT GIVES NO PAY FOR PRIMARY ELECTION.

Incongruity in Primary Election Law—Provisions of the Two Enactments Are Given Below in Detail.

There seems to be considerable confusion in regard to the proper compensation of election officers in municipal elections in Plainfield and other New Jersey cities. The confusion is in the clashing of the new primary law and the amendment to the Meeker act in regard to the rates of compensation. About 400 of the district officers have entered claims of $40 for extra services in the elections of the past two years, making their demands on the strength of a Supreme Court decision that the statute entitled officers to pay for general and for special elections even though the two were held simultaneously. About $18,000 is involved in suits for compensation, which will probably be argued early in the fall.

The question raised regarding the years 1901 and 1903 will not obtain in connection with the election of this year because of legislative action taken at the last session. Chapter 266, of the statutes of 1903, contains the remedy. It provides that the compensation of each member of the boards of registry and election in cities having a population exceeding 30,000, shall be for each registry day $5, and for each election day $10. The act provides that the services of the election officers shall be given for both the general and municipal election without extra compensation.

The same provision regarding the amount of compensation that shall be received by the election officers is contained in the act regulating the manner in which primary elections shall be held. The language of the sections of the two acts, which is strictly similar in effect, in most particulars, differs in one important feature and this difference is giving public officials some concern because of the apparent opening it makes for more dispute relating to the amount of compensation to which the election officers will be entitled.

The amendment to the Meeker act provides that the pay of election officers shall be $5 for each registry day and $10 for each election day. It fails to provide for any additional compensation for services in connection with the primary election, which, under the law, must be held on the first day of registry, which is the second Tuesday in September.

The other act—that regulating primary elections — makes provisions, however, that the pay of the election officers shall be $10 for the first day of registry, which compensation shall include services rendered at the primary election. This latter act was approved April 14, 1903, but the other law, naming $5 pay for days of registry, was approved April 15, 1903. The latter, and this fact may be used to sustain a possible claim that as the latest act supersedes the prior one, election officers will not be legally entitled to more than $5 pay for their services on the first day registry, notwithstanding they will have to perform additional services in connection with the primary election.

As an offset to this argument, however, it is held that the later act deals only with the pay of election officers in connection with their services as registry and election officers, and that the provision of the prior act that the compensation shall be $10 for the first day of registry, including services rendered at the primary election, should be interpreted to mean that the pay for services at the primary election shall be $5, in addition to the $5 they are entitled to for services in connection with the registry.

There is another seeming incongruity in the primary election law that has given rise to speculation as to its possible effect. The act is supposed to relate only to primary elections, yet its thirty-first section is an amendment to Section 178 of the general elections act, and regulates the compensation that shall be received by election officers, not only in connection with their services as officers of the primary elections, but also for their services on the days of registry and on general and municipal election days.

CHANGES IN FOOTBALL RULES HAVE BEEN MADE

Seven Men on Rush Line and Only Four to be Back of Ball.

A CHECKERBOARD FIELD

QUARTER BACK MAY BE ALLOWED TO RUN WITH BALL.

He Must Not Run Right Through the Line—Methods to be Used to Compel Observance of This Rule.

New Haven, July 16—Two important changes in the football playing rules have been made for the coming season. It has been agreed that seven men shall be played in the rush line by the attacking team. Consequently there will be four men back of the ball. But this rule only applies when the ball is outside the twenty-five-yard lines. When it is within the twenty-five-yard lines the games will be played as heretofore at the discretion of the team having the ball.

If other changes as suggested by the football rules' committee are made the playing field will no longer be a "gridiron," but a "checker-board," for the field will be marked into squares of five yards. This will be done to allow the quarterback to run with the ball, as the committee has decided upon. How it has been legislated for seven men to play in the line.

When a team is within its own twenty-five-yard line it may play as heretofore, and also when it is fighting for a touchdown within the twenty-five-yard mark of its opponent. But, between the lines, that is, in the large territory in centre field, seven men must be employed in the rush line. This change, it is believed, will lessen the severity of the mass plays over which there has been a great howl. Having only four men back of the line it will not be possible it is argued, for a team to concentrate as much energy and force at a given point. Thus it is believed that there will be less chance of injury. The old style and what has been termed deadly mass plays can be used within the twenty-five-yard lines, when naturally both sides are fighting desperately and when injuries are most likely to occur.

Another change that will be suggested by the committee was made with the idea of keeping the game more open; it is allowing a quarterback to run with the ball. It has been decided that the quarterback must run at least five yards to one side or the other of the centre. In other words, he will not be allowed to receive the ball from the snapback and plunge right through the centre of the line. He must run out five yards.

In order that the officials may be sure that the man does run out the required five yards the field is to be marked off like a checkerboard, the five-yard lines will run the length of the field as well as across it.

"Holding" will be dealt with by inflicting a penalty of twenty yards' loss to the team offering. It will not lose the ball as last year, but will lose ground.

KNOWN TO PLAINFIELDERS.

J. W. Sebring, of Round Brook, Who Died Wednesday a Military Man.

John W. Sebring, of Round Brook, who died Wednesday night in the Somerset Hospital, Somerville, was well known in this city. He enlisted in Co. B, Sixth N. J. Vols., of which Charles Ewing was the captain. He was then living at Whitehouse, but enlisted at Trenton on August 24, 1861. He was discharged with his regiment on September 7, 1864. In the last year of his service he was Captain Johnson's clerk, who was division quartermaster 3d Division, 3d Army Corps. Mr. Sebring was a member of the Second New Jersey Brigade Society. For many years he was a police officer at Round Brook and a deputy court officer. He leaves a wife and one daughter.

Wages Increased.

The Lehigh Valley railroad engineers and firemen have been granted an advance of from 10 to 35 per cent. a day. This increase will hereafter make the wages on the Lehigh Valley uniform. The trainmen and conductors are not included in the new schedule, as their wages were increased last month.

At the Park.

Among the Plainfielders stopping at Asbury Park are these: Mr. and Mrs. William VanDeventer at The Madison; Mrs. Thomas Fawcett, Miss Fawcett, Hughes Fawcett and Alfred Fawcett at the Knickerbocker.

Camping Out.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sebern and son, Willie, accompanied by Miss May Yale, have taken their summer lodgings in a large house tent at the upper end of Somerset street.

PRICES FOR JERSEY PRODUCE

RATES AT WHICH LOCAL DEALERS ARE SELLING.

Qualities Said to be Excellent and Prices Right—Fruit, Fish and Vegetables.

A fine collection of Jersey produce was offered in the local markets Saturday when, for the first time this season, small fruits grown in this State was on sale. The quality is said to be excellent and the prices reasonable.

Red raspberries, Jersey grown, are selling for 9 and 10 cents a quart, while other varieties sell for 7 cents up. Huckleberries bring 15 cents a quart for the best, and there are some to be had for 12 cents. Jersey tomatoes, of fine appearance, and said to be of extra quality, sell for 15 cents a quart, other kinds bringing 10 cents.

The first good peaches are in this week. They come from Georgia, and are of the large yellow variety. They are said to be of exceptional flavor, and the prices is 25 cents a quart. Other peaches, not as good, bring 20 cents a quart.

Blackberries sell from 12 to 14 cents a quart, currants from 12 to 16 cents and plums from 10 to 20 cents a quart. The latter are just beginning to come in and are from California. The peach plums are the cheaper ones, while those costing 20 cents are the large blue ones.

While there is nothing new in the vegetable market, the quality of all produce continues to improve. There is a large supply, and prices are normal. Asparagus is rather scarce. The price is from 30 to 50 cents a bunch. Green peas sell for 40 and 50 cents a half-peck. String beans bring 8 to 10 cents a quart. Squash sells for 5 to 10 cents each, and egg plants are from 15 to 25 cents each. Cucumbers are getting better in quality and a little lower in price. They bring 5 and 7 cents each now. About 65 cents is the average price for watermelons.

There is plenty of fish in the market, though because of the strike among the crews of the smacks that go after bluefish there is liable to be a scarcity of that fish soon. The price is still from 15 to 18 cents a pound, however. Soft shell crabs have gone up in price, $1.50 a dozen now being asked. Butterfish sells for 10 cents a pound, as does weakfish and porgies. Sea bass is 15 cents, halibut 30, codfish 12, flounders 8, sturgeon 15 and eels 12 and 15 cents a pound.

BORNE TO GRAVE.

Funeral Services Over Remains of Henry W. Carpenter Held at Son's Home.

The funeral of Henry Winfield Carpenter, of Roxbury, N. Y., who died Saturday morning, was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of his son, Raymond V. Carpenter, 23 Manning avenue. Rev. Garrett W. Conover, of Upper Nyack, preached the funeral sermon and bore testimony to the sterling worth and great kindness of this Christian friend. A solo, "Abide With Me," was sung by Elmer E. Runyon. Interment took place this morning.

PRICES MAY DELAY COURTHOUSE

CONTRACTOR FOR STONE WORK HAS FAILED IN BUSINESS.

Only One-Thirtieth of the Granite Has Been Delivered So Far.

There is some danger that the delivery of granite for the new Union County Court House in Elizabeth may be delayed or stopped by the failure of the large boot and shoe manufacturing firm of Arn Cushman & Company, of Boston, and Auburn, Me. The firm, according to a Boston dispatch, has liabilities estimated at nearly half a million and their assignment is attributed to their inability to secure sufficient bank accommodation.

Ara Cushman, the head of the concern and principal stock owner, is also president of the National Shoe and Leather Bank of Auburn and is practically sole owner of the Main and New Hampshire Granite Company. It is this fact that alarms parties who have unfulfilled contracts with the concern.

The granite for the new court house is being supplied by the Main and New Hampshire Company at a contract price of $180,000, and less than one-thirtieth of it has been received although all of it has been quarried. The Board of Freeholders fear a delay, inasmuch as Mr. Cushman is involved in other failures. The county officials have refused to advance Mr. Cushman any money on account.

AFTER THE ICE MAN.

Borough Board of Health Finds It Necessary to Take Ice Concern to Task.

The North Plainfield Board of Health has been asked to investigate a report that the Natural Ice Company has been dumping large piles of manure in back of its stables at the upper end of Somerset street in such a location that at each rain large quantities of the stuff is washed into the brook. Inspector Pangborn has been ordered to see that the objectionable piles are removed.

The Board's attention has been called to the fact that the same ice company has been peddling ice in the borough without having a proper license.

Democratic Outing.

The Englewood Democrats are to have a field day on Saturday, July 25, in Foresters' grove. One of the features will be a baseball contest, the Hackensack Democrats having accepted a challenge from their brethren of the only city and promised to send over a good nine.

Mr. Fisk's Purchase.

Harvey R. Fisk, who is occupying Cherry Hill, Elberon, has added to his possessions the Ben Woolley farm and a lot belonging to John Glasgow, of that place. Mr. Fisk last fall purchased the country home belonging to J. H. Beals, Jr., of New York, known as Cherry Hill.

LEO RALLIES AGAIN

Another Remarkable Change In Condition of Pope.

SO WORSE THAN ON MONDAY NIGHT

Patient's State Is Opposed to Every Medical Theory—Supposed to Be Dying, He Greets Cardinals With "Please Be Seated."

ROME, July 15.—Another remarkable rally in Pope Leo's condition has occurred after a long depression, in the course of which his holiness suffered spells of delirium, and at times his strength sank to the lowest ebb, and he now lies in no worse condition than he was on Monday evening, except for the steady diminution of his strength. Mgr. Bisleti, master of the chamber, visited the sick room and on emerging stated that the pontiff's condition was unchanged. A little later the pope fell into a sleep, which it has just been announced is fairly tranquil, although the patient's respiration is troublesome.

The rally was characteristically opposed to every medical theory and consisted in getting out of bed, on which two hours previously the pope himself had made all preparations for death. Unsatisfied with this exhibition of vitality, he transacted private business and received four cardinals, with whom he talked in an animated way. In fact, Pope Leo's record, little of which appeared in the official bulletin, would be incredible if it were not confirmed by the cardinals present in the sick chamber. None seem more perplexed than the doctors themselves. Dr. Lapponi said frankly, "I cannot imagine how the pope manages to keep alive."

According to physicians, the pontiff may die at any moment, even in the midst of one of those extraordinary intervals when his mind and body present a comparatively sound appearance. All those around the patient prior to 5 to 1 and was well handled by the colored jockey, Hicks. Sir Voorhies was second and Gravina third. The favorite, Eugenia Burch, was off badly and was never dangerous. Minotaur and Astarita raced out in front for half a mile, when Hicks sent Astarita to the front and won easily by two lengths. The time, 1:13 3-5, was good, considering the condition of the track.

Lonsdale Wins at Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 15.—The Sedgewater stakes at Washington Park was won by Lonsdale, a two-year-old colt owned by Clay Bros. of Kentucky. The result was a surprise, Lonsdale being 10 to 1 in the betting and not backed. Fred Cook's two, English Lad and Fred Pelton, were the favorites. English Lad would probably have won with a stronger ride than H. Phillips seemed able to give him. As it was, Lonsdale beat English Lad only a head. Bondage was first in the mile and an eighth handicap.

Claude Added Another Derby.

BUFFALO, July 15.—J. Daly's Claude added another Derby to his string of victories by capturing the sixth renewal of the Canadian Derby at Fort Erie. Reservation fought him gamely head and head through the stretch. Sir Gallant made the running for a mile, leading by a length, but in the other two went by him in the stretch, and he was six lengths back at the finish.

Wainscot H. Won.

DETROIT, Mich., July 15.—The feature at the Windsor Driving Park association's meeting was the impressive fashion in which Wainscot H., an entry of the Merchants and Manufacturers' $10,000 stake at Detroit last week, won the 2:25 trot and defeated Hie Boy and Bonnie Russell, also named in the historic stake.

Japan's Suspicions of Russia.

PEKING, July 15.—United States Minister Conger has arrived at Newchwang, where he will make a personal investigation of the situation. M. Lessar, the Russian minister to China, has returned to Peking. The Russian legation is without information regarding the result of the conference of high Russian officials at Port Arthur. Dispatches from Japan on the situation are optimistic, but on account of the continuing reports of Russian activity on the Yalu river and also the statement made by the Korean legation here that China will not consent and the Koreans themselves are unable to open Atiami to trade because of Russian objections the opinion here is gloomy. Unless the evacuation of Manchuria occurs soon the belief obtains here that the acts of belligerent Russians on the Yalu will precipitate a conflict, as it is understood that Japan will regard the continuation of Russian encroachment on the territory bordering the Yalu as a casus belli.

Kishineff Murderer Found.

KISHINEFF, Russia, July 15.—The murderer of the boy Dunbassary, whose death was charged to the Jews and which was the immediate cause of the massacre, has been discovered. He is a gardener and has confessed that he and the boy's uncle committed the crime. The new governor of Kishineff, Prince Urusoff, has exchanged visits with the leadings Jews of this city.

Commissioners Go to Berlin.

THE HAGUE, July 15.—The international exchange commissioners have left this city for Berlin after submitting their views to the government representatives.

Hawaii's Budget.

HONOLULU, July 15.—The extra session of the legislature has appropriated $8,000,000, being $2,000,000 over the estimated government receipts.

A NINETY MILE RIDE

General Nelson A. Miles Made It In Nine Hours.

RIDER SHOWED NO SIGNS OF FATIGUE

Trip Was Taken to Show That Army Commander Is Still a Sturdy Soldier—Reviews Troops on Arrival at Fort Reno.

EL RENO, Okla., July 15.—Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles completed a horseback ride from Fort Sill, I. T., to Fort Reno, Okla., a distance of ninety miles, in nine hours and ten minutes. The first thirty-five miles was made in record time, the distance being covered in two hours and twenty-five minutes. Upon completing the trip General Miles showed no signs of fatigue and forty minutes after his arrival at Fort Reno reviewed the troops stationed at that post. The ride was taken, it is stated, to demonstrate that General Miles at the age of retirement is still a sturdy man.

General Miles spent Monday morning inspecting Fort Sill, resting in the afternoon preparatory to taking his long ride. There was a large crowd at the fort when General Miles came from the commandant's house shortly after 4 o'clock to make the start. He was booted and spurred and wore a campaign military suit. As the general started off at 5:10 a. m. he was cheered lustily. He was accompanied by Captain Sayre of the Eighth cavalry.

The weather was cool at the start, but became intensely hot. Anadarko, Okla., thirty-five miles distant from Fort Sill, was reached in two hours and twenty-five minutes. The ride was made in ten mile relays, soldiers stationed along the line furnishing fresh horses. Lunch consumed twenty minutes, and it is estimated that fifty minutes were spent in changing mounts and in other small delays. This made the actual time spent in the saddle eight hours.

A salute was fired as General Miles entered Fort Reno at 2:20 p. m. He showed no signs of weariness as he dismounted and said, "I enjoyed every moment of the trip, and there was one time that I felt particularly good; that was when I came up to the men who had charge of the pack teams just south of the Canadian river. They had lunch ready, and I enjoyed it with them. It made me feel extra good."

Immediately after reviewing the troops at *Fort Reno General Miles, accompa*nied by Colonel Maus, drove to El Reno and caught the train for Fort Riley, Kan.

Striking Stone Masons Violent.

CLINTON, Mass., July 15.—A body of striking stone masons who had been employed on the Wachusett dam of the metropolitan water system, armed with revolvers, marched among the other workmen and with threats compelled 450 to stop work. One man who hesitated in obeying the strikers' order was thrown into the Nashua river, but was rescued promptly by his associates. The police force, numbering a few men, was inadequate to check the strikers. An attempt was made to arrest one of them, but he eluded the police after a chase in which he dropped his revolver. The contractors apparently are now waiting for developments. They say they will not grant the demands of the strikers for an increase in wages to 35 cents an hour, which caused the trouble. It is understood that an effort will be made to resume operations today, and extra police will be on hand if this is done.

Attorney on Trial For Bribery.

BUTTE, Mont., July 15.—The disbarment of A. J. Shores, chief attorney for the Amalgamated Copper company, charged with attempting to bribe Judge Harney with $250,000 in connection with the Minnie Healy mine decision, was reached today after six months' delay. F. A. Heinze and John McGinnis of the Montana Ore Purchasing company, to whom the mine was awarded, have been subpoenaed by the defense, which alleges a business and political conspiracy on the part of the opponents of the Amalgamated Copper company through Shores. An affidavit of Charles W. Clark, son of United States Senator Clark, was read admitting that he offered Judge Harney the money with the approval of Mr. Shores and other Amalgamated attorneys.

Charged With Starting Forest Fires.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., July 15.—Sam Pasco was arraigned in the Warren county court at Lake George, charged with setting no less than twenty forest fires. These are alleged to have been started during the conflagrations of early June. Pasco is also charged with stealing timber, with assault in the first degree and with burglary in the third degree. Pasco is a man of enormous physical strength and is over six feet in height, a dead shot and a typical mountaineer. He pleaded not guilty and asked that counsel be assigned to defend him.

VISITORS DELIGHTED WITH BABIES' CAMP

Youngsters Have Excellent Accommodations at Home on the Mountain.

IS OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

EIGHT BABIES ALREADY BENEFITTED AT THE CAMP.

Details of Accommodations—Many People Have Given the King's Daughters' Generous Assistance in Their Work.

Despite the intense heat of Friday a goodly number of interested persons visited the City Union, King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountain, which was opened to the public. The camp was put in readiness early in the week for the reception of babies and everything was in "apple pie order" yesterday for visitors. Since the opening there have been eight abies at the camp. These, with the possible exception of one who is ill, will return to their homes tonight to spend Sunday.

The camp is comfortable and commodious. Everything about is clean and the furnishings permit of good work. There are six rooms in all, one for the matron, another for the nurse, a living room, a dining room and kitchen, also a dormitory for the babies. The kitchen is well supplied with utensils and through the generosity of the Standard Oil Company, a barrel of oil has been placed at the disposal of those in charge. There are eight cots, two cribs and one cradle, ample accommodations for the present.

In the absence of Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, chairman of the camp committee, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, president of the City Union, King's Daughters, acted in her place yesterday. The other members of the committee who had full charge of the opening and who are attending to every detail at the camp, include Mrs. Frank W. Jones, Mrs. Howard Runyon and Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney. These women were at the camp all day yesterday. During the afternoon lemonade and wafers were served.

Those in charge feel grateful for the generous assistance given by Plainfielders, and also express gratitude to Dr. Albert Love, who has offered his services to the camp for the summer. There are several applications now on file from persons desiring to take their babies to the camp and they will be filed in the order in which they arrive.

The camp will now be open all the time, day and night, and all persons interested are cordially invited to visit it and become better acquainted with the work that is being done.

P. BOWERS POISONED.

Bitten by Caterpillar and His Body Now Twice Its Normal Size.

Peter Bowers, of Somerset street, is confined to his home suffering from a poisonous bite of a caterpillar. His entire body is swollen to twice its normal size and he suffers intense pain.

While resting on his lawn at Washingtonville Sunday morning he felt a bite in the back of his neck and placing his hand there he found a large caterpillar. Soon after he began to suffer much pain. As it grew worse he was obliged to call in a physician. It is feared that blood poison has set in.

CLAIMS BIG ESTATE.

Hoboken Woman Commences Proceedings to Recover Property.

Mrs. Bertha Hardy, of 1023 Willow avenue, Hoboken, has begun proceedings to recover property in Trenton and Washington, D. C., that is estimated to be worth more than $4,000,000.

Mrs. Hardy is a granddaughter of Charles Olden, once Governor of New Jersey, who disinherited her mother. She is the only surviving direct descendant of Gov. Olden and bases her action on the claim that the original will left by him has been stolen from the Trenton Hall of Records. This will, she says, provided for the apportionment of the Governor's big estate among the children of his daughter, and the only existing copy of it is now in possession of persons who have an object in concealing its contents.

A Memorial Day.

In accordance with custom, the seventeenth day of the Jewish fourth month, Tamuz, was observed by those of that faith in this city, yesterday, in common with Orthodox Jews all over the world as a strict fast day from sunrise to nightfall.

Mrs. Charles E. Miner and daughter, Miss Rena Miner, of Rockford, Ill., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Morse, of Franklin place.

LOCAL LODGE OF ELKS TO BE ORGANIZED

Movement Progressing to Start Branch of B. P. O. E. in This City.

PETITION FOR CHARTER

SEVENTY-FIVE MEN DESIRE TO BECOME AFFILIATED.

May Be Organized in October—Lodge Headquarters Not Yet Selected—The Men Back of the Scheme.

The movement started sometime ago to organize a local lodge of Elks in this city is now well underway and it is probable that in the fall the petition which has been circulated among many prominent Plainfielders will be sent to the State headquarters for a charter. The lodge in New Brunswick will have to consent before a charter can be obtained here.

Chief of Police Patrick Kiely, Assemblyman William Newcorn, Thomas Timbo, and other well known Elks have been active in the circulation of the petition and over seventy-five names have already been secured. Among those whose names appear on the paper are members of the lodge at present but who desire a local camp. There are many others who have signed their names to be members of the organization.

At present the local Elks are obliged to attend the sessions of the lodge at New Brunswick or at Elizabeth. There the membership is large and the rooms occupied by the B. P. O. E. are already crowded. There has been a steady increase of membership in the New Brunswick lodge and a large percentage of the new men are from this city.

No rooms have been decided upon so far although a well known Elk, in speaking of the petition a few days ago, said that in the event of a charter being secured rooms may be obtained in the Babcock building or in the old Council chambers on Park avenue. It is reported that an organization will be effected in October.

THRILLS AND TREMULOS.

Professor Hoyle Whistled the Mocking Bird and Captivated Hotel Audience at Netherwood.

An excellent concert was given last evening at the Hotel Netherwood by the well-known musician, Professor Hoyle, of New York City. His selections delighted a large audience of hotel guests and their friends and consisted of piano solos and several songs. Professor Hoyle also whistled the Mocking Bird, and captivated his hearers.

The attraction for the guests of the hotel tomorrow evening will be a progressive euchre party. Saturday evening the usual weekly hop will be held with music by the hotel orchestra.

FLOOD FUND.

Mayor Jenkins Reports That Fifty Dollars Has Been Subscribed for Sufferers.

Any person wishing to contribute toward assisting the Kansas City sufferers can do so by forwarding the same to City Treasurer Wm. F. Arnold at the City National Bank. Mayor O. L. Jenkins reports that thus far only $50 has been received toward this worthy object and he would like to make the total amount at least $100. A ready response will be appreciated.

Surprise Party.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Anglebauer, Sr., of East Third street, was the scene of an attractive surprise party Monday evening tendered to Mrs. Lenn, of Maspeth, L. I., who is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Anglebauer. The occasion was Mrs. Lenn's thirty-fifth birthday. About thirty-five relatives and friends were present.

Sent to Reformatory.

Elizabeth, July 23—George Gardiner, of Plainfield, who was arrested on a petty charge, has been sent to the reformatory.

HOPE Y. M. A. CONTRIBUTES $140

JUDGE RUNYON'S BOYS DONATE SUM TO CHAPEL IMPROVEMENT.

Father of the Flock Leaves for Lake Hopatcong to Select Camping Site.

A special meeting of the Hope Chapel Y. M. A. was held at the chapel Tuesday, President William K. Runyon presiding. Rev. L. R. Howard asked for a donation to help defray the expenses of the new kitchen, stating that the Ladies' Aid Society had raised $300 and $60 had been received from individual members of the chapel. The Society voted $140 to be added to that already received by Mr. Howard, making a total of $500. The new kitchen with all improvements will cost $1,000. The swimming-pool will be erected on the ground floor of the new addition. President Runyon was appointed a committee of one to secure a site for the camp at Lake Hopatcong, the Judge left today for the Lake. C. B. Morse, secretary of the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League, announced that $5.10 was the proportionate share for each team of the net receipts.

CAPTURED BY GOD OF LOVE

BETROTHAL OF MRS. J. P. MASON AND JOHN B. DUMONT.

Announcement a Pleasant Surprise in Society—Mr. Dumont a Distinguished Citizen.

Local society is pleasantly surprised to hear of the engagement of Mrs. J. Parker Mason, of Stelle avenue, to John B. Dumont, of East Seventh street. No date has been set for the wedding, which no doubt will be a society event.

Mr. Dumont is a broker, prominently identified with the New York Stock Exchange and has figured conspicuously in public affairs here for many years. Until recently he was a vestryman of Grace Church. As president of the Common Council he did much to advance the interests of the community and as a director of the Public Library he has helped materially to build up that institution. His first wife died about two years ago. Mrs. Belknap, wife of the Republican candidate for governor of Kentucky, is a daughter.

Mrs. Mason is the widow of James Parker Mason, a prominent iron commission merchant of New York and is the daughter of J. Howard Wright, an influential New Yorker, who recently donated the fund for the Memorial addition to the new Muhlenberg Hospital group of buildings. She has figured much in society here and in the metropolis.

KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS.

Charles Drake Comes in Contact With Pole While Working on Trolley Sprinkler.

Charles Drake, of Jefferson avenue, North Plainfield, was struck by a trolley pole while working on the trolley sprinkling car on the Aldene branch of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway lines yesterday.

Drake was leaning out of the front of his car looking at the sprinklers when he struck his head a resounding blow against a pole. He fell unconscious in the roadway. William McCarthy, the conductor, stopped the car and picked his motorman up. A little stimulant revived him and although he had a severe gash in the side of his head he was able to keep at work until relieved.

Fish Story, Phew!

John Hubbard, of North Branch, caught a black bass in the Raritan Monday which weighed ten pounds, seven ounces. It is said to be the biggest bass ever caught with a hook and line in the State. Hubbard made two other star catches on the same day, one of a bass weighing eight and a quarter pounds and another weighing five and three quarters. The fish are being exhibited as a Somerville fish market.

Meeting of Creditors.

The creditors of John Dahl, a bankrupt contractor, will hold a meeting in the office of Prosecutor English at Elizabeth, Thursday, July 30. At that time a trustee will be appointed by Referee DuCuster. Assemblyman William Newcorn is looking after Dahl's interests.

Cashier's Vacation.

David M. Runyon, cashier of the First National Bank, accompanied by his wife, left today for New York State, where they will enjoy a ten days' outing in the mountains.]

REPUBLICANS PLAN FOR THE CAMPAIGN

Majority Party's Executive Committe Holds a Meeting.

AS TO NATURALIZATION

VOTING MACHINE IN FIRST DISTRICT OF FOURTH WARD.

Secretary Newcorn to Issue Call for Primaries — Messrs. Case, Keeley, Morrison and Adams on Naturalization Committee.

The City Republican Executive Committee met last Tuesday and took preliminary steps towards the opening of the fall campaign in this city. In the absence of Mayor O. L. Jenkins, chairman of the committee, J. F. Eschle presided at the meeting. Secretary William Newcorn, was instructed to issue the calls for the primaries at the necessary time and it is the desire of the committee that all members of the city and county committees forward to the executive committee the names of the election officers.

Mr. Buckle appointed Horace Adams, James Morrison, John Keeley and John Case as a committee on naturalization. Those wishing to take advantage of the naturalization laws, as well as those having the names of any persons who desire papers, are requested to see any member of the committee or forward their names to the committee as soon as possible so that arrangements may be made to visit the county clerk's office at Elizabeth. Dates will be arranged for this as soon as the committee receive the applications of persons intending to become citizens.

Assemblyman Wm. Newcorn has designated the first district of the Fourth ward as the place for one of the voting machines allowed for Plainfield. This place is chosen owing to the central location, making it possible for any one interested to see it in operation. The machine will probably be used at the approaching election in September. The State commission to whom was assigned the task of securing eighty-one voting machines, will select several makes, divided them up as to localities and then put them to a fair test. Upon the result will depend future action as regards supplying all parts of the State with machines.

The local board of elections has not yet been entirely completed. The chairman of the various wards will forward the names of the officers from each ward some time during this week to Secretary Newcorn and they will then be made public.

MARRIED IN ST. MARY'S

Miss Mary Reynolds Becomes the Wife of James Block.

James Block, of Stone street, a coachman in the employ of Edwin Hooley, of North Plainfield, and Miss Mary Reynolds were married last Tuesday in St. Mary's R. C. Church by Father Egan officiated. The wedding was a quiet one, only the immediate friends and relatives of the couple being present.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Katherine Reynolds, and the best man was Edward Unrahan. After they were made man and wife a reception was held at the home of the groom in the borough. They will reside here.

Killing Dogs.

The dog poisoner is again at work in this city. Yesterday two large dogs belonging to residents on Watchung avenue, near East Front street, were found dead. This makes five canines which have met death through the poisoner's tempting bait in one week.

A. O. Trust Married.

August O. Trust, formerly of this city, but now of East Arcadia, N. C., and Miss Harriet Love, of Armour, the same State, were married at the home of the bride's parents Wednesday, July 15. The couple will reside at East Arcadia.

Mrs. Woodhall Improving.

Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull, who has been staying at German Valley, Hunterdon county, has returned home. She has been quite ill for some time, but is now reported as slowly convalescing.

Salt Water Day.

Friday will be known as "Salt Water Day" at Boynton Beach. In consequence a host of colored folks from this and neighboring towns will journey to this popular resort on that day.

BEN LA VERE'S BAND CONCERT PROGRAMME

Arrangements for Third and Probably Final Musical Feast.

FUNDS BADLY NEEDED

EXPECTED FINANCIAL SUPPORT HAS NOT BEEN FORTHCOMING.

Cornet and Tenor Solos to be Features of the Concert—Hiawatha to be Repeated by Request—At the City Park.

What is likely to be the last of the series of band concerts at the City Park will take place this evening, Benjamin LaVere again doing the honors with his band. The programme is well up to the standard of excellence set by the first two concerts. "Hiawatha" is included by special request. Albert C. Sweet will again play a cornet solo, and Wm. Murray, one of the most talented tenors of New York City, will sing two popular selections, "General Hard Tack on Guard" and "I'm Thinking of Thee All the While."

Mr. LaVere, who has been to much time and trouble in providing for the success of the concerts, announces that he will be obliged to discontinue them unless the petitions now before the City Council are granted. It is especially requested that those who have pledged money in support of the undertaking will pay their subscriptions as soon as possible. Everybody has been appreciative of the delightful concerts which Mr. LaVere has arranged but few have seemed willing to co-operate with him in a manner substantial enough to encourage further efforts.

This is tonight's programme:

Part I—March, "Cosmos," Altehouse; overture, "Lustspiel," Kela Bela; concert waltz, "Helmet of Navarre," Hirst; cornet solo, "The Vacant Chair," Rollinson, by Albert C. Sweet; medley, "Coming Thro' the Rye," von Tilzer; songs, "General Hard Tack on Guard" and "I'm Thinking of Thee All the While."

Part II—Descriptive, "A Hunting Scene," Bucolossi; popular, (a), intermezzo, "Anona," Vivian Grey; (b), idyll, "Hiawatha," Morse; selection, "Mocking," Slone; march, "Corigo Love Song," Cole and Johnson.

GUN CLUB CONTEST WINNERS

CHARLES STOECKEL WINS FIRST PRIZE IN RIFLE CONTEST.

Dr. C. M. Luckey Champion in Trap Shooting—Two Tied in Target Practice Tourney.

Captain Henry Haurand, of the Independent Gun Club, gives the list of probable winners of the season's shooting at the Maple avenue grounds. The result of the scores will not be definitely known until the latter part of next week as the result of the last shoot which took place Monday afternoon will not be scheduled before that time.

It is probable that Henry Haurand and William Krauss have tied in the target practice tourney. Charles Stoekel, William Krauss and Frank Keller are the winners of the first, second and third prizes, respectively, in the rifle contests and Dr. C. M. Luckey, Louis Van Dyke and Charles Jensen are the winners in the first, second and third class, respectively, in the trap shooting contests.

The captain's prize of a handsome imported stein will probably be awarded to Joseph Keating for having the most bull's eye to his credit for the season. A consolation of a burnt leather medal is being prepared and this will be presented to the member scoring the lowest.

Lowering Grade.

Street Commissioner Garrett's men have lowered the sidewalk grade at the corner of Elmwood place and West Second street, to conform to the established grade of the two streets.

Lost We Forget.

—Everything that is first class is sold at Newman Brothers. Rockdale butter, Rockyford melons, fruits and vegetables which arrive each morning and staple and fancy groceries. Newman Brothers lead, others imitate.

LOCAL MACHINISTS' ODD EXPERIENCE

Start South, But Turn Back When Informed of Real Circumstances.

STOOD BY THE UNION

REFUSED TO ACCEPT POSITIONS AS SCABS IN SOUTHERN SHOP.

Employes of Federic-Ayres Co. Leave for Florida, But When En-Route Hear of Facts Which Make Them Discontinue the Journey.

About a dozen employes of the Federic-Ayres Company took a trip down the line towards Florida two weeks ago without having any knowledge of what was to be their destination. The men were induced to make the venture by a "smooth-spoken" individual who stated that he was a representative of an important manufacturing concern which was in need of machinists and was willing to pay big salaries for their services. He refused to divulge the nature of the business or the company's location.

In spite of his secrecy, a number of the men listened to his arguments and agreed to his terms. Still in ignorance of their destination, they took a southbound train, and were not informed of the object of their journey until after they had passed beyond Baltimore and were still speeding South at the rate of forty miles an hour. Then their manager told them that they were to be used as "scabs" in a boiler-making concern in Fernandina, Florida, from which all the employes had struck.

This was a rather hard morsel to swallow, as most of the men in the party believed faithfully in unions. Two of them, one of whom was Frank Marsh, of New Market, refused to enter into the scheme and announced their intention of quitting the party at the next station, and returning to Plainfield.

They followed out their intention to the letter, in spite of additional inducements and the fact that neither one of them had more than a dollar or two in his pocket. Their long journey home they began courageously, starting out on foot and buying their meals generally at farm houses on the way. Sometimes they succeeded in getting rides on freight trains for twenty or thirty miles, sometimes a farmer's wagon gave them "a lift" and often they covered long weary stretches on foot. It took them a week to make the return trip to Plainfield, where they arrived last Sunday, much the worse for wear.

TRIAL POSTPONED.

Contract Case Against "Mayor" Smith, of New Market, Continued.

The case of Harry Dreier against Wm. B. Smith in Justice VonMinden's court in New Market was continued this morning. Dreier is suing Smith for some baseball suits which Smith bought but neglected to pay for. They were to be used for the New Market team for which Smith was manager. Smith has retained W. S. Angleman as his lawyer, and Wm. Newcorn represents the plaintiff.

Celebrates Birthday.

Miss Ethel Skillman, daughter of Lewis S. Skillman, of Watchung avenue, celebrated her thirteenth birthday yesterday afternoon and evening, giving a lawn party at her home. About twenty friends were present, among them being several from Elizabeth and Somerville. The lawn was prettily decorated with Japanese lanterns.

Held for Assault.

Robert Kiely and Michael Gartland were held in $100 for the Grand Jury yesterday by Justice Hand. They were arrested by Constable Gjetjesson on complaint of Robert Donnelly who charged them with having knocked him down and drawn a knife with the intention of further assaulting him.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Wm. B. Randolph, a well-known barber of Park avenue, and Miss Emma Jones, an estimable woman, of Boston, Mass. The date for the wedding has not yet been set.

To Be Married in August.

The engagement of Miss Margaret Day, of East Fourth street, to Joseph Atkinson Shelly, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is announced. The wedding is to take place early in August. Miss Day is the daughter of John Day.

IMPROVING W. U. SERVICE

LOCAL WESTERN UNION COMPANY TO ESTABLISH BRANCHES.

Messenger Service as Well to be a Feature Hereafter.

The Western Union Telegraph Company has completed arrangements for opening three branch offices in this city, one at Clinton avenue, another at Grant avenue and the third at Netherwood station. People living in the vicinity of these branch offices can file their messages with the ticket agents who will immediately telephone them over a private wire to the North Avenue station whence they will be sent to their destination.

The company has also established a local service, by which, for a small fee, messages can be sent from any of the branch stations to the North Avenue station and from there delivered by messengers to any part of the city. People living in the vicinity of Richmond street and in the eastern part of the city can telegraph from the freight depot between the hours of 8 in the morning and 6 in the afternoon daily except Sundays.

MASTER MASONS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND COURT HOUSE CORNER STONE CEREMONIES.

Worshipful Masters and Other Distinguished Officers Invited to the Banquet.

Most Worshipful Grand Master W. Holt Apgar, of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New Jersey, has sent invitations to Worshipful Master James A. Stafford and Worshipful Master Louis I. VanAlstyne requesting the presence of the officers and members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, and Anchor Lodge, No. 149, at the ceremonies incidental to the laying of the County Court House cornerstone at Elizabeth on July 30.

The local worshipful masters are invited to attend the banquet following the exercises. Dr. D. O. Adams and other local masons of high degree have received special invitations. Capt. J. Frank Hubbard, who will deliver the address of welcome as director of the Board of Freeholders, is a member of Jerusalem Lodge, and Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, who will deliver the oration, is also a member of the fraternity. The Grand Lodge will be opened at 10:30 o'clock in the lodge room of Washington Lodge, No. 33, Masonic Hall. All officers have been requested to wear silk hats, frock coats and the jewels.

SETTLES CLAIM.

Amicable Arrangement Made Between Railroad and a West-field Victim.

John K. Large, claims agent for the New Jersey Central, yesterday settled the claim of Miss Mildred E. Everitt, of Somerset street and Mountain avenue, for injuries received in the Westfield disaster on January 27 last. The settlement was made through Miss Everitt's counsel, Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer.

Funeral of Infant.

The funeral services over the remains of Sarah, the four-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, of Somerset street, were held this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp was the officiating minister. During the services the Misses Alice and Jennie DeMott sang "The Christian's Good Night" and "Face to Face." The remains were taken to Somerville where the interment was in the family plot.

On the Elks' Trail.

Herbert Overbaugh, Henry Pettyfloss, George O. Stevens and Alexander Findley left yesterday for Baltimore where they will attend the national convention of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. The session began yesterday and will continue through to Saturday evening.

In Honor of Miss Reiber.

In honor of Miss Alberta Reiber, of New York, who was their guest, Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Greene, Jr., of Willow avenue, entertained a party of young people at their home Monday evening.

Going Abroad.

Miss Annie B. Bogart, of East Sixth street, is booked to sail tomorrow on the American Line steamer St. Paul, for Southampton.

—At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A., last evening, nothing of special importance was done.

LOCAL COMMUNICANTS MOURN FOR PONTIFF

Altars in St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Draped by the Sisters.

BISHOP ISSUES ORDERS

ST. JOSEPH'S HOLY NAME SOCIETY ADOPTS SUITABLE RESOLUTIONS.

Father Egan Receives Instructions From Bishop O'Connor, but Father Miller Has Received None From Bishop McFaul.

Black crepe draped about the altars of the Roman Catholic Churches of this city today tell in solemn silence the grief which has come to the parishioners of those churches by the death at the Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII. At St. Joseph's R. C. Church and St. Mary's Church the Sisters of Mercy spent the entire morning in draping the alters and interiors of the edifice with black and purple.

Hung on each of the altars at St. Joseph's Church are festoons of black while about the sides of the church are intertwined long streamers of black and purple. These decorations of sorrow will remain in the church until after the funeral of the dead Pontiff. The Holy Name Society of that church has adopted these resolutions:

"North Plainfield, N. J., July 22, 1903.

IN MEMORIAM.

Leo XIII is dead
He lived while the world made its greatest strides in progress
He lived and labored with this great world as his workshop and humanity as his patrons
And now he has laid aside the implements of peace with which he toiled.
His work is done and he has gone to his Master to be judged of its value.
We mourn his loss—we bespeak for him the earnest prayers of all—for who was not the friend of Leo? Who so loved our country and its people.
The Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's Church, North Plainfield, N. J., learn of the death of Leo XIII, Pope: with sincere regret, and hereby express the sorrow felt by the members of this society which enjoyed his special protection.

Robt. McCormack,
Pres. Holy Name Society,
North Plainfield, N. J.,
July 22, 1903.
Andrew E. Kenney,
Secretary.

St. Mary's R. C. Church has also been draped in mourning. The altars are cloaked in the colors of mourning while about the sides of the church are festoons of jet.

Rev. Father Egan has received from Right Rev. Dr. John J. O'Connor, Bishop of the Diocese of Newark, this letter:

"The sad news of the death of our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII, has come from Rome. The church has been deprived of her supreme guide on earth who for more than twenty-five years ruled her destinies with consummate wisdom. The visible head of the church, the Vicar of Christ, full of years and good works, has been called from the scene of his earthly labors, and the faithful throughout the world mourn the spiritual father for whose care Divine Providence had intrusted them during the past quarter century. The joys of the recent papal jubilee have changed to sadness and grief. The church has lost a great pontiff, the world an enlightened statesman and scholar, mankind a father and friend.

"As spiritual children of our departed high priest we deplore our loss and we pray that God in his goodness may guide and protect His church during the period of her widowhood. The papacy is immortal, though the occupant of the papal chair is subject to the inevitable law of death.

"During these days of mourning and until the Sacred College of Cardinals shall elect a successor to the deceased Pontiff you are directed to add in the mass when the rubrics will permit, the collect 'De Spiritu Sancto,' that the Holy Ghost may enlighten those who are intrusted with this important duty, and inspire them so to choose one after God's own heart to continue the work of the lamented Leo XIII.

"All priests exercising faculties in this diocese are directed to offer, at their earliest convenience, three masses for the repose of the soul of our departed Pontiff, and the reverend

ON MARRIAGES

They Are Too Frequently Matters of Convenience

"If there is one thing that excites my scorn," remarked the woman with definite ideas, "it is the girl who looks upon marriage in the light of a bargain counter sale and tries to get the most she can for her money, or, worse still, the girl who is frantic to marry before she begins to fade. To hear some girls talk you would think they were vegetables in a market—anything, in fact, except human beings with pride and feelings."

"You evidently agree," put in her friend the bachelor, "with the remark the college professor made to his class: 'Marry, my sons, if you must, just as soon as you possibly can, but don't marry until you just have to.' It is apparently contradictory, but is really full of sense."

"Well, yes, I would like a little more of that sort of feeling, or indeed of any feeling at all. Marriage nowadays seems to be all a matter of bargain and cleverness on the woman's part. If there is anything despicable on this earth I think it is marrying a man you do not love; worse still, marrying one man for his money and position while you are in love with another. Marrying just for the sake of being supported has no longer the vestige of an excuse now that women can make their own way and amount to something on their own account in the world. Why speak of woman's progress while this sort of thing continues?"

"What do you consider the right sort of marriage, might we ask?" queried the bachelor.

"The only sort of marriage which stands any chance of being happy is the marriage where there is trust on both sides, the love which comes from a perfect understanding and similar tastes and sympathies. The size of the income has nothing to do with it. Things are bound to prosper if the home is blessed with a love like that, and if the man has a wife who not only appreciates him, but makes his interests her own. It is the greatest mistake in the world for the husband to shut his wife out from his interests and make of her only a baby and a toy. It is the greatest mistake in the world for a husband and a wife not to share each other's amusements also as well as worries. Marriage which admits of no chumship would better never be at all."

"I don't suppose you believe in taking a man and making him over to suit?"

"I certainly do not. Sooner or later he will return to his natural condition, although he may depart from it for a time to please the girl he is trying to win. If a girl is wise she will wait for the man whose temperament and tastes naturally fit in with her own. She will wait years—forever if necessary. But the trouble with the average girl is that she is so afraid she won't get married that she won't be patient."

"I see you believe in affinities?"

"One affinity for each woman? No. I believe a woman can love sincerely more than once, but there is a certain kind of man she can love, and only that one particular kind combining certain qualities. It is the fatal mistake she marries a man not of that class misery is sure to follow."

"Marriage is a 'canny' game," murmured the bachelor. "That is, why I have never tried it."

"You never met the right girl," retorted the woman, "and, being more honest than many of my sex, you refused to console yourself with any other."

A twinkle appeared in his eyes. "Eh! Well, perhaps you're right!" she heard him say.

Monte Carlo Coats.

Some very short Monte Carlo coats are made for the young. They are roomy, and pretty, made short in the back, with the fronts reaching a little below the waist line. Such coats are almost universally laid in folds, the upper portion only being fastened. White lace in a hundred different ways of application is used on them, and one may see all sorts of medallions or other shapes of trimming.

There is a real coat for tatted deep collars to wear over the shoulders, and hand crocheted lace is at a premium. Indeed there is a great demand for the latter, and it is used on skirts, waists and coats. Many new patterns of this durable lace are now designed, so that it does not resemble the old fashioned kind.

WERE TRUE TO CHUM

Human Nature in the Fierce Wilderness of Maine.

How Two Log Drivers Took Body of Their Dead Comrade Home—Lots of Sand and Devotion in Their Makeup.

Jamie Bell and Daniel Molloy, of Bangor, Me., have proved themselves "true blue" heroes, but they will get no medals—only the heartfelt thanks of poor people, the weeping mother and sisters of John Haggerty, and credit from every lumberman on the Penobscot for having lots of "sand" in their make-up.

It was seven weeks ago that John Francis Haggerty, of Bangor, better known as "Reddy" Haggerty, a first-class log driver, and he went to the far-away Allegash with 50 others, including some friends from his own town. Five weeks ago Haggerty became sick, having taken cold, and on a recent Sunday he died—some say from typhoid fever, others from pneumonia. No one bothers to find out the details of a woodman's taking off, for that takes time, and while men are plentiful, time is limited. "Hurry the job" is the main idea.

When, after lingering for weeks in a wretched hovel, with no care save what his loyal chums could give him in their rough way, and with never a drop of medicine—when, after untold suffering, poor Haggerty died, the first thing that occurred to the boss of the drive was to dispose of the body, and he ordered it buried then and there, in the wilderness of the Allegash, where the little mound would soon be lost in the tangle of undergrowth, unmarked and forgotten. The task of thus disposing of the mortal remains of "Reddy" Haggerty fell to his two chief cronies—"Jimmy" Bell and "Danny" Molloy, of Bangor. They were too hurry about it, too, for the drive was making slow progress, and their services were needed every minute to prevent the logs from being hung up.

Bell and Molloy flatly refused to do the bidding of the boss. They knew that Haggerty's mother would sorrow to the end of her days if the body of her boy were left in the wilderness, and they also felt that the reproaches of all Hancock street, where they lived and were brought up together, would be upon them if they should fail to do what they could to bring the body home. The hovel on the Allegash where poor Haggerty died was 200 miles north of Bangor, and there was not even a tote road through the woods to Patten, the nearest settlement. They could see, towering above the misty, far summit of Katahdin, and with that for a guide, they determined to make the attempt to carry the corpse out.

Telling the boss of Lawler's drive that, so far as they were concerned, the logs could stay there and rot, Bell and Molloy placed the body of their dead chum in the bottom of a canoe, and, taking a handful of salt fish and hardtack, they started down the Allegash. They had not gone far when they found that the canoe was in danger of being dashed to pieces against the rocks that studded the shallow stream, where the current runs a mill-race, and so they got out into the icy water, waist deep, and pushed the canoe, guiding it carefully, for 32 miles. At nightfall Sunday they were so benumbed with cold that they were obliged to halt, and, pulling the canoe up on the bank, they made a big fire.

On Monday they came to a stretch where the water was so quick that one was obliged to care for the canoe while the other carried the body for five or six rods, staggering over rocks, over boulders, in rapids and through thorny underbrush. At noon they came to smooth water again, and from there to the journey's end it was merely a question of endurance. They reached Patten in the afternoon, in the logs could stay there and rot, Bell and Molloy placed the body of their dead chum in the bottom of a canoe, and, taking a handful of salt fish and hardtack, they started down the Allegash. At noon they came to smooth water again, and from there to the journey's end it was merely a question of endurance. They reached Patten in the afternoon, in time to catch the only train for and sent in the evening train to Bangor. They were so much exhausted that they staggered as they passed through the streets of Patten, and were unable to eat the food set before them. It was an awful experience, even for such wiry, tough-muscled Bangor log drivers.

Having seen the body on its way to Bangor, "Jimmy" Bell and "Danny" Molloy turned back through the wilderness for the Allegash, and over the death of their friend "Reddy," but satisfied that they had done all that men could do, and knowing that they need not be ashamed to go back to Bangor and face the neighbors in Hancock street. And in Bangor there is no knowing them say: "Jimmy and Danny's all right."

PUNISHING THE CHILD.

It Should Be Done in a Calm, Logical Frame of Mind.

Use a little logic in correcting your child.

It is unjust to ignore a child's faults and only occasionally punish them—probably with undue harshness—when they have occurred at an annoying time or when you were in a bad temper. Never give way to temper in correcting a child. Wait until your feelings are calm.

Give the child as few commands as possible, but insist that these be rigidly obeyed. Do not enforce obedience by idle threats, for as the child's intelligence grows it will see that these cannot be kept and will be unmoved by them. The minute the child discovers that the mother does not mean what she says respect and discipline vanish.

If a threat is necessary let it be one which can be carried out immediately. Let punishment follow as closely as possible the offense. It is unwise and unkind to prolong the unhappiness caused by a small fault by suggesting a punishment which must of necessity be deferred. Don't deprive the child of a promised good time next week because of what he has done today. Let him begin next week with a calm mind and a clear conscience.

All punishment should be logical, and the reason for things should be explained to a child as soon as it is old enough to understand.

Always expect a child to be good and show great surprise and disappointment if he fails.

It is very unwise to suggest naughtiness by such remarks as "She is not going to leave her things around again in disorder, is she?" "He won't be a bad boy and slap his little sister again, will he?"

And, above all, remember this—let the punishment be as light as possible and always make the children feel that you are their friend and good adviser instead of their tyrant.

EMPIRE RECEPTION ROOM.

A Simple but Rich Effect With Little Furniture.

Simplicity is the keynote of success in interior decoration. This is particularly noticeable in those rooms which are used for visitors, in which no household paraphernalia is allowed to be in evidence. Such rooms have an airy effect while they are at the same time cheerful.

In the picture we have an empire reception room which is tastefully decorated in white and pale yellow. The ornate ceiling and the woodwork are white. Panels of yellow silk decorate the walls and the lights are in the form of gilt candelabras shaded with pale yellow flowers.

The furniture is mahogany covered in yellow and pale old rose. Even the piano stool accentuates the empire idea.

A room of this description could be easily carried out in some of the inexpensive Hindu empire cretonnes now in vogue instead of the expensive damask or silk.

R. DE LA BAUME.

THE NEW WOMAN

Her Fads and Foibles

Many women, like Peter Ibbetson, "dream true." More than would own to it have visions more or less prophetic. It is certainly now a time when the human nervous system is developing so that it will be able to catch far finer sounds, far more delicate sight impressions, than the average civilized person of to-day is able to do. This power is a lost one which animals and to some extent primitive man retain. Women have with their keen nerves the frequent gift of clairaudience and clairvoyance. Several ladies I know receive positive intelligence and inspiration from sources imperceptible to the common outward senses. Sometimes impressions come as astral pictures—again as soundless voices. There is nothing supernatural about it; only a more finely attuned nerve system that catches impressions unperceived before. The real help of these impressions is not, however, the vulgar one of aiding us to gain our coarse and crude material aims, like getting rich or winning a husband. One who depends on the vision for things like this will be led astray by her own foolish auto suggestion. The real help is spiritual and mental. For this vision can be trusted every time. A few mornings ago one of the women I mentioned waked from a short, sweet sleep and at the moment of doing so perceived some words. To save her life she could not distinguish whether she herself said them or whether something said them to her. It was probably what is called her subconscious mind that spoke the words. They seemed to come as the close of an oration or message of some kind; but whatever the source they lingered with her all through the day and many days after that like a sweet perfume. The words were: "Violet, be true, be steadfast." A cumulative emphasis was laid on each adjective, and steadfast came last, as though to be steadfast was the summing up of it all. Perhaps it is.

A little girl named Violet, eleven years old, thought to surprise her mother by some fine needlework she had learned from a small schoolmate. She had done some very delicate hemstitching, I think they call it; at least it was that kind where you draw threads out of the hem at bottom of a hem and then further make holes in it by means of a thread and needle so that a line around the hem will tear and wear out sooner than the rest of the article. I suppose that is what it is done for. This little girl took the utmost pains with a specimen of the time and labor wasting work, then carried it to her mother, expecting high praise. But her mother said: "Violet, throw away that stuff, and never do you touch any of it again. I won't have you ruining your eyesight in that way." Sensible mother! Fortunate Violet to have such a mother!

"The world is for woman also."

I wonder why American college girls do not take to special scientific study. They have more opportunity and greater advantages than any other women, yet so far they seem content with achieving a high standing in scholarship, the mere committing to memory what other people learned before them without making original research for themselves. That is what the true lover of science does in any department. It is not to the credit of American women that the greatest mathematician of their sex, Mary Somerville, was British; that the woman chemist who has since lived to possess one of the great brains of her century, Mme. Curie, is a Polish woman resident in Paris. What are our women students about in the United States?

Learn to sink your own uneasy, vainglorious little personality in the One Life; then you can be happy.

Gourley, M. P., of Nova Scotia, in the Canadian parliament squeals defiance at the American eagle, says, so it is reported, that he detests the very existence of the United States and says further his loyalist ancestors would rise from their graves should he speak a good word for us. Dear me, there, there, Gourley, M. P.! Don't be too hard on us. Think how a merciful Providence raised up the United States on purpose to keep the British aristocracy out of the poorhouse! Think how it would have to come down to hard work for its living if Yankee girls did not buy its young fellows for husbands!

Woman's sphere is this whole universe.

A girl of sixteen ran away with a widower of eighty and married him. She took her clothes in a carpet bag, left her house at night through a second story window and brought him out to a carriage she had in waiting. His family claim the girl Lochinvar kidnaped him. Just as though he was not old enough to know his own mind!

If you would have a rare, sure quality of fascination cultivate a sweet, clear, flexible speaking voice. Throw the sound of it distinctly from your lips out, open your lips in front more than we Americans are in the habit of doing, and you enunciate clearly. There is marvelous music in a woman's clear, sweet voice, and such a voice is more needed in talking than even in singing.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

WOMEN'S SPEECHES.

Ladies Have Proved That They Can Speak With the Best.

The pleasing murmur of the women's clubs is silenced officially for the summer. While the members are meditating new coups one may glance over the net result of their past work in one particular—their progress in the art of oratory and eloquence. When first women's clubs were instituted it was feared the fair girls, old and young, could never learn or observe parliamentary usage. When a lady in the beginning of feminine clubdom rose to address Madam President it was with a flutter, a twitter and a gasp and a gulp in her throat, and she once in awhile choked up at half a dozen words, sat down, covered her face with her hands and burned into tears at marring her maiden speech. I have seen a lady do that.

Would women ever learn to talk in public?

Time and clubs went on. Women did learn parliamentary usage so thoroughly and practice it so strenuously that today the leading teachers and trainers of that branch of education the country over are of the feminine sex.

Learn to talk in public? Well, club women began practicing that, too, and became quite adamic adepts at it that at length it seems they never do anything else than talk. Undoubtedly the ladies have found their tongues in public.

A cynical rabbinical legend records of when Eve was packing her trunks to leave the garden of Eden just the last thing before she passed through the gate she ran to the great tree of Gabbie and under it gathered up twelve basketfuls of talk and brought them away with her. She sowed some of the seed and planted it, and that spread the trees all over. Thus one of her blessings at least Eve brought from her lost Edenic state, and that was the right of talkee-talkee. Her daughters, the club women, let not this blessing wane for want of use.

It is on record that one ladies' organization set out to improve the condition of poor girls by establishing an institution where they might learn trades. Their efforts extended over a number of years. In 1900 the president gave an account of progress before the society, and her address began:

"Unfortunately, our school for girls still remains an unaccomplished fact."

Three years have passed since then and the school for girls "still remains an unaccomplished fact." But the conventions, the love feasts and, above all, the elections the dear ladies have enjoyed since then! The motions they have moved, the speeches they have spoken! At one meeting the solemn question is discussed, "Does woman lose her womanliness by entering a business career?"

Miss Cloverton regrets painfully to say it does. Miss Rotherton declares flatly it is no such thing that woman loses her womanliness by entering on a business career. So what are you going to do about it? Then Miss Motherton, a shrewd looking spinster, propounds this conundrum:

"THE DAY MY SON WAS MARRIED."

"Madam President and ladies, what is womanliness?"

And there you are.

Mrs. Bingle offers a resolution that the human race is to be saved only through plentifully mothering it, and she says:

"There is one day in my life I shall never forget, and that is the day my son was married."

Then Mrs. Tringle offers an amendment to Mrs. Bingle's resolution to the effect that "we seek for a work on which all may unite, and that we refuse to act until we find a standard upon which all may agree." And they are not done making speeches about their standard of harmony yet. From time to time they adjourn the subject of a basis of harmony over till next meeting. Madam President herself has defined the scope of the grand organization and it is the ladies to bear this in mind in their pursuit of a common basis of harmony.

"We are," she said, "a deliberative body whose women may compare and advise together, where all are invited to the many speeches and addresses. Therefore there can exist no rivalry. Therefore our organization overlaps or interferes with no other body of women. Our society simply holds a place ready for the concentration of the voice and energy of all organized womanhood toward furthering questions of general public welfare and concern."

Was not that fine?

And the ladies are still talking—talking—talking.

RAIN AND DUST COATS.

Latest Designs In These Very Useful Articles—New Summer Dresses.

An indispensable article of apparel is a long dust or rain coat for traveling, and much thought has been expended in developing something graceful as well as useful for the purpose. These coats will also be found valuable for shopping or when it rains or threatens to do so. They are generally made of taffeta or cravenetted wool of some kind, though the silks for this purpose are as well as for many other purposes are treated by the process which makes them waterproof. These coats are unlined, are loose enough to slip on easily over any costume and are very long, some of them having almost a train in the back. The finish is plain, as a rule, but a few of the coats display a little ornamentation. A pretty one has a cape made of three folds, the lower two being detachable. The loose sleeves have two folds laid around and slightly fastened. At the side seams are pockets, excellent and sensible things which are almost forgotten by most women.

Just now lovely woman is thinking of but little beyond amusing herself, and few there be who have not stocked up with sweaters, golf vests and all sorts of things in the way of mountain climbing frocks, to say nothing of wheeling suits and auto costumes. The last for the present season are more apt to be of crash or heavy unbleached linen than anything with becoming hats and caps. The approaching cup yacht races have evoked a long line of sailor suits with something about each to signify to which boat the wearer's heart leans, and there are many suits with soft green shamrocks embroidered on the sleeves and wide collars. These suits are mostly of duck, though quite a number are of strong Irish linen, bleached or unbleached.

Among the newest of the materials now being made up for auxiliary dresses and suits for the smart set one finds some really exquisite mercerized chevlots, soft and yet so silky that it is almost impossible for one to think they are not at least half silk. A few of these chevlots are plain; other styles have an embroidered design; some are all white or black or in various solid colors or in mixtures.

Some of the all over embroidered batistes in colors make up into beautiful dresses, and there are some all over white ones quite as attractive. A new wrinkle is the old fashioned embroidery patterns made so that around the bottom of the dress there is a design which has wheels of large dimensions encircling smaller wheels, while the lower side is scalloped out and buttonholed heavily for the edge.

White lawn and finer batiste dresses are shown for belated ones or those who like to get new gowns from time to time all through a season. These are trimmed with lace in the usual quantities, which means all that can be put on, but now there seems to be rather a fancy for the finer laces, like lierre, valenciennes and white chantilly. Some of these dainty thin frocks have fancy shawl shaped capelines made of the same material as the dress and trimmed to match. The point of the shawl reaches down below the waist in the back and also in the front. The dresses can only be made with material forty-four inches wide, as the shawl is precisely square, and is worn doubled, so that both points appear at the back one below the other. Some like to wear this shawl as a fichu, but there are so many of these that one is forced to believe that they will be a fashion in themselves as shawls pure and simple. For several seasons there has been a movement in favor of the crape and india shawl, but somehow they have been voted down, and these may be before winter, but they are pretty in the light stuffs.

For fine dinner gowns the black spangled dresses are very fashionable, and are prettiest when the black spangles are picked out with silver ones. When there is a large leaf it is outlined with the silver or veined with it. The effect is fine.

One of the prettiest gowns I have recently seen was of pale French gray voile. The corsage was trimmed with a double bertha of cream tambour lace edged with a double ruche of soft liberty silk in a delicate shade of eau de nil. The small turn down collar was made of the same silk, and there were two hanging ornaments in cream silk cords to finish the soft lace front, which also formed the vest. The skirt was gathered on cords in three tiers falling full to the foot.

ORGAN BUILDING

A Pleasant Occupation For Women

In the United States a number of church organs would be a great novelty. In England, however, such women are not so rare. The skilled worker in the craft gets $10 a week, which is large wages for Great Britain. Here the pay would be much greater. Why American women have never tried it one cannot understand, for the work is not difficult.

In England the organ builder's trade is apt to run in families and be handed down from father to son or, as in the case of Miss Wedlake, well known in London, from father to daughter. Mr. Wedlake was a famous British artificer of church organs. He had a large factory of his own. His daughter desired to learn his handicraft. He desired to have her do so. She could not be apprenticed regularly because, being a woman, the sky would have fallen had she been articled like a boy. But, being a woman, she also had an eye, an ear, a touch and an adaptability to the work of organ building that not one boy in a thousand possesses. There was no law to prevent her learning the business as a rank outsider. Her father was a man liberal far beyond his time on the woman question. He himself taught her and took a fine pride in her progress.

Like a boy, she went into the factory and learned the trade from the ground up. It is a delicate, beautiful work, thoroughly healthful, artistic enough to be inspiring and satisfying.

Since she learned her trade Miss Wedlake has been constantly busy. She has the woman's natural quickness of eye, and long practice has made her accuracy absolutely unerring. Her work is chiefly the construction of bellows and the ornamentation of pipes. The blocks of wood for the bellows come already prepared. Then Miss Wedlake leathers and gussets them together. Pieces of white kid are cut exactly to fit and carefully adjusted to the wood by hand. There must be no looseness of execution here, for it would ruin all. In one of the large churches of London—St. Jude's, South Kensington—Miss Wedlake did all the leathering of the main bellows. In connection with organ bellows work Miss Wedlake's father invented and patented an ingenious piece of mechanism, which won him the medal at an exposition, but his daughter did the work of making the thing. She herself is inventive and has patented, among other devices, a stove that can be taken apart and cleaned and put together again by the most ignorant of women.

After she has constructed the bellows of her organ Miss Wedlake proceeds to decorate the pipes. In this department she rises to the artistic. She devises first a scheme of ornamentation suited to the subject. The theme is usually of an ecclesiastical or Biblical nature. Then she lays the figures deftly upon the pipes. Miss Wedlake's accomplishments, however, by no means stop at bellows making and adjusting and pipe ornamentation. She can take to pieces any organ in the world, clean and repair it and set it up again bit by bit. Then she finishes by tuning it.

There is another department in organ construction which requires the most sensitive touch, ear and nerves that belong to human being. That is the "voicing" of the organ. Here, too, woman has excelled. Some years ago there was in England a family of organ builders named Abbey. A daughter of the house became the most skilled of the race in the family trade. This lady, Miss Abbey, chose France as the field of her labors. She went thither and settled and began building at once organs and a business. So skillful was she that in this particular line she was soon known and became the marvel of the Frenchmen who were in the same field.

An expert authority sets forth the following qualifications for the organ maker: "A delicate and sensitive musical ear; always more or less deficiency in lift the less heavy pipes; some simple, cheap tools and about as much skill in their use as is required in very modest wood carving are the equipment necessary to start with in an organ builder's factory. The most difficult and highly paid branch of this industry is reed voicing, not the reeds of harmoniums, but of real organs. This is tedious to learn and takes years to master thoroughly."

MARY EDITH DAY.

YOUNG MEN OF TODAY

No Reason Why They Should Not Make Make Life a Success.

Marshall Field, Chicago's Great Merchant, Declares Every Man May Acquire Qualities to Make Him Truly Great.

Marshall Field, prince of successes, has written a letter to the American young man telling him how to succeed.

His advice is based upon the principles by which he when a young man lived and worked, and through which, he firmly believes, he won his way upward to the place where he stands today.

He places no great stress on "the commercial spirit," "the money-making instinct" or "the genius for success." Instead, he insists upon the earnest spirit, the honorable instinct and the genius for hard work.

In his letter Mr. Field mentions as essential to success only such qualities as may be acquired. In other words, Mr. Field throws open the delectable fields of success to all those who are willing to work to reach them.

The letter was written to Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis in response to certain questions propounded to Mr. Field by Dr. Hillis. It opens with the statement that, above all, a young man should first choose an occupation for which he feels himself to be fitted. The writer says in so many words that a great fortune is of less importance to a man in the world than a character, which will enable him to win the respect and honor of all with whom he shall come in contact. The letter is in part as follows:

Economy is one of the most essential elements of success, yet most wretchedly disregarded. The old adage, "Willful waste makes woeful want," never was more fully exemplified than in these days when much of the want that now prevails would not exist had care been taken in time of prosperity to lay up something for a "rainy day."

MARSHALL FIELD.
(Wealth Alone, He Says, Is Not a Sure Sign of Success.)

The average young man of to-day, when he begins to earn, is soon inclined to habits of extravagance and wastefulness; gets, somehow, imbued with the idea that, irrespective of what he earns, he must indulge in habits corresponding to those of some other young man.

The five, ten or fifteen cents a day that are squandered, while a mere trifle apparently, if saved would in a few years amount to thousands of dollars and go far toward establishing the foundation of a future career.

Too few realize that in order to acquire the dollars one must take care of the nickels. Careful saving and careful spending invariably promote success.

It has been well said that "it is not what a man earns, but what he saves, that makes him rich."

John Jacob Astor said that the saving of the first thousand dollars cost him the hardest struggle.

As a rule people do not know how to save. I deem it of the highest importance, therefore, to impress upon every young man the duty of beginning to save from the moment he commences to earn, be it ever so little.

A young man should aim to be manly and self-reliant; make good use of all the spare moments; read only wholesome books; study to advance his own interests as well as those of his employer in every possible way. As a rule, the young man of high principles and fair ability, who saves his money and keeps his habits good, becomes valuable in any concern; but as volumes have been written upon this subject it is not possible in a letter to cover it all.

By following out these suggestions, however, aiming constantly to prepare himself for a higher place, instead of waiting for something to turn up, every young man will succeed to a more or less degree.

I would not have them believe, however, that success consists solely in the acquisition of wealth. Far from it, as that idea is much too prevalent already.

The haste to become rich at the expense of character prevails to an alarming extent and cannot be too severely denounced.

What is needed to-day more than anything else is to instill in the minds of our young the desire above all to build up a character that will win the respect of all with whom they may come in contact, and which is vastly more important than a great fortune.

Merchants who keep their business well in hand, sell for cash and pay for goods at short time, taking advantage of all cash discounts, keep good habits and give strict attention to business very rarely fail.

MADE TRIP ON SNOWSHOES.

Early Minnesota Legislators Had a Hard Time Reaching the State Capitol.

The members of the Minnesota legislature of to-day are not content any to St. Paul, the capital, in the most palatial of railway carriages, says a Minneapolis exchange. Fifty years ago, and just at the time when the legislature assembled, some of the members from the extreme northern counties were sadly disappointed. They had hoped to walk into the new capitol, select their seats and enjoy the pleasure incident to the first occupancy of that structure. Their homes were so far removed from the capital and the means of communication during the winter months so poor as to practically isolate them, that they had not been able to keep in touch with the situation and did not know that the capitol was still unfinished. Three of them—Rolette, Kittson and Gingras, of the county of Pembina—had come the entire distance on snowshoes. Several had taken desperate chances of death by blizzards or hungry timber wolves. Several members of that legislature were afterward distinguished for their ability as debaters and shrewd politicians and part of them had a hand in forming the great commonwealth now called the "bread and butter state."

ENGLISH DISDAIN PEANUTS.

In Their Eyes the Toothsome Goober Is Fit Only to Be Fed to Swine.

Over in England they call the peanut "ground-nut" and "ground-bean," says the New York Press. In British eyes it is fit only for pigs. It is met occasionally in the form of confection, but never in push carts, as in this country. A British encyclopaedia says: "In the southern states of North America the seeds, or nuts, as they are called, are roasted and used as chocolate. They are a favorite article of food with the negroes." Georgians are called "goober grabbers" throughout the south. Many a farmer has grown rich on the humble peanut, the annual product being worth $10,000,000. Some persons try to belittle the goober. A lawyer, examining a witness in an important case, one whose testimony was conclusive, undertook to ridicule him. "You are a business man, I believe?" "Yes." "What is your business?" "I deal in peanuts." The lawyer smiled knowingly at the jury. "A peanut vender, eh? How many pints did you sell last month?" "I hardly know. A million, possibly." "What! A million?" he bandle about, half a million bushels a year. I am a wholesale dealer." The lawyer sat down with the laugh turned on him.

FEW ALIENS IN SCOTLAND.

Most of the Inhabitants of the Land of Heather and Douns Are Natives.

Scotland, according to the latest returns, is not a dumping ground for aliens, says the London Chronicle. Only 1.031 per cent. out of a population of 4,472,103 are aliens. The number of English-born persons north of the Tweed, if transferred to London, would be hardly noticed. They number only 131,356, or 2.937 per cent. Irish people, on the other hand, aggregate 205,064, or 4.585 per cent., and patriotic Scots, backed up by police statistics, charge this remnant and their connections with committing 50 per cent. of the crimes annually recorded on the far side of the Cheviots.

Whence comes it then to shun Scotland, as only 2,673 were found there when the census enumerators came round. Marriage is popular to the extent of 46.777 per cent. of males over 15 years of age, of the female woman-kind is appreciated to the extent of 44.777 per cent. of like ages. While the widowers number 72,781, the widows total no fewer than 173,495, which bears but the truth there lies in the now neglected ballad of "Three Women for Every Man."

MAKING ENGLISH WORSE.

Foreigners Have Enough Trouble Over Its Idioms Without Mistakes Being Made.

Foreigners are always complaining, and not without reason, at the difficulties of the English language. This is quite natural, considering how very different our pronunciation is from our spelling, but what must to them appear to be gratuitously adding insult to injury is the entirely opposite sounds given to some common words possess in different localities, says London Gentlewoman.

In the eastern counties particularly, many words are misleading. For instance, "there were several there" means not that a few, but a great number; a "shy girl" is a bold one; and some of the verbs do double duty with absolutely opposite meanings, notably that of "to learn."

I will quote one instance gleaned from the morning's local daily paper: "Situation required as undermaid, or where lady is willing to learn. Good references.—Apply," etc. The advertiser was quite innocent of any impertinence. She meant "where lady is willing to teach!"

Congo Drum Talk.

Perhaps the most curious means of communication in the world is the drum language of a Congo tribe. These queer people can talk to each other with large drums made of bamboo hoops, over which the skin of animals is stretched. The drum, however, is used only on important occasions.

THE DUKE OF AOSTA.

One of the Most Unpopular Members of Italy's Royalty.

He Would Become the Unwelcome Ruler of the Kingdom Should Victor Emmanuel Die Without Male Issue.

The queen of Italy and the czarina of Russia would be happier than they are to-day and they would like immensely in popular favor if that mystical bird, the stork, had been kinder and more considerate and had left some instead of daughters in the royal palaces in which these ladies live. The czarina has disappointed the hopes of the people four times by presenting daughters to the czar and the two children of the young queen of Italy are both daughters. The sooner the stork manifests a higher degree of consideration for the situation in which these royal ladies are placed and grants them sons the happier they and their husbands and a great army of their subjects will be.

The throne of Italy can descend only to the male heirs of the king and if King Victor Emmanuel should die without a son his successor would be the duke of Aosta, who is not at all in favor with the people of Italy, and there would be no end of discontent if he should become king. The duke is 34 years of age. He is the eldest son of the late Prince Amadeus, a brother of King Humbert and ex-king of Spain. His wife was Princess Helene of Orleans, a daughter of the late count of Paris, and they have two sons, Amadeus and Aimon, so that if the duke should succeed to the throne it would probably remain permanently in his family.

The duke and his wife are a handsome pair, says the Detroit Free Press. But one may also see in the face of the handsome young duke signs of the haughty arrogance and the unyielding spirit that have helped to make him unpopular throughout Italy. He would probably be a hard man to deal with, and the people of Italy are hoping and even praying that he may never be their ruler, and it will be a sad day in Italy if the beautiful Queen Helene should some time present the king with a son. The duke of Aosta would be the one man in Italy who would not rejoice over an event of this kind. Should he succeed to the throne he might realize in his own experience the truth of the old saying that "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." for his life would not be a very happy one in the face of the unyielding prejudice of the Italian people. A kingly career is not one of continual smooth sailing, even when one is in high favor with one's subjects, and it is a career of much anxiety and unhappiness when one is ruler in opposition to the wishes of his people. So here's hoping that the stork is even now on his way to the royal palace of Italy with a lusty young son to gladden the hearts of the king and queen and the hearts of the people of Italy.

THE DUKE OF AOSTA.
(Heir Presumptive to the Throne of the Italian Kingdom.)

Vibration Stops Hatching.

"An egg in the process of hatching," says an expert, "is remarkably sensitive to vibration. Half the failures that amateurs encounter in hatching out chicks by an incubator method are due to lack of precaution in providing against the effect of vibration on the eggs. The rumble of a train or the passing of a wagon along the street will spoil a whole incubator full of eggs, if the faintest vibratory wave reaches the apparatus. Even such a little thing as the banging of a door in some other part of the house will destroy the chances of hatching out a brood, where care has not been taken to place the incubator beyond the reach of such disturbances. A thunderstorm always gives breeders a scare, as thousands of eggs may be spoiled by a sudden heavy thunder clap. To sneeze or cough in the vicinity of the incubators will sometimes work a disastrous result."

Plague Spread by Rats.

The bubonic plague has become so alarming in Sydney, N. S. W., that the city authorities regularly employ five men to visit the residences and catch rats. The average number of rats trapped by each man is a week. It is believed that the rodents spread the disease by roaming from house to house.

Prescriptions by Telephone.

It is illegal in Germany for physicians to dictate prescriptions to druggists through the telephone. Fatal misunderstandings are likely to result from the practice, therefore the interdictory law was enacted.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

COLLEGE SPORTS.

Western colleges, that is two of the largest of them, have taken up golf and added it to their list of intercollegiate contests. For several years eastern colleges have been at it, but it was not until Iowa fell, when a team from the University of Chicago, under the captaincy of Howard Sloan, met the University of Michigan team at Ann Arbor, that the innovation was tried in the west. The last half of this match has just been finished at Chicago. It is not many years ago that golf was an unheard-of sport among college men, and the gradual spread of the game among the preparatory schools has tended to bring it more and more into collegiate life.

The annual conference meet among the western colleges, recently held at Chicago, was won by the boys from Ann Arbor and furnished some exciting sport for the "rooters." The victory gives Michigan permanent possession of the famous Spalding trophy, thus realizing a long cherished hope, as the college has now been victorious for the third successive time. The meet proved the closest in years, Michigan scoring 49 points to Chicago's 46, Wisconsin finishing a poor third with but ten points. In the east Yale won the intercollegiate championship cup in a most exciting meet by half a point from Harvard. The result of the meet was in doubt until the running of the last event, which was the 220-yard dash, and the finish was so close that the crimson men have filed a protest against the decision of the judges.

In the lawn tennis field the prospects are very bright for a successful season, and the list of tournaments that will be held throughout the country is large. In the western intercollegiate tournament, recently held at Chicago, Michigan was victorious in both the singles and doubles. St. John, of Michigan, forfeiting the singles to Danforth, of Michigan, who was champion last year. St. John and Lee, of Michigan, won the doubles from the Wisconsin pair, Morley and Garnett.

BASEBALL.

College baseball in the west is about over for the present season and the University of Illinois team has again been returned the winner. The university has always turned out a fast team, one that has been able to hold their own with the best college teams in the east, which fact was demonstrated when the team trimmed both the Harvard and Pennsylvania nines a year or two ago.

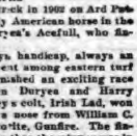
The franchise of the Anderson, Ind., baseball team in the Central league has been transferred to Grand Rapids, Mich.

It is reported that "Rube" Waddell, the eccentric and star pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, will not be behind the footlights next season, appearing in the melodrama, "The Stain of Guilt." Just what position he will play in the production is not yet known.

Prof. Joseph J. Thomson, of Cambridge college, England, recently gave the following explanation of a curved pitched ball: "The ball follows its nose, so to speak. If it leaves the pitcher's hand revolving downward on a horizontal axis, it is bound to drop. If it revolves on a vertical axis, on a horizontal axis, it follows its nose and rises. When the ball travels on a vertical axis, with an inward revolution, the inshoot is caused. The outdrop is the result of the ball's traveling on a slanting axis, with an outward revolution, and so on. The axis and revolutions are determined by the manner of the sphere's leaving the pitcher's hand, and there you are."

TRACK AND STABLE.

For the third successive time a horse ridden by an American jockey has won the famous classic event in the events of the English turf, the Derby, at Epsom Downs. Rock Sand, the victorious mount, is owned by Sir J. Miller, and was ridden by Danny Maher. Lester Reiff won the event in 1900 with Volodyvski, and "Skeets" Martin repeated the trick in 1902 on Ard Patrick. The only American horse in the race was Duryea's Acefull, who finished fifth.



DANNY MAHER.

The Brooklyn handicap, always an interesting event among eastern turf followers, furnished an exciting race this week when Duryea and Harry Payne Whitney's colt, Irish Lad, won the event by a neck from Milton C. Whitney's favorite, Gunfire. The finish was so close that the winner was in doubt until the numbers were posted by the judges.

The city of Toronto is making an interesting departure in horse shows. Arrangements are being made to hold an open air equine exhibition where, instead of extending the show over a week, it will all be done in one hour. The entries will be ranged in Queen's park, and University royal and the awards will be made by an army of judges.

W. K. Vanderbilt's Alpha, guided by Nash Turner, recently won the Prix Victor, valued at $2,000, at Paris.

GERMS OF DISEASES.

They Are Now Being Harnessed by Medical Investigators.

How Bacilli Are Isolated, Tested and Propagated — Important Part Played by Horses and Guinea Pigs.

[Special New York Letter.]

THIS is essentially the age of antitoxins, extreme cases of the "hair of the dog" curing the bite. New discoveries are constantly being made, both of the specific germs causing certain diseases and methods of utilizing them for their own destruction. It is well known that if a person were shut up in a room for an extended length of time where no fresh air was allowed to enter death would ensue before long. In this room, breathed over and over, would become charged with poisons given out by the body, and there would soon be no fresh air to feed upon. In the case of a disease germ much the same condition prevails. It must have fresh material to feed upon, as the juices it throws off are a certain poison to itself. Hence, if to the blood of a person containing germs of a disease, a sufficient quantity of the effete material furnished by the germ itself be added, the small pest dies because it has no fresh food, free from its own specific poison, upon which to feed. In the case of many of our most common and virulent diseases the bacillus has been isolated and for their treatment an antitoxin has been secured.

Nearly everyone is aware that the antitoxins in general use are obtained from horses, and the methods of securing them are being constantly improved upon. Of course the first thing to be considered is the isolation of the offending microbe from the thousands of different variety which surround it. This presupposes the fact that the wicked one is so well known as to be recognizable; that his portrait hangs in the germ rogues' gallery.

After the bacteria are removed from a sufferer, they are more carefully cultivated than most plants, the usual medium being bouillon prepared from filtered, sterilized water and fresh beef. After standing for a few hours, the bouillon is strained, refiltered and resterilized. For several days, a process of reboiling, sterilizing and filtering goes on in white dust-proof closets, by men dressed in most immaculate white. It is kept in sterilized jars, stopped with sterilized cotton, by the bouillon has become absolutely free from all germs. It is inoculated by having the bacilli dropped in from the point of a needle of glass and platinum. The germs multiply as rapidly as in human body, for the bouillon is kept in a warm incubator for about 72 hours, when it may be seen to be covered with a ghastly-looking, greenish crust, a toxin which is a hideous mass of the disease germs. This consumption, diphtheria or whatever has been cultivated. It is then injected into guinea pigs which die and are opened and examined. If it is found that the toxin burns pure, it is injected into an antitoxin horse. Before one of these horses is utilized for this purpose, he is tested to ascertain if he be free from all disease, by receiving an injection of mallein, a fluid which will arouse into activity any disease which may lurk in the system. If he be healthy, the mallein will not affect him. Being proved healthy, the first injection of toxin, about one-half a thimbleful, or one cubic centimeter, is introduced into his jugular vein by means of glass and silver by a thoroughly sterilized, unaffected, white-skin, clean-shaven physician in a white enameled room. For three days, the horse is very ill, eating nothing. Its bones are sore, and it moves slowly and painfully. Five days, he is quite well again, when another injection is given, this time of three cubic centimeters. He becomes ill, but less so than in the first instance. Ten days later, 20 cubic centimeters is administered. The effect of this is hardly perceptible. By the end of two months, more than one pint or 500 cubic centimeters are given without producing any ill-effects. Those horses kill a large number of ordinary horses, but our friend has become immune, that is, his system is able to resist any number of live germs introduced, because it contains so much of their own poison, that they have nothing to feed upon and die from an overdose of themselves.

Now that this antitoxin quality has developed in the animal, each month eight quarts of blood are drawn from him, while every ten days he still receives an injection of 500 centimeters of toxin. Thus his antitoxic power is kept up. He suffers no inconvenience. His health is good, he eats guineas moderately and eats his sterilized grain with relish. If he goes to pasture for a month or two, his antitoxic power is impaired and he has to begin all over again with his first dose of one cubic centimeter of toxin which renders him ill as at first. After being drawn from the horse, the blood is sealed up and stands for several days, when the serum, or thin portion, is extracted by means of a force pump. This serum is used on guinea pigs and its strength thus ascertained. It is now filtered and purified, sealed in small vials and passes into the hand of physicians in general practice, who introduce it into the circulation of such patients as are suffering from the special disease from whose germ it was prepared. Their systems are thus reenforced by a poison to the germs whose demise rids them of the disease which was preying upon their tissues.

While some antitoxins have been obtained with comparative ease, experiments with typhoid germs have proven very unsatisfactory. In 1884 Koch discovered the bacilli of typhoid. They are rod-like and thick with the ends rounded, and sometimes found in filaments. They possess little hair-like projections called flagella and move very rapidly. They are found in water, milk and meats and gain entrance into the system by various methods. Many experiments have been made to secure an antitoxin from bouillon, but to no great purpose. It has been nearly impossible to obtain the "juice between the cells" of typhoid bacteria without destroying the chemical action of germs themselves. No really satisfactory results had been obtained until, recently, Dr. Allan McFayden, of the Jenner institute of preventive medicine, one of the leading bacteriologists of Europe, after much research, has discovered a method of manufacturing antitoxin for typhoid which, it is generally believed, will soon be universally adopted. The microscopical cells of the typhoid bacilli are so small and pliable or elastic that no mechanical agent could destroy them. Freezing does not injure them.

It occurred to Dr. McFayden to freeze the cells by means of liquid air and then allow them to crush thousands of them together in a mortar. This first and most difficult step has proved a great success. The mass now dead, so far as its power of communicating disease is concerned, is allowed to become warm again, but is still chemically alive as to its qualities from which antitoxin may be prepared. Repeated injections into animals have produced a serum, which, it is believed, will prove efficacious. It is too soon after its discovery for a large number of experiments to have demonstrated its successful use, but results so far obtained are very promising. As previous to about all one can do for a typhoid patient is the administration of baths, nourishment and stimulants. If the new process be proves to produce antitoxin, the disease will soon lose its terrors.

Upon the death of his grandson from cholera infantum Rockefeller donated $300,000 to be used toward finding a cure for that disease. Two students discovered and isolated a germ, and Dr. Simon Flexner manufactured therefrom an antitoxin which counteracts it. It will come into use as soon as the exact amount for a dose shall be determined. His success has been the means of elevating Dr. Flexner to the position of director in the $15,000,000 Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, Prof. Behring, of Vienna, is also conspicuously gaining the attention of the medical fraternity, first because of his discovery of the diphtheria antitoxin, which is yearly saving the lives of thousands, and more recently by his experiments with tuberculosis. The death rate from diphtheria is now reduced to but 10 per cent. from 50 to 90, by means of antitoxin. Dr. Behring hopes to reduce that of tuberculosis proportionately.

WILLARD C. APPLETON.

THE CHURCH IN CUBA.

Clergy Is Solemnly Adjured to Keep Out of Politics.

Salient Points of the Pope's Brief on the New Republic—Necessity Recommends the Fostering of Education.

A summary of the pope's brief in regard to Cuba and Porto Rico, sent to Archbishop Chapelle, of New Orleans, as papal delegate to those islands, has been received at Washington. In the message the pope refers to the changes of government in the islands and the necessity for providing for the new conditions, as he did by appointing a new delegate, and by decreeing on September 4, 1901, that Cuba should be governed, ecclesiastically, by the same laws as the church in Latin America, enacted in Rome in 1899. These provisions, the pope goes on to say, did not seem to be sufficient for the new necessities of the island, hence the present brief, actum Praeclare.

Leo XIII. erects the new dioceses of Pinar del Rio and Cienfuegos, which comprise, respectively, the provinces of Pinar del Rio and the civil province of Santa Clara. The metropolitan shall be, for all, the archbishop of Santiago. The diocese of Porto Rico is taken away from the metropolitan's province and made subject immediately to the holy see.

He wishes the sees of Santiago and Havana to retain their chapters of canons. If, however, circumstances do not permit the full quota, at least six canons are to be supported. The new sees must also have their canons. In conferring benefices and canonries the laws of the council of Latin America are to be preserved.

The pope then speaks of the necessity of sacred and profane learning for those who are to hold ministerial office in the dioceses and of the care which the bishops ought to exercise to foster in their priests the virtues which befit their state. He wards on not meddling in political matters are very pointed. He wishes men in sacred orders to abstain entirely (omnino abstineant) from such pursuits. They are to foster fraternal love, and to give no ground for envy. To procure this spirit the bishops are to summon the priests yearly for the exercises of a spiritual retreat. The usual conferences for the discussion of theological questions are to be held and care taken to erect seminaries for the proper education of the future clergy of Cuba. The pope recommends especially the Collegio Pio-Latino-Americano, at Rome. He wishes at least two young men from each of the Cuban dioceses to be sent there, and that when they shall have finished, others to succeed them be selected.

He commends the sedulous care of schools for youth and colleges for both sexes. A word of praise is bestowed on the religious bodies, who have worked so well in Cuba. The pope wishes their number to be increased, and that houses shall be erected in more places, in which at least eight religious men shall live, whose duty shall be to preach to the people and to teach them.

As soon as the new sees are filled, a provincial council is to be convoked by the apostolic delegate, of which he shall preside. The pope urges the Cubans to persevere in the faith of their fathers, to keep the unity of the faith in the bond of peace, to give due honor to the heads of the republic "respectu debito erga potestates honore prosequantur." The execution of these provisions is committed to the delegate.

The extent of the diocese of Pinar del Rio is 4,650 square kilometers; the population 173,000; there will be in it 28 parishes, and 18 secular priests. The Church of St. Rudesind, in the city of Pinar del Rio, is to be the cathedral. A seminary must be erected in this new diocese. The time for doing so is left to the bishop.

The diocese of Cienfuegos will have an extent of 7,850 square kilometers, 356,326 inhabitants, 35 parishes, 28 secular priests and 24 priests of religious orders. The Church of the Immaculate Conception at Cienfuegos is to be the cathedral. A seminary must also be erected here. The time for its erection is left to the new bishop.

"Mr. and Mrs. Cain, of this city, are happy over the arrival of a son." And now presumably it will be a case of raising Cain.

Prince Hosanna, it is announced, will soon deliver an address at a local church. If there's anything in a name his speech ought to be inspiring.

An evangelist is quoted as declaring that "there is not one child in hell." He fails to state whether this information is obtained by personal knowledge.

A borough official complains that there is too much religion in this column. If that be the case, we have no objection to his cutting some of it out for personal use.

Many complaints have been heard regarding the odors which arise from the lunch wagon located on East Second street. The Board of Health should investigate, and if it is found that the wagon is a nuisance to a sufficiently large number of people, demand should be made for its removal.

As to strangeness, fact delivered fiction a knockout blow recently in the case of the Fanwood man who discovered a long-lost nephew in Mother Jones' army, recognizing him by a family resemblance. Verily "There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough hew them how we will."

In his account of doings at Sea Girt the Newark News says: "One thing which pleased all who have been here throughout the entire encampment was the fact that the band did not play 'Hiawatha.' We don't know whether this is intended to be rough on the band or on the tune, but we have suffered somewhat from the way that catchy air is being overdone.

There can be no issue drawn between President Roosevelt and Former President Cleveland on the race suicide question. The sage of Princeton has been advanced one number by Mr. Stork who made his appearance at Gray Gables Saturday and there are now five children in the family, one less than the number which gather about the board of the strenuous statesman.

Just think of it. A Kalamazoo man smoked 100,000 cigars in twenty years and only lived to be eighty-nine years old. In this same period the average life this lover of Sir Walter Raleigh's discovery consumed 48,000 cigars. Over in New Brunswick (this place is on the map), a man lived to be seventy-eight who had not touched a drop of water for forty-one years. These facts will not be found in hygienic reviews.

Which will be king, Waterboy or McChesney? The great contest between these two thoroughbreds, the one representing the East and the other the West, will draw one of the largest crowds that ever gathered at Brighton. Not in years has there been so much interest taken in an event on the turf and since the records have been tumbling this season so frequently the racetrack enthusiasts expect great things at Brighton tomorrow.

James Pitzer, a bachelor farmer down in Virginia, has evidently tired of having an alarm clock instead of a wife wake him in the mornings. At any rate he has determined to try his luck at the marriage lottery. The Virginian caused it to be known that he would wed the first woman he caught picking blackberries in his garden. Thirteen coy maiden—all maidens are coy—were discovered in the garden industriously at work at the same time. Probably if James had advertised for one that knew how to keep house he would not have been in such a dilema.

United support should be given Mayor Smalley and other citizens in their efforts to suppress the illegal sale of liquor in the borough on Sundays. The offending parties are not saloon keepers in this case, but Italian fruit merchants. American born citizens would be ashamed to keep their stores open on the Lord's day for the sale of luxuries and these men should not be allowed to take advantage of that fact. It is generally believed that the illicit sale of liquor is the sole reason why these storekeepers do not close their places. When sufficient evidence is obtained against these violators of the law, swift and severe punishment should be meted out to them. Neither Plainfield nor North Plainfield needs this class of merchants and the sooner we are rid of them the better. Anyone having a knowledge of this nefarious practice should acquaint the authorities with the facts and thus help in landing the guilty parties in jail as quickly as possible.

FORGOT TO REPEAL THE OLD STATUTES

Bungling Work of the Legislature Now Causes Trouble.

NEGLECTED REPEALERS

TWO PRACTICE AND TWO SMALL TRIAL ACTS NOW ON BOOKS.

Supreme Court Will Have to Render Decision—The Opinion of Charles L. Corbin—Intention of the Legislators.

The disclosures of several mistakes or oversights in the transactions of the last New Jersey Legislature have brought to light the fact that there are two practice acts on the statute books of this State, both legally there, but one unintentionally. There are also on the statute books two laws governing the course of procedure in courts for the trial of small causes.

This state of affairs was brought about by the failure of the Legislature to incorporate repealing clauses in the revision of the practice act and in the act concerning courts for the trial of small causes, both of which were passed at the last session of the Legislature.

The result of this is that there are, as has been said, two practice acts and two sets of rules regulating the conduct and practice in courts for the trial of small causes which conflict in numerous particulars, the disparity in which under existing conditions can only be adjusted by the supreme court.

While with no other information at hand it would be safe to assume that it was the intention of the farmers of the revised practice act that it was to supplant the old one in so far as the two did not conflict, yet it seems that it was their intention that the new act should supplant the old in its entirety.

Charles L. Corbin, a member of the commission by which the revised practice act was prepared, when his attention was called to the failure of the Legislature to pass a repealing clause or act said that the commission intended that the new act should supplant the old one.

At the same time he said that in his opinion the provisions of both the new and the old acts would be legally operative except where they conflict.

As an example of the conflict of the two laws it has been noted that the old practice act contains a provision for service upon a non-resident or absent defendant by publication. This is not referred to in the new act, and hence without the repeal of the old act would be operative in spite of the statement of a member of the revision commission that the old act as to be superceded by the new.

Attention to the failure of the Legislature to repeal the old practice act as first called by School Commissioner John H. Hartpence, who is connected with the office of the supreme court. It was while making a careful study of the act that he discovered the omission

The commission appointed to rectify and revise the statutes is composed of Supreme Court Justices Dixon and Fort and Lawyer Charles L. Corbin. Wilbur A. Mott is secretary of the commission.

LITERARY.

President Roosevelt does love to talk, but people like to hear him. The professors of rhetoric may say that he is too emphatic, didactic, hortatory. At least he does not speak through a mask. You feel that a man—at times, perhaps, a boy—is saying what he means. Frequently, as in his speech at the St. Louis exposition, he says it well, with dignity, and with authority. In none of his speeches did he utter a word than can be used to his political injury. It pays to be straightforward; and Mr. Roosevelt's method is really more sensible and effective than the ordinary politician's continual gingerly balancing on wires and tiptoeing on egg-shells. See Everybody's Magazine for August.

ORDER OF EXERCISES; CORNERSTONE LAYING

Former Governor Voorhees Accepts Invitation to Deliver the Oration.

THE LIST OF SPEAKERS

PARADE OF MASONIC BODY TO PRECEDE THE FORMAL EXERCISES.

Capt. J. Frank Hubbard, of This City, to Make Address of Welcome—Cathedral Quartette to Sing—Senator Kean to Preside.

Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees has accepted the invitation to deliver the oration at the laying of the corner stone of the new county court house at Elizabeth on Thursday morning, July 30. The stone arrived last week.

The various preliminaries have now been arranged, and on the day set apart for the ceremonies there will be an imposing Masonic parade similar to that of Decoration Day a few years ago when the Grand Lodge of New Jersey laid the cornerstone of the Elizabeth General Hospital. This is the order of exercises:

Procession of Grand Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons of New Jersey, from Masonic Hall to new court house at 10:45 a. m.; overture, band; address of welcome, J. Frank Hubbard, director of the Board of Chosen Freeholders; ode, Cathedral quartette; ceremonies of laying the cornerstone; invocation; anthem, Cathedral quartette; delivery of implements to architect; anthem, Cathedral quartette; oration, Hon. Foster M. Voorhees; benediction, grand chaplain; return of procession to Masonic Hall.

It is expected that the exercises in connection with the laying of the cornerstone will occupy about an hour and a half.

When the procession has been disbanded at Masonic Hall, the grand lodge session will be closed in a formal manner by Most Worshipful Master W. Hoit Apgar, and the officers of the grand lodge will proceed to the assembly room of Jacobs Theatre, where the other guests will await them, and when the banquet will be served.

United States Senator John Kean will preside, and make the opening address. Other speakers will be Director Hubbard, Grand Master Apgar, Frank Bergen, and County Collector Edward M. Wood.

FAIR ESTATE INCITES PARIS

FRENCH NEWSPAPERS ENTER INTO CONTROVERSY.

Arrest of Alleged Witnesses to Death of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair Causes Trouble.

The Fair millions are the cause of a division of Paris into two hostile camps. The newspapers of the French capital have taken decided stands and each day print long articles favoring one side or the other in the present controversy for the estate. Some of the papers have overworked themselves into a white heat over the matter according to a cablegram.

The dissection was caused, it is said, by the arrest on a charge of perjury, of the two principal witnesses, Alfred J. Moranne and Paul Germain Mas, who claim to have been near the accident and saw that Mrs. Fair, who was a New Market girl, was alive after her husband died. Other witnesses claim that the men were nowhere near the scene of the accident and swore falsely regarding the accident.

Refused Tempting Offer.

It is reported that Mrs. William B. T. Lane has refused an offer of $50,000 made by Major Lillis, of Pawnee Bill's Show, for the Lane homestead. The property has been in the Lane family since 1864. At that time the Lane estate comprised a large part of Plainfield.

Another Trial.

The case on contract between Burk and Frank Carara and Antone Ananar, of Mt. Bethel, which was to have been tried before Justice Cooper Monday was dismissed. The case will be heard in North Plainfield in two weeks when the plaintiff's counsel returns from his vacation.

Quietly Married.

David Ramacnotti, a Park avenue fruit dealer and Miss Flora Agnetti, of 173 Bleeker street, New York, were married last Wednesday at the bride's home in New York. The best man was Ralph Martino and the bridesmaid was Miss Alice Agnetti, a sister of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Ramacnotti are residing on Park avenue.

Measures Taken by by National Bureau—Value of Domestic Animals in New Jersey More Than $16,000,000.

Dr. D. E. Salmon, of Washington, D. C., chief of the National Bureau of Animal Industry, in an address delivered before the Veterinary Medical Association of New Jersey, in session at Athenia, recommended the State control of all animal industries, with a competent veterinarian at the head of such a bureau. Few, even of those directly connected with such matters, realised the importance of animal industry in this State, Dr. Salmon added. The value of the domestic animals of New Jersey, he said, is more than $16,000,000. In discussing the establishment of such a bureau two points must be considered, the money invested, which in this case was a large sum, and the effect on the health of the public.

There were animal diseases constantly present, he went on, which were dangerous to human life. Glanders was one of these, and every year a number of human beings die from this malady. He cited the recent case in Newark.

"Rabies is another animal disease responsible for many deaths among human beings," Dr. Salmon continued. "The medical profession is somewhat skeptical as to the existence of this disease, and the doctors are somewhat to blame for the general opinion held regarding this malady to the effect that it never, or very seldom, causes death. Humane societies, formed for the purpose of caring for stray dogs, are also responsible for the spreading of the belief that rabies is a rare occurrence. I myself, until late years, did not attach much importance to the danger to human life from rabies.

"But a large number of cases in the District of Columbia a few years ago and many deaths convinced me that there was grave danger to human beings from this malady. Deaths among cats and dogs are due to rabies more often than is commonly known. This might not be a bad thing if it reduced the unnecessary number of dogs and cats without danger to public health.

"Each State ought to have an association to look after all animal matters, and to take charge of an outbreak of disease among them. It should be an association with one man, a competent veterinarian, at the head of it, and he should be given sole charge and be held solely responsible. Division of authority is always a division of responsibility.

"Tuberculosis and anthrax are also common diseases among animals, and they are terrible diseases to fight. The people of New Jersey do not realize the necessity for concerted action in this matter. Nine-tenths of all the animals imported into the United States come here to this quarantine station, where they are held to see if they will develop any diseases."

Dr. Salmon told of other diseases that were common among animals, and related some of the measures taken by the National Bureau to stamp them out.

"My advice," he said, "is to have such a State bureau established here, under the direction of an able veterinarian as executive officer, and I publicly give my endorsement to such a movement."

MUST BE LICENSED.

Borough Board of Health Insists That Ordinance Must be Obeyed.

The North Plainfield Board of Health is determined to compell all merchants in the borough to secure licenses if they wish to peddle their wares. The Natural Ice Company is just at present receiving the Board's attention. It is alleged that the ice company has been in the habit of operating six wagons on a permit issued for four. It is said that if the ordinances in this matter are violated power is given the Board to make arrests on sight and the penalty for each cases is imprisonment for two years or a fine of $1,000.

Surprise Party.

In honor of Miss Vida Stillman, of Alfred, N. Y., who is visiting her aunt, Dr. Martha Stillman, of West Fourth street, about twenty-five young people gave a surprise party Saturday evening. The evening was spent in playing games and listening to good music, after which refreshments were served.

THREE GOLFERS WENT ROUNDS IN RAIN

Weekly Competition at Hillside Club Continued in Heavy Downpour.

THEY WERE DRENCHED

PETERSON, SAUGSTAD AND HIBBARD ADVANCED THEIR SCORES.

Peterson Finished First and Saugstad Second—Latter Second in Total Standing—No Play at Park and Westfield Clubs.

Even the heavy downpour of rain on Saturday was not sufficient to deter three members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club from taking part in the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup, three being necessary to make the points count. So far as can be learned this was the only golf play in this vicinity and the trio that ventured to make the rounds received a good drenching en route.

Walter Peterson won first honors with a net score of 78, and Olaf Saugstad finished second with a net 81. H. D. Hibbard was the one remaining player to receive a point. This gives Peterson a total of 7 3-5 points and Saugstad a total of 9, advancing them well among the leaders. Mr. Hibbard has a total of 3 points. Their scores on Saturday were:

Walter Peterson, 87, 9—78; Olaf Saugstad, 93, 12—81; H. D. Hibbard, 95, 13—83.

This is the standing by points for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club:

H. Reeve Stockton	9½
Olaf Saugstad	9
Walter Peterson	7 3-5
Augustus R. Fisk	7
Arthur Murphy	6
Robert Abbott	5½
E. B. Shoemaker	3 2-5
E. T. Newkirk	3½
W. L. Glenney	3½
C. Westley Abbott	3
Marion S. Ackerman	3
C. B. Morgan	3
Frank O. Reinhart	3
H. D. Hibbard	3
Dudley H. Barrows	2 3-5
Julius Erickson	2
H. W. Beebe	2
Morris J. Dunn	2
J. Whitney Baker	2
A. G. Henderson	1
Elliott T. Barrows	1
D. H. Rowland	1
Dr. F. C. Ard	1
G. H. Squires	1
S. H. Patterson	1
E. L. Ironmonger	3-½
H. deP. Wright	5

The scheduled play-off of the finals in the club championship between Robert Abbott and F. O. Reinhart did not come off. The event will be played this week at the convenience of the contestants.

At the Park Golf Club not a single person put in an appearance to play. The course was thoroughly soaked and the driving rain kept even the most enthusiastic at home. The same conditions existed at Westfield.

CATHOLICS ORGANIZE.

David J. Kenney an Executive Committeeman of the American Federation of Catholic Societies.

The second annual convention of the New Jersey branch of the American Federation of Catholic Societies was held Sunday in Catholic Institute, Newark. Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, and Bishop O'Connor, of Newark, were both present. In the election of officers, David J. Kenney, of North Plainfield, was chosen a member of the executive committee.

A constitution was adopted and steps were taken to perfect county federations in those counties that are not yet represented. Camden was decided upon as the place for holding the next State convention, and twenty-three delegates were elected to represent New Jersey at the federation's national convention which will be held at Atlantic City from August 1 to 5.

SIX MONTHS STATISTICS OF POLICE COURT

Three Hundred and Fifty-Six Arrests in Plainfield During That Time.

MOSTLY DRUNKENNESS

THE FOREIGNERS OUTNUMBERED THE AMERICANS.

Most of the Offenders Guilty of Minor Misdemeanors—Many of the Culprits Came From Other Cities—The Statistics.

Three hundred and fifty-six arrests made during the first six months of the present year is Plainfield's record —not a bad one for a city of sixteen to eighteen thousand people, when it is considered that most of the arrests were for minor offenses and that seventy-nine of the culprits came from outside the city.

The figures were compiled by a Daily Press reporter from the police record books, which, by the way, are accurately kept in remarkably convenient form for reference. The numbers given were hastily calculated and cannot be expected to be absolutely correct. They at least approximate close accuracy, however, and should be of some interest to the student of statistics, giving as they do an indication of the general morals of the community.

Of the 356 arrests, 325 were of males and 31 of females, an unusually large proportion of the discredit of the sterner sex. Habitual offenders, the worst kind, numbered twenty-one males and three females, of whom seventeen males and the three women were arrested twice, three men were arrested three times, and one "old stager" landed four times in the toils of the law. Deducting for names thus appearing more than once, the net total of those arrested is 327.

Most of the arrests were for drunkenness, which may be taken as a matter of course. One hundred and forty arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct during the six months ending June 30 attest the vigilance of the police. Of these 83 were both drunk and disorderly, 89 were disorderly simply, and 68 were drunk with no reservations as to order.

Most of the other cases reported were for minor misdemeanors. The number of crimes committed was not large. There were three cases of atrocious assault, three were guilty of criminal conduct, seven of burglary, two of attempted poison, twenty-one of larceny, most of it petty, four of gambling, four of embezzlement, two of receiving stolen goods, and two of obtaining money on false pretenses. Seven cases of assault were tried, and in this connection, it may be well to state that there were numerous cases of assault in which no arrests were made by the city police but which were brought before Justices of the Peace.

Minor misdemeanors included thirty-eight violations of city ordinances in regard to peddling, bicycling on the sidewalks, allowing dogs to run at large unmuzzled, etc. The other offenses were: Trespassing on cars, nine; resisting an officer, one; non-support, one; vagrancy, four (not many tramps in Plainfield); carrying concealed weapons, one; and fast driving, two. There were very few juvenile offenders.

*It is well to remember, in consider*ing all of the foregoing figures, that no statistics can indicate the extent of crimes and misdemeanor absolutely. Some offenders are certain to escape the notice of the police however vigilant.

It is interesting to examine police statistics from the viewpoint of the nationality of the offenders. Of Plainfield's backsliders, during the six months in question, 159 were American born and 168 were foreigners, a sufficient commentary in itself of the extent to which the foreign and not wholly desirable element is gaining ground. There were 67 colored people on the black lists. The various offenses were divided fairly evenly among all the nationalities.

These were the unfortunates according to race: Americans, 159; Irish, 45; Afro-Americans, 38; Italians, 13; American Jews, 11; Russian Jews, 10; Polish and Austrian Jews, 1 each; Germans, 11; English, 10; Poles, 9; Scotch and Danes, 4 each; Welsh, Slavish, Swedes and Austrians, 2 each; Hungarians and Assyrians, 1 each.

All of these were inhabitants of Plainfield with the exception of six who had no known residence, twenty who lived in North Plainfield and 53 from other localities. A glance at the list suggests the city's growing cosmopolitanism.

William Jeffery, real estate broker, has sold for the Invernora Realty Company thirty-five lots on Elk and Fourth streets and Rushmore avenue, to James E. Totten, who will proceed to improve them by erecting buildings at an early date.

SPECIAL SERVICES HERE FOR LEO XIII

Solemn High Masses to Be Said at St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Churches.

NO DATE YET FIXED

AWAITING INSTRUCTIONS FROM THE BISHOP OF NEWARK.

Local Priests Received Papal Blessing Exactly One Year Before His Holiness's Death—Bells Tolled in City and Borough.

A coincidence in connection with the death of Pope Leo XIII is the fact that it is just a year ago to a day that Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's R.C. Church and Rev. Father Andrew Egan, of St. Mary's R. C. Church were received by the Pontiff in the Vatican and received his blessing.

As soon as the word of his death arrived in this city the bells in St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches tolled ninety-three times, the number corresponding to the aged Pontiff's age.

When seen Monday evening Father Miller said that special services would be held in St. Joseph's Church when a solemn high mass will be celebrated for the dead Pope. The exact date will not be set until word is received from Right Reverend John O'Connor, Bishop of Newark. The services will probably be held within the next ten days, probably at the time of the funeral of the dead Pontiff. On the day of the services in this city the members of the two churches will gather at the respective edifices and offer up prayers for the repose of the soul of the dead Holy Father.

Father Egan said that special services will also be held at St. Mary's Church Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. Father Fredericks, of Bloomfield, will assist Fathers Egan and Dalahanty. The services at St. Mary's Church will be very elaborate.

IS HE WORKING A GRAFT?

JOHN SMITH CLAIMS TO BE A LONG LOST SON.

Says He Was Born in Plainfield to a New Brunswick Woman—Story of the Separation.

Mrs. Aleta McCollough, who owns a carpet weaving place in New Brunswick, is not quite certain whether or not she has discovered a long-lost son, and she has invited the police of that burg to aid her in determining. John Smith, who has been employed at her shop for the past six months, claims the honor of being her offspring.

Mrs. McCollough states that, when she was sixteen years old and lived in Plainfield, a son was born to her and that when the baby was nine weeks old she gave him to a Mrs. Ellen Smith to adopt. Mrs. Smith took the child West, and after that Mrs. McCollough saw him when he was ten years old and at no time since.

The young man, John Smith, tells a plausible story of his parentage. He is thirty-one years old and Mrs. Mc Collough says looks like her husband. He claims that he has travelled all over the United States and in foreign countries in search of his mother.

What makes Mrs. McCollough doubt his story is the fact that she once heard him say that his sleep that she was "easy" to think he was her son, and that he had "at last struck a good thing."

SECRETLY MARRIED.

Former Plainfield Girl Said She Was Going to Coney—But She Didn't.

George Palmer, an employe of the Johnson & Johnson Company, of New Brunswick, and Miss May Whitehead, formerly employed in the office of a local machine shop, were married Sunday in New York. Miss Whitehead resided in Morristown and was visiting at Mr. Palmer's home. Sunday the pair announced their intention of spending the day in Coney Island, and the next heard from them was a telegram from New York stating that they were married. Both are about nineteen years old.

Innovation at Trinity.

The music at the services at Trinity Reformed Church Sunday was especially fine. It was the first appearance of the chorus choir recently organized by the leader, Horace J. Martin. The new choir is composed of eighteen voices, selected from the Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Societies. William Jeffery sang the leading tenor part and during the offertory song "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" to the delight of all. The choir will sing at all the services at the church during the months of July and August.

PLAINFIELD'S RATE REMAINS AT $2.50

Board of Tax Assessors Fixes County Rate at $2.52 For Coming Year.

THE COMPLETE TABLE

TAXABLE VALUES HERE HAVE INCREASED $341,000.

Total Valuations of City Over Nine Million Dollars—Rate for Cranford and Summit Over $300 —Those in Other Places.

The Union County Board of Tax Assessors met Monday at Elizabeth for the purpose of fixing the taxable valuations of the boroughs, towns and cities and determining upon the State and school tax proportions for each. William Eckerson, of Elizabeth, was chairman and John J. Farrelly, secretary.

Plainfield was represented at the meeting by its Board of Assessors. The total valuation of this city being reported as $9,233,000, an increase over last year of $341,000. The valuations throughout the county go up over $1,800,000. The county rate for the coming year will be $2.52, an increase of two points over last year. There is one point increase in the county rate and one point increase in the State school rate.

The rate for the year in this city will be the same as last year, $2.50, but in many of the other places thoughout the county there will be a noticeable jump in the rate. This is the table for each place in the county showing this year's rate:

Clark, $1.26; Cranford, $3.34; Elizabeth, $2.96; Fanwood, $2.20; Borough Fanwood, $2.70; Garwood, $2.60; Linden, $1.60; Plainfield, $2.50; Mountainside, $2.36; New Providence, $2.36; New Providence Borough, $2.12; Roselle Borough, $2.40; Roselle Park, $2.26; Summit, $2.54; Union, $1.96; Westfield, $2.36; Railway, $2.90.

In the above list it will be noted that there are two places, Cranford and Summit, where the rate will be over $3 on the hundred. This is quite a jump and a large increase over last year. That Plainfield's rate will remain the same during the coming year speaks well for the city and much credit is due the Board of Assessors for its good work in keeping the rate at the same mark.

AS A SPEAKER.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer Much in Demand at Farmers Gatherings.

Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer is rapidly taking a prominent position as a speechmaker. On the morning of August 6 he has been engaged to make the principal address before the farmers at Neshanic Station, and on the fifteenth of the same month he will make an address at Lake Grinnell, in Sussex county. The farmers of that locality are going to hold their annual picnic and Mr. Swackhamer will be the principal speaker of the occasion.

"The Democratic Needs of New Jersey" will be the subject of a speech by the "Democratic Moses from Somerset" at the farmers' picnic at the fair grounds at Flemington on August 19. The picnic will be in charge of the Farmers' Alliance, the chairman of which association has secured Mr. Swackhamer as speaker for that, the greatest day in Flemington. Pottersville is also to be honored with an address by "the future Governor of New Jersey" on August 26. At that time the farmers will cease their labors and gather at Pottersville for a day of fun and frolic.

CASE COLLAPSES.

Mrs. Bedford Row Loses All Claim on Husband's Estate, Child Being Dead.

*Mrs. Gunning S. Bedford, who ar*rived in New York from Havre on Sunday with the avowed purpose of beginning a fight for her late husband's property, learned Monday through a cable despatch from her agent in France that the baby she tried unsuccessfully to pass off in England as hers and Bedford's, died last Tuesday in Paris.

As the guardian of a deceased illegitimate child of Bedford, she could have no standing in any court.

STREET IMPROVEMENT.

Work Being Done Under Supervision of Street Commissioner.

The street department started work Monday on the repaving and leveling of West Fifth street from Arlington avenue to Plainfield avenue. The work has been started from the western end of the thoroughfare beginning at Plainfield avenue. The culverts at the intersection of Clinton avenue and West Second street has been repaired and gutters placed so as to allow a free passage of water in case of heavy storm.

CAMPER MISSING; PROBABLY DROWNED

George Honeyman, of Somerville, Supposed to Have Gone Down in River.

MISSING ON SATURDAY

HIS BOAT WAS FOUND UPTURNED ON A BANK.

Son of Philip Honeyman—Twenty-Five Years of Age—No Trace of Body—Camping Out at Weston, Near Bound Brook.

George Honeyman, twenty-five years *old, who had been camping on Mill*stone river, at Weston, for about a month, with John Austin and Archie Crosen, of Somerville, is missing. His boat was found upturned on one of the banks a mile below the dam.

He left his companions Saturday night to go to Bound Brook for groceries. He purchased a return ticket but when the train stopped at Bound Brook, and that was the last seen of him. A can of oil was found on the bank of the river where the boat had been tied, but no trace of Honeyman was found.

It is supposed the boat upset while he was getting into it and that he went over the falls. The body, it is thought, may have floated down the stream to New Brunswick. The river is very high on account of the heavy rains that have fallen. Honeyman was a son of Philip Honeyman, of Somerville. The missing man were rubber boots and a heavy overcoat which probably prevented him from swimming ashore.

BULL SAVES CHILD'S LIFE

FOUR-YEAR-OLD CHILD FALLS INTO BROOK WHILE FISHING.

Youngster Grabs at Bull's Tail, and Latter in Fright Scampers to the Shore.

The four-year-old child of Charles M. Bandell, a farmer living near Bound Brook, had a narrow escape Monday from drowning and owes its life to a Holstein bull.

The child, with its nine-year-old brother, went fishing in a brook that runs through part of the Bandell farm, which is used as a pasture. The children were sitting on the bank, fishing in a pool about four feet deep, when the younger child slipped into the water. The brother in his fright left the child and ran to call his father, who was cutting hay in an adjoining field.

By chance the afther saw the child fall into the brook and was on his way to rescue him when, to his amazement, he saw the child being dragged out of the brook by the bull, which had been standing in the water.

The child, in the usual manner of a drowning person, snatching at anything, managed to catch the tail of the bull, and the bull in sudden surprise rushed from the brook.

Notwithstanding his being a lifesaver, the bull is to be killed this week, he having been sold to a butcher.

MRS. ESTHER GILES' FUNERAL

SERVICES HELD IN HER LATE HOME AT OAK TREE.

Rev. Dr. Schenck, Assisted by A. P. Tulp, Officiated—Interment at South Plainfield.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Esther Giles, of Oak Tree, were held Tuesday p.m. from her late home at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed Church, assisted by Prof. A. P. Tulp, of Rutgers' Theological Seminary and the supply at Maroonier Chapel, officiated. Interment was at South Plainfield.

Mrs. Giles, who was the wife of Manley Giles, died Saturday night, following a long illness with lung trouble. She was a faithful attendant and member of Maroonier Chapel. She was sixty-one years of age and leaves a husband and three daughters, Mrs. Gardner, of Metuchen; Mrs. Cardiff and Miss Giles, who lived at home.

Mr. McCullough a Delegate.

H. H. McCullough, of North Plainfield, has been selected by the New Jersey Federation of Catholic Societies to attend the sessions of the National body.

THE FIRE FIGHTERS' BIG CONVENTION

The Local Chief to Be Among Number From All Over the Country.

PROGRAMME ARRANGED

THIRTY-FIRST ANNUAL MEETING AT ATLANTIC CITY.

To be Largest Ever Held in This Country—Subjects of Papers—Free Discussions—Those to Participate.

Former Chief August Saltsman and *Chief T. O. Doane of the local fire de*partment will attend the thirty-first annual convention of the International Association of Fire Engineers which convenes at Atlantic City September 8. The sessions of the convention will be held in Marine Hall on Young's Ocean Pier, and will be called to order at 11 o'clock each day. Chiefs of the fire departments from all parts of the country, as well as Canada and several of the European cities, will attend the convention, which promises to be the largest ever held in the history of the association, not excluding that of last year, which was the largest and which was held in New York City.

A number of important papers on fire matters will be read and discussed by the delegates. Chiefs A. J. Harris, of Tampa, Fla., and John Thompson, of Toronto, Ont., will present papers, the subject being "Should Firemen be Members of Labor Unions?" Chief Henry R. Yates, of Schenectady, N. Y., will read a paper on "Deadly Fumes from Acids and Other Chemicals; How Better to Protect the Lives of Brave Firemen From Their Dangerous Effects When Engaged in Fighting Fires."

The paper by Captain William Brophy, of the Boston Fire Department, will be "Should the Chief Have Absolute Command of the Fire Department?" "Fire-proof Construction and *Does It Afford Added Fire Pro*tection" will be the subject of the paper to be read by Perry M. Stewart, superintendent of buildings of New York City.

"First Aid to the Injured at Fires; Can Firemen be Instructed so as to Render Such Aid and Should They Not Be" will be the subject of the paper to be read by Chief Edward H. Mersch, of Evanston, Ill.

Secretary Hills, in his invitation, requests each chief attending the convention to present any question he desires discussed. This will be a new feature. In former years the only matters discussed were the papers read before the delegates. Many chiefs of small departments may have an important matter to discuss, but because they have not been selected to read papers might be a little timid in presenting the matter on which they would like to hear the views of other chiefs. The rule at this coming convention will be for attendants to speak right out.

WORK ON COURTHOUSE.

No Time Being Lost by Workmen Laying Heavy Granite Blocks.

The work of laying the heavy granite blocks in the construction of the new court house building at Elizabeth, has progressed rapidly, and from the granite so far laid one can form something of an idea as to what its architectoral beauty will be.

The largest portion of work so far done is on the side facing Rahway avenue. As has been stated, the basement wall on that side is up, and at the present time the stone masons are as speedily as possible placing in position the blocks of carved granite which form the outside wall of the first story.

No work has as yet been done toward laying granite on the northerly side, although it is expected the work on that side will shortly be commenced.

OLDEST BUILDING HERE.

The Structure in East Front Street Erected Just Sixty-One Years Ago.

Few people in this city know that the building at 121 Front street, almost opposite Park avenue, is the first brick building ever erected in this city. A. M. Griffen occupies the ground floor. The building was erected sixty-one years ago by Thomas S. Alberti, father of Mrs. A. A. Titsworth, of New Brunswick. Mrs. Alberti and Mrs. Titsworth formerly lived in this city. The brick used in the construction of the building were hauled to this city by teams from Bayerville, six miles south of New Brunswick.

Fined for Drunkenness.

Michael Woods was fined $3 last Monday by Recorder Dond for being drunk. He was arrested Sunday afternoon on Somerset street by Chief Campbell.

MISS CURRY TALKS ON FRESH AIR WORK

Addresses the Trinity Reformed Church Christian Endeavor Society.

TELLS OF UNDERTAKING

WHAT'S BEING DONE TO MAKE HEALTHY POOR MOTHERS AND CHILDREN.

The Improvements at Netherwood Fresh Air Home—Buildings to Be Dedicated Next Sunday —The Donor.

Miss Sarah Curry, matron of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, was the principal speaker at the Christian Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed Church last Monday. Her address on the work of the camp and the good that has been done among the poorer classes in New York awakened much interest in the work. She had with her several of the children from the camp.

Miss Curry sketched of the plans now underway for increasing the efficiency of the Home. Among those now at the place are tired and careworn mothers from the densely populated tenements in the great city. She told of the care of the 165 women and children now at the camp. Thirty-five of thas number are mothers. When they came here all but two were sick and run down, and today all are well and happy, with two exceptions.

Accommodations are now being made for the accommodation of men. They come to the camp so as to be with their families over Sunday but heretofore no provisions has been made for them. A new building is being erected on the other side of the pond where the men can be accommodated over night.

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock the buildings at the camp will be dedicated. Rev. E. M Rodman, rector-emeritus of St. Grace Episcopal Church, will be the principal speaker. The buildings are given by Alexander Morgan, a prominent member of the New York Stock Exchange, and a distant relative of J. Pierpont Morgan.

rectors will kindly arrange in their respective churches for a solemn requiem, at which they will invite their people to assist and to pray for the same intention.

"A solemn pontifical mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, on Thursday, July 30, at 9:30 a. m., which all the clergy are urgently requested to attend.

"The Holy Spirit exhorts us to pray for those whom God has placed over us. "Remember your prelates who have spoken the word of God to you,' Hebrews xiii, 2. May we show our loyalty to mother church, our attachment to the centre of unity, our charity to our departed father, by the faithful discharge of this duty, and may our fervent prayers ascend to the throne of grace and mercy that he whom we revered and honored as Christ's vicar on earth may speedily be purified of the imperfections of this world and be admitted to the eternal companionship of Jesus Christ in the kingdom of His Glory."

AMUSEMENTS.

Fred Stone, who plays the scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz," at the Majestic Theatre, has to stand motionless for eighteen minutes at a stretch, perched upon a pole in a cornfield, while a scene is taking place in the foreground. The eyes of the audience are constantly upon him and he must not move a muscle of his face or body or the illusion would be destroyed. His outstretched arms are supported by a cross piece nailed to the pole, and during the first performance of "The Wizard of Oz" both of Stone's arms went to sleep and when Dorothy came to take him from the pole he really needed her support until he could restore the circulation.

Professor P. Ludwig Conde is sojourning at the Hotel Kensington, Saratoga, and is receiving flattering expressions from the guests regarding the music which his orchestra is furnishing at that hostelry.

LITTLE JAMES BOY ESCAPES REFORMATORY

A Wealthy Brooklyn Woman Decides to Adopt Boy Who Killed the Watson Girl.

APPOINTED GUARDIAN

JUDGE SCHENCK SUSPENDED SENTENCE FRIDAY IN COURT

Verdict of Accidental Shooting Was Returned—Guardian's Name Withheld—Read Story in Papers and Sympathy Was Aroused.

Willie James, the nine-year-old boy who shot his little playmate, Theresa Watson, last June, with a rifle while tramping through the woods has been released from the Somerville jail and has found a home with well-to-do people in Brooklyn. A "Lady Bountiful" came to the boy's rescue and has adopted him, thus saving him from a term in the Reform School.

Judge Schenck, who has been greatly perplexed over the disposition of the case, was recently approached by a woman of Brooklyn, whose name has not been made public, and who became interested in the boy through reading the stories told in the newspapers at the time of the shooting. She went to adopt the boy. On investigation, it learned that the woman could give the boy a comfortable home with the advantages of an education. Friday the boy was arraigned on the simple charge of assault and Judge Schenck suspended sentence. The boy was taken to Brooklyn.

The story of the adoption dates from the Coroner's inquest held in the Somerset Hotel. A young woman reporter from a New York daily attended the inquest. The frightened countenance of the little fellow, as he answered the questions put to him by the Coroner and other officials touched her heart and before she went away from the town she gave him a picture book and several little trinkets. She said that she would come back to see him. She wrote a story which appeared in the Sunday edition of the metropolitan sheet which touched the cord of sympathy in the heart of the wealthy woman in Brooklyn.

The reporter and the Brooklyn woman met. "Lady Bountiful" told of the pathetic case of the neglected child—how he repaired for his dead and how he was about to be sent to the Reform School. The story had its effect and Willie now has a comfortable home and a new and brighter future shines before him.

REST FOR HER TONGUE IN THE COUNTY JAIL

Abuse of Freedom of Speech Causes Trouble for Mrs. Maggie McGuigan.

POLICE COURT CASES

MICHAEL READINGTON PAYS $10 FOR NIGHT'S LODGING.

Young Sacher Says He Was Spurred on to Assault His Paternal Ancestor Because of Ill Treatment—Judge Lectures.

Mrs. Maggie McGuigan, who is gifted with a sharp tongue and who has no hesitation in using it, will spend the next thirty days in enforced idleness at the county jail for a too unrestrained use of the member in question. It is probable that her neighbors will be able to bear up under the affliction of her absence, for Mrs. McGuigan's abusive language and venomous attacks have annoyed them frequently and brought them unpleasantly before the public.

The charge against Mrs. McGuigan in the city court Saturday was of having assaulted Mrs. Mary McCann, both parties residing on the same house on South Second street. The evidence showed that the attack was unprovoked and malicious, the Judge consequently decided to give the county the privilege of entertaining Mrs. McGuigan for the next thirty days.

Michael Redington, who is a frequent patron of the city jail accommodations, favored the police again Friday night. He was helplessly drunk and the Judge Saturday thought $10 was a reasonable price to charge for the night's lodging.

William Rowlett, colored, and Louis Hirsch were arrested for fighting over the price that Hirsch ought to charge for mending a pair of shoes. Both men bore good reputations and were reprimanded and released on suspended sentence. Rowlett was represented by S. S. Swackhamer, and Hirsch by John P. Owens.

Meyer Sacher, seventeen years old, answered to a charge of having assaulted his paternal forebear. Sacher has been ill treated by his father and the Judge dismissed him with much kindly advice.

PLAINFIELD IS THE PLACE

FOR PEOPLE TO LIVE TO ENJOY HEALTHFUL ADVANTAGES.

Death Rate of This City Compares Favorably With That of Other Jersey Cities.

This city has a remarkably low death rate for the past year as compared with other cities in New Jersey, as shown in the report recently sent out by the New Jersey State Bureau of Vital Statistics. The figures compared with other cities in the immediate vicinity of the same size as Plainfield are interesting.

Plainfield in 1901 had but 257 deaths which is 107 less than New Brunswick and 51 less than Perth Amboy. The marriages in New Brunswick in the same year were 70 more than in this city and fifteen less than Perth Amboy. Plainfield had 134 marriage of which 115 were white and 19 colored. This is sixty-one less than New Brunswick and 109 less than the Staten Island Sound city. From these figures it appears that this city is behind New Brunswick in the number of deaths, marriages and births.

In 1901 the death rate in Plainfield was less than that of 1900. In the latter year it was 16.34 and in the former it was only 16.06. The lowest death rate in any city in the State is at Irvington where it is but 9.34. Rahway's death rate is 14.87 which except Irvington's is the only one lower than Plainfield's. New Brunswick is rated at 18.18, Perth Amboy at 16.52, South Amboy, 16.14; Elizabeth, 17.77 and Long Branch, the highest rated for the year, is 24.07.

In Elizabeth in one year there were fifteen deaths from typhoid, in Hoboken, seventeen, Jersey City had thirty-three. Newark lost 53 residents through the ravages of disease, Trenton, fourteen, and Paterson, topped the list with seventy-seven. Plainfield's healthfulness may probably be ascribed in large measure to the purity of her water supply.

HISTORIC OLD DRUM

One of the Most Valuable Relics in the United States.

It Has Sounded the Call to Arms in Three American Wars, and Was Originally Captured from the British.

A visitor at New Bedford, Mass., viewing the original of the accompanying picture, and not knowing its history, would hardly consider it the priceless treasure it is, or understand the veneration in which it is held. The drum is the property of the Richard A. Pierce post, G. A. R., of New Bedford, and besides being the most treasured possession of the post, is one of the most valuable relics in the United States.

Although now its venerable sides are cracked and its decorations much the worse for wear, the old drum still resounds to the touch with all the vigor and clearness of tone it did in the days of the revolution. Its great historical value lies in the fact that it saw service during these early days of strife and also later on.

The members of the post have had the instrument mounted on a silver plate, bearing the following inscription: "This British drum was captured at Bunker Hill, and assigned by lot to Levi Smith, a drummer in the continental army. Descended to his son, Israel Smith, a soldier of the war of 1812. Presented to his son, Israel Smith, leader of the band of the Thirty-second Massachusetts infantry, the headquarters band which marched with Sherman from Atlanta to the sea in 1864, and presented by him to R. A. Pierce post, No. 100, department of Massachusetts, G. A. R., in 1898."

The above inscription gives the facts in connection with the drum, but do not tell the interesting story. It was at the time that the British soldiers first landed on these shores to subdue the colonial rebels that the instrument also came over, carried by a young English redcoat, who hoped to beat on it the victorious advance of the British soldiers. Instead, it fell into the very hands of the rebels it would have helped to down. It was at the battle of Bunker Hill that the English drummer boy carrying it was shot to death, and a revolutionary soldier managed to obtain possession of it, keeping it with him when he, with his comrades, was finally forced to retreat from the hill.

Israel Smith, the grandsire of Levi Smith, the former owner of the drum, who presented it to the post, was the drummer boy in the famous Rhode Island company who stood the charge at Bunker Hill. Later, when the soldiers drew lots over the drum, young Smith became the fortunate possessor of the prize. It was in a dilapidated condition, more than one bullet having pierced its sides, but young Smith fixed it up and beat many a lusty charge on it before the war was over.

For the 30 years following the war the drum of Bunker Hill rested in peace in Smith's house. When the war of 1812 began he presented it to his eldest son Israel, who marched away to battle with it, and through its inspiring strains it helped to bring about another victory. Again it was stored away, and only dust and cobwebs were its companions until it became the possession of the grandson, Israel, Jr.

For a long time after the death of the elder Smith, the drum, in the possession of his oldest son, was hidden away. The mother of Israel, Jr., remembering her husband's fondness for the relic, hunted up its whereabouts, and heard it had been left in the care of a friend of her son's in Providence, R. I. She impressed upon her son the value of the instrument, and he secured possession of it.

For years various historical societies have endeavored to secure the relic, but Mr. Smith has always refused to part with it, and it was only after he died and his home was broken up, that he decided to intrust it to the care of the R. A. Pierce post, at New Bedford, of which he is a member.

Except for new drum heads, it is in the same condition as when in his father's possession.

There are many old revolutionary relics scattered over this country, which have been handed down from generation to generation. If they could be gathered together into one museum, and be preserved, they would be of even greater interest in the future than they have been in the past. It is such mementoes as these that serve to instill lessons of patriotism in the young.

BOROUGH AUTHORITIES AFTER FRUIT DEALERS

Mayor Smalley Has An Ax Out for Violators of the Liquor Law.

THE SUNDAY TRADE

MATTER TO BE BROUGHT UP IN THE COUNCIL MEETING.

Some Difficulty in Getting Witnesses to Testify—The Italians Observe the Seventh-Day Baptist Sabbath As Sunday.

At the next meeting of the North Plainfield Council, Friday evening, August 7, an ordinance will be introduced which, if passed, may have the effect of stopping all business in the borough on Sundays. Mayor Smalley has placed the matter in the hands of Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed for his opinion and he will report at that session.

The members of the Council have found that something must be done to stop the illegal sale of liquor in the borough on Sunday. Several Italian fruit dealers on Somerset street are the cause of the matter being taken up by the borough fathers.

It is alleged that three of these fruit dealers have been in the habit of selling intoxicating liquors on Sunday in their stores. It is said that behind the display of fruit a bar is often working over time in the rear.

Children, going to and from Sunday-school, and women while promenading stop at these places to purchase peanuts or candy. People in the vicinity of the stores have made complaints that disorderly houses are being maintained in some of the places. Councilman James F. Arnold said yesterday that in two cases of many which he has personal knowledge, young men, not yet of age, have been seen to enter the fruit stores sober and come out intoxicated. When approached with a view of getting them to testify against the shop keepers they refused to do so.

Mayor Smalley declares a stop will be put to the present illegal sales. It is making of Somerset street, he said, a most undesirable thoroughfare on which to live and is endangering valuation of property. "I believe," said he, "that some places can be closed up and if the New Jersey Blue Laws amount to anything they will be put in force in North Plainfield."

Some unobjectionable places will be compelled to close their doors and in that way they will have to suffer for the misdeeds of others. On a pretense that they are members of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination, the Italians close their shops Friday night and remain closed the greater part of Saturday. In this way they believe that they are out of the reach of the law.

EX-EMPRESS EUGENIE

Here Is One of the Saddest Cases of Modern History.

Extravagance Was One of the Causes of the Downfall of the French Dynasty—At Present Life in England.

One of the most pathetic figures of the day is ex-Empress Eugenie. A queen without a throne, the merest shadow of her former self, dwelling solely in the past, and regardless of what the future may bring forth, the widow of Napoleon III, makes her home at Farnborough, in Hampshire, England, save for a few months in the winter, when she resides in a villa overlooking the sea at Cape Martin, near Monte Carlo, and in the midst of those over whom her husband ruled.

No woman living has experienced such vicissitudes of fortune as Marie Eugenie de Guzman y de Porto-Carrero, who on the 5th of May next will celebrate her seventy-seventh birthday. Born in Granada, her father was a Spaniard while her mother belonged to a Scottish family. Her station in life was not a particularly lofty one—her grandfather on her mother's side occupied the not very important post of British consul at Malaga—and neither her parents nor her young associates ever dreamed that she would ultimately become the consort of a monarch and write her name in indelible letters in history.

Miss Eugenie's unmatched beauty and vivacity were such that wherever she went she was the center of attraction. Women eyed her with envy, men raved about her, her photograph was in every shop. She was at once the most fascinating and the most handsome woman of her time. A prominent writer likened her to a snow-flake on a July day; another—an American—compared her with the fairy-like mist that hangs over Niagara. Certainly no lady was ever the object of such fulsome adulation. When her beauty was at its height she visited Paris, with the result that having the entire to the court, she captivated the heart of Napoleon III., emperor of the French.

EX-EMPRESS EUGENIE.

The emperor had contemplated a union with another lady, but upon the appearance, of the lovely Spaniard, the negotiations were broken off, and Eugenie became the royal idol.

The wedding of Napoleon III. and his fiancee took place at the cathedral of Notre Dame on the 29th of January, 1853, when the latter was in her twenty-seventh year. For close upon 17 years the empress was the brightest star in all France. Her court was magnificent; there was no thought of the morrow; money flowed from the imperial coffers in a never-ceasing stream, the extravagance was appalling. The empress was the best-dressed woman, not only in France, but in the world. No one had the slightest chance of competing with her. Her taste was exquisite, her wardrobe was estimated to have cost $1,000,000, and the household expenses amounted during one period to no less a sum than $10,000 a day.

It was this reckless expenditure that was one of the principal causes of the downfall of the dynasty. The French began to tire of the state of affairs, their anger was aroused; then came the war with Germany, the revolution broke out, and the empress' fate was sealed with that of her husband. In terror for her life she fled from Paris one September night after the revolution, and making her way to the coast crossed to Ryde.

Later on she was rejoined by the emperor, and the dethroned pair settled down at Camden House, Chislehurst, where they lived as ordinary people, neither expecting homage nor receiving it. The dazzling empress fell back into oblivion as quickly as she came out of it. Exiled from France, she was separated from her friends, and since the wreck of the empire she has never cared to make new ones.

The ex-empress is still rich. When she escaped from Paris she forfeited the bulk of her possessions, her splendid and incomparable jewelry was sold and scattered. There was a large fortune left, and £50,000 of it went towards the purchase of the mansion and grounds at Farnborough.

The empress maintains no more style than is to be found in the average country home. Her staff of indoor servants number 12 only, and when she travels her methods are those of a private lady. She no longer courts attention. Neither in France nor in England are her features familiar to the public. All her glorious beauty has vanished, her face is wrinkled, the hair that was once golden is white. The wonderful figure that was the talk of Paris has been transformed—the empress, in fine, is a different woman.

PLAINFIELDERS THERE

A WEDDING SUPPER FOLLOWS THE CEREMONY.

Off on Their Honeymoon—Couple to Reside in Newark on Their Return—The Presents Received by the Bride.

A Newark marriage of interest to Plainfielders took place Thursday, the contracting parties being Peter M. Johnson and Nancy Matilda Johnstone, of Newark. The bride formerly lived at 131 East Second street, this city. The groom is the brother of Mrs. Sergeant, of 131 East Second street.

The ceremony was performed in the Grace Episcopal Church of Newark, the rector, Rev. Cornelius Abbott, officiating. Niels Johnson, brother of the groom, was the best man. The bride was gowned in white organdie trimmed with silk applique lace and carrying a bouquet of white carnations. Miss Nellie Lamberson, of Carney, the maid-of-honor, was dressed in pink with pink carnations.

The bride received many beautiful gifts. The groom's present to the bride was a white, silk ivory fan, beautifully painted by hand. The groom presented his best man with a handsome fob engraved with his initials. A white satin belt with a silver buckle was the bride's gift to her maid-of-honor.

A wedding supper was served at the groom's home on Summit avenue, Newark. The church and house were prettily decorated in green and white. Following a wedding trip to Saratoga, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will reside in Newark. A number of guests were present from this city.

COL. BELKNAP NAMED.

A Plainfield Belle May be Mistress in the Kentucky Executive Mansion.

Col. Morris B. Belknap, of Louisville, Ky., who was nominated yesterday by the Republican State Convention for governor of Kentucky, is a son-in-law of former Councilman John B. Dumont, of this city. He married Miss Marion Dumont, a society favorite, in Grace Church three years ago, the wedding being an event of the season. A dispatch to the New York papers says that the nominee is "a wholesale merchant widely known throughout the country."

INSPECTING VOTING MACHINE.

Description of Device Examined by State Voting Commission.

Members of the State voting machine commission have inspected the device of the American Vote Register Company of New York.

This machine meets with the approval of the commissioners and the bill has been placed on file with three others now in. A small steel ball is used to vote and mechanism of this machine is easily understood. The price is $500. No curtain is used, but the machine is so arranged in the booth that no one may intrude or see what the voter is doing while he is casting his ballot. One of the election officers stands at one side, separated by a metal screen, and when the voter leaves the booth he registers the vote by manipulating a lever which lets the ball through to the back of the machine and is tallied by means of cyclometers.

CONSUMPTIVES' HOME WORK NOW HELD UP

Hoped to Commence Construction of State's Institution at Glen Gardner Soon.

THE TOTAL COST, $400,000

BUILDING TO BE APPROXIMATELY 800 FEET ABOVE SEA LEVEL.

The Preserve Surrounding Home Filled With Thousands of Pine Trees—A Railroad Station to be Erected.

New Jersey's proposed home for poor consumptives, in which they can be given special treatment, aimed at their cure under skillful treatment and proper environment, has been progressing with some speed now, but it is hardly likely that work upon the buildings can be started for some time. The ground at Glen Gardner, Hunterdon County, secured after a long search for a suitable site, has been placed in readiness for the actual work of construction, which has been delayed by the necessarily tedious detail of drawing plans and working out the intricacies of ventilation, lighting, heating and drainage.

All work must now stop for it has been discovered that the Legislature did not pass the measure for the distribution of funds. After the measure was introduced into the Assembly it was referred to a committee and from that time lost sight of. No work can be done until the next Legislature makes an appropriation.

In an interview at the Sea Girt camp, where he is passing his time, the Governor said yesterday that plans had been drawn drawn for the proposed buildings and had been approved except for some minor details by the commission whom he appointed.

The State Legislature was supposed to have made an appropriation of $300,000 for the proposed hospital, the idea being to erect a building to which the curable consumptive poor could be taken for treatment. The understanding that $100,000 more would be appropriated for completion of the building and the construction of an easy road through the grounds was made known at the time of the supposed appropriation by the Legislature.

The commission immediately went to work at the task of selecting a suitable site for the building, and after looking at sites in Monmouth and Sussex Counties, decided on the one at Glen Gardner, which overlooks the Delaware river. The site is a tract of 600 acres, and the building will be built upon a high bluff directly on the river and at the highest point of the preserve, about 800 feet above the sea level. There is an admirable view from the spot, it being doubtful if a more beautiful and at the same time healthy place, is to be found in the State. The air is very pure, and the preserve is covered with thousands of pine trees.

The place is easily accessible, being on the Central Railroad of New Jersey. A station will be erected by the railroad company and an easy road will be built by the State from this station to the hospital over which the invalids can be taken in easy carriages very comfortably.

BIG BATTLESHIP NAMED FOR STATE

It Is Planned to Launch the New Jersey Early in January.

HEAVIEST IN ITS CLASS

PLATES WEIGHING EIGHT MILLION POUNDS NECESSARY FOR HULL.

Vessel Being Built at Quincy Point, Boston Harbor—Four Hundred and Thirty-Five Feet Long and Seventy-Six Feet Wide.

At the head of her class in point of progress toward completion—and her class will be the heaviest our navy has ever had—is the battleship New Jersey, which, with her twin sister, the Rhode Island, lies under the big shipwood of the Fore River Ship and Engine Company's Works at Quincy Point, Boston harbor. Her construction was authorized by Congress June 7, 1901, and the contract for building her was awarded February 15, 1902.

The keel of the New Jersey was laid April 2, 1902, but the preliminary work had been started months before —the drawing of plans, assembling of materials, and making of mould patterns and templates, as the life was wooden patterns of the steel plates and frames are called. A vast amount of material goes into such a huge structure; for example, 6,000 steel plates, weighing 8,000,000 pounds, are necessary for the hull, besides 2,250,000 pounds of angles and other shapes —beams and the like; 800,000 pounds of nickel steel are required for the armor to cover the half-inch steel that forms the ship's "skin," and hundreds of thousands of rivets are used to fasten all the parts together.

By the original contract thirty-six months were allowed to complete the vessel, but this time has been extended on account of the several changes recently ordered by the Government for the purpose of strengthening our warships against such accidents as befell the Maine a while ago. In all probability, however, the New Jersey will be ready to launch early in January. She will then be about half co-apleted, but the work of putting in her machinery and the rest of her equipment will be very rapid, and inside the year 1904 she will probably be ready for turning over to Uncle Sam.

The New Jersey is 435 feet long from the tip of her powerful ram-bow to the smoothly turned counter, whereon will be the name of the State she will honor; her width is 76 feet 2½ inches, and her mean draft 39 feet 9 inches. Complete in all respects, her displacement will be 14,948 tons, or generally speaking, 15,000 tons. Though the hull is built of half-inch steel, which is the hardest and surest projectile-resistant, will extend from stem to stern, 8 feet wide and 11 inches thick at the top, reduced to 9 inches in thickness some distance below the waterline.

It is presumed that the citizens of the State from which the big battleship takes her name, will follow the custom of presenting to her something that will be a memorial of the commonwealth. Former Secretary of the Navy, John D. Long, was consulted recently as to what form a memorial should take. He replied:

"I trust New Jersey will give something else than a silver service, which is of no use, is obliged to be kept locked away, is never seen by the men and is never used. A figure on deck, that all can see, like the figure of Victory on the Massachusetts is the serviceable sort of a gift."

REALTY NEWS.

Through the real estate agency of Mulford, of North avenue, L. F. Stockwealth, of the New York office of the U. S. Express Co., has rented the late C. G. Pearson's house at 948 West Seventh street and takes possession during August. F. Patman, of England, has rented 36 Fairview avenue, and has taken possession. R. Willett Ware, of Second place, has purchased property adjoining that occupied by him of Miss Gertrude Feane and Mrs. Johanna Ringel has purchased the property at 816 Carlton avenue, where she will make extensive improvements.

Miss Dottie Smalley and George Egri, of the borough, will spend tomorrow with Miss Carrie Egri at Seaside Hospital, New Drop, S. I.

Will You Sleep Well

Tonight? Not if you have a cough that begins to torment you as soon as you lie down. You can conquer the cough with Allen's Lung Balsam, which will relieve the pain in the chest, the irritation in the throat and the hard breathing. Since it contains no opium, this remedy may be given freely to children, and to the most delicate adults.

ELSTON M. FRENCH'S NEW WOODLAND PARK

Plans to Turn Tract of Land Into One of the Beauty Spots of Plainfield.

BUILDING RESTRICTIONS

IS BOUNDED BY WOODLAND, HILLSIDE, EVERGREEN AND MARTINE AVES.

The Improvements Now Well Under Way—One Hundred Men Employed at Present — Broad Streets and Sidewalks.

Another section of the city is being graded and laid out for a residential park, which, if it is carried out according to the expectations of those interested in the project will be, when completed, one of the beauty spots of the town. The deed for the property has been received by Elston M. French and already men are at work laying out the grounds.

Woodland Park is the name of the new section bounded by Woodland, Hillside, Evergreen and Martine avenues. Seventy-five lots will be laid out in that part of the city and each will have a frontage of over a hundred feet. The lots will be sold with the understanding that the building to be erected thereon will not cost less than $7,000.

Mr. French has had men at work all this week laying out, grading and macadamizing the streets. There are about 100 men employed on the grounds at present and one of the lots has been purchased by a New Yorker who has already started the erection of a dwelling. Three others, it is said, will be started this summer.

Shade trees will be planted long the sidewalks of the newly laid out streets. Mr. French will bear the expense of grading in the new park but the city has agreed to put in order Putnam avenue which is the main street leading to the new tract. The streets will be broad as will also be the sidewalks.

INTER-DENOMINATIONAL UNITY

THREE DISTINCT CHRISTIAN BODIES MAY AMALAGAMATE.

Purposes of a General Council Composed of Members of the Three Denominations.

A common statement, in two parts, one addressed to the highest delegated bodies of the respective denominations and the other to the individual churches, has been issued by the committee to which was intrusted the work of devising a plan for the closer affiliation of Congregationalists, United Brethren and Methodist Protestants. The statement to the delegate bodies makes the assertion that the committees encountered no doctrinal obstacles and recommends the addition to the corporate names now held, respectively, of the words "in affiliation with the general council of the united churches." The formation of the general council is recommended and the purchases of this council are described:

To show to the world real Christian unity.

To secure organic union and effective common work.

To prevent duplication and waste.

The address to the churches recites what has been suggested to the delegate bodies, and warns the congregations that the committees have in mind something far more definite than mere co-ordination. Weak churches are to be united, and common educational, evangelistic and missionary work undertaken. The churches are asked to hold common meetings, where two or more denominations have churches in the same State or States. Young people's societies are also urged to hold such communion meetings, to enable members to become acquainted. There is suggested an interchange of literature, and the address concludes:

"It is surely not impossible that our denominations, standing together, consulting together, and seeking first, not Methodist Protestantism, not United Brethernism, not Congregationalism, but the kingdom of God and his righteousness, will be able to find ways by which they may adjust their differences of local administrations, and unite their forces all along the line."

Mr. and Mrs. Davis Townsend, of Bound Brook, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jost Manning, of South Plainfield.

Mrs. Robert Davis and her sister, Miss DuBois, of Park avenue, have been visiting relatives at Whitehouse for several days.

Mr. Williams and family, of Roselle, will soon move into one of Henry Leithe's new houses on Grant avenue, near Front street.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 26, "The Gospel in the Islands." Text, Isa. xlii. 1.

"The isles shall wait for His law."

In the prophecy of Isaiah the mention of the islands is frequent in connection with the hope for the extension of the kingdom of Jehovah. At that time Cyprus was of importance, as it always was, in the commerce of the east with the lands around the Mediterranean sea. The Hebrews were never a seafaring people. The only maritime ventures they made were in the time of Solomon and Hezekiah, and the results never encouraged a repetition of the experiments. So for a Hebrew prophet to predict the acceptance of Jehovah's law by the commercial populations of the islands was a vast stretch of imagination and took hold of the far future. It would involve vast changes in conditions then existing in all departments of life.

It is singularly significant that the first real missionary enterprise of the early Christian church was to the island of Cyprus. Perhaps the very name of Paul was due to his tour of this island with Barnabas and the conversion of Sergius Paulus. The part which the islands have had in the evangelization of the world has not been small. What Cyprus was to the ancient world Britain and Ireland have been to the later ages.

The time was when Christian education was kept alive in the world more largely by the influence of the institutions of Ireland than by all other influences combined. For ages Britain has been the home of Christian culture and the center of evangelizing forces which have reached to the ends of the earth. When the history of missionary effort is written the islands will hold large place in the thrilling recital.

In modern times the story of the conversion of the south sea islands is thrilling beyond romance. The work which is now going on is pressing, but should not be allowed to prevent the study of the story of the Christianizing of Hawaii from New England, of Tonga and Feejee and a score of other groups by the Wesleyan Methodists of England. The dawn of the day in Japan has come. Since Commodore Perry in 1854 opened Japan to the western world her advance in religious life has been second only in interest to her vast strides in political reformation.

The Philippines are now open to the gospel of Jesus, and the vast continental island of Borneo has just been entered. Our own Bishop Warne of India has planted Methodism in that almost unknown land.

Impressive as is the tale of China, India, Africa and the continents in their turning to Christ, the story of the islands is not less instructive and cheering.

As an Example.

His prayers should serve us as examples by reason of the absolute assurance of God's interest in us and tender concern for us on which they are based. He went to His Father in that childlike, trustful spirit which He has bidden us cherish. And the underlying mood of His prayers that which came to the surface in that terrible hour of anguish in Gethsemane, "Nevertheless, not My will but Thine be done." It is noticeable how continuous in them was thanksgiving. True gratitude to God or man seeks expression. Their unselfishness also strikes us. Jesus did not think first and chiefly of Himself and of what He wished or did not wish. He loved to pray for others and His prayer for them reveal His longing for their highest, holiest welfare.—Congregationalist.

His Gifts.

Bounteous is Jehovah in his nature; to give is His delight. His gifts are beyond measure precious and are as freely given as the light of the sun. He gives grace to His elect because He wills it, to His redeemed because of His covenant, to the called because of His promise, to believers because they seek it, to sinners because they need it. He gives grace abundantly, seasonably, constantly, readily, sovereignly, doubly enhancing the value of the boon by the manner of its bestowal. Reader, how blessed it is, as the years roll round and the leaves begin again to fall, to enjoy such an unfading promise as this: "The Lord will give grace!"—C. H. Spurgeon.

Connected With Christ's Kingdom.

To be connected with Christ's great kingdom is to be connected with that which is not only great and good, but everlasting, and "of the increase of which there will be no end." And to be connected with it in this very way of extending its humanizing, saving influences over the whole race and communities of men who "heretofore were not a people" and "had not obtained mercy," though it be attended with many privations and hardships and much self denial, is yet a work which angels and the brothers of the church should esteem as a privilege exceedingly great and precious.—Congregationalist.

God Answers Our Prayers.

But sometimes the answer is a declination, a wise refusal to give what we ask. He may not remove the thorn from the flesh. He may not restore sight to health, but grant us the greater gift of faith and patience and the power to obey His will without a murmur. This is the better answer. He does not always make a show of us openly by answering us with marked favors, so that we may say: "See here, see there," but He often rewards us in secret. The best things God does for us we cannot put a mark upon and label them so the world may see an answer to prayer.—Reformed Church Messenger.

COUNTY COMMITTEE DOINGS

NEWS FROM THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE REPUBLICAN CAMP.

Chairman Hamilton Kean Has Something to Say Regarding Delegate Lists—Baseball Game.

Chairman Hamilton Fish Kean announces that the city clerks of Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway are the only officials who have complied with the requirements of the new law as to furnishing to him lists of the number of delegates to which each voting district is entitled.

Acting State Chairman Stokes has informed the committee that he had recommended the appointment of C. Addison Swift, of Elizabeth, to the Governor, as successor of William C. Carr on the County Board of Election.

William H. Donaldson, Linden, has been elected a member of the committee to succeed Charles I. Brown, who has moved out of the county.

Chairman Kean has requested all to send the names for the Board of Registry and Election to him by mail.

James Smylie Tucker, member from the Ninth ward, Elizabeth, announces that a big game of baseball between Republicans and Democrats is expected to take place Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, on the Y. M. C. A. Walnut street grounds, and he invites the committee to come out and see the political athletes.

LAWMAKERS VISIT SEA GIRT

UNION COUNTY'S DELEGATION AMONG THE THRONG OF OFFICIALS.

Politics More Attractive Than the Needs of Camp—Distinguished Men There.

State Senator Joseph S. Cross, of Elizabeth, Assemblyman William Newcorn, of this city and Assemblyman Coyne, of Elizabeth, composed Union County's delegation of lawmakers at Sea Girt Thursday. Governor Murphy acted as host and among the prominent guests were United States Senators Kean and Dryden, Congressman Wiley and Gardner, State officials and the members of the Legislature. The purpose of the reception was to demonstrate to the lawmakers that more ground is required by the National Guard at Sea Girt.

Three companies participated in a review by the Governor and Legislators.

Naturally, in the intervals between the time of arrival and the hour for luncheon the lawmakers indulged in political talk, and there were frequent and significant allusions to the next Republican candidate for Governor, the South Jerseymen being especially insistent in their claims for that honor, with Chancellor Clark Edward C. Stokes as the first choice. Mr. Stokes smilingly accepted the greeting of "Governor," and said nothing to discourage his friends in their predictions that he will be the next occupant of the "Little White House."

While the lawmakers were at lunch they amused themselves by frequent reference to Mr. Avis as the next Speaker and to Assemblyman Elvins, of Atlantic, as Mr. Boyd's successor in the position of leader.

Mrs. Frank Smalley, of New York, is visiting her parents on West Third street.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 26—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—A mission study of South America.—Luke 6, 27-36.

South America, the less important of the two continents of the western hemisphere, is triangular in shape and is over 4,700 miles long and 3,000 miles wide. Its area is 7,000,000 square miles, and it has a coast line of 18,000 miles. It is nearly twice as large as Europe and contains one-eighth of the land surface of the globe. It is divided into fourteen countries, Uruguay, the smallest, being twice the size of Ireland. The population is composed of a mixed people of Spanish, Portuguese, Indian and negro blood. It is remarkable for its lofty mountains and noble rivers. The Amazon is the greatest of rivers, and the Andes mountains, with peaks of extraordinary height, extend for 4,500 miles along the entire western coast. The continent possesses every variety of climate, varied and luxuriant vegetation and great mineral wealth.

Mission work is greatly needed in South America. The natives in the southern part form a fruitful field for missionary labors, and in the northern countries, such as Brazil and Chile, where the blight of Romanism has fallen, there is extraordinary need that the true Christ be preached, "a light to lighten the gentiles." Ignorance and superstition exist, the character of the people is fickle, and great opposition is manifested on the part of the Roman Catholic church to the propagation of evangelical Christian truth. Persecution at times has been very bitter, and as a result of it missionaries have even lost their lives. But South America is advancing. Its climate and industrial richness are more and more becoming recognized, and as the continent is populated with different classes of people the governments will become more stable and the opportunities for increased successful missionary effort will be enlarged. And until such times prayer and patient toil must be exercised by all who are interested in winning this splendid continent for Christ.

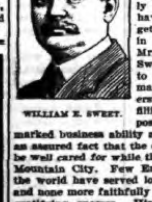
The South American Missionary Society of London first established Protestant missions in South America. Captain Allen Gardner, the founder of the society, first visited the continent for the purpose of establishing a Christian mission in 1838. He desired to work among the mountaineers of the north, but because of the opposition of the Roman Catholic priests he was compelled to go to the south. But his work was not very successful, and in 1850 he lost his life in fruitless attempts to establish a mission in Tierra del Fuego. Afterward the work was more successful, and missions were established on this island and among most of the countries of South America. In the last half century the Protestant churches of America have been engaged in mission work in the various parts of this vast continent. The work has been blessed of God, and in spite of the manifold difficulties in the way evangelical Christianity is making headway and will continue to do so under the blessing of God.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. ii, 8; cxxxv, 15-21; Isa. ix, 1, 2; xxxv, 1-7; xlii, 6, 7; lx, 1, 2, 3; Zech. ix, 10; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Acts i, 8; Rev. xxii, 17.

Denver Convention Chairman.

To successfully care for a great international Christian Endeavor convention is no "boy's play." It is work, genuine hard work, and on the shoulders of the chairman of the committee of arrangements rests a large burden of responsibility. The Endeavorers of Denver have been particularly fortunate in having so energetic a worker in the cause of Christ as Mr. William E. Sweet on whom to bestow the mantle of leadership. He is filling the high position with marked business ability and making it an assured fact that the delegates will be well cared for while they are in the Mountain City. Few Endeavorers in the world have served longer than he and none more faithfully or with more gratifying success. His state union has placed him over and over again in its leading offices and always he has measured up to the opportunity.



WILLIAM E. SWEET.

A "Christian Endeavor Rest."

Near the little town of Pierre, S. D., there has been established what is known as that section as a "Christian Endeavor Rest" for cowboys. This rest, or home, is sustained by the Congregational Christian Endeavorers of Pierre, consisting of but twelve members. It is a neat two story cottage, in which the Endeavorers maintain a reading room, dining room, bathrooms and laundry.

BIG DEMAND FOR TELEPHONES

ANOTHER NEW SWITCH BOARD TO MEET DEMANDS OF SERVICE.

Sixty-one New Subscribers In Last Two Months—Other Improvements.

In order to meet the requirements of rapidly increasing business in this city the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is planning to install a new section of the switch board at the local telephone exchange. This addition will mean the accommodation for a hundred new telephones. In the last two months the telephone company has installed sixty-one new instruments in the city and has opened telephone communication with Alton, N. J.

The plans are to install the new section so that still better service can be given. The number of telephones in this city is about four hundred in excess of those in New Brunswick, a city of about the same size. A year ago a new switch board was installed which was thought at the time would be large enough to meet the requirements of the town for at least three years to come.

READY SETTLES CLAIM.

Injured Man Receives $2,200 From Lehigh Valley Railroad Company as Compensation.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has settled with Michael Ready, of South Plainfield for $2,200, that being the amount demanded for injuries sustained at a railroad crossing near Dunellen on Hallowe'en night in October last. The settlement was made through Codington & Swackhamer.

Ready started to drive across the tracks and was half way over when a train was seen approaching. He whipped up his horse and as he did so the gateman let down the gates, closing him in before the onrushing train. His horse, becoming frightened wheeled suddenly and threw him down an embankment, thus saving his life but injuring his back.

SHERIFF SELLS LAND.

Tracts on West Front Street and on Richmond Street Go to Satisfy Judgments.

Sheriff B. Frank Coriell has sold two local properties, one of which is in the matter of the Citizens' Mutual Bank and Building Society, against James Trimmer. The property disposed of is located on West Front street. It was purchased by Elizabeth M. Updike, the price paid being $735.

The other sale is a piece of property on Richmond street, sold by the trustees of the Filmore Avenue Colored Baptist Church. The complainant was the National Building Loan and Provident Association. The property was bought in by the complainant, the purchase price being $1,200.

TO BUILD HOME.

An Asylum for Disabled Soldiers and Sailors to be Erected.

The board of managers of the New Jersey home for disabled soldiers, sailors or mariners and their widows at Vineland has awarded the contract for building an addition to the home to W. E. Turner, of Vineland, for $23,213, that being the lowest bid submitted to the Board.

Turner is a member of the Board of Freeholders of Cumberland County and captain in the National Guard. The State appropriation for the addition is $25,000.

Lifted a Roll.

Letter-carrier Charles B. Stephens, while in Elizabeth a few days ago visiting his son, lost $40 in bills from his pocket. He believes it was taken by a sneak thief while he was walking along the street.

Bettering Service.

It is reported that the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company is considering the advisability of operating its cars on a fifteen-minute headway during the day time.

Swackhamer on Democracy.

Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer will make an address at the Farmers' Alliance picnic on the fair grounds, Flemington, August 19. His topic will be "Democratic Issues."

Permit to Build.

W. H. Bohl, of Kensington avenue, has received permission from Inspector of Buildings T. O. Doane to erect a barn on his lot on Fifth street near Franklin place.

Drake, a Notary.

N. Douglass Drake, of Deer street, who recently passed his bar examinations at Trenton, has been appointed a notary public for Somerset county by Governor Murphy.

Captain S. C. Pees, Jr., and wife, of West Front street, have returned from Asbury Park, where they spent a pleasant two weeks.

Miss Dottie Smalley, of the borough, a trained nurse, is planning to enter a hospital either in Philadelphia or New York in the fall.

BEN LA VERE'S BAND GIVES SECOND CONCERT

Big Crowd Enjoys Unusually Good Programme Rendered at City Park.

REDMOND APPLAUDED

CORNET SOLOS BY A. C. SWEET A PROMINENT FEATURE.

Among the Popular Numbers Were Selambo, Sultan of Sulu and the Voice of the Hudson—Complete Programme.

Another big crowd was present last Thursday at the second in the series of band concerts at the City Park. The evening was ideal and the music by LaVere's band was as popular as ever. The programme was arranged with good taste and every number was executed with a lot of swing and vigor.

The feature of the concert was the singing of William Redmond in the popular selections enthusiastically encored. Mr. Redmond's voice was clear and expressive, and he struck every note with strength and certainty, indicative of an unusual natural talent perfected by professional training.

Mr. Sweet rendered his difficult cornet solo with appreciation of an artist and his work deserved all the applause it received. The volume of sound and clearness of tone which characterized his work showed him the perfect master of his instrument.

The programme follows:

March, "Yale College Life," Reed; overture, "Poet and Peasant," Suppe; concert waltz, "Soul of the Rose," Frantzen; cornet solo, "Inflamatus from Stabat Mater," Rossini, Albert C. Sweet; medley, "The Voice of the Hudson," Dresser; vocal solo, (a) "The Boys are Coming Home Today," Dresser; (b) "Dear Old Girl," Morse, William Redmond; descriptive piece, "Monkey Shines on the Middle Levee," Arrested; intermezzo, "Selambo," Morse; selection, Sultan of Sulu," Ade; finale, "Fly Musette from the Mocking Bird," Solano.

PURSE FOR PASTOR.

Members of Calvary Baptist Church Show Appreciation of Rev. Scott Wallace in Substantial Way.

The members of the Calvary Baptist Church to the number of about fifty-five met at the pastor, Rev. Scott Wallace, Thursday and presented to him a purse as a token of appreciation for what he has done for the church.

Those present included S. A. Cardwell, Miss Lulu Scott, Miss Cora Cary, Mrs. Susie Miller, Mrs. Tillie Peterson, Miss Rosa Badgr, Charles Hardaway, Mrs. Bertie Reed, Mrs. Martha Seals, Mrs. Victory Stonstall, Henry Taylor, Mrs. Mary Harlinese, Mrs. Ida Britton, Mrs. Rebecca Clark, Mrs. Abby Holmes, Mrs. James Brooks, Miss Rose Roe, Miss Mattie Parks, Perry Hankins, Mrs. Agnes Holmes, Miss Dora Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Silas Jackson, Miss Estelle Parks, Walter Scruggs and "Deacon" Spencer Conway.

CLERKS' OUTING.

Association Holds Second Annual Excursion to Riverside Park.

Nearly two hundred members of the Retail Clerks' Mutual Aid Association and their friends journeyed to Riverside Park, last Thursday, where a pleasant time was had. It was the second annual excursion of the association to that park. Two trolley cars were required to take the party from Plainfield to the Park, and a jolly crowd it was. At the popular resort the young folks enjoyed the vaudeville entertainment provided by the management, after which dancing was the feature until 11 o'clock. It was midnight when the party reached Plainfield.

Women Aid Hospital.

A number of prominent women in Bayonne, N. J., have started a house-to-house canvass of the city for contributions for the Bayonne Hospital, a charitable institution, which is in need of about $6,000 with which to meet debts.

View of Montross.

Says the Westfield Standard:—"'Smiling Jimmie' Montross, the Prodigal Son, has returned to Westfield, and will again join the local pitching staff. 'Jimmie' is a good man to have on the team. He fills in anywhere and when it comes to pitching he holds his own with the best of 'em."

Exposure to Wet, dampness and cold, invariably results in a sudden chill, which if not attended to immediately will cause a cold. By mixing a teaspoonful of Perry Davis' Painkiller in half a glass of warm water or milk, the whole system will be heated and the danger of cold avoided. Avoid substitutes, there is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'. Price 25c. and 50c.

SOME OBJECTIONS TO THE AMENDMENTS

Charles H. Hartshorne Takes Exception to the Proposed Change.

HIS VIEWS INSTRUCTIVE

HITS HARD AT SUGGESTED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

As to Separate Courts of Law and Equity — Wherein New Jersey is Backward—Expensive Judiciary.

Charles H. Hartshorne, one of New Jersey's really eminent lawyers, has taken up the fight against the adoption of the amendments to the Constitution. A special election has been called for September 22 and as the proposed changes affect the judiciary solely but slight attention has been given the subject generally. Mr. Hartshorne has furnished his views on the subject to several of the leading newspapers of the State. He says in part:

"We have outgrown the mediaeval system of courts and procedure existing in this State; it works needless injustice to suitors and the amendments, far from reforming the system, will continue its vices at increased expense.

"The following statements are founded on the writer's personal investigation, and are known to him to be true; he is ready to furnish authority for each of them.

"1. Our judicial system is fundamentally the same as it was in colonial times, although the conditions to which it applies are wholly changed.

"2. It embraces more kinds of courts than exist in any other State in the Union. We have nine kinds (above our municipal courts) namely, courts of quarter sessions, courts of oyer and terminer, courts of common pleas, orphans' courts, circuit courts, the supreme courts, the prerogative court, the court of chancery, the court of errors and appeals. Massachusetts, a much more populous and wealthy State, has only four kinds, namely, courts of probate, courts of insolvency, the superior court, the supreme court.

"3. Our system of procedure sometimes compels the courts to dismiss cases after months or years of litigation, because of two courts of equal rank manned by judges of equal competence, both having general jurisdiction in civil cases. A suitor has, by mistake, chosen this court instead of that. Sometimes the courts themselves disagree as to the court in which the suit should be brought.

"4. It sometimes compels a defendant in one court to apply to another court of no higher rank to prevent the first from depriving the first court, though knowing that its judgment will do a legal injustice, is powerless to withhold it.

"5. It often requires litigants having a single controversy to prosecute two or more suits to settle it, although it could conveniently be settled in one, if the rules of procedure would permit.

"6. It sometimes cuts off absolutely the important right of reviewing a judgment on appeal, because of accidental slips in trivial points of appellate procedure.

"7. It often compels the courts to interpose in law suits long, vexatious, and needless delays because of slips on points of procedure that are utterly useless in the due administration of justice.

"Our outgrown system begins to pinch the lawyers by threatening to accumulate arrears of their cases in the overworked supreme court and court of appeals. It is obvious that a lawyer suffers more by delay in getting his case heard than by a prompt reversal of the judgment upon a point of procedure. For the former event arrests the litigation, while the latter usually protracts it with costs to lawyers on both sides by requiring the parties to retrace their steps or to begin afresh.

"The eminent lawyers who urge these amendments are not moved, therein by ignoble motives of costs and protracted litigation. To avert the threatened arrears in those two courts, the lawyers prepared the present amendments, and a complaisant legislature, without discussion, offered them to the people. They proposed a patch upon our antiquated system, namely, a new court of appeals above our supreme court. The United States has no such above its supreme court. Neither has any State in the Union, except New Jersey and New York.

"Our present court of appeals consists of the justices of the supreme court, the chancellor, and six 'special' judges who till recently were laymen. The new court will consists of five judges, not members of any other court. The present court costs twelve to fifteen thousand a year. The new court will cost fifty to seventy thousand, according to the salaries to be paid.

"A great movement for judicial reform, within a lifetime, revolutionized the administration of justice in most English-speaking communities. But the lawyers of the State, as a body, are curiously ignorant and wholly indifferent concerning it. They want a new court, but they want no reforms in administering justice.

"We want, not more courts but fewer, and a more simple and certain procedure. Let no one suppose that the amendments are a 'step forward.' They are a step backward. They will postpone and make more difficult the reforms which must come at last. Constitutional changes in the judiciary are not to be made lightly, like amendments to a town charter. Let us make no piece-meal change now in hope of another patch a few years hence."

BAPTIST CENTRAL COUNCIL

SUGGESTION FOR DENOMINATIONAL UNITY AS PERMANENT PLAN.

A Committee of Nine Appointed to Work Out Scheme and Report.

At the Baptist anniversaries held in Buffalo recently a resolution was offered looking to the establishment of a central body, representing all Baptists in America, to meet once a year, and to deliberate upon questions affecting the denomination. The matter was referred to a new committee of nine, to report next year.

It has long been felt among Baptists North, and to some extent among Baptists South, that greater denominational unity would result if there were some central organization, similar to the National Council of Congregationalists. The scheme is not a new one, but meets with more favor now than when presented before. It may, in the opinion of Baptist leaders, begin with one body, probably Baptists North, and gradually extend to include all in America.

There is no movement to create a central legislative body, but it is believed that recommendations offered by such a council would carry weight with the churches almost equal to legislative enactments, were the latter possible. It is held that delay in providing denominational headquarters, in New York or elsewhere, has been due to a lack of any general movement.

It is to be a permanent body, with members appointed yearly, and is to consider all questions bearing upon working relations of these societies. It will have direction of such matters as the overlapping of work, interference in efforts to raise money, and the publication of propaganda literature. The report of the committee, with all of its recommendations, was adopted by all of the societies, and the members of the new committee of nine will soon be appointed.

And Sleep as the Ground.

Instead of having their food cooked for and served to them in fine mess halls, disciplinarians say, the National Guardsmen in camp at Sea Girt should have regular army rations and do their own cooking and wash their own dishes, just as the battalion of regulars do who are encamped there. This would be real soldiering.—New York Herald.

Who's Who?

Under the title of "Who's Who?" the Westerly (R. I.) Sun publishes a list of the cottages, their owners and their occupants for the season of 1903 at Watch Hill, R. I. In the list are Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and S. L. Schoonmaker, of Plainfield.

Contemptible Act.

Clarence Thorn, of Watchung avenue, has lost a valuable French poodle. Somebody gave the dog ground glass in its food and the animal passed away in great agony.

Investing in Realty.

Mrs. O. Helmbold has purchased two lots of Elston Franch on his Deer street extension, near Greenbrook road and is erecting a $3,000 house on one of the lots.

LEO TO LIE IN STATE

In the Chapel of the Sacrament of St. Peter's.

ALL BELLS TOLL FOR PASSING SOUL

The Whole People of Rome Will Be Allowed to Say a Last Farewell to the Body of the Great Pontiff.

ROME, July 22.—The body of Leo XIII. lies in the hall of the throne room, a few steps from the room in which his death took place. The same vestments, the camauro hood, the rochet and the white gown which were put on Monday cover the form, which rests in semistate surrounded by lighted candles, the noble guard and Franciscan penitentiaries.

The diplomatic body, the high dignitaries and the Roman aristocracy will enter the hall to pay their tributes of respect to all that remains of the pope, who won the respect and affection of the whole world. The body will then be arrayed in all the glory of the pontifical robes, the miter replacing the hood, and at sunset it will be taken into the chapel of the Sacrament of St. Peter's, where for three days the public will be given an opportunity of paying a last farewell. The interment will occur on Saturday evening. The impressive ceremonial of the recognition of the death of the pope occurred in the morning in the chamber in which he died. Thereafter only those were admitted who were concerned in the embalming of the body, an operation which occupied six hours. Meantime the authorities of the Vatican proceeded with the preparations for the funeral and the conclave and the acknowledgment of the condolences which had been received. Among the latter was a notable message from the German emperor.

Several thousand entered St. Peter's at vespers and joined in prayers for the departed. Among these were many of the Italian officers, whose troops shortly after sunset were marched from the Vatican back to their barracks. At no time had their services been needed.

The quiet of the evening was broken by a chorus such as the world has seldom heard, when all of Rome's 400 churches commenced to toll bells for the passing of the soul of Leo XIII. From their towers bells and from every quarter of the city which contained churches came the constant clang until all was one vast reverberation. The harsh jingle of the smaller chapel bells, striking quickly and more often, was not drowned by the solemn strokes that came in mourning measure from the great dome of St. Peter's. It was as if a great fire raged and every bell in Rome were vying with every other in anxiety to warn the populace. Except for the solemn

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

FIRE DEPARTMENT A CREDIT TO CITY

Plainfield Justly Proud of Its Firemen and the Apparatus They Use.

ANNUAL REPORT ISSUED

STATISTICS AS TO THE PRESIDENT CONDITION OF DEPARTMENT.

Chief Doane and His Assistants Able Fire Fighters—Some of the Machines Used in Battling the Flames.

Plainfield is justly proud of her fire department. Its efficiency is unquestioned; its equipment is complete and up to-date; its personnel is admirable; and its affairs are directed by a chief and an assistant chief in whom is rightly reposed implicit confidence.

The city has been remarkably free from fires during the past two years. For 1902, if the destruction of the Babcock building be excepted, the total damage resulting from fires was $9,240 34. Including the Babcock fire it was $127,564.94. Insurance covered most of the loses.

The report of the chief, T. O. Doane, for the year 1902, has just been issued in pamphlet form. It contains much that is of interest, and the data presented is correct up to date. No changes have occurred since the report was issued.

It is announced that the annual force of the department consists of forty-one officers and men, one chief, two assistant engineers—one on call, six drivers of apparatus, one tillerman, one driver of chief's wagon, five hose and pipe men, one engineer of steamer, on call, one veterinary surgeon, on call, four foremen, on call, ten privates, on call.

The three houses used by the department are owned by the city. The headquarters building on East Second street is occupied by No. 1 Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1 Chemical, No. 3 Hose Company, Chief's wagon, and exercise wagon. The engine house on West Second street is occupied by No. 1 Steamer and No. 1 Hose Wagon. The house on West Fourth street, opposite Darrow avenue, is occupied by No. 2 Hose Wagon, the Combination Chemical and Hose Wagon, and No. 2 Truck.

The following apparatus is in service: Third size double pump Amoskeag steamer, 600 gallon capacity; Hayes Aerial turntable hook and ladder truck, 65 feet extension ladder; three hose wagons; double 55 gallon Holloway combination chemical and hose wagon; double 60 gallon Holloway chemical engine; eight three gallon Holloway extinguishers; iron frame hook and ladder truck, on call; exercise wagon; Chief's wagon, new; Chief's wagon, old.

The water supply consists of 301 hydrants, 5,700 feet of hose are in use, and eleven horses are trained for the service. The fire alarm telegraph system is modern in every respect.

There were eighty-seven alarms in 1902, an increase of eighteen over the preceding year. The causes of fires ranged from the deadly cigarette and tramps to gas explosions and fireworks. Chimneys and defective flues caused most of the trouble and locomotive sparks and children with matches were the next most frequent means of conflagration.

The Chief recommends in his report the building of a new house in the eastern part of the city and the purchase of additional hose, and more horses. He also states that several extra hydrants are needed.

SEATS FELL.

Local Counsel for Connecticut Man Injured at a Barnum & Bailey Performance.

Hetfield & Hetfield, of this city, are lawyers for a Connecticut man who has brought suit for $5,000 damages against Barnum & Bailey's circus. Edward McMahon is their client's name. McMahon, who lives at Norwalk, Conn., attended the "greatest show on earth" when it was exhibiting at Bridgeport, Conn., and while he was shelling peanuts on the top row of the bleachers the seat gave way and hurled him to the ground along with other spectators. Mr. McMahon is still in the General Hospital at Bridgeport suffering from a compound fracture of the left leg.

SEVEN COUNCILMEN TO BE BALLOTED FOR

List of Municipal Officeholders Whose Terms Expire This Fall.

POLITICAL SITUATION

PRESIDENT BUCKLE OF THE COMMON COUNCIL MAY SEEK RETIREMENT.

Collector No Longer Chosen by the People—Some Justices of the Peace to be Elected—Work Accomplished by Council.

From present indications the local campaign this fall will be a quiet one. The principal contest will be in the election of seven Councilmen, that number from the present body retiring this year. Those whose terms expire are J. F. Buckle, president; W. L. Gleak, from the First ward, chairman of the license committee and member of the police, finance and alms committees; Jas. vanHerwerden, from the Second ward, member of the streets and sewers, fire and buildings and lights and trees committees; Leslie M. Daniel, from the Third ward, chairman of the finance committee and member of the fire and buildings committee; Robert L. Lee, from the Fourth ward, chairman of the fire and buildings committee and member of the auditing committee; Clarence L. Murphy, from the Fourth ward, chairman of the lights and trees committee, and member of the finance and license committees; E. E. Pray, from the Second ward, chairman of the auditing committee and member of the streets and sewers, finance, lights and trees and alms committees.

As Mayor O. L. Jenkins was elected to his office a year ago, he still has a another year to serve. Collector Smith is now out of the hands of the voters, it will be up to the Common Council to fill that office and there is every reason to believe that Mr. Smith will be continued as tax collector for another year.

There may possibly be a few Justices of the Peace and constable to elect, but aside from these the ticket will be a small one. It is yet a trifle early to determine upon those who are expected to take the nomination for members of the Council. President Buckle will no doubt retire. He has served the city continuously as a Councilman for several years and he has given a great deal of his time to its interest. Prior to the present year he acted as chairman of the police board and was also a member of most of the important committees. His judgment has been considered fair and to the best interests of the city and as a presiding officer he has had the respect and admiration of the whole Council.

Mr. Gleak is also one of the older member and whether he will want to return for another year is not known at present. Like Mr. Buckle, he has been very faithful in his attendance and in looking after such work as has been assigned to him. As chairman of the alms committee this year, much improvement is noted in that department.

As for Mr. VanHerwerden there is a probability that he will retire from the Council. He has many private duties at present which call him away from the city most of the time. He was talked of for the position of president this year, but the fact that he is out of town so much led to the selection of Mr. Buckle.

Although Robert Lee has served the Council several years, he is one of the younger members and has been actively engaged in looking after the interest of the city, especially as regards the fire department. He is spoken of as a candidate for re-election and he has many friends who would like to see him serve another term. This is also true of Clarence L. Murphy, another of the younger members. The experience thus far gained by Mr. Murphy has had a tendency to fit him still better for the position of Councilman.

Leslie M. Daniel is still another one of the younger members who is quite likely to return, according to rumor. His knowledge of matters of finance makes him a valuable member and he has been thoroughly devoted to his work for the city.

It is possible that E. E. Pray may be a candidate for re-election, although his increasing business obligations may cause him to change his mind. During the first part of Mr. Pray's service he was inclined to be quiet and watch the other members, but during recent part he had been more aggressive. It was through his efforts that the Council took up the matter of street sprinkling and made municipal sprinkling a fact.

Of all the members much could be said as to what they have done, for during their service they have been progressive and introduced many improvements, notably the Gamewell police patrol system, while the erection of the plans of the Board of Education for a new High School, should not be overlooked.

It seems to be the general opinion that during the past year Plainfield has been well governed and that it has more to show for the money expended than any other city of its size.

PLINY FISK HOME AGAIN

RETURNS WITH HIS BRIDE ON KAISER WILHELM DER GROSSE.

Sketch of Miss Eleanor Small Who is Now Former Plainfielder's Wife.

Pliny Fisk, of the banking firm of Harvey Fisk & Sons, at 29 Nassau street, with his bride, formerly Miss Eleanor Small, of New York, arrived Tuesday aboard the North German Lloyd liner KaiserWilhelm der Grosse. Mr. Fisk was married about four weeks ago in Edinburg, Scotland. His first wife touring Europe with her children.

Mr. Fisk had not only the imperial suite, but the captain's room, but later found that the finest suite aboard might be obtained and took it.

Until her excursion to Europe in the winter, Miss Small, who is an only child with an independent fortune, lived with her parents in the Sevilla apartment house at No. 117 West Fifty-eighth street, New York. Her acquaintance with Mr. Fisk began two years ago.

"We shall probably know more about the minor facts later," said Cyrus Small, the bride's father, a member of the coffee firm of Mackey & Small, at No. 90 Front street, yesterday. "I am able to tell you now, however, that they were married at a Protestant Episcopal Church in Edinburgh, and that the wedding was attended by a large party of friends. They had my full blessing and consent."

Statement to the Public.

To correct an impression held by a number of persons, the officers of the First National Bank desire to state that Mr. Edwin S. Hooley, who recently failed, is not a Director of the bank, he having resigned as Director on April 6th, last.

We wish to state further, that the failure of Mr Hooley, and of his firm, E. S. Hooley & Co., does not in any way affect the bank.

J. W. Johnson, President.
A. J. Brunson, Vice President.
D. M. Runyon, Cashier

Chole's Outing.

Father Egan, of St. Mary's Church, will take the choir of the church to Asbury Park, Tuesday, August 4, for a day's outing. There are about twenty young men and women in the organization.

Smashed Auto.

John Hall, of Netherwood, backed his automobile down a bank, yesterday, and smashed all of the wheels. The machine is now being doctored in a local automobile station.

Mrs. J. P. Humble, Miss Mattie Humble and Earl Humble, of Somerset street, will return tomorrow from a week's stay at Delaware Water Gap.

EDMUND R. TAYLOR ADDRESSES FRIENDS

Interesting Letter From City Missionary Now Sojourning at Clifton Springs.

TELLS OF A TREATMENT

WHAT SULPHUR SPRINGS CAN DO TO REPAIR INFIRMATORY.

Story of a Fire in Country Town —Tale of a Beautiful Lake— Where Fishing is Good —Other Gossip.

Chief Doane and Assistant Chief Jennings, of the Fire Department, have received this interesting letter from Edmund R. Taylor, of East Fifth street, who, with Mrs. Taylor is spending the season at Clifton Springs:

"Clifton Springs, N. Y.,
July 24, 1903.

"Chief T. O. Doane, 'Brother' Jennings, and other friends in the Department:

"Good morning—

"I have often thought of you 'fireladdies' during the past two months and resolved to send you a note at least. We are glad to report that we, Mrs. Taylor and myself, are both better and hope to return to Plainfield in about six weeks. From here we go to southern Ohio, my wife's old home—the annual visit to the old folks.

"If none of you were ever here a visit would be very interesting. The baths, of which there is hardly an end, are the chief means of treatment as scarcely any medicine is given. The sulphur springs are very strong and persons living within a mile of them never have the malaria, even though they do not drink the water; the fumes seem to do the work. I thought at first that I could not get used to them but I found I did. At first you think you smell an ancient egg, but after a while you become fond of the water.

"Our favorite baths are 'salt rube' electro-thermal, and static electricity. I will give you a lesson in salt rubbing if you want it. This plan has been established over fifty years and they give free treatments to those boarding outside of the sanitarium building proper, if one is able to come to the bath-room and take them. The plant cost $750.000. The bath rooms were rebuilt eight years ago at the cost of $35,000. They are all of marble and nickle.

"They do fine surgical work here too—hardly a day passes but some one is cut up and repaired. The people taking treatment number from about 200 in winter to 700 in summer and it is the only 'industry' of the town (1700 population.)

"Some come when it is too late, get discouraged and commit suicide. Last week there were two to shuffle off the mortal coil, one by hanging and the other by turning on the gas; but 'the powers that be' hush up the facts or a dozen nervous wrecks might try to join the majority by doing the same.

"We had a fire here last Monday which I wish you might all have seen. The refuse of her from the gas plant took fire on the surface of a small brook that runs through the town. The brook was not burned up, but was badly scorched and has been confined to its bed ever since. At one time it looked as though the culvert over the stream and the high road might go, as well as a clover patch near by—the clover still holds a fiery red hue. It is the first time that I have heard of a landscape burning. The village 'Hose Line Co.,' turned out as did the whole town and there was spontaneous confusion for an hour or so. The water works here are fine but the hose is about as light as that worn by the ladies.

"I wish all the boys could go over to Lake Canandaigna, near here, for a day's outing. It is about sixteen miles long and from one-half to one and one-half wide. The banks are usually bluffy, and for miles you can see nothing but vineyards. The lake is deep, in many places 400 feet deep, and the beach is covered with lime rock filled with fossils of shells, fish, and plants, showing that this is one of the oldest rock formations on this continent. The water is a greenish blue and with the sunlight, and shadows of floating clouds, is beautiful beyond description. It puts one in mind of an opal or emerald in a beautiful setting.

"They tell us the fishing is fine here. Deep trolling and lake trout can always be had, bass too are abundant. The brook fishing is done with a 'fly' but as I do not know how to 'cast' them I have not tried my luck.

"But I am afraid you are getting tired of this 'note' so I will close with a verse or two that have been helpful to me since I have been sick

"'Then brush the cobwebs out of your eyes
And smile
Look straight into the face of the world
And grin
If it knocks you down, just try again,
And don't grieve over what 'might have been'
But smile'

"'Let sunshine and gladness illumine thy face
'Twill help some one else to 'keep sweet,'
Do trouble oppress thee, let God be thy stay,
'Tis easy to sigh, but 'tis better to pray,
Thy sunshine will come in His own blessed way,
So trustingly try to keep sweet.'

"With kind regards to all 'the boys' from both Mrs. T. and myself

"Sincerely yours,
"E. L. Taylor."

BESLER'S KINDNESS.

He Invites Asbury Park Officials to Take Trip to Atlantic City.

W. G. Besler, vice president and general manager of the New Jersey Central, has extended an invitation to the members of the Beach Commission of Asbury Park, as well as the City Council and the railroad committee of the Board of Trade of that city, to be his guests on his special observation engine No. 900 on a trip to Atlantic City. Mr. Besler will accompany the party. The trip is made so that the officials may inspect the Casino at Atlantic City, it being the purpose to erect one at Asbury Park.

CAN'T REMOVE DIRT FROM THE STREETS

Water Company Unable to Restore Scotch Plains Thoroughfares.

THOMAS DOUD TALKS

SUPERINTENDENT EXPLAINS WHY CONCERN SEEMS NEGLIGENT.

Agreement Made With Township Committee Prevents Company From Finishing Job—Much Discussion on Subject.

Charges have been made that the water company, after laying its pipes in Scotch Plains, did not fulfill its contract by putting the street in the condition it was originally found. Superintendent Thomas Doud when seen about the matter this morning said:

"The contract read the roadway must be put in the same condition that it was before the piping was laid. As we went along laying pipe the trenches were filled up and the surplus dirt was laid aside to be carted away.

"Mr. Clark came to me while we were removing the dirt and said that the Township Committee wanted the dirt used on the Scotch Plains streets for repair work. I told him that we would use it as he directed and he then said that he wanted a Scotch Plains man to have the work. This I acceded to. The Scotch Plains man got the job and the work was started.

"It was never finished because their supply of money ran out and when we finished laying the pipe I left the dirt on the roadway where it was because William R. Codington, the counsel for the township, issued written instructions to me not to remove the dirt since it was to be used only on Scotch Plains street work.

"A Scotch Plains man got the contract to put the streets we damaged in repair and to use the surplus dirt, if he wanted to, in the repairs of other streets in the village. For this work the water company offered him a certain sum of money but before the work was done his funds gave out and the work has never been completed. We cannot remove the dirt because we have been forbidden to do so. The township, not the Water Company, is responsible for the condition of the streets."

E. S. HOOLEY TO RESUME

NORTH PLAINFIELDER MAKES EXIT AS HEAD OF TERRE HAUTE.

Road Now Controlled by Rock Island-Frisco People Who Went Gunning For It.

As a result of the failure of Edwin S. Hooley & Co., the Evansville & Terre Haute Railroad, of which Edwin S. Hooley, of North Plainfield, was president, has passed into the Rock Island-Frisco camp. The deal was carried through late yesterday afternoon, within a few hours of its conception, and E. F. Yoakum, at a hastily called meeting of the board of directors, was elected a director of the company and president of the road, to succeed Edwin S. Hooley.

It was reported early yesterday in Wall street that a bid had been made for control of all the common stock of the Evansville and Terre Haute owned by Edwin S. Hooley & Co., and Edwin S. Hooley individually. The offer was made, it was stated, on the basis of $50 a share. The actual transaction, however, and the terms of the deal were not concluded until late yesterday afternoon.

It is said in Wall street that Mr. Hooley is in a fair way to resume business.

There were eleven in the party, including John Boss and Fred Kirch. The start was made this morning at 2:30 o'clock for Barnegat, and it is not expected that the party will reach home before 9 o'clock this evening.

All Races Make Up Happy Family at Plainfield's Fresh Air Camp.

"MOTHER" CURRY'S WORK

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS TO BE FOUND FAR FROM THE TENEMENTS.

Humor and Pathos a Mixture Found at Institution—Some Funny Incidents—Compliment to the Matron.

To appreciate the amount of good that is being accomplished by the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, one should visit the camp personally, inspect its beautiful surroundings, take a glimpse of its interior, meet and homelike, and talk with its able, enthusiastic matron. And then for a more convincing proof, look at the children themselves, German and Jew, Italian and Irish, rolling in the grass, digging in the dirt, playing games, laughing and shouting and drinking in the pure air, as Nature intended they should. Glance at the mothers, contentedly sewing in the shade of a big elm. Think of the wholesome food, the clean beds to sleep in, the thought and sympathy given to their moral well-being; for Miss Curry, the matron, brings light to the minds of mothers and children as well as health and strength to their bodies.

And then for another minute, imagine a crowded New York tenement, the noisome orders of the street, and noise and dirt, with the fruit in the cart of a passing vender about the only glimpse of nature afforded. Think of the wretchedness of the homes, and the vice, and then consider that the inmates of the Netherwood Home are brought from the most vicious as well as the most destitute classes. Look again on the happiness and health of the children, the rested faces of the mothers cleared in some cases from marks of vice and shame, and say whether or not this work is worth while.

Nor is the influence of the Home confined to the two weeks allowed the visitors. It spreads. The mothers who come to the camp teach their friends, when they return, the virtues of cleanliness and decency. The husbands and fathers who visit the camp Sundays are taught the meaning of family and home life. The influence grows often subconsciously and perhaps is the greater for that reason.

The amount of ignorance displayed by the children, many of whom have never been beyond their own block, is amusing, although there are element s of pathos mixed in. One small girl requested "Mother" Curry to "look at the big pussy cat with the wooden sticks on its head." She had reference to a cow. Another youngster, seeing the birds and listening to their songs, was much alarmed over the fact that so many had escaped from their cages. Even the older people display an astonishing lack of familiarity with the love of the woods and the fields, as illustrated by one old woman who was discovered in a listening attitude with her ear to the ground. Asked what she was doing, she replied that she "wanted to hear the corn grow."

Perhaps the most heartfelt compliment that Miss Curry has ever received with reference to her work came from the father of three little ones who were cared for at the Home. This man, who had lost his wife, could hardly find words to express his gratitude. "Why," said he, "just think of it. If it hadn't been for you and this camp, I might have had to marry again."

No Railroad Park.

A report has been in circulation for several days that the New Jersey Central is trying to purchase the property on Fourth street and Park avenue, extending to the railroad, for the purpose of making a park. The report is that all of the property can be secured except that occupied by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and the Miller building. Investigation proves the rumor to be untrue, and that the railroad company is not anxious to get the property.

Campers Return.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

READY REFERENCES FOR THE LOCAL BARGAIN SEEKERS.

Be humane. Keep the flies off your cows. You can do it by buying some "cow ease" of J. C. Hansen, of East Front street. Besides keeping away the flies and vermin it increases the flow of milk.

Why do women send their dressmaking to New York when right here in this city first class ladies' tailors are to be found. S. Hirsch, of 430 Watchung avenue, is prepared to do dress making in the latest styles and at lowest prices.

When you buy milk and cream of Wm. Lindsay & Son, of Mountain avenue, you get the best dairy products, obtained under strict sanitary rules and with the approval of the Board of Health. There is no better milk anywhere than that sold by this firm.

Have one on me, and let it be a glass of grape juice from the fountain of T. S. Armstrong on Park avenue. It is really the most cooling and the most satisfactory summer drink that is sold. When you take one, you want another, and no amount of them will harm any one.

Many think that "when ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise" in the purchase of groceries. Much depends of pure table supplies. The health of the family is at stake. H. W. Barnes, of Park avenue, makes a specialty of securing only the purest of stock. Trade there and be content.

"There was a man from our town, and he was woodrous wise, he jumped into a brambled bush and scratched out both his eyes." History does not say, however, that he went to Carl Silbert's optical store on Somerset street to have glasses fitted. There he showed his wisdom. Do thou likewise.

Although the New York Painting and Decorating Company's business in Park avenue has just purchased by J. M. Cahart, this does not mean that the standard of work will be lowered. On the contrary the superior grade of work done by this house will be continued and the new proprietor will be pleased to quote you figures on either painting, decorating or papering.

Sunday Excursion to Manoh Chunk.

The New Jersey Central will run an excursion to Manoh Chunk on Sunday, August 2, 1903. Round trip $1.50, children, 75c, from Plainfield at 9.23 a. m. Manoh Chunk is one of the most charming mountain resorts in this section. The trip over the gravity railroad to Summit and Mt. Pisgah is one of scenic grandeur and a trip that will never be forgotten. After the trip over the Switch-back you should go to Glen Onoke where you will find beautiful little cascades, caverns and like attractions. 7 27 td

PERSONAL.

Miss Trottie Smith, of Belvidere avenue, who has been ill with typhoid fever, is slowly improving.

Mrs. David Angerhauer and daughter, Marion, of Liberty street, have gone to Saratoga for the summer.

Scott Foster and family, of New York, are stopping at the home of D. N. Groendyke, of Mercer avenue.

Mrs. John Swan, daughter of E. B. Clark, of Crescent avenue, has gone to Lake George to spend a few weeks.

Miss Bertha Manning has just returned from Elizabeth, where she spent a most enjoyable week with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Martin, of Jersey City, who have been spending a week with Plainfield relatives, have returned home.

Thus far there has been no noticeable change in the condition of Daniel T. Chawson, who is detained at his home in Brook avenue, with typhoid fever.

William Rose, of Hose Company No. 3, has returned from his vacation and Louis Dunavan, of the same company, commenced his vacation of ten days yesterday.

Among recent registrations at the Coleman House, Asbury Park, are the names of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Holland, J. E. Ray and F. L. C. Martin, of Plainfield, who were on an automobiling trip.

Catarrh of the Stomach.

When the stomach is overloaded; when food is taken into it that fails to digest, it decays and inflames the mucous membrane, exposing the nerves, and causes the glands to secret mucin, instead of the natural juices of digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach. For years I suffered with Catarrh of the Stomach, caused by indigestion. Doctors and medicines failed to benefit me until I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure.—J. B. Charles Yeager, of the Potter Press Company's plant, who has been detained at home by illness for the past two weeks, is slowly improving

Walter Scott & Company is overrushed with work and the concern is arranging for a night gang. As soon as enough machinists can be secured the night gang will be started.

The strike of ship carpenters and jointers of Camden, for a nine-hour day at thirty-four cents an hour, is practically over, all but thirty of the strikers having returned to work at the ship yards, or secured work elsewhere.

Alfred Berry Marsh narrowly escaped having his hand amputated at the Potter Press Company's works yesterday. Young Marsh was working about a gear-cutting machine when his hand slipped and was caught between the cutter and the gear. But for the timely action of "Al" Mathews, foreman of the gang, Marsh's hand would have been severed.

A Surgical Operation

is always dangerous—do not submit to the surgeon's knife until you have tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It will cure when everything else fails—it has done this in thousands of cases. Here is one of them: I suffered from bleeding and protruding piles for twenty years. Was treated by different specialists and used many remedies, but obtained no relief until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve Two boxes of this salve cured me eighteen months ago and I have not had a touch of the piles since.—H. A. Pisdale, Summerton, S. C. For Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Protruding Piles no remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—Eugene O'Reilley and Patrick Muldoon, of this city, went to Keasbey Monday for a fishing trip. They brought home a fine catch of weak fish.

—Patrolman George Lunger went to New York yesterday, where he will undergo an operation at the Flower Hospital for a trouble of long standing.

—Do your eyes tire when reading in the evening? A pair of glasses such as we make will remedy the trouble. Glasses guaranteed. Stiles & Co., Philadelphia Eye Specialists, 107 East Front street, Plainfield, every Thursday.

—Captain Rogers, of Engine Company No. 3, Elizabeth and William Pester, of the Elizabeth Fire Department, were in this city, Sunday. They visited fire headquarters where they were entertained by Chief Deane and Assistant Chief Jennings. They expressed pleasure at seeing the headquarters kept in such good condition.

There Are Some Simple Remedies

indispensable in any family. Among these, the experience of years assures us, should be recorded Painkiller. For both internal and external applications we have found it of great value; especially can we recommend it for colds, rheumatism, or fresh wounds and bruises.—Christian Era. Avoid substitutes, there is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'. Price 25c. and 50c.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY

Two Factions Join Hands and Issue an Address.

GOVERNMENT FOR AND BY THE PEOPLE

National Authorities to Issue All Money, Own Postal and Telegraph Lines and Advocate Use of American Ships For Trade.

DENVER, Colo., July 29.—Amalgamation into one party has been effected by the two factions of the People's party in national conference. The following address was issued:

"The manifest unrest which everywhere appears in the nation demonstrates the dissatisfaction of the American people with the present management of government and argues the necessity of the reform forces coming together in united action at the ballot box to obtain proper legislation whereby the right of the people to self government may be had for themselves and for their posterity. Therefore we, the Populists of the United States, having this day at the city of Denver united forces with the distinct understanding that all past differences as to policy shall be and now are permanently settled, and experience having demonstrated the futility of any attempt to secure the enactment of our truth either through the Republican or Democratic parties, we believe the time is now at hand when the United People's party should declare itself emphatically opposed to any affiliation with either of these parties and unqualifiedly in favor of national political action.

"Our fundamental principles are known to all Populists and are nowhere better stated than in that immortal document enunciated at Omaha July 4, 1898. However, for the benefit of the uninformed we declare our unyielding adherence to the demands for (a) a money, whether stamped on gold, silver or paper, to be coined and issued exclusively by the government and made a full legal tender for all debts, both public and private; (b) a system of transportation and the transmission of intelligence owned by the public and operated by the government at the cost of service; (c) land for use rather than for speculation, and abolition of alien ownership of land; (d) American ships for American foreign commerce, without a cent of subsidy.

"And as an open door for all economic reforms we urge the rule of the people through the optional referendum and initiative and the recall of derelict officials.

"Confident in the justice of the principles here set forth, firmly confident that their triumph in government would be for the best interests of the people, we call upon the patriotic citizens of this country to join with us in bringing about their enactment into law. With these principles firmly established equal justice would prevail, special privileges would be eliminated and ours would be, as patriots everywhere desire, a government of the people, for the people and by the people."

Cotton's Visit to Lisbon.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Rear Admiral Cotton, commander in chief of the European squadron, now on a visit to Portugal, has sent the following cablegram to the navy department from Lisbon: "Myself, commanding officers and personal staff have been received in special audience by the king of Portugal. Luncheon was given me by the king at Cintra, preceding which we were presented to the queen in special audience. The queen, our minister and some of the cabinet ministers were present at the luncheon. Tonight dinner will be given me by minister of marine at the arsenal. The king will visit my flagship on Saturday."

Blue Nile Expedition.

MARSEILLES, July 29.—Advices from Addis Abeba give further details of the abandonment of the Blue Nile expedition headed by W. N. MacMillan of St. Louis, which was attempting to explore the course of the Blue Nile for the purpose of finding a practicable trade route to the Mediterranean. The advices say that an attempt was made by the British government to relieve the expedition. A steamer was sent from Khartoum. It reached Roseires, 150 miles above Sennar, on the Blue Nile, where it was stopped by the exceptionally low water and failed to meet the expedition.

Accident at Old Saugus.

SAUGUS, Mass., July 29.—The first serious accident at Old Saugus since the opening of the two weeks' race meet came when the trotter J. T. fell in the stretch in the 2:25 trot and hit the driver, William Duntley, was seriously injured. Duntley suffered from bruises on his face and head and will be laid up for several weeks. In the left over pacing event Jessie S. took the first heat and the race. Favorites won in all the other classes.

Payne Will Resume Duty.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 29.—Postmaster General Payne, who is cruising along the north Atlantic coast in the revenue cutter Onondaga, will visit the president tomorrow or Friday. He will return to Washington from here and will resume his duties in the department next Monday. It is understood that Mr. Payne's health has improved materially since he left Washington.

Seattle Was Fighting Fluish.

BUFFALO, July 29.—The track was at its best at Fort Erie. Seattle won the feature event in a fighting finish with Southmayer and Tabia. Albula equaled the track record in the six furlong event.

NAVAL MANEUVERS.

Programme For Display of War Ships In Action.

WILL BE INSPECTED BY PRESIDENT

A Mimic Hostile Fleet Will Attempt to Enter Anchorage Near Cape Ann in the Face of Fire From Defending Squadron.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—An elaborate programme for the maneuver of the combined north Atlantic fleet off the coast of New England and Long Island sound during the month of August has been prepared at the navy department. The general features for the movement of the ships will be worked out by the department, leaving to Admiral Barker, the commanding officer, the numerous details incident to the maneuvers.

From the 3d to the 10th of August the search problem will be developed between Eastport and Cape Ann. This will include an effort on the part of a presumably hostile squadron to enter an anchorage ground in the face of the defending fleet. Following this there will be a cessation of two days, during which the combined fleet will proceed to Long Island sound and anchor abreast of Oyster Bay on the night of Saturday, Aug. 15.

They will remain there during Sunday, and on Monday they will be reviewed and inspected by President Roosevelt. From about the 22d to the 29th of August there will be joint demonstrations by the combined fleet against the batteries at Portland, Me. These will continue day and night, and all the arts of mimic warfare will be resorted to by the men-of-war to gain safe entrance into the harbor. Umpires will decide on the merits of the contest.

When the summer maneuvers are concluded the ships will go south and begin a season of target practice at Gay Head, in the vicinity of Martha's Vineyard. This will consume the first week in September, and at its conclusion the ships will disperse to the various navy yards for repairs preparatory to their winter cruise in the West Indies. More than thirty vessels are expected to participate in the maneuvers.

Two Killed In Drunken Fight.

GILLETTE, Wyo., July 29. — In a drunken quarrel among a number of Italians at Felix, Wyo., two men were killed and another so badly wounded that he will probably die. Joe Datri and Dominick Eggie got into a altercation, and Datri struck Eggie over the head with a bottle, inflicting a severe scalp wound. Eggie stabbed Datri three times, inflicting fatal wounds. Frank Bellagalli and Nick Eggie, a brother of Dominick, then entered the fight, taking opposite sides. Bellagalli shot and instantly killed Nick Eggie. Dominick Eggie and Bellagalla then exchanged several shots, the latter being killed and the former badly wounded.

Who Will Be Baseball Champions?

PITTSBURG, July 29.—President Dreyfuss of the Pittsburg team of the National Baseball league announces that if Pittsburg wins the National league pennant the winner of the American league pennant will be challenged to a series of eleven games to decide the championship of the world, the conditions being that the winner receive 75 per cent of the gate receipts and the loser 25 per cent, the winner also to visit the west and the loser as world's champions and the losers to remain at home.

Home Rule For Hawaii.

HONOLULU, July 29.—At a session of the home rule convention a Delegate Wilcox urged that congress be memorialized to grant Hawaiian Independence. He also strongly favored the establishment of a government for the islands similar to that of Cuba. It is probable that a petition embodying the views expressed by Wilcox will be prepared for presentation to congress by Delegate Kalanianole. Such an appeal would doubtless receive the signatures of many natives.

Russia Has a Cyclone.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 29.—A terrific cyclone has passed through the district of Tchernigof. Three villages were destroyed in a few minutes. Churches and houses were lifted bodily and carried a long distance. The loss of life was great.

Cabinet Minister to Wed Teacher.

PARIS, July 29.—The engagement of Minister of Marine Pelletan to Mlle. de Nieue, a teacher in a Paris school, is announced. It is stated that the marriage will occur at the end of August.

CONDENSED DISPATCHES.

Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria has left Coburg for Munich.

The Stewards' cup at the Goodwood race meeting was won by Dumbarton Castle.

The railroad systems of the south and southwest are all buying more locomotives in preparation for crop moving.

Arthur J. Mailloux, a lawyer of Boston, was arrested at Ware, Mass., on a charge of larceny from an estate.

A boy has accused the Chicago police of having terrified him into making accusation of murder against his own parents.

A customs bill is to be introduced in the British parliament abolishing, among other things, the duty on raw molasses.

The police in Paris have suppressed anticlerical demonstrations outside of Notre Dame cathedral during and after services for Pope Leo.

The government report says the corn crop needs rain, the spring wheat outlook is unfavorable, while the improvement in cotton is less decided.

The Mt. Olive Baptist Church repair fund is worthy of a contribution.

"The chief end of an ad is to sell goods. Remember that nobody wants to buy from a smart Aleck. Talk close to business."

No. Mary Jane, when your husband spoke of a high ball on coming in late the other night he did not refer to Borelli's comet.

That news from China was premature. The American Government is still singing to Manchuria "open the door and let me in."

You can "count your many blessings" when you consider what a small tax rate you have to pay when living in such a progressive city as Plainfield.

An exchange speaks of Elbert Hubbard as the modern William Morris. Wonder in how many languages the English essayist would speak of that exchange for the slander.

The President has been discussing the financial question. That's what we're interested in. Vacation time is here and we want to know how to pay our bills and have a good time as well.

Old Geronimo has become a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Probably he is attempting to refute what has been commonly accepted as a truism—"the only good Indian is a dead Indian."

Printers' Ink, recognized as the standard journal for advertisers in this country, publishes in its current issue "The largest circulations in the North Atlantic States." In its table of New Jersey newspapers it says: "The Press has a larger circulation rating than is accorded to any other paper in Plainfield."

The Elizabeth Democrats hope to have the pleasure of Former President Cleveland's company at their annual outing. The former leader of Jefferson's idolizers does not seem to be dead politically by any means. Would it be a peculiar spectacle to see the party endorse him at the next presidential convention, considering how strongly it repudiated him in 1896. Stranger things than that have happened.

Sea Girt is fast becoming the rendezvous for a mutual admiration society. The "big guns" who frame the laws while enjoying a little outing there look with pride at the State's defenders, while the latter are glad to go through their stunts for the sake of having an opportunity of gazing upon the great ones who devote so much time in bustling bills through the Legislature—never allowing them to get lost in the shuffle.

In a paper on "What shall we do with our birds," delivered before the Salem County Board of Agriculture, Professor John B. Smith, who has gained reputation for his mosquito theories, recommended that sportsmen be allowed to kill robins. In his opinion they have become a nuisance by destroying the cherry crops. Mr. Smith will have his hands full in dealing with the mosquito and it will be well for him not to make a try after bigger game.

Attention has been called to the large number of heavy trucks, carts and wagons of all sorts that are permitted to congregate on East Second street and to remain there for indefinite periods at the will of the drivers. The matter has been commented upon particularly from the fact of the location of fire headquarters in the centre of the street.

Judging from the length of time some of the trucks are allowed to stand on the street, it looks as though the owners are making it a convenience—using it, in fact, for a stable. Some of the drivers allow their horses to stand in one spot as long as from 10 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon, and they do it day after day. Further and most important point of all they neglect to tie their horses.

At times during the day, there are from twenty to forty horses lined up along East Second street with nine out of every ten unhitched. Unless the practice is stopped, there will be an awakening some day, and it will be a rude one.

It needs only a word to indicate the danger. A sudden alarm of fire, the plunging of the fire horses out of the station, the clanging of the gong, and about half of the horses would be all over the road. Even if the animals did not move, there would be hardly room enough for the fire horses to make the turn into the road and up the street without a collision resulting.

SCOTCH PLAINS, 8; ST. MARY'S, 4.

Fully 1,500 enthusiastic rooters gathered around the Scotch Plains diamond, Saturday afternoon, and saw the crack St. Mary's team, of this city, defeated by a score of 8 to 4. For seven innings the game was the fastest and most exciting of the season. Carr, the St. Mary box artist, pitched good ball until the seventh inning allowing but three hits, one of these a home run by McManus. In the seventh the 'Plains boys got their batting clothes on and hammered Carr for one three-bagger, three two-base hits and one single, scoring six runs. St. Mary's scored twice in the fifth, and crossed the rubber twice again in the eighth. At the beginning of the eighth it looked as though the the visitors would tie the score, but the 'Plains team braced after allowing two tallies.

The score by innings:

HOPE HOPELESS.

The only feature about the game of baseball between Alis and Hope Y. M. A. on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, was that the Alis boys were able to make runs whenever they wanted to and their opponents were weak both at the bat and in the field. They made any number of errors in the field and altogether they seemed to have a case of stage fright. On the other hand Alis batted well and put up a fast fielding game. The final score was 15 to 9 in favor of Alis.

The snap was started in the game in the first two innings when Alis made a total of 13 runs, six in each inning. Hope opened the game by making three clean hits off of "Warry" MacLaughlin in the first inning, but after that the hits were few and far between. "Warry" had perfect control of the ball and he was well backed up by a player from the Pearsall's of Jersey City, it being impossible for Page to play on Saturday. Special features of the play on the part of Alis were the two one-handed catches, one by Lederer, in left field and the other by Henriques at second. The latter gave a fine exhibition of base stealing, at one time stealing second, third and almost reaching home.

Ryan, the new third baseman for Alis, was not as fast as his colleagues in the infield and his throwing to bases was only fair. Hope, a younger brother of Sam. Hope, the former Alis pitcher, occupied the box early in the game, but later was replaced by a better pitcher. Sam. Hope was on the bench, but would not go in the box. "Smiling Jimmie" Montrose played second base for Hope.

DUNELLEN, 12; CLINTON AVENUE, 9.

The Clinton Avenue nine met defeat at the hands of the Dunellen A. C. on the latter's grounds Saturday afternoon by a score of 12 to 9. Dyer, the Clinton Avenue club artist, struck out twelve men, but received poor support. Ettinger, Dunellen's regular pitcher, was batted out of the box in the second inning, and Giles, in his place, pitched good ball for seven innings. The batteries were: Dunellen A. C., Ettinger, Giles and Bowman. Clinton Avenue, Dwyer and Herman.

Score by innings:

Dunellen A. C. 3 0 2 4 3 1 0 1 0—12
Clinton Avenue 0 4 0 3 0 0 1 0 5—9

AEOLIAN, 6; ROSELLE, 0

The Roselle A. C. journeyed to Garwood Saturday and were treated to a thick coat of whitewash by the Aeolians. Maurer, for Aeolian, pitched a great game, allowing only two hits while Homan, the Roselle twirler, was touched up for thirteen. The line up:

Aeolian—Lance, rf; Kane, lf; Hoffman, ss; Alberts, cf; Carey, 2b; D. Poole, 1b; Gray, 3b; W. Poole, c; Maurer, p.

Roselle—Deal, lf; Chappell, 2b; Goldstien, cf; Campell, ss; McKean, rf; Tunnian, 3b; F. Homan, c; D. Homan, p.

WESTFIELD, 7; MILLBURN, 2.

The Westfield aggregation added another victory to their already long list Saturday afternoon, as Milburn, defeating the Springfield-Milburn Consolidated nine by a score of 7 to 2. "Red" Waller twirled for Westfield, shutting out his opponents until the ninth. The locals made eleven errors.

The line up:

Westfield—Barry, 3b; Mallen, rf; Hall, cf; Robinson, 1b; Beck, lf; Burch, 2b; Jones, ss; Burke, 1b; Waller, p.

PREPARING DEFENSE.

Dr. Van de Water Intends to Compel Mr. Watt to Detail Charges Against Him.

Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water, of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church, is making active preparations, through his counsel, for his defence against the attacks that have been made upon him by Commodore Archibald Watt in the suit and countersuit with the latter's wife, Adele Watt, of Rockview terrace, this city.

Notwithstanding repeated rumors that the action would be abandoned and that there would be no scandle, it is said that Dr. Van De Water's counsel has issued papers for an application to compel Mr. Watt to furnish a bill of particulars specifying in detail the times and places wherein it is alleged Mr. Van De Water was guilty of misconduct with Mrs. Watt. These charges have been denied by both Mrs. Watt and Dr. Van De Water.

Mt. Park Inn Sold.

In order to protect his property against any possible invasion by a trolley park, F. de L. Hyde, president of the Union County Investment Company, last week purchased from the French estate by a foreclosure on a third mortgage the grounds and property on Watchung mountain known as Mountain Park Inn. The deed has not yet been passed. Although Mr. Hyde purchased about 135 acres he has only kept between 80 and 100 acres. The rest he has conveyed to the estate.

Patrolman Quits.

Patrolman James E. Totten, of West Sixth street, has resigned from the city police force, his resignation to take effect immediately. He has served nine years in the department. His action is due to an exceptional opportunity to enter into the real estate and grocery businesses.

Netherwood Hop.

Fully two hundred people attended the regular Saturday evening hop at the Hotel Netherwood Saturday evening. The hotel guests were reinforced in numbers by many from the neighboring cottages and the city.

It's a Boy.

A young son has arrived to brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher, of Brooklyn. Mrs. Fletcher was formerly Miss Laura Emmons and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Emmons, of Jackson avenue.

At Asbury Park.

The following Plainfield people registered at Asbury Park hotels Saturday: Mr. and Mrs. Remyen and wife, Clifton Hones; Nelson Runyon and wife, F. T. Astron and wife, Marguerite Astron, and Mrs Charles VanWenhol, The Lakeys; Hughes Fawcett, The Knickerbocker.

New Sprinklers.

Two extra sprinkling carts, formerly used in this city, have been called into service again and are now used in connection with the six new ones.

Color Line Drawn.

The management of Galvin's Park has drawn the color line. Colored people are allowed the Park privileges on Thursdays only, and other time they are charged an admission of $1.00.

Plainfielders at Dance.

Forty members of the First Ward Social Club went to Elizabeth, Saturday evening, to attend a dance given by a social club there. The trip was made by special trolley car.

At Sea Girt.

Oscar Pearson, Nelson Peterson and Percy Vail, of Company K, Second Regiment, returned Saturday after a week spent at Sea Girt with the First Regiment, of Newark.

PARK CLUB.

The fine weather attracted a large number of enthusiasts to the Park Golf Club course on Saturday, for the weekly play in the President's and Park Golf Club competitions. The course was in excellent condition and the scores generally good. Several members remained at the clubhouse for luncheon served by Steward Anderson. S. St. John McCutchen won first honors for the President's cup. The remaining points were divided by G. W. Faber and Dr. A. W. Anderson, who were tied with a net score of 82. For the Park Golf Club cup, scratch event, G. W. Faber won the first three points, S. St. John McCutchen, points and J. H. Howell the one remaining point.

These are the scores for the cups:

The first play of the season for the Gilbert cup, mixed foursomes, was on Thursday, when Miss Maud VanBoskerck and Thomas R. VanBoskerck secured the initial win for this trophy with a net score of 59. The scores:

Miss Maud VanBoskerck and Thomas R. VanBoskerck, 96, 10—89; Miss Margaret Holly and H. R. Stockton, 106, 17—89; Miss Ellis Mesh VanBoskerck and A. G. Henderson, 111, 19—92; Miss May Holly and George T. VanBoskerck, 111, 15—96.

In the play-off for the consolation cup in the championship tournament Walter Peterson defeated Leighton Calkins.

RESULTS IN WESTFIELD.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, July 27—There were two events on the Westfield Golf Club course Saturday, one the regular monthly handicap, which was won by R. I. Townley and the other the continuation of the qualifying play for the President's competition. In the latter Townley and M. T. Fouquet were the two successful contestants. A week ago C. E. Halsted and J. A. Woodward qualified, making eight men still in the game. This preliminary play is to continue for eight weeks, after which play for the President's cup will begin by those qualifying.

These were the scores on Saturday:

R. I. Townley, 96, 13—83; M. L. Fouquet, 97, 11—86; L. B. Jackson, 11, 527—88; H. Talbot, 118, 30—88; F. P. Condit, 102, 14—88; R. H. Sterm, 119, 30—89; F. G. Harris, 117, 25—92; and C. P. Rogers, Jr., 103, 8—95; S. V. Brewster, 126, 27—99.

BOYS GOING WRONG EARLY

TWO EIGHT-YEAR-OLD LADS ARRESTED FOR ATTEMPTING BURGLARY.

Thirteen Offenders in Court Today—"Scrap" at Hotel Rozell—Warner Gave Officer Fight.

Patrolman Totten and Special Officer Ayers had their hands full Saturday night arresting Samuel Warner, who was causing a general disturbance in front of police headquarters. Warner was "nabbed" after a struggle, together with Michael Gleason, and both were arraigned this morning before City Judge Runyon for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Warner, whose previous record was good, was released on suspended sentence. Gleason, who had a bad record, was released also in consideration for his family.

Barney McNevin, Edward Dooley and John Sheehan indulged in a free fight at the Hotel Rozell Saturday night. Sheehan was the ring leader and the most blameworthy and was fined $8. Sentence was suspended in the case of the other two.

Two of the youngest offenders who have claimed police attention this year answered to a charge of attempting to break and enter. They were Frank Green and David Friedman, each eight years old. Last night they were caught by Patrolman Messler inside of McDonough Brothers' coal office on Madison avenue which they had entered by breaking the window with an axe. They also entered Ayers' paint shop, but obtained nothing in either place. The Judge today reprimanded their parents for allowing the boys to run in the streets, and suspended sentence.

Edgar Freeman, Alfred Shoulein and Jackson Hedgeman made their excuses for riding bicycles on the sidewalks. The Judge was lenient. Clifford Randolph, a colored boy, "up" for the same offense, was lectured severely for trying to evade the truth but he too experienced the clemency of the court. Richard Campbell was released Saturday on suspended sentence for the like offense.

Two other cases completed the long list. Raphael Zoppy has been drinking heavily and threatening to kill his wife. The latter failed to appear against him, however, and the Judge was obliged to release him. The case against Antonio Aristano, charged with being careless in the use of a revolver, was adjourned at the request of counsel, William Newcorn.

K. OF C. AT THE SHORE.

R. C. Church Fraternal Order to Celebrate Embarkation of Columbus.

The anniversary of the embarkation of Columbus from Palos, Spain, will be celebrated by the Knights of Columbus of New Jersey in Atlantic City on Monday, August 3. John A. O'Keefe, of this city, is a member of the committee of arrangements for the affair. A large number of local Knights attended a convention last year and probably many of them will be on hand next Monday. It is expected that members of the order from other states will join in the festivities, and an elaborate programme has been arranged for their entertainment.

U. S. Team Homeward Bound.

With the Palma trophy packed away in a box conspicuously marked and proudly wearing the medals recently won, the American rifle team left Bisley Saturday morning for London, where they went aboard the steamship Lucania for this country. The team has presented to Col. Bruce a silver loving cup as a token of esteem.

SCHOOL AUTHORITIES MAY SUE COUNCIL

The Borough Board Possible Plaintiff to Recover Money Due for School Tax.

NO ACTION AT PRESENT

SIMILAR CONDITION NOW PREVAILS IN THIS CITY.

Doings of North Plainfield Board of Education—A Steel Ceiling for Watchung School—Financial Statement.

That suit will be instituted between the Board of Education of North Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield for the payment of certain unpaid school taxes amounting to about $2,400, seems possible judging from the attitude of the members of the Board of Education at Monday's session. Although the members decided to lay the matter on the table until the next regular meeting, John Valiant, the chairman of the finance committee seems to be decided on collecting the money now overdue. According to the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, it must be paid, as the new school law distinctly says the Board is entitled to it.

Present at the meeting were President James R. Joy, Clerk R. M. Fountain and members, Woodruff, Overton, Bertis and Valiant. The chief item of business was the discussion of the collection of the back school taxes from the borough which embrace the years 1898 to 1903. As told in The Daily Press the amount is a little over $2,400. A demand was made some time ago to the Common Council to pay the bill as it was recently discovered that the Board was entitled to the full amount of the unpaid taxes whether they were collected or not. At the last meeting of the Council no action was taken beyond moving to forward the opinion of Corporation Counsel Reed and a statement of the action taken by the Council on the matter to the Board. It were these which were received last evening.

While, in Mr. Reed's opinion, the school law, as revised in 1901, says that the Board is entitled to the money and should have it, he practically says that the Council will not pay the bill until ordered by the courts so to do. He states that the only practicable method by which the Board can collect the money under the circumstances is by testing the legality of the statute by an issuance of a mandamus compelling the Borough Collector to pay over the amount which would result in a test case.

Several members spoke on the matter. John Valiant said that he was prepared to take issue with Mr. Reed. The State law, he contended, was right and proper and the Board would demand a strict observance of the statute. Continuing he said that the Board was not responsible for the present laws and that the attitude assumed by the Council was to keep the tax rate on one side of the governing most down at the expense of the other side. "The citizens have to pay the bills, anyway, and it would not be an additional burden whether the amount was paid now or at any time in the future," said he.

Mr. Valiant said that while he had no feeling in the matter and did not want to have any friction with the government, he did not intend to retreat from the position he had taken in the matter and intended seeing it through.

A portion of a letter from Mr. Townsend, who was absent, was read by Mr. Valiant in which Mr. Townsend states that in a conversation with Mr. Abbott, on the present condition in this city, the latter said the reason why the point had not been raised in this municipality was because the Board did not wish to antagonize the city government.

The matter was laid upon the table after considerable discussion. It will be taken up again at the next meeting when all the members will be present. Other matters were then discussed.

Prices for the installation of a new ceiling at the Watchung School, were received. A stamped steel ceiling will cost $165 and a ceiling over iron lath $155; wooden lath, three coats of plaster, $90. It was decided to have the first named ceiling installed. Work will be started at once under the direction of the building and grounds committee. The arrival of the winter supply of coal was announced and provisions were made for the carting.

Bills amounting to $1,301 91 were ordered paid. One thousand dollars will be borrowed by the President and Clerk, on demand, with which to meet the bills. The Collector's report showed: Receipts, $496.25; disbursements, $94 73; balance, $401.52. An executive session followed the public meeting.

Fred Rapp and Henry Kissel, of Newark, were entertained yesterday by the former's cousin, Charles Schaus, of Park avenue.

ROMANTIC LOVE STORY ON TWO CONTINENTS

Frank Haurand, of This City, Leads the Love of His Youth to the Altar.

COURTED IN GERMANY

A RECEPTION TO BE HELD IN THIS CITY ON THEIR RETURN.

Miss Borneman Followed Haurand to This Country—Were Married in Philadelphia—To Reside Here.

A page of a romantic love story enacted in two countries was closed Monday morning in a Philadelphia church when Frank Haurand, of this city, and Miss Mary A. Borneman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Borneman, of Philadelphia, were married.

In the little German village of Borsemberg, which was named after Miss Borneman's ancestors, the bride and groom of today played together as children. Side by side they studied in school, as next door neighbors their hours of recreation were spent in each others company and together they grew to manhood and womanhood. Frank Haurand secured a position in the village in a mercantile house.

One day, a relative of Mr. Borneman returned from America with wealth and position. He told of the great wealth of this country. His golden stories of the fabulous wealth of America were the means of causing Mr. Borneman to come across the seas in search of a fortune. Nothing was ever heard of the family of Borneman in the village again.

Frank came to this country and located in Plainfield with his brother Henry. He had given up the sweetheart of his youth for dead. In a moment of dejection he enlisted in the volunteers at the time of the Spanish-American War and fought bravely in Cuba. There he won honorable mention as a sharpshooter.

At the close of the war his mother came to this country to visit her sons. While here she visited friends in Philadelphia. By accident she learned that the long lost Borneman family lived nearby. A few days after the meeting of two lovers the wedding date was announced for July 27.

Monday in St. Alphonso's R. C. Church, Philadelphia, Rev. Father Stommel made the two man and wife. Miss Elizabeth Haettel was the bridesmaid and Anthony Borneman, Jr., was the best man. Harry Kennedy and Dr. John Borneman, of Brooklyn, were ushers and the flower girls were Misses Rose Borneman, a sister of the bride and Miss Emma Quickmire.

A short wedding trip will be enjoyed and upon their return they will reside on Somerset street, North Plainfield.

Frank Haurand is the manager of his brother's cafe on East Front street. He is a well known member of the Independent Gun Club and is identified with several lodges in this city.

Upon their arrival in this city a reception will be held in their honor at their newly furnished flat on Somerset street when a family reunion between the members of both families will take place.

WASTE OF WATER.

Hydrants Leaking—Water Wagon Drivers Negligent—Many Complaints.

The waste of water from leaking hydrants about town has been considerable of late. Some people have blamed it to the drivers of the sprinkling carts but all the members of that force have been told to be especially careful in shutting the water off so far as possible. Two hydrants were reported badly leaking last evening by a patrolman, one on Central avenue and the other on Franklin place. And these are but a sample of the many that are in need of a plumber's attention.

It is also said that the stream from some of the hydrants is feeble in the force and that others do not work at all. If this be so, the matter should be remedied at once to provide against accidents in case of fire. Complaints have also been heard that the drivers of sprinkling carts have left the taps off from the hydrants and that small boys have taken advantage of the fact to drop stones in. To have the hose of the fire department clogged by stones at a time of danger might mean serious results.

Property Transfer.

Wm. Jeffery, real estate broker, has sold No. 909 West Fourth street, for James E. Totten to the Investors' Realty Company. The title to this property and the lots which Mr. Totten purchased from this company was closed late last evening at the office of Chief Judge Runyon. Mr. Totten will build two houses on Elk street, which has just been opened.

NETHERWOOD HOME DEDICATED YESTERDAY

Dr. Rodman, Miss Currie, L. H. Biglow Participated As Did Some of the Inmates.

PRAYER, SONG, SPEECH

LETTER FROM A. C. MORGAN, DONOR OF THE BUILDINGS, READ.

Mr. Morgan Given a Vote of Thanks—Meeting Interrupted by Storm—Character of Work of the Home—Inmates of All Nationalities.

Dedicatory services were held Sunday afternoon at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. It was originally planned to hold the meeting on the lawn surrounding the buildings to be dedicated but a thunder shower approached and the services had to be held indoors. Two hundred visitors attended and saw for themselves the good work which is being done for New York's poor.

Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace Episcopal Church, delivered the dedicatory address, speaking on behalf of the local churches. The work was explained and the good already accomplished reviewed.

The leader of the meeting was L. H. Biglow, who presided in the absence of George A. Chapman, who was detained on account of illness. A half hour song service was held. Scripture reading was conducted by Rev. G. M. Shotts, of Scotch Plains, and a prayer delivered by Rev. George B. Shaw. Mr. Biglow spoke the words of welcome.

D. M. Torrey read a letter from Alexander C. Morgan, who purchased the buildings and started the work [of the home at a cost of $7,000. The letter stated that Mr. Morgan, who is a relative of J. Pierpont Morgan, the great financier, regreted his inability to be present. Mr. Torrey explained that, at the death of his wife, wishing to become interested in some charitable work of the kind, Mr. Morgan volunteered his services to Miss Currie in her mission of mercy and care for the denizens of the New York tenements.

G. E. Hall, the assistant manager of the Home, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Morgan for his generosity and suggested that a suitable testimonial be drawn up, engrossed and presented to Mr. Morgan. This motion was carried with much enthusiasm.

When the storm had cleared away the meeting was adjourned to the lawn where Miss Currie, the matron, illustrated the character and scope of the work. In the camp are now 170 mothers and children. Included in this number are representatives of all nationalities: Irish, Hebrews, Italians, Germans and Americans predominating. Miss Currie said that in spite of the cosmopolitan aspect of the camp, peace reigns within it from one week's end to the other. The wonderful transformation in the moral condition of the inmates of the home she accompanied upon particularly.

Spiritual teachings form a large part of the work at the camp and special prayer and praise services are held each evening. These are under the auspices of the various Christian Endeavor Societies in this city, Elizabeth, Cranford, Westfield and other places.

The committee in charge of the services yesterday were: L. H. Biglow, chairman; G. E. Hall, Miss Ella Benedict, D. M. Torrey, Miss Sara Currie and Miss Florence Hawkins.

A pleasing feature of the afternoon's services was the part taken by the inmates of the camp. Little Willie Ponsford sang two solos and Olga Cramer, a two-year-old tot, sang a song. Some of the women and men at the home read verses and otherwise participated.

FOSTER'S COSTLY RIDE.

A Flying Trip on a Special Train From St. Paul to New York City.

J. Hegeman Foster, a New York broker, and a frequent visitor to this city, where he has relatives residing in the borough, was in St. Paul on Sunday when he received a dispatch from New York stating that he was wanted at once. He started without a minute's delay, his only hope of reaching Wall street, in time for the Stock Exchange opening yesterday morning was in catching the Twentieth Century flyer, but the general superintendent telegraphed him that the flyer could not be held.

A half hour after reaching Chicago he was transferred to a special train and at Holland, six miles from Toledo, Mr. Foster overhauled the Twentieth Century train and he reached New York just before 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The trip to Toledo from Chicago cost him $336 or $1 a mile.

COLORED LINE DRAWN AT GALVIN'S PARK

Only Admitted to Resort One Day in the Week in the Future.

REASON FOR EXCLUSION

CHANGE DEMANDED BY PATRONS OF THE PLEASURE GROUND.

White People Not to be Allowed in Park on Thursdays—A Statement by the Proprietor of the Resort.

NOTICE!

"Colored People, Tuesday Only"

This is the sign appearing at the entrance of Galvin's Park, which warns the colored folks that their presence is not wanted at that resort. It proved to be a staggered too, because on Sunday last a balloon ascension was advertised to take place and if there is anything that a colored man likes to see is a fellow in glittering tights sailing heavenward on the swinging trapeze. The sign caused some trouble until its meaning was made plain.

Early Sunday afternoon the people began to gather at the park in large numbers. Two stalwart men stood guard at the rustic gates and passed in the white folks but refused admittance to the colored patrons. Some men tried to force their way in with the result that the aforementioned stalwart "talked hard words" with them and finally persuaded them to leave peaceably. Only four colored men succeeded in gaining admittance and they did not remain on the grounds long.

"Hugh, wha dat mean," said one young woman as she was stopped as she was about to enter the gates, "Is de Jim Crowe law gwine to be unforced in dis yere State too? Tis is de wus I eber saw," and she walked away to board a car for Coney Island.

Many others made some such remark and went away. Peace reigned as the park all day Sunday.

Mr. Galvin was seen yesterday and was asked why he excluded the colored people from the park. He said: "I have received many complaints from my patrons that there were too many colored people in the park. I decided that I would give them one day here for their own use when all white people will be excluded from the grounds. I regret that such a course is necessary but the patrons of the park demanded it."

NOTHING IN THE COMPLAINT

MAJORITY OF BOROUGH HEALTH BOARD TO REVOKE ACTION.

Convinced That There Was No Nuisance on the Property of William L. Saunders.

A special meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Health was arranged to be held last week to reconsider the action previously taken regarding an alleged nuisance on Former Mayor William L. Saunders' property, the call being signed by three of the five members of the board, namely, Joseph O. Osgood, Dr. D. C. Adams and John G. MacLaughlin. Dr. Adams was unable to be present and the meeting could not therefore be held.

Three of the five members of the board are convinced that they were mistaken and are now in favor of retracting the action taken at the July meeting, it being reported as that time that manure heaps were located in the rear of Mr. Saunders' property on Rockview avenue so that they would drain into Stony brook. Notice was sent to Mr. Saunders and he was convinced that the report was without foundation. There were manure piles in the rear of his stable, but the former mayor declared that they were so located that they could not possibly drain into the brook, a wide strip of sand and gravel separating them from it. Accordingly the members of the board were invited by Mr. Saunders to inspect the condition of affairs for themselves which the majority did and found it as already stated.

PLAINFIELD VISITOR A GLOBE TROTTER

Nebraska Woman Roots Here on Her Right Thousand Miles Journey.

ON TO JOHANNESBURG

ROMANCE IN THE LIFE OF MRS. LILY RASOR, OF CENTRAL CITY.

Making Present Trip With Her Two Young Sons—The Story of Her Travels—Her Husband in South Africa.

Eight thousand miles is a long distance to travel. Even the experienced globe-trotter might well hesitate before undertaking so wearisome a journey. Yet that is the distance that Mrs. Lily Rasor, of Central City, Nebraska, has travelled twice already and expects to cover again within the next few weeks.

Mrs. Rasor has been spending two weeks at the home of her sister, Mrs. Geo. Burtridge, of East Seventh street, preparatory to leaving New York next Thursday for South Africa. She makes the trip with her two small boys, aged four and six years respectively, and goes to meet her husband, George Rasor, who is the superintendent of a gold mine in Johannesburg.

She sails on the steamer Saxon-French from New York and will be five weeks on the water before arriving at Capetown whence she will travel 1,100 miles by rail to Johannesburg. Including the distance of 1,700 miles from Central City, which she left July 1, to New York, the total miles foot up 8,000.

Eight years ago, Mrs. Rasor made the same trip, then with all the joy of anticipation of a young girl going out to meet and marry her betrothed, who had left her years before and with whom she had become engaged by correspondence. Her husband sought and found his fortune, and the young couple lived happily with their two little boys and prospered until the outbreak of the Boer war, when all the women and children of Englishmen and foreigners were forced to quit the country. Then Mrs. Rasor left for her girlhood home in Nebraska where she has remained four years until setting out on her present journey. The joy of the reunion of the husband, wife and children which will follow the tedious sea and land trip may be imagined.

HE INSURED THE MAYOR

INSURANCE AGENT FORCED HIS HONOR TO TAKE OUT A POLICY.

Gained Admittance to the Doctor's Presence by Stating He Needed Medical Help.

The clever methods of life insurance agents have long been a source of wonderment, but it is left to a local representative of a big insurance company to capture the prize for playing his cards successfully. His Honor, Mayor O. L. Jenkins, was the victim of this agent who was determined to insure the doctor's life. Four visits were made to the Mayor's home, and each time the agent met with a disappointment.

For his fifth and last attempt, the wily solicitor played his plans carefully. He assumed a bold front, rang the door bell and informed the maid who answered that he was sick and wished to consult the doctor. The latter, hearing this, could hardly refuse to see his visitor, who was accordingly admitted, though with many misgivings. After entering the office, the agent coolly informed the Mayor that his ailment consisted of a sore desire to insure his life.

His Honor with difficulty refrained from throwing his tormentor out of the window, but controlled himself when requested to name his charge for an office call. The information was given, the agent agreed to pay and to put in the time talking life insurance. This he did to such good effect that the much badgered Mayor finally consented to adding a few hundred dollars to the insurance he was already carrying.

And now the successful agent throws out his chest, shows his list with the name of Plainfield's chief executive at the head, and rakes in further victims and further dollars.

Reception to Foster.

J. Hegeman Foster, well known in this city, whose thrilling pursuit of the Twentieth Century flyer out of Chicago gave his hasty return to Wall street a melodramatic touch, was boisterously received on the floor yesterday morning. A toy train was brought in later and dragged around in his footsteps. It was the first diversion there had been on the floor since the middle of last week.

SERIOUSLY INJURED BY FALL FROM CAR

Miss Margaret Totten Steps From Trolley Car as it Started in Motion.

ON HER WAY TO WORK

WOMAN RENDERED UNCONSCIOUS FOR OVER AN HOUR.

A Physician Hurriedly Summoned—Taken to Her Own Home—She Will Recover—Slipp Was Conductor of the Car.

Mrs. Margaret Totten, aged sixty-two years, a widow living at 63 Watchung avenue, was knocked down and severely injured by a trolley car at the corner of Clinton avenue and West Front street Monday afternoon. She was rendered unconscious for over an hour during which time Dr. Fritts worked over her steadily. She was removed to her home and is now in a precarious condition.

Mrs. Totten is a nurse and was on her way to the home of Mrs. Pound, on Clinton avenue and West Third street, where she is engaged at present. She boarded a trolley car at Park avenue and rode as far as Clinton avenue, when she signaled the conductor to stop. He did so and as she was just stepping off the running board the conductor is said to have given the signal to go ahead. The car started, throwing her to the ground with much force.

Passengers rushed to Mrs. Totten's assistance and found that the woman was severely injured and was unconscious. Dr. Fritts was called and he had the woman taken into the home of Bennet Brittin nearby. There she regained consciousness after the wounds had been dressed.

Just as the woman was being removed to the hospital, her daughter, Mrs. Edward Terry, arrived and took her mother to her own home on Watchung avenue. Dr. Zeglio was also called to the home of the woman and said that her spine was strained. The car was in charge of Motorman James Hip.

PARTNERSHIP DISPUTE ENDED

AFFAIRS OF THE WATCHUNG KNITTING MILL AMICABLY SETTLED.

Basis of Settlement—The Factory to be Reopened in the Near Future.

After a year of dispute among the partners of the Watchung Knitting Company a settlement has been amicably made. The dispute between the partners dates from June, 1902. Henry Drossin, one of the firm, applied to the Court of Chancery for a receiver. He was represented by Codington & Swackhamer while the other partner, Leo J. Studley, who was presented by Winfield S. Angelman, resisted the appointment. A receiver was asked so that an accounting could be secured.

The Court refused to grant the application but ordered that the goods be held until the Master in Chancery could secure an accounting. After that much testimony was taken before Special Master Nelson P. Runyon. Drossin claimed that his partner, Studley, owed him $670 as his share in the parnership. Studley paid Drossin $200 for his claim and took the goods and the machinery, which is valued at $1,000. The opposing litigants each paid their own costs.

It is understood that Mr. Studley will reopen the factory in the near future.

Who Fired the Shot?

A mystery of the East End awaits an explanation. Last night at 9:30 o'clock, Patrolman Messler neard the shot of a revolver in the vicinity of East Ninth street. He promptly investigated but was unable to discover whence it came. Inquiry at the houses along the street, some of whose occupants had heard the shot themselves, allcited no explanation. It was perhaps someone who "didn't know it was loaded" examining a weapon and fortunately for all, no one received serious damage to himself or others.

Contract Suit.

LEO'S REQUIEM MASS

Celebrated In Sistine Chapel by Cardinal Vannutelli.

MUSIC BEAUTIFUL AND SUBLIME.

There Is a Conviction That the Vatican Conclave For New Pope's Election Will Be of Short Duration.

ROME, July 29.—The first of the three great requiem masses, under the auspices of the sacred college, for the repose of the soul of Pope Leo, has been celebrated in the Sistine chapel. All the cardinals now in Rome, the diplomatic corps, the Roman nobility and many other distinguished persons were present. No such mass had been seen in Rome since the death of Pius IX.

In the Sistine chapel stood a huge white catafalque, thirty feet high, and on it, upon two scarlet cushions, rested a triple crown of gold, shining brightly in the light of a hundred candles. The catafalque completely hid the altar.

As the fifty cardinals and fifty camerlenti gathered around the catafalque and alternately knelt and rose their movements resembled an amazing kaleidoscope of crimson and violet, with colors so bright as to be almost trying to the eyes.

The Abbe Perosi, Italy's famous oratorio composer, waved his baton and the silence was broken with the notes of the "Dies Irae." Those who know the Vatican well say the matchless Sistine choir never sang so well before. Through the historic chapel the voices of boys and men rose and fell and swelled triumphantly as if with songs of paradise, the voices dying away almost to a whisper at the mention of death. Even the cardinals sat spellbound at this perfection of the Gregorian chant. Not a note of instrumental music was heard throughout the mass.

Then came the singing of the "Sanctus," modulated almost into a whisper.

Clouds of incense rose from the censers until Michael Angelo's famous "Last Judgment" was almost hidden from view.

The subsequent meeting of the congregation of cardinals was very short. After an exchange of views on current affairs Mgr. Merry del Val, secretary of the consistorial congregation, gave each cardinal a diagram showing where his apartments in the Vatican will be located during the conclave.

The fisherman's ring, which could not be found after the death of the pope, may be discovered in some drawer which was sealed up and cannot be opened until after the election of the new pope. The camellngo, Cardinal Oreglia, has ordered a new one for use in the symbolic ceremony which occurs immediately after the successor to Leo is chosen.

The member of the noble guard who was overcome during the requiem mass in the Sistine chapel while on duty beside the catafalque was Count Stampa, who a few days ago was placed under arrest for feigning illness.

It is officially announced that in addition to the will of the late pope and separate from it Leo XIII. left a trifling present to each of a long list of relatives, members of the papal household, prelates, doctors, cardinals, etc. As many formalities have to be observed, it will probably be some time before these gifts are delivered.

That there is a conviction at the Vatican that the conclave will be of short duration is proved by the fact that all those who are to enter the conclave to minister to the wants of the cardinals have been engaged for only three days. The two camps into which the sacred college is divided appear to be becoming daily more irreconcilable, and it is said that the anti-Rampolin faction has declared that if necessary to defeat the opposition they will even go to the length of supporting a foreign cardinal. The name of Cardinal Kopp, bishop of Breslau, was mentioned in this connection, but was hardly considered seriously owing to the belief that under present conditions the elevation of a German to the papacy might mean the irreparable loss of France to the holy see.

Panama Is Now Quiet.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The temporary ebullition on the isthmus has subsided, according to a cablegram from United States Consul General Gudger, at Panama. He says that everything is perfectly quiet, and he anticipates no more trouble. Mr. Gudger would like to come home on leave of absence, but Acting Secretary Loomis has been obliged to deny his request until conditions on the isthmus are more settled.

Tutuila's Progress.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—Lieutenant Commander Mitchell, United States navy, who has been on the gunboat Wheeling for the past two years, has arrived here from Pango-Pango. He reports that the American government is giving unusual attention at present to road building on the island of Tutuila, and a practical road maker is now engaged there at work.

Gamez Surrenders With 400 Men.

CARACAS, Venezuela, July 29.—General Antonio Ramos, one of the last of the chiefs of the revolution to remain in the field, who had a camp near Santa Lucia, has surrendered to the government, together with 400 men, their arms and ammunition.

Boiling Macaroni Caused Death.

TORONTO, July 29.—The six-year-old daughter of Michael Salerico, an Italian fruit dealer, fell into a boiler of macaroni which was being prepared for the family dinner and was scalded to death.

WITHIN WALLS OF DERRY.

Edward Was the First English King to Visit the City.

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, July 29.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra were accorded a great reception on their arrival here. Large crowds from the surrounding districts assembled to greet the first English sovereign who had ever visited Londonderry. Their majesties were met at the railroad station by the mayor and corporation.

The usual number of addresses were presented, in reply to which the king said: "I have spoken of the reference to the spirit of good feeling and harmony pervading all classes in Ireland, adding that if his visit helped to extend and consolidate this feeling he would be richly rewarded.

Their majesties worked at the Guildhall and attended a variety of functions. Among the pleasant incidents was the presentation of a special address to the queen from the women of Londonderry drawing attention to the fact that Londonderry is an important center of industrial work for women and of the higher education of women. The king, replying in behalf of Queen Alexandra, expressed the opinion that the "higher education of women is one of the happiest features of our time."

After the king had laid the foundation of Brooke park their majesties, who received an enthusiastic send off, left Londonderry for Runcrana, where they embarked on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert for a cruise along the coast.

TROOPS IN PURSUIT.

Escaped Convicts of Folsom Prison Closely Pressed.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—At latest accounts the troops and the posses organized by the sheriffs of the different counties are keeping in close touch with the convicts who broke out of state prison at Folsom, taking along guards and other jail officials in self protection. The convicts are moving toward Colonia, where the citizens have armed themselves and are preparing to resist attack. They have been warned of the advance of the convicts and will unite with the authorities.

It is reported by the driver of a stage which passed between Pilot Hill and Colonia that he saw the convicts walking close together. They were accompanied by men who were evidently residents of the vicinity, whom they had apparently forced to go with them as guides. A posse from Placerville, under Sheriff Scott Wick, was reported not far behind them, following the trail.

The fight between the convicts and the officers near Pilot Hill, in El Dorado county, resulted in the death of Fred Howard, a convict, who was killed outright, and the wounding of another convict, a negro named Seavis.

Montclair Man's Sudden Death.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., July 29.—William Walker, a New York lawyer, who resided on Valley road, Montclair, has died suddenly of typhoid fever at a London hospital. Mr. Walker sailed for Europe about two weeks ago. Mr. Walker was a graduate of Yale university. He was an athlete and played on the football team of the Montclair Athletic club. His mother, hearing of his illness, sailed to nurse him and is now on the sea.

Daniel Webster Beat May Queen.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 29.—The meeting of the New England half mile circuit began here with three events. The 2:18 pace was the best race of the day, and the favorite, May Queen, was defeated in straight heats by Daniel Webster. Fred Colonel, Lafortte in the 2:32 pace, took the event without difficulty. Wilton S. took the 2:25 trot from the favorite, Fuego, after the second heat.

Miss Roosevelt at York Harbor.

YORK HARBOR, Me., July 29.—Miss Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the president, is the guest for at least a week of residents of York Harbor. For the present she is being entertained at Rock Ledge, the summer cottage of Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, by her friend Miss Field. Later she will be the guest of Justice McKenna of the United States supreme court and daughter during her visit.

Governor Testifies of Riots.

RICHMOND, Va., July 29.—Governor Montague was a witness in the proceedings in the Henrico county court for the removal of Simon Solomon, sheriff of the county, for having failed to do his duty in the street car strike. The governor testified that the sheriff had declined to ask for the troops and that he "was compelled by duty to act on his own account."

Jett-White Trial.

CYNTHIANA, Ky., July 29.—When the work of securing a jury to try Curtis Jett and Thomas White was finished the defendants waived formal arraignment and pleaded not guilty. The defense filed a demurrer to the indictment, but it was overruled. Captain Ewen, chief witness for the state, remains under the protection of troops.

Feared Three Are Drowned.

BEAUMORRIS, Ont., July 29.—Joseph Hosack of Carnegie, Pa., a Princeton student; Walter Mehard of Mercer, Pa., a student of Johns Hopkins, with a cousin to Hosack, set out from Gravenhurst in a canoe on Sunday. The paddles and Mehard's coat were picked up on the lake. It is feared all three have been drowned.

Red Cross Convention Postponed.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The American delegates to the convention called to meet at Geneva Sept. 15 next to revise the rules of the Red Cross relative to warfare have been notified by the Swiss minister here of an indefinite postponement of the convention. No reason is assigned.

LARGEST IN THE STATE. LINDEN, N. J. Beautiful and Accessible. 2 Miles from Elizabeth, 7 Miles from Newark, 14 MILES FROM NEW YORK. On Main Line Pennsylvania Railroad

Why Lots in these Cemeteries commend themselves to Heads of Families and Investors

BECAUSE of the $1,000,000 Trust Fund provided for by the Trustees in each Cemetery, the income from which will keep the properties perpetually beautiful at NO EXPENSE TO LOT OWNERS.

BECAUSE such a guarantee, not found in any other cemetery, assures lot owners that the grounds WILL BE MAINTAINED PERMANENTLY AS BEAUTIFUL PARKS AFTER THE INCOME FROM THE SALE OF LOTS HAS BEEN EXHAUSTED.

LOTS SHOULD BE PURCHASED NOW

BECAUSE MORE ADVANTAGES ARE OFFERED TO LOT BUYERS in a new Modern Park Cemetery than in those established many years and, in most cases, no provision made for perpetual care without extra expense to lot owners. THERE ARE A GREATER NUMBER AND FINER LOCATIONS TO SELECT FROM. PRICES OF LOTS ARE ALWAYS LOWER, AND TERMS MORE ADVANTAGEOUS.

BECAUSE life is most uncertain and EVERY ONE SHOULD ANTICIPATE THEIR INEVITABLE BY MAKING A CHOICE NOW OF A FINAL RESTING PLACE.

LOTS WILL PROVE A GOOD INVESTMENT

BECAUSE they are sure to increase in value and can be purchased NOW at the INITIAL, OR LOWEST PRICE, ON THE MOST ADVANTAGEOUS TERMS.

BECAUSE the properties are ACCESSIBLE TO 4,000,000 PEOPLE, and considering the RAPID GROWTH OF GREATER NEW YORK and its TRIBUTARY CITIES and TOWNS, it is only a question of a SHORT TIME when LOTS in ROSEDALE AND LINDEN PARK will EQUAL IN VALUE those of our NEWLY LAID OUT cemeteries.

THE NEW WOMAN

Her Fads and Foibles

A MAN fell into ill health and could no longer attend to his manufacturing enterprises. His lady wife resolved to do it for him. Looking at herself admiringly in the mirror she said to herself, "I'll be a business woman." Then she proceeded to "play smash," so to speak. She hired a set of offices, furnished them like a lady's pink tea boudoir and put her office boys into livery. She imported from England a lady for manager of the office, there being apparently no young woman in America sufficiently up in the etiquette of the situation to undertake the task. The English young woman took charge. Her idea and that of the lady who employed her were evidently to run an ironworkers' shop on the aesthetic social basis. An important customer was desirous of getting a large order filled immediately. It was necessary for him to see the manager. That lady, with the intention of showing him how things were done over the water, consequently in exactly the right way, made an appointment with him to meet her in her aesthetic office at a certain date. To keep it he had to travel a considerable distance, but his business was important, so he made the engagement. He appeared at the aesthetic office at the hour appointed. Menials ushered him through several rooms into the aesthetically draped pink tea sanctum of the lady manager. He waited half an hour. Nobody came. He waited a while longer, then sent one of the liveried pages in quest of the manager. After considerably more time she came in, impatience and annoyance written upon her high toned brow. She did not ask her customer to sit down. He reminded her that she herself had made the appointment and requested him to meet her at that hour. "Oh, I can't see you. I can't stop to talk to you at all!" said this business woman. "We are to have company at the house and I must go home and make the salad." Was this like a woman, or was it not?

All the human race is yet in the rudimentary stage of moral and intellectual development, but sometimes woman appears to be particularly so. A lady, a club woman who wears beautiful clothes, was called as witness in a lawsuit which, let us say, Mr. White brought against Mr. Black. The club lady who wears beautiful clothes and believes in the superior elevating moral tone of womanhood gave evidence on the side of Black. She declared under her solemn oath that certain statements she made were false. After the trial was ended this club lady, talking over the case with White's lawyer, said, "But why didn't Mr. White make me an offer before I testified?"

Isn't it about time for preachers and other men to stop howling at women concerning the enormity of divorces and begin to instruct men on the importance of behaving themselves in such a way that women will not need to get divorces? Man's misdeeds, in nine cases out of ten, force women to sue for divorce; then male moralists turn and berate women for it. Queer world this.

Women are showing themselves useful and uncommonly capable in the advertising field. Many are now advertisement solicitors, others are writers of advertisements, while quite a number are accomplished press agents. Some of these travel in advance of theatrical and entertainment companies.

So many inventions have been made and patented in the departments of the household and of women's apparel, so many inventions have been made by ladies, that the field is open for the woman patent attorney and expert. Think of a man expert giving his solemn opinion on the subject of a baby's clothing!

There has been established by some philanthropic folk an asylum for feeble minded women. Would that it could hold them all!

Mrs. Alice Moore McComas, the newspaper woman, has two brilliant and gifted daughters in professional life. One, Miss Alice, is a concert pianist; the other, Carroll, has whistled herself at once into a good living and the public eye. Miss Carroll also sings, and she has recently closed an advantageous five years' contract with one of the leading American firms of theatrical managers. All this is what one might expect from the daughters of a new woman.

Not long ago, when it was proposed in the Illinois legislature to erect a statue to Miss Frances Willard, one of the wise superior sex that governs women rose to speak on behalf of the bill. He said he was emphatically against the proposition because Frances Willard was "no more deserving of honor than a thousand other mothers." How much some lawmakers do know!

All over the Union the story has been spread how an American girl has refused to marry the Servian lord, Peter Karageorgevitch. Well, what of it?

It gives me pleasure to call attention to the fact that Lydia Carpenter, a fifteen-year-old schoolgirl of Plattsburg, N. Y., has made a running high jump of 4 feet 3½ inches, thus making a new record for the feminine sex.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

A Daughter of the Sioux

By GEN. CHARLES KING.

Copyright, 1902, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company.

That night the major, caring as Capt. Dade's, was concerned to hear that Mrs. Dade was not at home. "Gone over to the hospital with Mrs. Blake and the doctor," was the explanation, and these gentle-hearted women, it seems, were striving to do something to rouse the lad from the slough of despond which had engulfed him. That night "Pink" Marble, Ray's faithful bookkeeper and clerk for many a year, a one-armed veteran of the civil war, calling, as was his invariable custom when the trader was absent, to leave the keys of the safe and desks with Mrs. Ray, was surprised to find her in a flood of tears, for which she declined all explanation; yet the sight of Pete, the half-breed, slouching away toward the stables as Marble closed the gate, more than suggested cause, for "Pink" had long disapproved of that young man. That night Corgand, the other stableman, had scandalized Jerry Sullivan, the barkeeper, and old McGann. Webb's Hibernian major domo, by interrupting their game of Old Sledge with a demand for a quart of whisky on top of all that he had obviously and surreptitiously been drinking, and by further indulging in furious threats, in a spattering mixture of Dakota French and French Dakota, when summarily kicked out. That night, late as 12 o'clock, Mrs. Ray, aroused by the infantile demands of the fourth of the olive branches, and further disturbed by the suspicious growlings and challenge of old Tonto, Blake's veteran mastiff, peeped from the second story window and plainly saw two forms in soldier overcoats, at the back fence, and wondered what the sentries found about Blake's quarters to require so much attention. Then she became aware of a third form, rifle-bearing, and slowly pacing the curving line of the bluff—the sentry, beyond doubt. Who, then, were these others who had now totally disappeared? She thought to speak of it to Nannie in the morning, and then thought not. There were reasons why nervous alarm of any kind were best averted then from Mrs. Blake. But there came reason speedily why Mrs. Ray could not forget it.

And that night, later still, along toward four o'clock, the persistent clicking of the telegraph instrument at the adjutant's office caught the ear of the sentry, who in time stirred up the operator, and a "rush" message was later thrust into the hand of Maj. Flint, demolishing a day-old castle in the air.

"From Rock Creek, Wyoming.
"October 15, 190— 9:35 p. m.
Commanding Officer, Fort Frayne: Via Fort Laramie.
Start reported Crook Canon. Gen. Field seriously injured. Have wired Omaha.
(Signed) WARNER,
Commanding Camp."

CHAPTER XVII.

Events moved swiftly in the week that followed. Particulars of the accident to Gen. Field, however, were slow in reaching Fort Frayne; and, to the feverish unrest and mental trouble of the men, was now added a feverish anxiety on the father's account that so complicated the situation as to give Dr. Waller grave cause for alarm. Then it was that, ignoring every thought of behavior on the part of the young officer toward the girl so dear to them, not only Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Ray, but Mrs. Dade herself insisted on being made use of—insisted on being permitted to go to his bedside and there in minutes only women can, to the suffering and distressed. Waller thought it over and succumbed. The lad was no longer delirious, at least, and if he revealed anything of what was uppermost in his mind it would be a conscious and voluntary revelation. There were some things he had said and that Waller alone had heard, the good old doctor wished were known to certain others of the garrison, and to no one more than Mrs. Dade; and so the prohibition against their visiting the wounded lad was withdrawn, and not only these, but other women, sympathetically attracted, were given the necessary authority.

There was other reason for this. From the commanding officer of the supply camp at Rock Springs had come, finally a letter that was full of foreboding. Gen. Field, it said, was sorely injured and might not survive. If the department commander had only been at Omaha or Cheyenne, as the anxious father hastened to reach him, the mishap would never have occurred. The general would gladly have seen to it that suitable transportation from the railway to Frayne was afforded his old-time comrade. But, in his absence, Field shrank from appealing to anyone else, and, through the train conductor, wired ahead to Rock Creek for a stout, four-mule team and wagon, with a capable driver. The conductor assured him that such things were to be in readiness on his arrival. Team, wagon and driver certainly were on hand, but the team looked rickety, so did the wagon, so did the driver, who had obviously been priming for the occasion. It was this rig or nothing, however, and in spite of a courteous remonstrance from the two officers at the supply camp, who saw and condemned the "outfit," Gen. Field started on time and returned on an improvised trestle three hours later. The "outfit" had been tumbled over a ledge into a rocky bottom and with disastrous results to all concerned except the one who deserved it most—the driver. The ways of Providence are indeed inscrutable.

A surgeon had been sent from Fort Russell and his report was such that Waller would not let it go in full to the old man. They had carried the old soldier back to camp and such aid as could be given by the rude hands of untaught men was all he had for nearly 24 hours and his suffering had been great. Internal injuries, it was feared, had been sustained, and at his advanced age that was something almost fatal. No wonder Waller was worried. Then Flint took alarm at other troubles closer at hand. Up to this time he had been mercifully spared all personal conduct with our Indian wards, and when he was told by his sentries that twice in succession night riders had been heard on the westward trail, and that pony tracks in abundance had been found at the upper ford—the site of Stabler's village—and that others still were to be seen in the soft ground not far from Hay's corral, the major was more than startled. At this stage of the proceedings, Sergt. Crabb, of the cavalry, was the most experienced Indian fighter left at the post. Crabb was sent for, and unthinkingly gave his views. The Sioux had probably scattered before the squadrons sent after them from the north; had fled into the hills, and, in small bands, probably, were now raiding down toward the Platte, well knowing there were few soldiers left to defend Fort Frayne, and no cavalry were there to chase them.

"What brings them here? What do they hope to get or gain?" asked Flint.

"I do not know, sir," answered Crabb. "But this I do know, they are after something and expect to get it. If I might make so bold, sir, I think the major ought to keep an eye on them blasted halfbreeds at Hay's."

It set Flint to serious thinking. Pete and Cresswell, paid henchmen of the trader, had been taking advantage of their employer's absence and celebrating after the manner of their kind. One of his officers, new like himself to the neighborhood and to the Indians, had had encounter with the two that rubbed his commissioned fur the wrong way. A sentry, a discharge of his duty, had warned them one evening away from the rear gate of a bachelor dance, along officers' row, and had been told to go to sheol, or words to that effect. They had more business there than he had, said they, and, under the potent sway of "inspiring bold John Barleycorn" and more given abated their position when the officer-of-the-day happened along. They virtually damned and defied him, too.

SACRIFICES OF CUTICLE

COMPLETE LIST OF THOSE WHO HAVE BARED THEIR ARMS.

Dr. Albert Pittis' Success—Mr. Frederick Will Soon be a Well Man—The Story of the Accident at Graceland.

According to an estimate of his physician, over four-fifths of the destroyed skin on the body of Wilson Frederick, of Dunellen, has been replaced by cuticle contributed by men in this city and elsewhere since the skin grafting operation was commenced some months ago. The operation is still going on at intervals in Muhlenberg Hospital and the recovery of the injured man is now assured.

The case is one that has proven the fallacy of an accepted theory in medical science, heretofore it being the general belief that if one third of a person's skin was destroyed death would surely result. One half of his skin was burned to a black crisp by dry steam in the fatal wreck at Graceland on the January 27 and the man is now in good physical condition.

To his attending physician Dr. Pittis as well as to those who have contributed the necessary cuticle for the skin grafting operation, Frederick owes his life. His Masonic brethren, fellow employes in the United States Express Company and other chivalrous friends donated the necessary skin. These men compose a roll of honor. The Daily Press is enabled to publish a complete list of all those who have made such contributions up to the present time and here it is:

Catarrh of the Stomach.

When the stomach is overloaded; when food is taken into it that fails to digest, it decays and inflames the mucous membrane, exposing the nerves, and causes the glands to secret mucin, instead of the natural juices of digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach. For years I suffered with Catarrh of the Stomach, caused by indigestion. Doctors and medicines failed to benefit me until I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure.—J. R. RENOVATING CHURCH INTERIOR

IMPROVEMENTS BEING MADE AT THE CHURCH OF THE HOLY CROSS.

Oak Floor in Chancel—Decoration Work—Services in Prrish House.

The extensive repairs being made to the interior of the Holy Cross Church are now well underway and are being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. The new church ceiling has been almost completed and at an informal meeting of the church vestry held yesterday two shades of brown were decided upon for the painting of the walls and ceiling. The body is to be a light brown color and there will be a red brown stripe for decoration. The combination of colors is exceedingly pleasing to the eye.

It has been decided to lay a new oak floor in the chancel and all varnished work on seats, choir-stalls and rails will be re-polished.

The necessary slowness of the repairs will make it impossible to again hold services in the church until the middle of September. The early morning communion celebrations and the afternoon services have been done away with and the morning service held in the Parish House is now the only one of the week.

HANDSOME HOMES SOLD.

Colonial and English Houses Disposed of by A. D. Thompson at Private Sale.

A. D. Thompson has recently sold two handsome properties on Belvidere avenue to out-of-town parties. Sidney S. Schuyler, a resident of Stamford, Conn., and a member of the New York Stock Exchange, has purchased the large Colonial house on the corner of Belvidere avenue and Charlotte road, and will take up his residence there early in September. Albert B. Davies, a New York coffee merchant, has become the owner of the English house, and will soon make his home at Netherwood. The erection of these properties has done much to improve Netherwood, not only in the attractive appearance of the houses themselves, but in furnishing an inducement to first class citizens to locate here.

Authorized Collectors.

These compose a committee to solicit aid for the expense of building the new kitchen at Hope Chapel: Mrs. Margaret Sweeney, Mrs. F. A. Weber, Mrs. J. Britton Higgins, Mrs. George Wallace, Mrs. Ferdinand Demchlax, Miss Mary Duvere, J. Fred Wharton, Edward Young and John Coss.

Loss Noted.

On several local trolley cars worn out wheels have been removed and new ones put in their place. The change is greatly appreciated by persons who have been troubled by the noise made by the flat-wheel cars.

Mrs. Henriques, of New York, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barlow, of Prospect place.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chapman and son, of Stelle avenue, will leave town on Friday to enjoy their summer outing. They will return about the first of September.

PLAINFIELD BOY MEETS KING

LUCIUS T. KOONS AT THE BANQUET TENDERED BY. EDWARD VII.

Koons Making a Tour—He Visits Ireland and Will France and Germany.

Possibly there is but one Plainfielder who holds the honor of having met King Edward VII. That person is Lucius T. Koons, of Sandford avenue, who is travelling abroad and who was at Dublin, Ireland, last week when His Majesty landed on his visit to the Irish people. The meeting took place at an informal luncheon on Thursday given to the King's officers and it was though one of these, Lieut. Edward H. Benjamin, an officer in the British army, and a favorite of the King when Prince of Wales, that the meeting was arranged. Lieutenant Benjamin is Koon's uncle.

The young traveller, who is one of a party of three, was especially fortunate in being at Dublin this past week as will proceed on his trip Tuesday. He has secured passes through the fortress of Gilbraltar and will spend a day at that stronghold before proceeding on his trip.

He will return to this city about the middle of September after having had an extensive trip through France, Germany, Italy, Africa, and the Holy Land.

LITERARY.

The Popular Science Monthly for August contains the following articles: "Modern Views of Matter," by Sir Oliver Lodge; "The Training of a Physician," by President David Starr Jordan; "American Titles and Distinctions," by Professor W. PRONUNCIATION OF "GOLF."

Scotchman Who Played the Game in 1826 Is Distressed by Varied English Accents.

A Scotch golfer who played golf in 1826, before the railway era and long before the English took up the game, writes the London Times that the English are mispronouncing the name of the national game in a way that distresses him. He proceeds to say that among gentlemen who had been in England or India, and were free from the pronounced Scotch accent, the game was called "gofe," by caddies and those speaking a broad Scotch it was "gowf." The phrase, "folk play golf," was pronounced by gentlemen "foke play gofe," "gofe" rhyming with "loaf." By caddies it was pronounced "fowk play gowf." There was a third pronunciation, but it was an affectation, "goff." Those who so pronounced it here were supposed to speak high English, avoiding the broad pronunciation of the letter "a," a prevalent Scotch substitute for "e."

"E" used short is "i," thus, "heffpest sivin," for half-past seven. This peculiar dialect is greatly admired by my fellow countrymen, he says, and was known to them as Edinburg English, but even in the unsounded "l" in golf could they have foreseen what the actual future mispronunciation of the English on taking up the game would have been, with what joy would they have called it "gawf." It would have seemed to them "so English."

AN INCORPORATED FAMILY.

The Fairbanks, of Dedham, Mass., Hold a Reunion with Interesting Results.

The scale of business being prosperous and lead-lard in brisk demand, the tribe of Fairbanks thought itself warranted in holding a reunion last August at the Fairbanks homestead, in Dedham, Mass., Jonathan Fairbanks was the original American ancestor, and from him are descended 4,000 living families, says Harper's Weekly. The reunion turned out to be interesting and successful, and one of its results is the recent filing of articles of incorporation of the Fairbanks Family in America, as a society for historical purposes, to hold property, preserve records and objects of family interest and promote the education of its members in subjects relating to their family history. The society will buy the Dedham homestead of Jonathan Fairbanks, its headquarters, and will doubtless raise as large a fund as is necessary to provide a sufficient annual income to carry on its work. The project seems adapted to furnish a good deal of lawful and innocent entertainment at small cost, and is likely to commend itself to other families that are scattered over the United States.

WHERE TRAMPS LUXURIATE.

Summer Cottages on the Atlantic Coast Used by the Hobos as Winter Quarters.

All along the Atlantic coast, from Florida to Maine almost, there are scores of summer hotels, with the cottages annexed to them, sheltering guests who pay neither for rent, food nor fuel. They have no smiling and effulgent clerk to bid them welcome and put their valuables in the safe; no bell boys at the call; no waiters to tip; no telephone connection with a near-by livery stable. Their names are not published in the newspapers. They seek seclusion, not notoriety. They keep themselves warm without fires; for where there is a fire there is generally smoke, and smoke would betray them. When darkness falls their day is done, for light shining through the shuttered windows would soon make them homeless, or transfer them from a hotel to a jail.

All this, reports an eastern exchange, is on the authority of a tramp who has been through the mill, as he expressed it to a constable in Connecticut a few days ago, when confronted with an opportunity of going to work for the state's board. He is a tale and getting out of the state to save the constable's reputation.

"THIRTY POISONOUS PLANTS."

Government List Which Includes Many Varieties Supposed to Be Harmless.

Send to the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C., for free pamphlet entitled "Thirty Poisonous Plants." Every one who loves to roam in fields and forest should know the poisonous plants, says "Nature and Science," in St. Nicholas. It is very fortunate for those who are fond of rambling through the fields and woods that most of the plants in that government list are poisonous only when eaten. Nearly all cases of skin poisoning are from poison ivy or poison sumac.

It will surprise many people who read this pamphlet of "Thirty Poisonous Plants" to learn that the ladyslippers or moccasin flowers are included in the list. A poisonous oil similar to that of poison ivy is secreted by the leaf hairs, especially in the fruiting season. The leaves and flowers of the lily-of-the-valley are also poisonous when taken internally. The taste, however, is very bitter, so no one is likely to eat them.

The beautiful mountain laurel is so often eaten by sheep, resulting in their death, that the farmer calls it sheep-laurel or poison-laurel.

Record Life-Saver.

It is claimed that the record for life-saving is held by Joseph Lang lois, a Chicago policeman, only 32 years old, who has rescued at least 300 persons from drowning.

RAILWAY MEN SPRUCED UP.

Trainmen Must Always Appear as Dapper as Strollers on the Boulevard.

One railroad company with offices in Chicago has long made the study of etiquette one of the duties of its trainmen. The men must not swear, nor use slang, nor be peevish, nor discourteous, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Erie Railroad company now comes along with stiff a newer idea. The trainmen must always appear as dapper as a stroller on the boulevard. They must keep their shoes well shined. Their clothes must fit them faultlessly, and, most of all, there must be creases in the trousers of every uniformed employe of the road.

Down in Indiana, at a division point, three of four tailors are kept busy pressing uniforms. Both in Chicago and at the other end of the run bootblacks are employed to keep clean the "boots" of the employes.

The idea of making a dapper-looking company out of the employes is new to Chicago, although the idea has been tried in the east for several years. At Jersey City six tailors are constantly employed and the bootblacks are kept busy.

Each employe is given two tickets, one of which passes current with the tailor, while the other is as good as gold with the bootblacks. Each employe is told to use the tickets freely, to look well all times, and not to be bashful about asking for new tickets when the old ones are gone.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

Bankers and Errand Boys Stand Side by Side in Baseball Season.

The baseball fever is no respecter of persons. The broker with the high hat and the bank account and the barefooted boy stand side by side and eagerly await the next inning. But there is some little interest when it comes out that the fever that comes with the first game reaches the dignified ecclesiastic. But if does, and it sometimes goes very high, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

One day last summer, when the leading teams were running very close, a reporter called on Cardinal Gibbons to ask him some questions regarding the pope's encyclical which had recently been published. The cardinal granted the interview and the reporter left the house. He was going down the steps when his eminence, leaning over the landing, called out:

"Have you heard to-day's score?"

"Yes," said the surprised reporter, "it was 3 to 3 and in our favor."

"Good," said the cardinal, with a smile, "that put us two points ahead, doesn't it?"

The reporter didn't know, but he realized that the cardinal knew a great many things that he didn't know.

WHAT "MAGNET" COMES FROM

Interesting Information Concerning the Source of the Word So Commonly Used.

Thousands of years ago a mineral having the strange power of attracting iron was found in the country anciently called Magnesia, in Asia Minor. The name of this country has given us the word "magnet," says an article "About Magnets," in St. Nicholas. This mineral, which is now called the lodestone (not loadstone), attracted attention of the curious, and it was discovered that a piece of iron which had been rubbed with the lodestone acquired the same power of attracting iron; in other words, the piece of iron became a magnet. It was afterward found that such an iron or artificial magnet could be used like the lodestone itself to convert other pieces of iron into magnets. This exhibits in a more recently a mode of making magnets by means of electricity was discovered, that is, by wrapping a piece of insulated wire many times around the bar and then causing a current of electricity to pass through the wire. The familiar small toy magnets are simply steel bars which have been rubbed a few times against powerful magnets.

Uses of Shark Fins.

In some countries walking-sticks are manufactured from shark fins. From the skin of the animal is obtained a valuable article for making various grips and many fancy articles. Sharks abound on the coast of Nicaragua, and Mr. Gottschalk, the United States consul at San Juan del Norte, suggests that the fins, backbone and skins might with advantage be imported into the United States for industrial purposes. The killing of sharks is encouraged by the Nicaraguan fishery laws, and there appears to be no export duty on any industrial product derived from them.

Private Entrance for President.

The president of the United States will have a private entrance for himself and family in the new railroad station now being constructed in Washington. Mr. Cleveland used to escape the crowds by having his driver take him to the forward ends of the trains, instead of entering at the front of the station, but even this refuge is no longer practicable, so the private entrance has been arranged.

White Wagons Scare Cattle.

A farmer complains that his cattle grazing in fields near a motor-frequented highway, instead of fattening, are growing thinner and thinner, from fright.

Safety Pins in America.

Safety pins are peculiarly American. We use 144,000,000 of them each year.

CHARLES M. BURT'S STRIDE TO THE FRONT

General Passenger Agent Twenty-Five Years in the Business.

BEGAN AS AN AUDITOR

ORIGINATED THE SCHEME TO CONDUCT "THE SUBURANITE."

Commenced Railroading in 1882 —Later Made a Chief Rate Clerk and Now General Passenger Agent.

A young man who has made his mark in the railroad world, and who in official circles is considered one of the most thoroughly competent passenger men in America, is Charles Munson Burt, general passenger agent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, says the Railroad Employe.

Although a young man, declares this excellent publication, Mr. Burt has been twenty-five years in the railway business. He first began in the auditor's department of the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio Railroad, familiarly spoken of as the N. Y., P. & O. In 1882 he left railroading for a brief time to take a position in the United States Quartermaster's Department, but before the year was out he was in the employ of the West Shore Railroad as rate clerk.

In 1888 he was made chief rate clerk in the Trunk Line Passenger Association. He afterward held this same position, but in 1896 the Supreme Court decided that the regulation of passenger rates by these associations was illegal, which caused their dissolution. Hence Mr. Burt's efforts in these directions came to naught. It resulted, however, in transferring him to New England. In 1899 Mr. Burt became general passenger agent of the Fitchburg Railroad, and later, when the Fitchburg was absorbed by the Boston and Maine, he became the assistant general passenger agent of that road.

With this valuable New England experience, an experience which naturally familiarized him with the transporting of large numbers of people on quick running trains and at short intervals only, the opening was wanting to bring him into some of the large railway systems. The death of General Passenger Agent Baldwin of the Central Railroad of New Jersey made the opening required. He was quickly assigned to Mr. Baldwin's position, and has since filled it in a most satisfactory manner.

The New Jersey Central is one of the leading passenger carrying roads of the country and especially does this apply to the suburban business, which has grown phenomenally since Mr. Burt assumed the helm of the passenger department in April, 1900. He saw the possibility of building up a great and profitable business for his company in this connection, and he went to work along the proper lines to secure a result which he has not only proven satisfactory from a financial standpoint but which has placed Mr. Burt in the front ranks of the general passenger agents of America.

One of Mr. Burt's most happy ventures in connection with the upbuilding of suburban business was the publication of the Suburbanite, an illustrated monthly magazine of genuine merit, which is distributed gratuitously throughout the residential sections of New York City, as well as along the line and which is bringing satisfactory returns, as can be attested to by the house owners and real estate agents of every city and town between New York and Somerville, the entire distance being one of the most beautiful and desirable sections for suburban residence in the United States.

In the organization and management of the working force under his direction Mr. Burt employes the same sensible and liberal methods which so prominently characterizes the present management of the company, with the result that every employe is a willing worker and gives his best efforts in the interests of the corporation which affords him employment.

CORNERSTONE LAYING TO BE GREAT EVENT

Committee Announces Complete Detail for Exercises at Elizabeth.

THE STONE IN POSITION

AFTER PARADE THE CEREMONIES WILL COMMENCE AT COURT HOUSE.

Banquet to Follow—Masonic Fraternity to Escort Officers of Grand Lodge—Datter's Band Engaged—Other Details.

Workmen are engaged in putting the finishing touches on the cornerstone which was placed in position in the new court house building at Elizabeth Friday, preparatory to the exercises today.

On the side of the stone which faces Broad street have been cut the figures "1908," while on the Rahway avenue side will be the figures "1811," the latter indicating the year in which the old court house was constructed.

A meeting of the committee to make arrangements for the cornerstone exercises was held yesterday afternoon in the office of County Collector Wood, and the final arrangements were completed, as far as possible.

The invitations to the county officials, mayors of the various municipalities, chairmen of the township boards, the press and others, have been sent out.

Datter's band has been engaged, and will head the procession of Free Mason from Masonic Hall in the Kean building to the court house. Here a large platform will be constructed, on which will be seated the officers of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, and invited guests.

The various lodges of Free Masons in the city and county have been requested by their various presiding officers to assemble in the hall of Washington Lodge, in the Kean building, at 10:30 o'clock this morning, to act as escort to the Grand Lodge. Members of the fraternity are asked to wear frock coats and dark trousers.

At 11 o'clock, on the arrival of the procession at the court house, the following will be the order of exercises, as agreed upon by the committee:

Overture by the band.

Address by Director J. Frank Hubbard.

Ode by the Cathedral Quartette.

Prayer by grand chaplain.

Ode by quartette.

Ceremony of laying the cornerstone by Grand Master W. Holt Apgar.

Invocation by grand chaplain.

Delivering of the Masonic implements.

Ode.

Oration by Hon. Foster M. Voorhees.

"Star Spangled Banner" by band.

Benediction by grand chaplain.

At the conclusion of the exercises the Masonic fraternity will escort the officers of the Grand Lodge to the Kean building, where the lodge will be closed in due form.

At 1 o'clock the officers of the Grand Lodge will proceed to the assembly room of Jacob's Theatre, which will be appropriately decorated with palms and flags, and here the banquet will be served.

The presiding officer will be United States Senator John Kean, who will make a brief address. Rev. B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rahway, has accepted an invitation to offer the prayer.

A number of brief addresses will be made, and among those who are to speak, in addition to Senator Kean, are Judge Vail, Director Hubbard, of the Board of Freeholders; Surrogate Parrott, Sheriff Corbett and County Collector Wood.

The invitation to the banquet must of necessity be limited, and have been forwarded to Judges VanSickel and Vail, members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders and members of the various cities in Union County, County officials, officers of the Grand Lodge, chairman of the various township boards, representatives of the press, the public schools, fire and police departments. About 150 hundred invitations have been issued. There will be no organizations in line.

The committee make this announcement in order that there may be no misunderstanding. The banquet will closely follow the early part of the afternoon, and Datter's band, will play selections between the speeches. Ross & Son will serve the banquet.

The committee having in charge the exercises in connection with the laying of the cornerstone is composed of Director Hubbard, Freeholders Farrell, Brocklebank, McCandless, Adams, King, Clark Ryno and County Collector Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. David M. Runyon, of Arlington avenue, are home from a pleasant outing.

Mr. and Mrs. I. N. West, of West Fifth street, are visiting relatives at Friendship, N. Y.

Robert T. Johnson and family, of Park avenue, have rented a cottage at Belmar.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVI. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1903. NO. 32.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

LOCAL ARCHITECTS RECEIVE A REPORT

State Commission of Architects Tells of Its Work for the Benefit of the Profession.

ISSUING CERTIFICATES

498 PERMITS GRANTED DURING THE YEAR JUST CLOSED.

New Jersey is the Third State to Recognize the Responsibility of the Architect—Registration Law—Its Effect.

Special attention is directed to the general desire of architects to become registered with the New Jersey State Board of Architects, in the first annual report of the commission to Governor Murphy, copies of which are issued in pamphlet form, have been received by Plainfield architects. The board was appointed under the provisions of an act passed in March of last year. During the year ending June 1 last certificates were granted to 498 architects. The board refused forty-three applicants, finding on examination that they were not qualified to assume the responsibility of designing and superintending the erection of buildings. The law compels each architect to have a certain amount of professional knowledge before he can receive a certificate and become registered.

New Jersey is the third State to recognize the responsibilities of the architect toward the public by passing a registration law. The report says that the law has been found sufficiently complete to make its enforcement practical and beneficial. The officers of the board were quite surprised by the large demand for certificates, and in order to accommodate all extra meetings had to be held. Those rejected were informed that they were debarred from again applying for examination.

Certificates issued to those who have passed the regular examination, which went into effect October 17 last, differ from those given to architects who were practising at the time the law was passed. The rights and privileges, however, are the same, but the certificate granted after passing examinations is regarded by the board as the higher one. It is stated that any of the architects who were registered because of the fact that they were practising at the time the law was passed, can take the examination any time they desire and receive the higher certificate.

The report goes on to tell of a number of complaints having been made of violations of the law's provisions. These complaints, it appears, were against either persons practising without certificates or architects who are not regarded as practitioners. It is added that at present the board is in such a position that it feels it cannot begin to undertake the prosecution of violators. Certain amendments, in order that the law may be made clearer, are suggested in the report.

BOROUGHITE HONORED.

Lewis C. Wyckoff Appointed a Deputy Fish and Game Warden for the State.

Lewis C. Wyckoff, of the borough, who, during the past fifteen years has served as a fish and game detective, yesterday received the appointment of deputy fish and game warden for the State. The appointment was made by the Board of Fish and Game Commissioners. Mr. Wyckoff has been a successful detective and his new position comes as a reward of merit for past services. A handsome certificate investing Mr. Wyckoff with power was recieved by him yesterday.

Murphy Favors Amendments.

Trenton, Aug. 5—Governor Murphy was at the State House yesterday for the first time in several weeks, and his presence was the signal for the gathering of a large number of politicians than is usual at this time of the year. The proposed constitutional amendments formed the topic considerable discussion in the corridors. Governor Murphy said a number of members of the bar had expressed themselves to him as approving of the amendments, and he himself, from a layman's standpoint favored them.

Patriotic Order's Session.

Somerville, August 5—The annual session of the Grand Lodge, P. O. S. of A., will be held in this place on August 18 and 19. Frederick A. Pope has been chosen chairman of the committee on arrangements.

BLUE LAWS BEFORE BOROUGH FATHERS

North Plainfield Council to Discuss Subject of Sunday Desecration.

FREE BAND CONCERTS

APPROPRIATION MADE FOR POPULAR FEASTS OF MUSIC.

Only Two Members Now in Town and a Postponement of Meeting is More Than Likely—Much Business to be Transacted.

Should there be a quorum present at the Common Council meeting in North Plainfield Friday evening matters of much importance will be discussed. Among other things it is expected that the death-knell of the illegal selling of liquor in the borough will be sounded when Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed submits his opinion regarding the enforcement of the blue laws in North Plainfield. In all probability the matter of appropriating a sum of money for band concerts during the rest of the summer will be disposed of, as well as a protest to establish a public park in the borough.

As already told the borough fathers have been investigating the charges made that several Italian fruit dealers are in the habit of keeping their stores open on Sunday to sell liquor. It is stated that evidence has been secured against several of these merchants and steps will be taken to compel them to close their shops.

Corporation Counsel Reed has been asked for an interpretation of the State laws regarding the proper observance of Sunday and upon his report will depend the future action of Mayor Smalley in the matter. He has placed himself on record as being determined to close these "joints" and it is probable that complaints will be made against them.

Although a sum of money has been secured for a band concert in the borough Mayor Smalley will probably bring up the matter of making an additional appropriation. The first concert will be held in the borough Saturday evening, August 29. The location has not been decided upon.

At present there are only two councilmen in town. They are Councilmen James F. Arnold and Robert Clark. In the event of there not being a quorum present the meeting will be adjourned one week.

VALUABLE CANINE KILLED

UNKNOWN MAN SHOOTS MRS. CRUIKSHANK'S BULLDOG.

The Animal Was Worth Five Hundred Dollars—Dr. Knott Extracted Bullet.

A valuable English bulldog belonging to Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, was shot by an unknown man last evening. The animal was a pet of the family and was valued at $500. The ball entered the right side and lodged somewhere in the left flank. Dr. Knott was summoned and the bullet was probed for and extracted but the wound was fatal, the animal dying shortly afterwards. It cannot be learned who fired the shot.

T. H. HANDLER DEAD.

Peritonitis Setting In, Death Follows Operation for Appendicitis.

Thomas J. Handler, son of Mrs. Mary Handler, of Stony Hill, died Tuesday afternoon at Muhlenberg Hospital where he was taken Saturday for an operation for appendicitis. Peritonitis developed and death resulted yesterday. The boy was nine years of age. He was a nephew of contractor Thomas J. McGann, of this city.

The funeral was held today from the home of Mr. McGann, on Lincoln place, and Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's R. C. Church, officiated. Interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery.

School Directors Meeting.

On account of the bad weather last evening the City Board of Education did not hold its regular monthly meeting. Dr. J. B. Probasco, president of the Board, has postponed the meeting until next Tuesday evening.

COAL TO RETAIL AT $6.50 PER TON

Price to be Advanced Twenty-Five Cents by September First Say the Dealers.

PRESENT RATE IS $6.25

IN NEW BRUNSWICK THE CONSUMERS HAVE BEEN PAYING $5.75.

Wise Housekeepers Will Profit by Laying in Winter's Supply Now—Saving Will be Twenty-Five Cents on Every Ton.

From the best authority obtainable, Plainfielders will pay $6.50 a ton for coal this winter. This information was secured yesterday from one of the leading coal dealers of the city. The present retail price is $6.25, an advance of 25 cents over the price prevailing June 1. The wholesale dealers, as usual, notified the retailers that commencing May 1 last and continuing each month until September 1, the advance in price would be ten cents a ton per month, making the total increase fifty cents. The local dealers have not raised the price fifty cents at once, but have divided the increase, so that consumers pay 25 cents more now and an additional 25 cents September 1.

Last year the long strike in the coal fields completely upset the market and consumers throughout the country were paying all sorts of fancy prices up to $20 a ton. From the present indications there is not likely to be a repetition of this during the coming winter. The miners seem to be well satisfied with their present conditions and newspapers reports indicate that there will be plenty of coal the coming season and there should be no good excuse for the charging of exorbitant prices.

In New Brunswick the consumers have been paying $6.75 a ton, but on August 1 the retail dealers advanced the price to $6.25, which is the same that is being asked here. There the increase was made fifty cents at one time, which is not as advantageous as the rule adopted here. In this city the consumers can lay in their winter supply at $6.25, while in New Brunswick they have to pay the increase of fifty cents at one jump. Those fortunate enough to get their coal now will be able to save 25 cents a ton.

P. S. C. TROLLEY CHANGES

SYSTEM DIVIDED INTO THREE DISTINCT GROUPS.

Plainfield is in the Second District, Which Has Its Headquarters in Newark.

The Public Service Corporation has divided its system into three groups, for the purpose of simplifying operations. General Manager W. W. Wheatley has arranged them as follows:

First District—Lines of North Jersey Street Railway Company east of Hackensack river; lines of J. C. H. & P. Street Railway Company, excepting that north of Park avenue, East Rutherford; Bergen Turnpike Company (both toll road and railway); People's Elevating Company; Port Richmond and Bergen Point Ferry Company.

Second District—Lines of North Jersey Street Railway Company west of the Hackensack river and south of Passaic Valley Railway Company; lines of Elizabeth, Plainfield & Central Jersey Railway Company.

Third District—Lines of J. C. H. & P. Street Railway Company north of Park avenue, East Rutherford.

Warren S. Hall is given charge of the operation of the lines in the Second District, with the title of District Superintendent; office at 315 Market street, Newark.

Seventh-Day Baptist Conference.

The Seventh-Day Baptist General Conference will be held at Salem, W. Va., between Wednesday, August 19 and Monday, August 24, inclusive. Included in the executive committee which will be present at the sessions is Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of this city, the recording secretary of the Tract Society of that denomination; Rev. O. U. Whitford and Rev. W. L. Burdick. Rev. George Shaw will also attend.

GEORGE HONEYMAN ALIVE?

SO SAYS CLAIRVOYANT TO MISSING MAN'S MOTHER.

Futile Search Made for His Body in Vicinity of Weston by Two Friends.

Somerville, Aug. 5—Frank Morrell and John Austin, of this place, went to Weston yesterday and made a thorough search for the body of George Honeyman, supposed to have been drowned there while camping about two weeks ago. No trace of the body was found.

Mrs. Honeyman, the boy's mother, has, it is said, visited a clairvoyant, who declared that her son was not drowned, but had run away, leaving his coat along in the water to give the appearance that he had fallen in. George ran away once before several years ago.

ARRANGING FOR RACE MEET

PURSES AMOUNTING TO $450 TO ATTRACT HORSE RACERS.

Event at Plainfield Driving Park on Saturday Afternoon, Aug. 29—Band of Music.

Members of the Plainfield Driving Association met last evening at the office of William A. Coddington to arrange for the race meet to be held Saturday, August 29, at the Driving Park. Nothing of importance was done except the issuing of entry blanks.

Mayor N. B. Smalley said last evening that a feature of the meet will be a running race between local horses. Purses of $450 will be put up and some exceedingly good matches are anticipated. Benjamin LaVere's band has been secured for the afternoon and the made promises to be a most enjoyable feature. Trotting and pacing matches will be run off.

GLADNESS FOLLOWS SADNESS

SYMBLOS OF MOURNING REMOVED FROM LOCAL R. C. CHURCHES.

Parishioners Rejoicing Over Papal Accession—Announcement From Altars.

There will be no special services at St. Mary's Church relative to the election of the new Pope, but Father Egan, the rector, will make reference to the noteworthy event at the services next Sunday. This will also be done at St. Joseph's Church by Father Miller. A general spirit of rejoicing is found among local Catholics regarding the choice and prayers have been offered for a long and happy reign of Pius X. The drapings put up in commemoration of the death of Pope Leo were today removed from St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Church. About August 20, a month after the death of Pope Leo, there will be a special requiem mass.

Better Judge Than Lipton.

The Newark Evening News suggests a congress of the beauties at Newport, Coney Island, Bar Harbor, Asbury Park and Atlantic City, in bathing costumes, in a competitive exhibit of physical development, the idea being to determine whether the style of living of the fashionable rich or of the plain people produces the finest specimens of American womanhood. The editor doesn't say so right out, but he plainly intimates that he would make an expert and appropriate judge.—New York Herald.

Mrs. Howe's Effort.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, of Boston, whose summer home is at Newport, R. I., is making an effort to revive interest in history and travel among the women who frequent that fashionable watering place. Her niece, Mrs. Winthrop Chanler, of New York, is one of the cottagers who seconds her efforts and has loaned the use of her drawing room for one of these morning conferences. Mrs. Howe is the mother of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue.

Deserter Captured.

Somerville, August 5—Constable James Woods, of Pluckemin, arrested Wm. Cook, a deserter from the 101 Company of Coast Artillery, stationed at Fort Totten, L. I., on Monday. Cook was employed on the farm of George Wickenhaver near Pluckamin and said he was tired of his service at the fort. He was lodged in the county jail here, and yesterday was taken back to Fort Totten.

STREET COMMISSIONER STILL BUSILY ENGAGED

Repair Work on Thoroughfares Already Finished in Various Sections.

NEW CULVERTS BUILT

TOP DRESSING BEING APPLIED TO SEVERAL OF THE STREETS.

Watchung Avenue to be Re-Macadamized—Work to Start Next Week—East End Streets to Go a Little While—Other Work.

The past month has been one of exceeding activity with City Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett and the streets as a whole are much improved by the care and attention he has given them. While there is yet considerable to be attended to, no time has been wasted and the unusual number of clear days has made it possible to accomplish a large amount of work.

Perhaps the most important work of the month has been the repairing done along the principal streets in the West End. West Front street, West Sixth street and West Fifth street have each been repaired to a considerable extent. North avenue in the East End, as far as Terrill road, as well as Jackson avenue and Clinton avenue, South of Third street, have also been improved by a renewal of the top dressing in patches and general cleaning and levelling of the roadbed. West End avenue is being treated to a heavy coat of slag, heavily rolled, and the work there is now almost completed. New storm sewer culverts have been installed on Stelle avenue near Union street and the standing water is now drained off and does not gather.

Two new culverts have been installed at Clinton avenue near South Second street and the inlets for water have been made more efficient on West Fifth street near New street. Repairs of this character will shortly be stared this month. Aside from these repairs, there has been a general overhauling and cleaning out of culverts and catch basins all over the city.

The main work contemplated for the coming month is the repairing of Watchung avenue by re-macadamizing the street from Sixth street to Woodland avenue. The roadbed here has been in poor condition for a long time as the surface macadam has been worn in holes for several months and has long needed the attention of the city repair gang. This work will be started in about a week's time and together with the general repairing of the East End streets will be the important work of the street department for the month.

FACTS ON STREET SPRINKLING

IN ONE DAY 15,000 GALLONS OF WATER USED IN BUSINESS SECTION.

Over Thirty-seven Thousand Gallons Sprinkled From One Cart in a Single Day.

Under the new regime of municipal street sprinkling a few interesting facts have been collected showing what is being done by John Keely, who has the contract for this work. There are eight sprinkling carts used in keeping the dust down in all parts of the city. Each wagon holds 500 gallons of water and during a recent dry spell these carts were emptied a great many times in one day. Nearly every day in the business part of the city twenty-five cart loads of water are placed on the streets before 12 o'clock noon.

Mr. Keely says that on one extra dry day one cart was emptied sixty-two times and this just about kept the dust off the streets. A great deal of territory is covered by the eight wagons and that the residents are better satisfied than at first is evidenced by the fact that not one complaint has been received during the past week. During very dry weather it is exceedingly difficult matter to keep the dust down as the sun absorbs the water almost as fast as it is put on the streets.

Alex. Jeffers Dead.

Alexander Jeffers, a well-known farmer, died Tuesday at his home on Sherman avenue. Mr. Jeffers was seventy-six years of age and had been ill for some time before his death. He owned considerable property near his home. Surviving him is a son, John Jeffers.

GARBAGE COLLECTION DISCUSSED BY BOARD

Health Authorities Working on Various Systems of Garbage Disposal.

EXAMINATIONS OF MILK

HEALTH OFFICER DISCOVERS USE OF FORMALDEHYDE.

Action Taken to Stop Injurious Practice—Sixteen Marriage Certificates—Forty-Six Births and Twenty-Nine Deaths.

The question of municipal control of the collection and disposal of the city's garbage and refuse was brought up at the August meeting of the Board of Health held Tuesday afternoon in the rooms in North avenue. The practices in other cities were considered and the subject discussed at some length. A final report on the needs and possibilities in Plainfield will be made later. The Board of Health is anxious to do something, but it desires to be practical and the best information on the subject is being obtained.

During the past month a thorough examination of all milk sold here was made to detect any use of formaldehyde which is the basis of a large number of milk preservatives sold under the name of "preservaline," "freezine," and the like. It is used in milk to prevent souring and its effect is that of an antiseptic. It will postpone the curdling point of a milk from six to one hundred and fifty hours according to the strength of the solution used.

Aside from being in direct violation of the State law and punishable by a fine, formaldehyde in milk is considered by physicians who have made a study of the effects of milk preservatives, to be injurious, especially to infants. Thirty-three samples of milk were taken last month and analyzed for formaldehyde, but it was found in only two. The Board took action to have its use in those two cases stopped.

The Board received during July sixteen marriage certificates, forty-four births certificates, two still-birth certificates and twenty-nine death certificates. Two applications were made for permits to sell milk here and one to collect garbage. At present the city is practically free from contagious disease, there being but four houses under quarantine as against eight at the corresponding period last year.

Rocky Hill and Princeton are now connected by a well-organized stage line. The Johnson Trolley Company has established the line to connect with trolley cars of the company at Princeton on Sundays and week days. The distance between the two places is about four miles and thirty cents is charged for the round trip, making a fare of fifty cents for a round trip from Trenton to Rocky Hill.

STORM DOES DAMAGE IN CITY AND BOROUGH

Streets Resembled Miniature Rivers During the Heavy Downpour of Rain.

BRIDGES SWEPT AWAY

TELEPHONE AND TROLLEY SERVICE MADE TO SUFFER.

Storm Sewers Choked Up—Stony Brook and Green Brook Like Roaring Rivers—Incidents of the Storm.

Bridges were washed out, streets damaged and cellars were filled with water Tuesday during the heavy downpour of rain. Most of the damage was done in North Plainfield along the routes of the two brooks although during the storm North avenue was like a river and several other down town streets, including Fourth, West and East Front streets, Park avenue and Watchung avenue were impassible. Beneath the railroad bridges on Watchung avenue the sewers were choked up to such an extent that it was impossible to run cars beneath the structure.

Green brook was a raging torrent. It was higher than it has been in six months and at one time it threatened to break over the banks and flood the rear of George Stewart's blacksmith shop. At Grove street the brook became choked up at about midnight and a miniature dam was formed. The water banked up four feet and then broke away again with a roar which could be heard for two blocks.

At the telephone station the operators were unable to make many connections on account of "grounded" wires. New Brunswick was the only out-of-town call that could be secured until linemen located the trouble.

Stony brook was a roaring river. The water broke over the banks and flooded back yards and covered Green brook road. William Feiring, who was on his way home was overtaken by the storm and had to wade through the water, on Greenbrook road, half way up to his knees.

Bridges on the properties of Martin L. Cooley and Former Mayor John F. Wilson, were washed away at the abutments. The trolley cars could not pass Grandview avenue on account of the storm on their north bound trips. That part of Duer street which was recently macadamized was washed considerably.

Through the burning out of a fuse the borough was plunged in darkness during the heaviest part of the rain fall. The troubles of the electric light company were numerous and kept a gang of linemen at work for two or three hours.

The connection man-holes of the telephone system were filled with water and all this morning workmen were engaged in pumping them out. The water caused many short circuits in the system.

Weatherman John Neagle reports that 3.81 inches of water fell during the storm.

CHILD RUNS AWAY.

Little Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Chandler Alarm Her Parents.

Men, women and boys scoured the borough far and wide this morning in search of little four-year-old Mary Chandler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Chandler, of 80 Manning avenue.

When last seen the child was playing in front of the house on Manning avenue. Shortly after she was missed. A score of people gathered at the house and started off on a child hunt. One party went towards this city while another started towards the mountains. The child was located near the upper end of Westervelt avenue plodding her way towards the mountains.

Funeral of Samuel Hedden.

In the presence of a large number of friends and relatives the services over the remains of the late Samuel Hedden were held Tuesday afternoon at his late residence No. 5 Duer street. Rev. Dr. Yerkes was the officiating minister. The bearers were John Shotwell, Alexander Thorn, Lewis Barkelew and Andrew Johnston. Interment took place in the M. E. Cemetery.

—A small colored boy drove about North Plainfield, Sunday afternoon, in Dr. F. W. French's carriage with two little white boys, without the knowledge and consent of the owner. They were reprimanded by Chief Marshal Campbell.

M. PAUL DESCHANEL.

Clever French Politician Who Wants to Succeed M. Loubet as President of the Republic.

It is rather difficult to think of an American politician with whom to compare Paul Deschanel, the brilliant ex-speaker of the chamber of deputies, who is now working his way to the presidency of the French republic. Mr. Deschanel still is a member of the chamber. In America Deschanel would be described as a "smooth article." Naturally, a man of uncommon gifts and simple huge ambitions, he "gets on" by being agreeable to every one—high and low alike. He is on especially good terms with the czar of Russia, so much so, in fact, that when the czar visited France Deschanel was appointed by the president to represent the chamber of deputies at the reception. When the young diplomat went to Constantinople, he made a point of calling upon Abdul Hamid, and in Paris they say jokingly that if ever he goes to Rome, "Paul" will kiss the pope's slipper. Deschanel, who is well to do, also keeps his fellow deputies well disposed to him by innumerable little grateful acts—such as the unexpected bestowal of a brace of plump pheasants from his preserves at times when game is dear in Paris. Deschanel's marriage to a woman of wealth and social position has helped him materially. He means to be president some day, and seems likely to achieve his ambition. He is the youngest man who ever was president of the French congress, with one distinguished exception—Gambetta. Incidentally, Deschanel is admittedly the best dressed man in the "chamber."

M. PAUL DESCHANEL.
(French Politician Who Has Been Stung by Presidential Bee.)

MISS FLOY GILMORE.

Bright Indiana Girl Gets Position as Assistant Attorney General for the Philippines.

Miss Floy V. Gilmore is the new assistant attorney general for the government in the Philippine islands. She is the first woman ever appointed to such an important position. Miss Gilmore is the daughter of A. M. Gilmore, of Elwood, Ind., and is 24 years old. She was graduated from the law school of the University of Michigan, and was admitted to practice at the Indiana bar two years ago.

Miss Gilmore owes her distinction entirely to her ability and ambition. She was clerk and secretary to E. Finley Johnson when he was professor of law at the University of Michigan.

MISS FLOY GILMORE.
(Recently Appointed Assistant Attorney General for the Philippines.)

While thus employed she devoted her spare time to the study of law, and was eventually rewarded with a diploma. Prof. Johnson was appointed a judge in the Philippines in 1901, when the judiciary was first established there, and Miss Gilmore went with him. She took the civil service examination and was appointed a stenographer in the office of the attorney general.

Her marked legal ability attracted the attention of Gov. Taft, who appointed her assistant attorney general. The appointment was unanimously confirmed by the Philippine commission and by the war department. Miss Gilmore's salary as stenographer was $1,400 a year, which is doubled under her new position. Officials from the Philippines say that Miss Gilmore is pretty.

Rats Are Miners' Friends.

An explosion in a Michigan iron mine killed all the rats, and the miners refused to return to work until a fresh supply of rodents was obtained. Rats are regarded as a necessity in these mines, and are known as the miners' friends. They act as scavengers, and give warning of impending danger, thus saving miners' lives. When the rats leave a mine the miners refuse to stay any longer.

NO JUSTICE FOR HIM.

Not Even When He Carried a Bag of Nitroglycerin Into the Judge's Office.

"I am often required to deal with queer individuals in the carrying out of my official duties," explained a local prosecuting officer to a Washington Star reporter. "The latest incident of the sort occurred a day or two ago.

A well-dressed man, carrying a large satchel, was admitted to my private office. He complained that a conspiracy to defraud him out of valuable lands in Louisiana existed, and his desire was that I should prosecute the conspirators. I suggested that he file his complaint at the department of justice, explaining that I had no authority outside of the District of Columbia. But my visitor could not see it that way. He promptly informed me that he had first called at the department of justice, and that the officials there had referred him to me. He added that he did not propose to be bamboozled any further.

"WHAT DO YOU THINK THEY DID?"

"My visitor went on to say that he had entered his complaint before one of the leading judges in Baltimore, but his honor had him ejected from the court room. I was further told by my caller that he proceeded to the sidewalk outside the court house, and assembling a crowd of citizens about him, notified them of what had occurred within and threatened that if they did not assist him in securing his rights from the judge he would drop his satchel, which, he declared, contained a large amount of nitroglycerin, in the midst of the crowd.

"Now, what do you think they did?" my caller inquired of me.

"I told him that I could not guess.

"'Not a blessed thing,' he said.

"During the entire recital the man held his satchel very carefully and kept shoving it in a nervous way. I did not relish the situation, so I pushed an electric button and summoned my messenger. A moment later my visitor and his satchel had been unceremoniously ushered out. I could hear him as he stood in the corridor delivering a harangue on the subject of the impossibility of securing justice in this land of the free."

BAD DAY FOR SNAKES.

Farmer Miller Interrupts Convention of 200 Rattlers and Bags 32 of the Ugly Reptiles.

The man who is not afraid to tackle a bunch of 200 rattlesnakes is R. L. Miller, of Stroudsburg, Pa., according to his own story of an encounter recently, in which he came out victor with the scalps—or rattles, rather—of 32 of the enemy.

Good rattlesnake skins are worth one dollar a copy in the open market, and the snake oil is valued at $16 a pound, as a remedy for a long list of ills which man has inherited from ancestors who had perhaps very little else to leave as a remembrance. Miller discovered these quotations somewhere in the market reports, and at once adopted snake hunting as a profession. He is now looked upon by his neighbors as a man who sees more snakes—real live ones—than any individual in that section of the state.

In speaking of his latest adventure Miller says:

"I had my gun with me when I came across a convention of rattlers with about 200 in close session. I let go with both barrels, and just blew the heads off of 32 of them. One of them had 22 rattles."

The story was backed up by a view of a large box of rattles.

THE CORPSE SAT UP.

Frowsy Andy Smith, a Gentleman of Chicago, Objected to Being Taken to the Morgue.

"Say, there, you fellers, where in thunder are you taking me?" exclaimed an excited individual who was sitting up in a patrol wagon Sunday afternoon near the county morgue, of Chicago.

"Sit down. We are going to put you on ice, you chump," said the only policeman who had not been stricken dumb with surprise. "You are dead."

"Nixie. I am no more dead than you are, and no morgue for 'Frowsy Andy.'"

"Lie down there, as a corpse should," commanded Policeman Fahny.

"Shall I hit him with me club for being 'disorderly?'" asked Officer

Grady, whose hair had begun to resume its normal attitude.

But Andrew Smith, instead of having a hard bed at the morgue, was taken to the Maxwell street police station and given a harder one. Then he went to sleep, and when he awoke he screamed with terror. He remembered the morgue experience, and thought he had been put in it and carried to a cemetery vault.

"The worst scare of my life," said Smith to Justice Dooley. "Thought the cell bars were part of the vault. Guess I did look dead, but I was only sick. If you let me go, your honor, I will be careful not to get sick again."

"We will fine you just $10," replied the magistrate. "That is let go for you even than having had a realistic session at the morgue."

Smith was found apparently lifeless at Canal and West Polk streets. He lives at the Volunteer lodging house, Halsted and West Madison streets.

BIG SNAPPING TURTLE.

It Towed Two Plucky Boys Out on a Voyage on a Jersey Canal, But Was Captured.

A 20-pound snapping turtle was captured in the Morris canal near Butler's fireworks factory, in Jersey City, N. J., by Frank and Christian Goetz, two Greenville boys. The brothers found the turtle asleep on the towpath, and attempted to turn it over on its back with a big stick. The snapper suddenly ran out its head, made a vicious snap at the stick and started for the water.

As the turtle was going into the water Frank Goetz grabbed it by the tail and yelled to Christian to lend a hand. Frank slipped on the towpath and tumbled into the canal. When he reappeared above the surface he still had a firm hold on the turtle's tail.

He knew that he was perfectly safe from the snapper's jaws as long as he didn't lose his grip.

The turtle started up the canal with the boy in tow. Then Christian swam to his brother's assistance. Christian steered clear of the turtle's head, approached it from the rear and grabbed it by the left hind leg.

The turtle and boys floundered around in the water until the brothers managed to touch bottom. Then they found it comparatively easy to drag the reptile out on the bank and turn it over on its back.

When they recovered their breath they carried the turtle home by the tail, and sold it to a saloon keeper.

Unique Card of Thanks.

Many different kinds of cards of thanks have appeared in newspapers, but Oswego, Kan., claims the prize with one from five prisoners in the Labette county jail, who "beg to thank the county for the good meals, kind treatment and compulsory baths."

DETECTED BY THE PARROT.

Little Girl's Tenderness to Pilfer Sweets Checked by an Observant Bird.

There is a parrot living on Tompkins avenue in the vicinity of Gates avenue which should have a place on the detective force, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The little girl living on Gates avenue, near Tompkins, who has been taught by the said parrot that old-time saying, "Honesty is the best policy." It happened in this wise: The parrot on these spring days takes an airing on the fire escape at the back of his home. There is a fire-escape at the back of the little girl's home also, and while the two are quite a distance apart, it is not far enough to hinder the parrot from seeing what goes on or to drown the sound of his voice when he shrieks at its very top, as he sometimes does. A few days ago this little girl's mother stewed some apricots. When they were done she set them on the fire-escape to get cool. The little girl came along while they were cooling. Her mother was nowhere around, and the fruit looked so tempting that she thought she would take "just one." Like Little Jack Horner, she stuck in her thumb and a finger as well, but before she had time to pull out the plum a shrill voice sounded in her ear. "Thief! thief! thief!" was what it said. The child's fondness for apricots disappeared suddenly and the parrot had the satisfaction of knowing that he had interfered just in time.

WATER ON RAILWAY TRAINS.

Source of Frequent Infection Which Has Escaped the Notice of Sanitarians.

The drinking water furnished by the railways—who knows anything about it? What are the regulations of the different companies as to its purity, and the cleansing of the tanks and coolers in railway waiting rooms, cars, refreshment rooms? In the presence of the great fatality of typhoid fever and the recent increase of the disease all over the country the foregoing question seems very apropos. Certainly the transportation companies do not generally furnish their patrons with boiled, filtered or spring water, and just as certainly the water furnished by most of our cities, especially Chicago and Philadelphia, is contaminated and dangerous. One constantly notices the engineer or fireman drinking from the tank of the tender, and the men who handle the freight trains, the station agents all along the road—is there any attempt, is there any company that makes any serious and thorough guard over them to supply these employes with pure water? asks American Medicine. Whose business is it to see that the railways do their duty in this respect? Can any of our readers tell us what laws have been passed or what regulations of city and state governments, and of boards of health, exist concerning this important subject? Have we not here a source of frequent infection which has too much escaped the attention of sanitarians?

SAULT STE. MARIE TROUT.

There Are Some Giants That May Be Caught Only in the Early Spring.

In the early spring suckers in immense schools run up from St. Mary's river, between Lakes Superior and Huron, into the small streams that come in on both sides of the river, and there deposit their spawn. They are followed by brook trout in droves, and among them are specimens larger than can be found anywhere else in the northwest, says the New York Sun.

These trout wait for the sucker spawn, and leave the upper waters of the streams when the spawning of those fish is over. While following the suckers they furnish rare sport to the angler, and catches with five and six pounders among them have been made.

By the end of May the trout have returned to the deep pools and to the St. Mary's river, and the large ones will not rise to the fly again during the season. Now and then a big one will be tempted by an attractive minnow on the hook, and a small white troll, without feathers on it, often proves a good killer to them. The smaller trout, however, continue to give excellent sport to the angler all through the season.

Men the More Emotional.

Miss Helen Bradford Thompson, director of the psychological laboratory at Mount Holoyke College for Women, in a work entitled "Mental Traits of Sex," argues that men are more emotional than women, as well as being superior in physical strength and inventiveness. Miss Thompson's experiments were made at the University of Chicago during two years, and the subjects were 25 young men and 25 young women students.

Cable to Russia.

Wireless telegraphy will have to compete with ocean cables for some time to come. A company has recently been organized to lay a cable from Seattle to Valdez, Alaska, and thence to Vladivostok. The cable will bring Asiatic Russia and the gold fields of Alaska into close communication with the markets of the United States, and expand the interest of Americans in the orient.

Trees In the City.

As the earth was packed round the roots of a tree planted in front of a school on Arbor day last month a little girl exclaimed: "Why, New York'll soon be a woods if we children keep on!" The interest of the children of the crowded city districts in green and growing things is pathetic and Arbor day has done as much for them as for the rural districts.

EXCITING DOG FIGHT.

Both the Canines Were Held in Thein Owners' Arms While Scrap Was Going On.

A thousand or more women shoppers witnessed a dog fight between a brindle bull and a stylish but saucy fox terrier in the afternoon on West Twenty-third street, just off Fifth avenue, New York.

Mrs. Eleanor Sedley, of 127 East Thirty-first street, the owner of the bull, tried to separate the combatants, and the terrier resented the interference by burying his teeth in her thumb.

Mrs. Sedley had completed her shopping and was passing out to her carriage with her pet brindle under her arm. A tall brunette with a little terrier coddled to her bosom had just alighted from a hansom. As the women passed each other the dogs gave a simultaneous growl and snapped. The bulldog caught the terrier by an ear, but the little fellow's aim was more accurate. He plunged his teeth into the other's throat and held on.

"Let go! Let go!" cried the owners of the dogs, each slapping the other's pet with her gloved hand. The gloves, of course, burst. The slaps egged on the dogs. They squirmed until they had freed themselves, and once on the sidewalk attacked each other with increased energy. The shouts and screams of the women attracted Policemen Cronin and Sullivan.

"Lave me at thim," said Sullivan, as he stepped forward and tried to pry the dogs apart with his night stick. He poked the club down the brindle's throat.

"Oh, don't hurt Fido," cried Mrs. Sedley. It was the opinion of the crowd, too, that Fido was getting the worst of the encounter.

The terrier's owner could not see it in that light. "Beat the ugly thing on the head," she said to the officer.

The women glared savagely at each other, and then reached down and gave another tug at the dogs. The terrier loosened his hold on his adversary only to transfer his hold to Mrs. Sedley's thumb. She shrieked.

The bulldog, having enough, released his hold also, and Mrs. Sedley picked him up, got into her carriage and drove off to the hospital.

OLD MAN'S LAST MASH.

After This Experience the Governor Gave Up Feasting His Eyes on Fair Young Things.

A handsome gentleman of 60, who looks much younger and still retains an eye for the beautiful in the fair sex and a tender fluttering of the heart when the ladies glance his way, got into a street car in company with his son, a grown young man. A striking feature of the elderly gallant is an extremely long and full goatee and big, flowing mustaches.

"HE TOOK YOU FOR A GOAT."

The gentleman found a seat directly opposite two unusually attractive young ladies, immediately beside whom the son found his seat.

In a few moments, says the New York Times, the girls were glancing often at the old gentleman and chattering together in great glee. The gentleman hugged himself mentally, but restrained his emotions in presence of his son. On leaving the car the son said:

"Say, governor, I've got a good one on you."

"Well, what is it, my son?"

"Why, one of those girls next to me said: 'What a funny looking thing that old man is over there.' To which the other one replied: 'Yes, isn't he? He looks like a goat!'"

That was the old man's last "mash."

OLD CARTER WINDMILL.

A Reminder of Revolutionary Times Which Is Calculated to Teach a Lesson in Patriotism.

Silas Carter's mill, which was erected in 1832 at what is now known as Windmill Point, on the Canadian shore of Lake Erie, opposite the city of Buffalo, still stands as reminder of the period when life's duties were more complicated than at present for residents of the middle west. In an interesting sketch of that period the Four-Track News tells of the building of the old mill, and relates something of the experience of its builder.

When the call for volunteers came in 1775 Silas Carter was too young to carry a musket in the service of his country, but could handle a horse, and to him was granted the privilege of acting as teamster for Gen. Washington. Later on he took up the more exciting duties of a soldier, and served until the end of the war. When the question was settled, he went to Canada and established a home. The ground was fertile enough, but the population was scattering and the nearest mill was a long distance from Carter's farm. For a long time he and his neighbors used hand-mills furnished by the government, but the method was too slow and arduous for Carter, and he persuaded the neighbors to assist him in erecting the mill, after harvesting time, 1832.

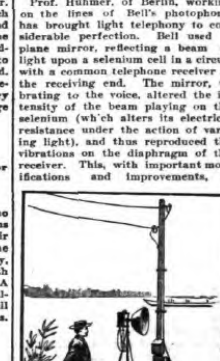
The mill has long ceased to be utilized for the grinding of the grain, and its "wings" have long ceased to exist, but the walls still remain as an attraction for visitors, who admire the antique and the picturesque.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY.

German Professor Has Solved the Problem of Conversing Plainly on a Ray of Light.

Prof. Huhmer, of Berlin, working on the lines of Bell's photophone, has brought light telephony to considerable perfection. Bell used a plane mirror, reflecting a beam of light upon a selenium cell in a circuit with a common telephone receiver at the receiving end. The mirror, vibrating to the voice, altered the intensity of the beam playing on the selenium (which alters its electrical resistance under the action of varying light), and thus reproduced the vibrations on the diaphragm of the receiver. This, with important modifications and improvements, is



THE RECEIVING STATION.
(Cut Shows the Selenium Cell and the Parabolic Mirror.)

Ruhmer's method. The great merit of his invention is that it is now possible to telephone without wires in the daytime. Other advantages are that messages can be sent more rapidly than at present, that replies to the messages can be sent instantaneously, and that perfect secrecy is insured. The German government has placed $10,000 at the disposal of the inventor for further experiments.

Ruhmer sought to make the Bell system of commercial value, and was aided by two important original discoveries. He found that selenium is sensitive to other than red and yellow rays, and also that by increasing the size of his mirror he could increase the distance at which the message could be audible. During his experiments on the Wannsee, Berlin, the inventor first succeeded in sending his messages a mile; afterward he spoke to a distance of nine miles.

Arctic Region Is Healthy.

Robert E. Peary, the explorer, says that the Arctic region is one of the best places in the world for persons afflicted with pulmonary diseases. In proof of its salubrious conditions, he declares that nearly everybody who went there with him came back well and big more and is a much better state of health generally.

APPLAUDED HIMSELF.

Senator Reed Smoot Tells a Capital Joke of Which He Was the Sole Victim.

Although Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, resided in Washington less than a fortnight, during the recent session, he did not escape the anecdote craze. The scene of the best story he told was laid in the southern part of the Mormon state, which is settled largely by Scandinavians.

According to the chroniclers, Mr. Smoot is not much of a politician, nor yet a Daniel Webster, when it comes to oratory. He was assigned by his republican central committee, therefore, to deliver his maiden effort before the foreigners in a southern Utah village. His advent had been widely heralded, and the hall in which the meeting was to be held was crowded with Swedish farmers when Mr. Smoot turned on his eloquence.

The applause was not all that he had expected. Only one person, an old man on the front row, seemed exceptionally interested. He applauded wildly, laughed at all the speaker's jokes, and manifested every sign of excited appreciation.

After Mr. Smoot had finished, his enthusiastic auditor arose to speak. Feeling grateful, the senator determined to show his appreciation in like manner. The old man's remarks were entirely in Swedish, which was, to Mr. Smoot, denser than Greek, but, not to be outdone, Mr. Smoot followed the inflection of the speaker's voice, and whenever the thought a climax was reached, led the applause wildly.

"I cheered and stamped on the floor in a most undignified manner," said Mr. Smoot, in relating the story, "and I was at a loss to understand the curious looks centered upon me. Finally a man sitting behind leaned forward and inquired if I understood the speaker.

"'Not a word,' I confessed, 'but it's a good speech, isn't it?'

"'Well,' he replied, 'you may be interested to know that he's translating your speech. None of these people understand English.'"

WOMEN CONQUER TRAMP.

Chicago Hobo, Who Asked Police Protection, Is Given a Fine of Fifty Dollars.

the witnesses had told of the manner in which he came under the displeasure of the law.

Klein knocked at the rear door of the home of Mrs. Mary Everett, 10,028 Avenue M, early in the morning and asked for money. Mrs. Everett offered him a slice of bread and butter, which Klein rejected and kicked the housewife in the side. She screamed and Mrs. John Schneider, who lives in the same building, came to the rescue.

Mrs. Schneider bounced a broom off Klein's head a few times. Klein drew a knife and stabbed her in the arm and fled. The screams of the victims had attracted a large number of women of the neighborhood and they pursued the tramp, who grew more terror-stricken at every jump.

Just as he was ready to faint he ran into the arms of a policeman and begged to be protected from his pursuers. The women told their story and the bluecoat carried Tramp Klein off to a cell.

WHAT IS WORN.

Elaborate Linen Costumes—Collarless Gowns the Fad.

Ankle length linen costumes are trimmed with medallions and embroidery, but are otherwise made in severe tailor style.

Collarless gowns are the fad of the moment in demitoilette. The high collar seems to have entirely given way except in cases where the neck is too thin to be shown.

Hats with high crowns are becoming more and more popular, and these are very smart for dressy occasions when made of white lace or black chip and trimmed with handsome ostrich feathers.

Sailor costumes of blue serge and white linen are the smart thing for seashore wear. They are made with habit back skirts laced after the fashion of a sailor's trousers.

A great deal of clunsy lace is being used even for fine gowns, in which case it is embellished with silk embroidery or chiffon motifs.

The favorite material of the hour for practical use is the linon de soie. This is a new, soft make of linen, or a compromise between a linon and a canvas. It can be had in black and all sorts of charming light shades, sometimes plain and sometimes spotted. It is light and cool and possesses the enormous advantage of not being easily creased.

Some charming little coats in biscuit and black cloth have revers, collars and cuffs of very bright colored plaids, lined with gay hued silks. Many of the traveling wraps have plaid capuchins.

An elaborate sack coat of lace and white taffeta is shown in the illustration. It is worn over a gown of Irish lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SMART HEAD GEAR.

Very Wide, Flat Hats—Picture Hats. Dark Brims.

The very wide and flat hats are not by any means universally becoming. Worn in connection with the wide pelerines, they are apt to dwarf the figure.

Most of the large shapes and the ordinary models are of the wide, flat, improved sailor shape, simply trimmed with a wreath of flowers. They have all the chic of elegant simplicity and suit a piquant French face, but the real artist viewing them from the side and back will find the lines a trifle hard.

WHITE LEGHORN HAT.

The picture hat is mostly of the shepherdess type, and this is very becoming to round, babyish faces, but absolutely at variance with hard, strongly marked features. There is little variety in this class of hat or gown unless we take to the Gainsboroughs and Romney shapes at high prices.

There is always a certain amount of danger when pale colors are worn on the head, such as green, mauve, etc.; they may be beautiful in themselves, but they are trying even to pretty faces and good complexions. This is one reason why dark brims are so much seen.

The continued ubiquity of the bolero is one of the unexpected events of fashion. There is completely in evidence for summer frocks a pointed handkerchief shaped bolero, a rather close fitting affair about the shoulders, and very often privileged to tell its elegant story in lace.

The cut shows a tilted hat of white leghorn trimmed with yellow roses.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

LATE SUMMER DRESSES.

Designs That Will Be Popular—Some Bathing Suit Materials.

Things are rather quiet in the stores just now, because the stock which was meant to be offered for sale as soon as the first of the warm weather gowns had lost their novelty has not been disposed of, owing to the belated opening of the heated season. As a result nothing of startling originality may be shown for some little time. Still the eyes do not weary altogether of the dainty creations offered to the saintly woman—for dollars and cents.

From two private letters from the very hatching place of new styles in Paris I learn that forms and shapes and general outlines for fall will differ but slightly from those of today, the novelties being more in the finish and trimming than in the design. This is because women have found themselves so very charming in the present styles and fashions. If any marked difference will be made it will be in the way of wearing the hair and in bonnets, both so fashioned as to give a quaint and old time air in keeping with the old English lettering now so fashionable in newspapers.

The coiffure shows a leaning toward the plain bandelettes, with side puffs and high coil at the back with a tortoise shell comb of astonishing dimensions. That is to say, the assertion made above must be taken with the proviso that that special kind of hairdressing is becoming to the individuals.

Otherwise there will be modifications, most all the flounced dress skirts with their wide bertha capes will be modified to suit the wearer. The flounced skirt is shown in one imported model, a suit of fine broadcloth in a bluish gray, the flounces being four in number, stitched twice around the edge and cut on the bias. Indeed, I think they must have been slightly shaped, they hung so perfectly. The bodice was an innovation, being a basque in shape, with two of the ruffles around the bottom, one a little longer than the other. The shoulders were long and drooping, with what in the time of the Empress Eugenie were called bretelles. These are wider at the point of the shoulder than at the bottom, back or front, and in that way add to the apparent width of the drooping shoulders. The finish of this suit was exquisite, and it is expected that it will be a leader in tailored gowns.

The blouse form in fall gowns will not be forgotten, and many of the most elegant of those very useful costumes will have the blouse, a short and natty jacket, with a vest of the same material with the edges neatly embroidered, or a shirt waist of glossy taffeta to match or else contrast vividly with the suit. Valle mesh suits with fronts like Monte Carlo coats and folded boleros are among the things certain to enjoy a run of popularity during the fall as well as the late summer. This voile is strong and yet flexible, and it drapes beautifully. The recognized way of making the voile is to have tucks in shape it to the figure and have a drop skirt of silk or of the beautiful mercerized cotton satteens or of one of the mercerized imitation silks, made also of cotton. Blessings on the man that invented this fabric of inexpensive goods, which has the property of making them handsome as silk and more durable! Let us hope that he has lived to reap some advantages of his invention. Few inventors do.

In some of the best stores we find that there has been an unusually intelligent movement in the way of getting underskirts so that they are adapted to show up the form of the outer dress and to give just the right amount of flare for all the dress skirts of fall and the coming season have the flared edges. These skirts are made of moreen, which is an old friend of satin, of silk, and of the many mercerized cotton goods. They are cut on the same model as the outer skirt and close in front or at the side. The necessary shape is given by having the first flounce set on high, with another gathered to this and still another added below, these flounces of the additional ones are set around the bottom. All these ruffles are tucked, and many have featherbone piping run in, which sets them out better, without hindering the laundering if occasion requires.

This moreen stuff is a material well known to our great-grandmothers and is rather harsh to the touch, but is so made that it looks like the best velours. It is quite extensively employed this season in making dressing gowns, as it is comparatively cheap and stands out well from the body. True, all the moire effect dissolves in the waves, but the stiff, wiry weave makes it good for this purpose. There is some diversity of opinion as to the best kind of dressy goods, some liking wool and some preferring silk, but the very best are of a material which is a mixture of silk and wool, woven very closely. Mohrose and silk warp henriettes are the next best after these, but as this list is so expensive few would care to buy it for this purpose. However, little is required for a bathing suit.

BREEDING SELFISHNESS.

How Parental Considerateness Spells a Host of Children.

"What a selfish little beast that boy is!"

Every one agreed.

Even his mother shook her head sadly and remarked: "It is the one fault Charley has. He never will stop to think of other people."

But what amused me and made me perhaps a trifle indignant was that every one seemed to think it was the child's fault—that it was a part of him quite as much as his stammer and the way that he walked.

What nonsense!

Don't we receive the little mind fresh and fair as an unwritten page, and, if we do not actually write upon it, don't we guide or push the baby fingers which hold the recording pen? Stop and think, fond mother, and you will see how every baby fault had its start under your unwatchful eye, and in nine cases out of ten it was owing to some unwise action of yours, not the child's.

Now, take the little boy under discussion. I have seen him run into the room and take the best chair. That was only natural. But, when poor grandmamma came in, did he get up and give the old lady the comfortable seat? Not a bit of it. Now, there was her chance—there was the mother's chance. Either of them might have taught him in a nice way the doctrine of courtesy and unselfishness. Instead of that, here is what happened: Grandmamma mildly sat down in a straight cane chair quite as if it were the proper order of things. Now, can you blame the boy? He didn't even realize he was doing anything out of the way. 'Why should he? Every one seemed to take it as a matter of course. It was the same way when mother deprived herself in order that he might have her dessert; plus his own, when the whole feminine portion of the household gave in to his wants and inconvenienced itself for his pleasure.

There you have your selfish boy!

Blame him? Blame the parents! The most generous man living, the greatest philanthropist, would be a mere selfish brute if he had been brought up in that way.

WHAT WOMEN EAT.

They Are Very Fond of Sweets and Fresh Fruit.

Dietary experts who have been inquiring into the food eaten by the average woman have found that she eats four-fifths as much food as the average man, besides having an overpowering taste for sweet things and for butter.

Women eat less meat than men do, but are more fond of salads and soups. It has been observed also that if a woman can obtain plenty of fresh fruit she will keep her craving for sweets within reasonable limits.

The use and discovery of health foods have done much more for women than for men, as they take more kindly to this nourishment, and it usurps the place of meat, which many women do not care for.

Nothing is better than fresh fruit both for the nerves and the complexion, and the wise woman will breakfast mainly on this.

Eggs are very bad for women who are troubled with delicate skins, and milk should never be an article of diet with the bilious woman.

Clear soups, rare meats, salads, fruits and cereals make the best complexions as well as figures, for it was discovered some time ago that the question of plumpness or thinness is not so much a matter of quantity as of quality. The wise woman is she who observes herself and gives her system the food it craves.

The Girl Who Is Loved.

Her features may or may not be good, her complexion perhaps leaves something to be desired, but her sweet, true eyes and her kindly heart make her friends forget any physical shortcomings that she may have, and wherever she goes she is as welcome as the sunshine.

Her charm is in her freshness and her naturalness. She is sweet and unaffected, unspoiled by society's conventionalities. She is on the lookout for the good that is in the world. Somehow she always finds it. People seem to be at their best in her presence, and, though she knows that the world has its ugly, nasty side, she escapes personal contact with it.

She is simple and honest, and people who are tired of the shams and hollowness of society delight in her.

THE NEW WOMAN

Her Fads and Foibles

A MAN fell into ill health and could no longer attend to his manufacturing enterprises. His lady wife resolved to do it for him. Looking at herself admiringly in the mirror she said to herself, "I'll be a business woman." Then she proceeded to "play smash," so to speak. She hired a set of offices, furnished them like a lady's parlor, tea boudoir and put her office boys into livery. She imported from England a lady for manager of the office, there being apparently no young woman in America sufficiently up in the etiquette of the situation to undertake the task. The English young woman took charge. Her idea and that of the lady who employed her were evidently to run an ironworkers' shop on the esthetic social basis. An important customer was desirous of getting a large order filled immediately. It was necessary for him to see the manager. That lady, with the intention of showing him how things were done over the water, consequently in exactly the right way, made an appointment with him to meet her in her esthetic office at a certain date. To keep it he had to travel a considerable distance, but his business was important, so he made the engagement. He appeared at the esthetic office at the hour appointed. Mendals ushered him through several rooms into the esthetically draped pink tea sanctum of the lady manager. He waited half an hour. Nobody came. He waited a while longer, then sent one of the liveried pages in quest of the manager. After considerably more time she came in, impatience and annoyance written upon her high toned brow. She did not ask her customer to sit down. He reminded her that she herself had made the appointment and requested him to meet her at that hour. "Oh, I can't see you. I can't stop to talk to you at all!" said this business woman. "We are to have company at the house and I must go home and make the salad." Was this like a woman, or was it not?

All the human race is yet in the rudimentary state of moral and intellectual development, but sometimes woman appears to be particularly so. A lady, a club woman who wears beautiful clothes, was called as witness in a lawsuit which, let us say, Mr. White brought against Mr. Black. The club lady who wears beautiful clothes and believes in the superior elevating moral tone of womanhood gave evidence on the side of Black. She declared under her solemn oath that certain statements which White's lawyer, after the trial was ended this club lady, talking over the case with White's lawyer, said, "But why didn't Mr. White make me an offer before I testified?"

Isn't it about time for preachers and other men to stop howling at women concerning the increase of divorces and begin to instruct men on the importance of behaving themselves in such a way that women will not need to get divorces? Man's misdeeds, in nine cases out of ten, force women to sue for divorce; then male moralists turn and berate women for it. Queer world this.

So many inventions have been made and patented in the departments of the household and of women's apparel, so many inventions have been made by ladies themselves, that a promising field is now open for the woman patent attorney and expert. All this is what one might expect from the daughters of a new woman.

Not long ago, when it was proposed in the Illinois legislature to grant a status to Miss Frances Willard, one of the wise superior sex that governs women rose to speak in opposition to the bill. He said he was emphatically against the proposition because Frances Willard was "no fit descendant of honor than a thousand other mothers." How much some lawmakers do know!

SELF CONSCIOUS

Sad Lot of the Girl Who Always Thinks of Herself

"I PITY her and yet I wouldn't have her around for anything—not at any merrymaking of my giving certainly," said the society woman.

"What is she like?"

"Why, don't you know? She is the girl who is always thinking of herself."

"The selfish girl, you mean?"

"Not at all. She may be the most generous hearted girl alive, but she is always, even unconsciously, painfully conscious of herself."

"But how does she show it?"

"Oh, when you tell her incidents from your life she is always mentally comparing them with her own. And when you show her your new gowns she compares them inch for inch with hers. When she goes out into society—which isn't often after people find out about her—unless she is the center of everything she sits and mopes. She calls it 'not feeling well,' and then retires early with a headache."

"Is she good at sports?"

"Not at all. She is too self conscious to do anything with grace. She is always thinking, 'What will people say?' The result is she fooxies at golf, dances stiffly, makes mistakes, is absent minded at cards and bungles at the piano. In a word, she is never spontaneous, free and natural, as a girl should be."

"She can talk about herself, I suppose?"

"Yes, but not in a conceited way. She is always excusing herself and blaming her timidity, her hard life, etc. Her life becomes one perpetual apology and one long succession of failures."

"Is she vain?"

"No, but she gets the credit of being so. There isn't a mirror she passes that she doesn't glance into on the sly—not to admire herself, but to be sure she isn't coming to pieces. If she isn't quizzing her clothes she is busy with a hand mirror seeing if her teeth are not loose or assuring herself that a mole is not coming on the end of her nose."

"That is it always the poor girl's fault?"

"No; it is primarily that of her parents. Of a naturally timid disposition, she probably had either a very accomplished and brilliant or a very timid mother. Both would be equally exacting and both would keep nagging her—one timidly, the other severely. 'Mary don't attempt to drive if you can't turn that corner properly.' 'Mary, you can't play well enough on the piano to do so before all these people.' 'Mary, don't get up and dance in the hotel ball room before all these people. I noticed a woman smiling because you jerk so.' And so forth and so on until little by little Mary develops into that most pitiable object—the self conscious girl."

SHE LOOKS INTO EVERY MIRROR.

Wedding Etiquette.

A bride should either thank personally or write notes to all people who send wedding presents.

At present it is considered in better taste to have brown or bay horses for the bride's carriage than gray ones.

The custom of having groomsmen is equal numbers with the bridesmaids has been revived of late.

If there are any pages the bride usually gives them presents, while the bridegroom presents each bridesmaid with a present of bouquet and also gives a bouquet to the bride's mother.

Bridesmaids pay for their own dresses unless the bride's mother offers to do so. This is not usual, however, and there is not the least necessity for her to do so.

The bridegroom's mother is led down the church after the ceremony by the bride's father or whoever gave her away. The bride's mother and the bridegroom's father follow.

The bridegroom provides house and table linen as well as furniture. Years ago the linen was the bride's care, but all this is changed.

A bridegroom usually wears a very dark coat or black frock coat, light trousers, generally gray, a light or white tie, patent leather shoes and a high hat.

Keep always in mind what John Wesley said: "All generous souls count the absent with the dead in their decreasements."

A GIRL'S SUCCESS.

How Louise Dodge Managed a Musical Festival.

Southern girls go north for the same purpose, and also attain the goal of their quest. It is a good blending of the people at the geographical poles of this nation. It makes them know each other better, consequently like each other better. Girls make admirable messengers of peace and good will.

A few years ago a northern girl of the best type, Louise Frances Dodge, removed to Florida. Her parents had settled there some time before, her father being a Presbyterian minister and in charge of a congregation near Tampa. The daughter tarried behind to complete her education, which she did at the University of Michigan, after being graduated from the normal department of the University of Nashville. At Ann Arbor she was one of the editors of the college daily, which, though she did not know it, was the breaking in for the work that was before her.

After leaving college she joined her parents in Florida, where, as she says, she "began writing of things in which I was especially interested—toward the upbuilding of the state." Rather an unusual subject for a girl to be interested in, that was. But in the Dodge family is an ancient patent of land rights given to one of her ancestors, who was a brigadier in the Revolution and the friend of Washington. The document says the patent was issued to General Ebenezer Learned, "who did valiant service for the public good and encouraged his heirs and successors to continue in like virtue and noble conduct."

Continuing in like virtue and noble conduct, therefore, his great-great-granddaughter became very early interested in the public welfare. Her girlish ideas on the "upbuilding of the state" were published in a Florida newspaper. Girlish though they were, they spoke the power and spirit of the woman. Awhile after she wrote them Miss Dodge went to Tampa to visit friends, and while there she was invited to become a member of the staff of a daily paper—and there she is at present.

Technically Miss Dodge's post is that of society editor of her paper, but she has broadened her mission till it includes all that goes to the bettering and beautifying of Tampa and that part of Florida. This is what newspaper women and all other women in America might do and ought to do in their respective localities, but too often do not.

Miss Dodge became society editor of the paper some two years ago and at once felt that on her it was incumbent to give good justification to all the people of Tampa for her selection. She widened the duties of her society editor to take in the schools and public institutions of Tampa. She founded a musical club and an art club. She herself is a singer of fine gifts.

Part of the labor of love she imposed on herself was to visit personally the Tampa schools and report items concerning them that interested the public in their progress. She made a tour of the schools about once every six weeks during all the last school year.

The largest of her undertakings, however, were the planning and successful carrying through of a Tampa May musical festival. Tampa needed an orphans' home. Miss Dodge resolved to start a fund for its establishment. To this end was the musical festival. It lasted through three days, and Miss Dodge arranged its programme and every detail and managed it herself. The exercises included a children's concert, an old folks' concert and a military and minstrel matinee. It was the first May musical festival Tampa had ever given, and it went off with a whirl. At its close, when all its affairs were settled, Miss Dodge laid down several hundred dollars as a starter for the orphans' home fund. Considering the size of Tampa, this was an admirable result.

Then the young lady dropped back into the public spirited society editor. But the people of Tampa appreciate so well her good work for them that they cannot speak too highly in her praise. Miss Dodge has now in hand a project for the erection of a free drinking fountain for her city.

She says modesty of herself that she is not so much literary as interested in public affairs and that she was drawn to newspaper work primarily because it offered so many opportunities for being widely useful.

Clever Imitations of Silk—Up to Date Bathing Suits.

Some of the empiorics and sateens with the mercerized finish have almost the effect of silk, and when they are smartly trimmed with lace they still further carry out the illusion.

Muslins are elaborately made with lace and inserted on silk, but many of the organdie and figured muslins are lined with batiste, the lining being made up with the muslins.

Pink, red and blue serge are seen this year as well as cream, black and red brilliantines. "Rosy" crash, or linen even, is by no means unsuitable, and very effective costumes are shown in blue linen trimmed with white braid, and in rose color with fast dye black braid. Natural crash with red braid is extremely smart, but to prove becoming to the wearer requires a clear brunette skin which does not redden with exposure.

Blue serge of the thin, silky type makes a charming bathing suit, and when the knickerbockers are well gored at the top and set into a deep band this keeps the figure shapely beneath. Where the figure is likely to bound a knitted corset is admirable or a long bodice of coutil which laces up the front.

The picture shows a muslin gown trimmed with fancy stitching and silk lace insertion.

This was worn with an all red flat sailor hat. It was very fresh and dainty. The same model was copied in green, finished with a mauve glace waistband.

A pretty dinner gown seen recently had a waist of accordion plaited mousseline de soie, with a bolero of guipure lace spotted with large chenille. This formed a panel down the plaited skirt, which was finished with full frills of the mousseline. It was worn with a cape of the same fabric finely kilted and trimmed with lace and a big ship hat adorned with one plume.

The gown in the illustration is of plaited tulle trimmed with rose petals.

B. F. STRAUSS A BIGAMIST?

Real Wife in This City Makes Shocking Discovery of Infidelity.

HE IS NOT TO BE FOUND

Much Married Man the Father of Two Esteemed Children Living Here—What Baldwin F. Strauss, Jr., Has to Say.

According to the New York World, three wives and thirteen children are accredited to Baldwin F. Strauss, a well-known lawyer and politician in the Borough of Brooklyn, and an erstwhile resident of this city, who disappeared several months ago after complaints had been made against him by several of his clients, according to legal documents that have just been filed in the Supreme Court of Kings County by Mrs. Margueritte M. Strauss, who claims the distinction of being No. 3 on the list of wives. She seeks a decree of absolute divorce on the ground of her husband's relations with Ida M. Perkins who claims to be Mrs. Strauss No. 1 by virtue of a marriage entered into in the latter seventies or early eighties.

The World says:

"Baldwin F. Strauss was for many years one of the best-known members of the bar in the old city of Brooklyn, counsel for its Health Department, and at one time an active candidate for a nomination as Justice of the Supreme Court.

"Since Mr. Strauss's disappearance from home on April 26 last his wife has been unable to learn anything of his whereabouts, and, as a final resort, placed her case in the hands of Lawyer Francis William Russell, of 63 Park row, who will apply to Justice D. Cady Herrick on Monday morning in the supreme Court of Brooklyn for an order for the service by publication on Mr. Strauss of the summons in his wife's action for an absolute divorce. Mr. Russell will also ask for an order directing Mr. Strauss to pay his wife $100 a week alimony pending the trial of her action and a counsel of $1,000.

"Mrs. Margueritte M. Strauss, the plaintiff, is a member of an old and wealthy Brooklyn family and is independently rich. She had known Mr. Strauss since she was a child, for he is twenty-two years her senior, and had been the attorney both for her grandfather and her father.

"Summarized, the situation is this: In 1890 Mr. Strauss met Ida M. Perkins, wife No. 1. Four children were born to them, of whom Baldwin F. Strauss, Jr., of Plainfield, is the eldest and is now married. A year or so later Mr. Strauss met and wooed Estelle Ainsworth and married her. Three children were born to them—all boys, and Mr. Strauss, who at that time maintained a handsome establishment in London as well as in Brooklyn, had them educated there."

"On April 26," says Mrs. Strauss No. 3, "my husband informed me that he had trouble with a lady client over money matters and was going to his mother's house. I have never seen him since. He left all his papers in my custody and gave me blank substitutions and other papers. Upon going through his papers I found photographs of Ida M. Perkins and letters and papers disclosing the double life he had been leading."

"Baldwin F. Strauss, his wife, Ida M. Perkins Strauss, and his two surviving children of that marriage—Baldwin F. Strauss, Jr., and Florence Strauss—have resided in Plainfield, N. J., since September, 1900. On April 26 of this year Baldwin F. Strauss left Plainfield after telling his wife and family that he was in trouble over a former client, and has not been seen since.

"Strauss first appeared in Plainfield in September, 1900, when he leased from L. E. Bartalow, of No. 38 Lincoln place, the handsome house and grounds at the corner of Lincoln place and Grove street. He moved in with his wife and family.

"We never had any suspicion that Mr. Strauss's matrimonial relations were other than absolutely correct," said Mr. Bartalow yesterday, "until along in 1901, when he was arrested and placed in Raymond Street Jail for failing to pay the requisite alimony to Stella Ainsworth-Strauss. This created some talk, but Mr. Strauss explained it as a technicality and his neighbors let it go at that. Finally I had some trouble regarding he rent, and insisted that, inasmuch as Mr. Strauss kept a coachman, horses and carriages, he should pay me, and finally I had to request him to vacate, he still owing me $100 or more for rent.

"We never heard of a Margueritte M. Strauss claiming to be his wife, although it was known that he was frequently away from home for long periods of time, but it was supposed to be due to his political and professional relations in Brooklyn.

"Investigation disclosed that Mr. Strauss after leaving the Grove street mansion moved several times, finally locating at No. 215 East Fifth street, near Watchung avenue. Here Mrs. Ida M. Perkins-Strauss, her married son, Baldwin F. Strauss, Jr., and her daughter, Florence, are now residing.

Mrs. Perkins-Strauss was away from home last night when a World representative, called, but Baldwin F. Strauss, Jr., the missing man's son, said:

"It is all too true. We have had detectives searching for my father ever since his disappearance, but have been unable to find him. We are aware that Margueritte Strauss claims to be the lawful wife of my father, but my mother has a prior claim. She was duly married to him by a priest in a Roman Catholic Church in 1880. We never heard of the existence of Stella Ainsworth-Strauss until my father was arrested for non-payment of alimony.

"My mother, my sister and I have learned that it was no unusual thing for my father to have all three of his wives in his office at one and the same time, and they absolutely in ignorance of the fact of the relation each held to him. I remember one occasion in particular, when I was present, in which my mother was in his inner private office, Stella Strauss was in the adjoining private office, and Marguerite Strauss was in the anteroom, and he coolly drew checks to the order of each, gave two of them to his clerk, handed one to my mother, and told him for heaven's sake to get rid of the two women outside."

AGED STAGE DRIVER VICTIM OF GANGRENE

Samuel D. Hedden Expires at His Home on Duer Street, North Plainfield.

A LIFELONG RESIDENT

DRIVER FOR LAING'S HOTEL HERE MANY YEARS AGO.

Brother of Albert Hedden—Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes to Officiate at Funeral—Interment in the M. E. Cemetery.

Samuel D. Hedden, the first stage driver in this city and one of the early settlers in this locality, died at 11 o'clock Saturday night at his home at No. 5 Duer street. Death was due to gangrene, the result of his foot being frozen last winter.

The deceased was seventy years of age and had lived here all his life. His birthplace was near the old Coonrod Neal property on West Front street, which was recently dismantled. He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss Ann Stewart, of Washingtonville. She was the daughter of the Somerset county judge, William R. Stewart, who was at one time a member of the Legislature. The story of his early life is interesting.

When John Laing kept the hotel at the present site of the Masonic building Hedden was the stage driver for him. At that time there was only one track on the railroad and a stage line connected with Somerville, Bound Brook, New Brunswick and Elizabethport.

When on his way from Morristown and other places he would be intrusted with large sums of money by the farmers to be deposited in this city. He carried in a secret place in his back on many occasions as much as several thousand dollars. He was never molested and the money was always safely carried to its destination. He was well-known by traveling men all through this section of the State.

The house in which he lived was one of the first erected in Duer street. At one time he and seven brothers lived here. Two of these, Amos and Jacob Hedden, are now dead. The others are Albert Hedden, liveryman; Joel D. Hedden, painter; Ephraim R. Hedden, blacksmith and William Hedden, painter.

ALIS TEAM SHUT OUT BY WESTFIELD NINE

Big Crowd Watches Battle Resulting in a Score of Four to Nothing.

HOPE BOYS VANQUISHED

ST. MARY'S WINS IN AN UPHILL GAME BY SCORE OF 10 TO 6.

Umpire Chillum Pleases Rooters at Recreation Park—Britt-Martin's Costly Error at St. Mary's Diamond—Detailed Scores.

ALIS SHUT OUT.

Fortune smiled on Manager Denman's "colts" Saturday afternoon, when the Alis team crossed bats with them at Recreation Park, Westfield, and the aggregation from the Queen City went down by a final score of 4 to 0. It was the first shut out this season for the Plainfield boys and their friends and supporters returned home somewhat sad in heart. There is little satisfaction, however, in the fact that Westfield did not earn a single run. In the entire game Westfield secured seven single hits off "Warry" MacLaughlin.

Alis made eight hits off "Red" Waller, every man getting a hit but Henriques, while Gormley and Page each got two. It was impossible for the Alis boys to bunch hits and this helped considerably to defeat them. Westfield scored a run in the first inning, another in the third and two in the eighth. They took advantage of every point, also of the weak playing of Alis in the first and latter part of the game. Too much praise cannot be given the work of Umpire Chillum in Saturday's game. He was extremely fair.

ST. MARY'S CRUSHES HOPE.

Nearly two thousand ardent fans saw St. Mary's defeat Hopes in an uphill game on St. Mary's field Saturday afternoon. The Hope boys had everything their own way up to the third inning scoring six tallies in the three innings, St. Mary's woke up with a vengeance in their half of the third and hit Moutrose heavily in that and the next inning, scoring seven runs and passing their opponents. The closeness of the score put fresh interest in the game for the spectators and during the two quiet innings which followed, the excitement was intense.

In the seventh, with St. Mary's man on first and second, and easy ball was hit to Britt Martin who, seeing the man skip past him for third, snapped the ball to that bag for the put out but threw over Shortman's head allowing the three runs to be tallied. This careless pitch lost the game for Hope as the two teams were so evenly matched that the lead could not be overcome.

The score follows:

ENDED IN A ROW.

The Scotch Plains-Acolian game at the 'Plains on Saturday afternoon, was marred in the last half of the ninth inning by Capt. Poole, of the visiting team ordering his men off the field, after Umpire Hand had refused to change a decision at home plate. Up to this the game had been one of the fastest and cleanest games ever played on the diamond, not a kick had been made, or a base decision or on balls not striking. The visitors, up to this time had practically the game won, the score being 2 to 1. Hegeman had been pitching great ball, the locals only finding him for a few scattering hits and were unable to score until the seventh.

Pandemonium reigned as the score was sure to be tied with a man on third and another on first. Davis stole second base on the first ball thrown. Bolsterli placed a sacrifice hit to short stop, who threw him out at first, thinking to double Allen at plate. The play was fast, but Allen went under Poole and was safe by a foot, Davis had reached third and the game was practically won as there was only one out. Capt. Poole made a protest against the decision, claiming he touched the man. Failing in this he said the runner did not touch home plate. This would not go so he put up the plea that he ran out of base line. The umpire ordered him to play ball but he refused so the game was given to the home team by the usual score of 9 to 0. SOME FINE HISTORIC SCENES

PICTURES LOANED BY S. A. KROM TO PUBLIC LIBRARY.

There Are Sixteen in All, Handsomely Framed—A Complete List.

S. A. Krom has loaned to the Public Library a series of photographs which he has himself taken, of the places of historic interest in this locality. There are sixteen photographs in all. They are framed and will hang temporarily in the reading room.

The pictures are these: Jonah Vail house on the Quaker road; Ephraim Vail homestead on Quaker road; church at Springfield, N. J., several times; Plainfield meeting house; Frazee Lee house near Westfield, plundered by Cornwallis's troops; headquarters at Morristown; revolutionary homestead at Randolphsville; old Piscataway homestead; the Quaker road, used by Washington; Washington camp near Middlebrook; old graveyard of original settlers in Plainfield in 1684, on Holly farm; camp ground of Anthony Wayne at Finderne; Green brook where Washington crossed to reach Quaker road. The framing of the larger one, holding 10 photographs, is unique, being made of the clapboards of a Revolutionary house, and the soft silver gray of the wood, on which a little moss still clings, makes a most artistic and appropriate frame.

LOAN CONCERN TO PAY.

Local Stockholders in the Colonial Homestead Building and Loan Association to Receive Cash.

The Plainfield stockholders in the Colonial Homestead Building and Loan Association, of Trenton, who have had fears about losing their money, through the closing out of the company, have received assurances that they will receive checks for the amounts due about January 1, 1904. An investigation of the association's affairs brought forth a statement from President George M. MacDonald to the effect that the members will receive their money with the possible exception of membership fee. He declares that the new law makes it impossible for State associations to exist and that some locals will have to go under also.

Save the Children.

Ninety-nine of every one hundred diseases that children have are due to disorders of the stomach, and these disorders are all caused by indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is just as good for children as it is for adults. Children thrive on it. It keeps their little stomachs sweet and encourages their growth and developement. Mrs. Henry Carter, 705 Central St., Nashville, Tenn., says: "My little boy is now three years old and has been suffering from indigestion ever since he was born. I have had the best doctors in Nashville, but failed to do him any good. After using one bottle of Kodol he is a well baby. I recommend it to all sufferers." Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

William G. DeMeza and Francis J. Blatz are sojourning at Asbury Park.

HOLDS FIRST PLACE IN HILLSIDE'S GOLF COMMITTEE CUP CONTEST.

Detailed Scores in Saturday's Competitions—The Standing of Park and Hillside Clubs Golf Contests.

PARK CLUB.

The playing for the President's and Park Golf Club cups on the course of the Park Golf Club on Saturday, effected some changes in the standing for these trophies. Samuel Townsend won first honors for the President's cup and this places him in second position. Charles B. Morse and W. de la R. Anderson were tie for second honors, each receiving a point and a half. This gives Morse a total of 4½ points and Anderson's points are the first scored by him in this competition.

For the other cup, scratch event, Mr. Townsend and W. de la R. Anderson divided honors, each receiving 3½ points, while T. W. Morris, Jr., received the one remaining point.

These are the scores for the two cups:

Samuel Townsend, 95, 13—74; Charles B. Morse, 104, 15—89; W. de la R. Anderson, 95, 6—89; T. W. Morris, Jr., 101, 9—92; E. Maxwell Honeyman, 114, 22—92; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 114, 20—94; H. C. Wells, 110, 16—94; Charles A. Reed, 112, 17—95.

The scores:

J. C. Campbell, 107, 27—80; E. D. Floyd, 95, 13—82; L. B. Jackson, 109, 27—82; H. Talbot, 113, 30—83; C. R. Halsted, 94, 11—83; W. P. Tuttle, Jr., 114, 30—84; R. H. Taylor, 115, 30—85; J. A. Worth, 112, 26—86; S. V. Brewster, 118, 27—88; L. D. Comens, 129, 35—92; Z. A. Merrill, 128, 35—93.

M. L. Peugnet, who previously qualified, made the lowest score on Saturday, a 77 net and F. P. Condit, who had also qualified made an 81. These two scores do not count, however. This play will be continued four more Saturdays.

TWO CORNERSTONES LAID

ONE STONE PLACED IN POSITION WITHOUT CEREMONY.

Articles Contained in Core of Which no Public Announcement Has Been Made.

The big crowd which witnessed the laying of the cornerstone of the new Court House building at Elizabeth with elaborate Masonic ceremony knew that it was the second one laid in the building, and if the building lasts a couple of centuries those who demolish it will be puzzled by the presence of two stones. The first stone was laid without ostentation and only a few knew it was put in.

Some time ago, when the cornerstone arrived, it was not accepted by the authorities, so a new one was ordered. The old one was trimmed down and used and it is upon it that the one laid Thursday is imposed. The cavity was in the stone, and it was determined to utilize it, and this was filled with things which will be of more interest a hundred or more years from now than was the official stone.

Among the articles put in this stone is a court summons dated in 1796, which was found in the old Court House; a key, apparently of Colonial times, and said to be the key to the old-time dungeons; an old worn-out razor, said to have been used in the jail by prisoners for many years; papers of today, including one published at Manila; a baseball score card for a game to be played on the day the stone was laid, but which was postponed; some photographs, the signatures of all the men employed on that day on the erection of the building, some coins and postage stamps, and a cigar which cost a quarter, which was bottled up and labeled as being for the man who "opens this stone in the fiftieth century." All these were sealed in a heavy tin box made to fit the hole in the stone.

MR. TULP'S PREACHING.

Student Stationed at Marconnier Chapel Pleases Trinity People.

"Thy Gentleness Hath Made Me Great," was the subject of A. P. Tulp's sermon in Trinity Reformed Church, Sunday morning. A marked improvement was noticed in Mr. Tulp's preaching, over that of last summer, and after the service the young student received many words of commendation for the excellent discourse, which he delivered from memory. Mr. Tulp is stationed at Marconnier Chapel, Pine Tree, and gives evidence of a bright future.

"Knocking" Swackhamer.

The witty Samuel S. Swackhamer, Assemblyman from Somerset, is budding out as a farmer's picnic orator, and is billed to address four such meetings next month. Is it possible that Swack is booming himself, and, with lightning rod up, expects that Gubernatorial lightning to strike him in the Democratic State Convention next year? Of course, Senator Childs will have something to say about it, and he may think that if Somerset should be drawn on for the nominee he would better fill the call than Swackhamer. But Mr. Smith is working out the problem to suit himself, and it is not likely that Somerset County will be in his mind.—Camden Courier.

Still With Concern.

Ralph W. Chrystie, recent manager for the New York Painting and Decorating Company, of our city, has not accepted a position as salesman with the New Jersey Paint Company. Mr. Chrystie has been in the employ of the C. A. Woolston Paint Color Company for over eleven years and he is still in their employ of head salesman.

Newspaper Changes.

Chauncey F. Ricord, of Madison avenue, formerly circulation manager of The Daily Press, has been advanced by The Evening Times, of Elizabeth, from a similar position to that of business manager. During the last year The Evening Times has nearly doubled its circulation through his efforts.

SCOTCH PLAINS GIRL BRIDE OF NEW YORKER

Miss Helen Whitenack Wedded to John Kandelky in Scotch Plains Edifice.

A RECEPTION AT HOME

COUPLE'S HONEYMOON BEING SPENT AT ASBURY PARK.

Bride a Member of Scotch Plains M. E. Church—Groom a Civil Engineer—To Reside in Plainfield.

Miss Helen Whitenack, of Forest avenue, and John Kandelky, of New York, were married in the Scotch Plains Methodist Episcopal Church, Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Whitenack. The bride was attended by Miss Kizzie Nagle, as bridesmaid. At the altar the party was met by the bridegroom and his brother, Frederick Kandelky, of New York, who acted as best man. Rev. George Shaw, the pastor of the church, officiated. The Episcopal service was used.

The ushers at the church were Charles F. Nagle, of Plainfield and Harry Goodman, of the Plains, both cousins of the bride. At the home of the bride a reception was held from 4:30 until 8. The home was prettily trimmed with flowers and greens, amid which the bride and groom received the congratulations and best wishes of all in their journey through life together.

At 6 o'clock the couple left amid a shower of old shoes, rice and other good luck omens, to catch the 6:22 train for New York. From here they will go to Asbury Park for a week. While the bridal coach was standing waiting for the happy couple to take leave of family and friends, their friends trimmed it tastefully with tin cans, ribbons and appropriate mottos for the enlightment of those who did not know that two hearts had just been made to beat as one.

The bride's wedding dress was a handsome creation of white silk mulle, while the bridal veil was prettily caught up with orange blossoms. The bride carried a handsome bouquet of roses. The bridesmaid's dress was a pretty dotted Swiss over cream silk. She carried chrysanthemums.

The bride has been a prominent and popular worker in the several organizations of the Methodist Church and is held in high esteem by all, while the groom is a well-known civil engineer of New York, being employed on the tunnel work under the North river. The popularity of both was evinced by the handsome collection of presents received, consisting of silver ware, cut glass, bric-a-brac, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Kandelky, upon their return, will reside on East Second street, Plainfield.

LIVED THE LIFE OF A HERMIT

FUNERAL OF MATTHIAS EADER, OF DUNELLEN, WHO WAS A RECLUSE.

Found Dead in His Hut at Peapack—His Funeral Held in Plainfield.

Matthias Eader, a former resident of Dunellen and a brother of Mrs. Catherine Maier, of that place, was found dead in a hut at Peapack, N. J., Saturday and the remains were interred in St. Mary's Cemetery here yesterday. Eader had wandered away from Dunellen three years ago and no clue was obtained as to his whereabouts until the announcement of his death.

He had lived the life of a hermit during these years and people of that locality knew practically nothing about him. On Saturday some Peapack people thinking something was wrong broke into the hut and found him lying on the floor dead. A paper in the pocket of his coat disclosed his identity and Mrs. Maier was at once notified. The remains were brought to Dunellen yesterday and at once interred in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery in this city. The dead man was fifty-seven years of age and at one time was a wealthy contractor.

A Jolly Reception.

A reception was tendered by Mrs. Eugene Volmers, of the "Edgewood House," at the foot of the mountains, Saturday night, to the guests at that resort. The evening was spent in an enjoyable manner.

JOHN HENRY CARNEY PASSES TO REWARD

Popular Boroughite Dies Suddenly at His Father-in-Law's Home.

A VICTIM OF TYPHOID

MEMBER OF MANY FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS HERE.

Wife and Children Survive Him—Son-in-Law of Jacob Voehl—Odd Fellows Conducted Service at His Grave.

John H. Carney, one of the best known residents of the borough, is dead. The end came Monday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl in Somerset street, following a two weeks' illness with typhoid fever.

Up to 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon Mr. Carney was improving and his condition was not alarming. At that hour, however, there was a sudden turn for the worse and the severe hemorrhages which followed weakened his system to such an extent that he was unable to rally from them. He grew steadily worse until he passed away at 1:45 o'clock Monday morning.

There was probably no person in the borough or city better known or more generally popular than "Jack" Carney, as he was familiarly known by young and old. Generous to a fault and always ready and willing to do anyone a favor, he was liked by all. Especially with children was he a favorite and he was very fond of them. It was through his appearance at various entertainments that he made a host of friends. As an impersonator of the German dialect he probably had no equal in this vicinity and he was always in demand for entertainments.

Mr. Carney was born in North Plainfield forty-six years ago and he always lived in the borough. In his boyhood days he attended the public school there with Miss Eliza J. Voehl, a daughter of Former Freeholder and Mrs. Jacob Voehl, and twenty-two years ago he married her. By that union two children were born to them, John Jacob Carney and Miss Adelaide Carney. When a young man Mr. Carney learned the plumbing and tinning trade and he ever afterward followed it. For years he was in partnership with his brother, Andrew L. Carney.

In politics Mr. Carney was a staunch Democrat and honest worker and for years was a member of the registry board in the borough. He was a clever politician and was one of many to make a determined fight against annexation of the city and borough. In lodge circles he was also well-known. He was a charter member of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, a past officer of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, Independent Order Odd Fellows, and a member of the initiatory team, of the latter lodge, under the leadership of District Deputy John H. Becker. He was also a charter member of Pauguchaughnasqua Tribe, No. 193, Improved Order Red Men, afterward consolidated with Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118. In the early days he was a zealous firemen, being a prominent member of Warren Engine No. 3, of the borough. Afterward he was an exempt firemen.

Mr. Carney leaves an aged mother, Mrs. Ellen Carney, of Lincoln place; a wife, a son and daughter; also two brothers, David J. and Andrew L. Carney. His son, who has been at Monticello, N. Y., is now convalescing from an attack of typhoid fever. He will reach home today.

The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl on Somerset street, at 2 o'clock and Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., was be in charge. The interment was in the Methodist Cemetery in Plainfield avenue.

No Assessment.

Circulars issued to the members of the local lodges of the Ancient Order of United Workmen of New Jersey announce that there will be no beneficiary assessment levied on the members during the month of August. The assessment is generally levied for the benefit of the General Beneficiary Fund.

MISCELLANEOUS WORK OF COMMON COUNCIL

Committee Appointed to Seek Light on Telepone Systems in Use.

STREET IMPROVEMENT

BIDS TO BE OPENED AT A SPECIAL MEETING CALLED.

More Electric Lights Wanted—Contract Awarded for Police Department Barn—The Routine Business.

For the purpose of acquainting themselves more fully with other telephone systems beside that of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, the Common Council, at its regular August meeting, last Monday, voted to have a committee from that body inspect the workings of other systems and report its investigations with a view to granting another franchise in this city. The committee is to report at its own convenience. This action was taken in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel, chairman of the finance committee. The resolution included in that committee President Buckle, W. S. Tyler, chairman of the license committee, and R. I. Tolles, chairman of the streets and sewers committee.

Mr. Randolph, chairman of the police board, reported that the bids advertised for the erection of a brick barn to be located back of police headquarers, had been received and that the bid of Titus H. Leary, $599 being *the lowest, he moved that the con*tract be awarded to him, after the contract is approved by the Corporation Counsel. E. V. French is the architect.

Mr. Randolph also presented the lease for the property occupied as police headquarters and the ground back of it upon which a brick barn will be erected for the care and keeping of the police patrol wagon and horse. The lease was approved by Corporation Counsel Marsh and in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Randolph, the lease is to be accepted by the city after it is signed by the owners of the property, J. B. Coward and J. W. Murray. This gives the city complete use of the property used as police headquarters and the right to remove the cells, bars and all furnishings owned by the city, whenever it is desired.

Mr. Pray offered a resolution to the effect that the city clerk give notice in the official newspapers that the Council will meet on Tuesday evening, August 24, for the purpose of receiving bids for the macadamizing certain streets in the city. The streets so designated are these:

Woodland avenue from East Seventh street to Watchung avenue; East Seventh street from Richmond street to Belvidere avenue; East Third street and Midway avenue from Richmond street to Berckman street; Berckman street from East Front street to South avenue; Prospect avenue from Park avenue to Woodland avenue; West Seventh street from the Middlesex County line to the end of macadam; West Fifth street from Grant avenue to Monroe avenue; South Second street from Plainfield avenue to Muhlenberg place; Albert street from West Front street to Dunellen avenue; Dunellen avenue from Clinton avenue to Compton avenue; Rock avenue from Mid*dlesex County line to end of macadam*; Darrow avenue from West Fourth street to West Seventh street; North avenue from Richmond street to Berckman street.

A petition was received from the Manganese Steel Safe Works and other residents west of Clinton avenue, asking for a dozen additional electric lights in that section of the city. This was referred to the lights and trees committee. The Council received a lengthy petition from a large number of residents asking that $300 be appropriated for a series of band concerts. The matter was referred to the finance committee, but it is understood that the question was recently debated in a committee meeting and that it was decided upon adversely.

Building Inspector T. O Doane reported that twenty-two permits were granted during July and Street Commissioner Gavett reported that during June and July forty one sewer permits were granted. The resignation of James E. Totten, as a patrolman, was received and accepted.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel, $1,000 was transferred from the general to the fire fund and $800 from the general to the poor fund.

Mr. Lee reported both the petition received from the Plainfield Produce Company, asking for permission to erect an awning in front of its place of business in North avenue, and moved that the same be granted. He reported adversely on the request for permission to erect an iron railing at the same place. The resolution was adopted and the work is to be done under the supervision of the committee on fire and buildings. Another resolution offered by Mr. Lee and adopted provided for the location of a fire hydrant at the end of the present water main on the corner of West Seventh street and Clinton avenue.

Mr. Murphy reported back the petitions of E. W. Brokaw for lights on Columbia avenue, between Leland avenue and Frederick street and that of Mrs. Elizabeth Agar for lights on DeKalb avenue and on his motion the lights were granted.

Mr. Murphy also reported on the matter of poor electric wire insulation about the city, especially in the city park. He stated that the electric light company had remedied the existing troubles.

A resolution offered by Mr. Daniel and which was adopted, provided that insurance be effected for one year on all property held under the Martin Act. The Council then adjourned to Tuesday evening, August 18, when the books of the tax collector will be examined.

POLITICAL CALENDAR FOR FALL CAMPAIGN

Work Commences Earlier on Account of New Primary Election Law.

COUNTY BOARD MEETING

HOUSE TO HOUSE CANVAS TO SECURE THE VOTERS.

Election on Constitutional Amendments Falls on September 22—Days of Registry for Each Campaign.

Contrary to the usual custom, the political campaign will open earlier this year than generally and this is due to the new primary law. The work of preparation begins with the meeting of the county board of election today at Elizabeth, for organization and confirming of the selection of the district boards. During this month the Secretary of State notifies the clerk of each county of such officers as are to be elected at the coming election, and the county clerk within fifteen days of that time must deliver a certified copy of the notice to each township and municipal club in the county.

The political calendar for September is as follows:

September 1—House to house canvass begins in election districts out*side of cities having over 30,000 in*habitants.

September 8 — First meeting of registry boards in cities having over 30,000 inhabitants and on same day will be held in the polling places the primary election, under the law, from 1 till 9 p. m.

September 15 — Second day of registry in cities.

September 19—County board of election meets.

September 22—Election on the constitutional amendments.

CORNERSTONE CEREMONIES

Great Crowd Witnesses the Exercises at New Union County Court House.

ORATION BY VOORHEES

Parade and Masonic Service Followed by Banquet—United States Senator Kean a Speaker—Many Distinguished Men Present.

Representative men of Union County and the State at large mingled in the immense crowds which attended the cornerstone laying ceremony at Elizabeth Thursday. For the proper celebration of the event, the Board of Freeholders have spared no necessary expense and the ceremonies themselves conducted in due Masonic form by the Grand Lodge of Free and

J. Frank Hubbard.

Accepted Masons of the State of New Jersey, were most elaborate and impressive.

The official programme of this morning was carried out without a hitch. Promptly at 10:45, Dutters' band headed the procession of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey Masons from the Masonic Hall on Broad street to the new court house. An overture by the band was followed by the address of welcome spoken by Captain J. Frank Hubbard, of this city, who has been director of the Board of Freeholders for sixteen years and a member for thirty-six. Capt. Hubbard spoke of the importance of the occasion, its meaning to the county, congratulating the county and its representatives upon the notable addition to its buildings and welcoming all to a participation in the ceremonies to follow.

Prayers by the grand chaplain of the State Lodge and the singing of odes by the Cathedral quartette were followed by the ceremony of laying the cornerstone performed by Grand Master W. Holt Apgar, of Trenton, who used an exceedingly handsome silver trowel, with a handle of polished oak taken from the interior of the old court house previous to its demolition. Grand Master Apgar was assisted in laying the mortar on the cornerstone by Director Hubbard. The blade of the trowel was inscribed as follows: "This trowel was used by Captain J. Frank Hubbard to lay the cornerstone of the Union County Court House, Elizabeth, N. J., July 30, 1903." An inscription on the handle read: "This handle was made from wood taken from the Union County Court House. Erected 1811. Demolished 1902." The trowel was presented to Director Hubbard with the understanding that at his death it is to revert to the county.

Grand Master Apgar and Director Hubbard were assisted in the rite by the other grand officers. The implements used in the laying of the stone were presented to the architects, Messrs. Ackerman and Ross. The oration by Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees and the "Star Spangled Banner," by the band, concluded the festivities.

In the cornerstone were placed the minutes of the Board of Freeholders of the dates relating to the court house and a full account of all proceedings connected with the erection of the new building. Also included were newspapers giving a cut of the new court house, a number of United States coins of the present day, copies of the invitations to the ceremony and banquet and other interesting papers.

The most active of those who have arranged for the laying of the cornerstone at the new court house has been County Collector Edward M. Wood, who projected the new building and worked for its erection from the first. The rest of the committee has been composed of members of the Board of Freeholders. They are Freeholder Jacob Brucklacher, of Elizabeth; Freeholder John Parrell, of Rahway, and Director J. Frank Hubbard, who have been particularly active and with County Collector Wood, compose the building committee specially appointed for the erection of the new court house.

There was a large delegation from this city. Worshipful Master James A. Stafford, accompanied by members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., and Worshipful Master Louis D. VanAlstyne with members of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, of the same order, participated in the parade. Local officeholders and members of the bar mingled in the throng. Conspicuous in the crowds at the exercises and at the banquet was James E. Martine, the farmer-orator of Cedar Brook.

The committee appointed to take charge of the laying of the cornerstone consisted of Director J. Frank Hubbard, of Plainfield; Freeholders Parrell, Brucklacher, Adams, King, McCandless, County Collector Wood and S. Rosling Rynd, clerk of the board.

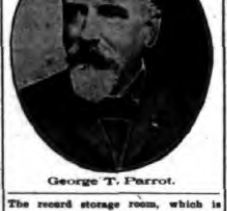
The contractors are the J. H. Parker Company, of New York. The architects are Messrs. Ackerman and Ross, also of New York.

The site for the new court house was purchased about six years ago by the Board of Freeholders. The land is located at Rahway avenue and Broad street, and on it stood for many years the noted Sheridan House, which was a famous resort for leading politicians of both parties, but chiefly Democrats. The old hotel got dilapidated and on the death of its owner, the late Postmaster Patrick Sheridan, the property was sold by the executors of his estate to the county of Union for the purpose to which it now is being converted.

Five sets of plans for the new court house were submitted and passed upon by Prof. Partridge, of Columbia University, who decided in favor of Ackerman & Ross.

The new building will be of granite and marble, three stories high, with an attic and a basement. In the latter will be located the District Court, which will have an area of 1,075 square feet.

There will be a clerk's office attached, which will be 200 square feet.



George T. Parrot.

The record storage room, which is also to be in the basement, will be 1,600 square feet, and will be fireproof and protected with barred windows and iron shutters.

There will be two large courtrooms on the first floor, with complete equipment for heating, lighting and ventilation. One room will be 2,000 square feet in size and the other 2,100 feet.

There will also be rooms for the judges, consulting rooms, library and stenographers' departments.

On the second story will be the Freeholders' room, 1,125 square feet in size, a vault 140 square feet, sheriff's office, 600 feet; sheriff's private office, 275 feet; assistant's office and a vault.

On the third floor will be the grand jury room, 1,200 square feet; two large waiting rooms for witnesses and a public hall for county societies. This will be 875 square feet.

The surrogate's office, register's private office, together with offices for assistants, record room, recording room, county clerk's office and superintendent's office will all be on the first floor.

The jail warden's office will also be on this floor. Connected with this department will be a jail for females, which will consist of ten cells in two tiers, and the juvenile jail, also of ten cells. There will also be a cook room, 580 square feet in size.

The front entrance to the building will be through a Corinthian colonade and logaia and vestibule. The rear entrance will also be provided with a vestibule. To the left of the rotunda will be placed the various rooms for the register department. To the right of the front entrance will be the surrogate's department offices. To the right of the rotunda will be the county clerk's department. The superintendent's office will be in the rear.

The engine room, boiler room, coal room and engineer's office will be in the front part of the basement. They will all be lower than the level of the basement floor.

The exterior of the building to the level of the front floor will be of light colored granite and the remaining portion over the rotunda of white marble.

The roof will be of dark green copper or tile. The floors will be of marble in the public corridors. In the offices the floors will be of oak and the trimmings and wainscoting of the same material. The stairway, pilasters, and the like, in the rotunda, will be of marble, while the stairway balustrades will be of cast and wrought iron.

MUCH BUILDING IN PRIDEVILLE

THE ONLY SECTION OF THE BOROUGH WHERE THERE IS A BOOM.

Small Houses in Great Demand—Some Recent Sales—Reason of Inactivity.

Notwithstanding repeated statements that the real estate values in North Plainfield are falling behind those of this city unusual building activity is noticed in the western end of North Plainfield, commonly known as Prideville or Bull Frog City. Houses are being built on several lots and considerable property is changing hands preparatory to erecting more buildings.

George F. Brown, the borough tax collector and real estate dealer, in speaking of the real estate conditions in the borough, attributes the present inactivity in North Plainfield building circles to the high prices of lots. He is authority for the statement that there are many wealthy men in North Plainfield and this city who are willing to invest money in erecting houses which would rent between $15 and $25 a month, but who will not pay the exhorbitant prices now asked for real estate.

In Prideville, lots are still cheap and it is there that new houses are going up rapidly. Several of the Plainfield real estate dealers have recently sold lots, Elston M. French among others. Several weeks ago Mr. French sold property at the corner of Duer and Walnut streets to Frank Schaefer, of Pine street, and already a house is well underway.

Frits Dean, a well known resident of that part of the borough is erecting two houses on Cedar street. These are almost completed and will be ready for occupancy on or about the first of September. The houses are comfortable dwellings designed for small families.

Charles Greader last week purchased a lot on Jefferson avenue from Mayor Smalley and on it he expects to erect a residence. The property on Stony Brook place was transferred last week to George N. VanArden by D. B. VanArden. The former will shortly erect a comfortable dwelling house of two stories on the site.

TRINITY'S ENJOYABLE OUTING

PLAINFIELD CHURCH PEOPLE HAVE JOLLY TIME AT SHORE.

Lack of Drinking Water in Coaches Causes Inconvenience — Excursionists Wear the Badge.

The annual excursion of Trinity Reformed Church and Mareonnier Chapel Sunday-schools to Asbury Park, Thursday, was a successful affair and there were no accidents at the shore to mar the pleasures of the day. During a large portion of the day there was a land breeze, but later a strong and refreshing sea breeze was appreciated to the full extent. The fact that the excursionists remained at the shore until 7 o'clock gave everyone a full day's enjoyment.

Just as the start for home was made a heavy thunder storm visited the Park, and the rain fell in torrents. The supply of drinking water gave out in the several coaches and when the train reached Elizabethport a draw-head on one of the coaches pulled out and the car was detached and the passengers obliged to go into the other coaches. During this delay there was an opportunity to get off the train and purchase a supply of mineral water at the 'Port. The accident caused a delay of a half hour in reaching Plainfield.

The Plainfield excursionists were distinguished by a button worn. These buttons, bearing the symbol of the Dutch Reformed church, were worn by a majority of those in the party.

Johnnie's Inspection.

Johnnie, a bright boy of nine, while being dressed for school, observing his little overcoat much the worse for wear, and having more mended places than he admired, turned to his mother and asked her:

"Mother, is father rich?"

"Yes, very rich, Johnnie. He's worth $2,500,000."

"How, mother?"

"Oh, he values you at $1,000,000, me at $1,000,000 and the baby at $500,000."

Johnnie, after thinking a moment, said:

"Mother, hadn't you better tell father to sell the baby and buy us some clothes?"—Chicago Journal.

What Did She Mean?

They were at supper. Between the courses the young man with the voracious appetite discoursed eloquently on things in general.

"Do you know, Miss Dash," he remarked, "I think there is a very intimate relation between our food and our character. I believe, don't you know, that we grow like what we are fond of."

The fair girl smiled sweetly.

"How interesting!" she murmured. "May I pass you the ham, Mr. Jones? I am sure you will like it."

And the young man relapsed into deep thought.—London Answers.

More Work for Niagara.

Another draft is to be made upon the gigantic working power of Niagara falls. On the Canadian side, in the Victoria park, a new power plant is under construction. Its first section, now being built, will provide 50,000 horse power, by means of five generators of 10,000 horse power each. This is twice the capacity of the separate generators now used on the New York side. By increasing the size of the generators, it is found that the cost per horse power is lowered. By means of cables, the New York and the Canadian plants will be connected for parallel operation.—Scientific American.

Women Use Stub Pens.

It was the young man's first day in the department store, and when he sorted out the pens to be distributed among the public writing desks he selected fine and medium nibs. The old hand, who superintended the job, told him to put them all back in the box and to pick out stubs instead. "Department store letter writers are mostly women," he said, "and nine out of ten women use a stub pen these days. It is almost impossible to get them to write with any other kind. Every once in awhile a new man comes along to do the work you are doing this morning, and he, not being up to the tricks of shoppers, scatters an assortment of fine-pointed pens over the writing tables. Being a wise man, he said nothing at the time. When the company had gone, however, he interviewed the green servant.

"Nora, what did you do with those nuts I cracked?" he asked.

"Shure an' I doan know wot yer mean," said Nora.

"I declare, me—it seems—why, hang it, this picture is cross-eyed, isn't it?"

DANIEL J. STILLWELL SUDDENLY EXPIRES

Drops Dead While at Work, Though Apparently in Good Health.

ONCE A WEALTHY MAN.

EMPLOYED AT PLAINFIELD PRODUCE CO.'S HOUSE ON NORTH AVENUE.

Wife Shocked on Hearing Sad News — The Dead Man Lived on East Second Street.

While at work this morning unloading watermelons at the Plainfield Produce depot on North avenue, D. D. Stillwell, of East Second street, dropped dead. He was about sixty years of age and is survived by a wife and two children, Steven Stillwell, and Miss Jennie Stillwell.

The man had been employed by L. E. Giles, one of the managers of the company for three years and was known as a hard worker. Half an hour before his death he was apparently in as good health as he ever was. He was offered a piece of watermelon but declined it, saying it did not agree with him. He turned to pass out of the store when he fell headlong to the floor dead. Mr. Giles rushed to the man's assistance but he was beyond all aid.

The dead man was at one time wealthy. He came to this State from Long Island and purchased a farm at Bound Brook for $30,000. The depreciation in the valuation of property led to his losing his fortune and he was obliged to work. His wife, who is feeble, is in a serious condition on account of the shock.

RETURNED AFTER FIVE YEARS.

The Letter That Was Longed For Never Came.

After five years' stay at the Dead Letter office at Washington a letter written in 1898 by Miss Mamie Donohue, of West Fourth street, to her mother in New York, was returned unopened Thursday. Miss Donohue wrote on the back of the envelope "In five days return to Miss Mamie Donohue, East Front street, Plainfield, N. J." Instead of it being returned in five days it was just five years since the letter was sent. The envelope was marked with many different stamps. The address on the envelope proved to be wrong.

Studying Mining.

William Tracy, of West Eighth street, has returned from a business trip in the West, where he visited several important mines. Mr. Tracy is a graduate of Leal's School and is now finishing a course of study in the School of Mines at Columbia University. Later he expects to take up a special line of work in the West.

BANKER'S DAUGHTER HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Miss Mabel Hooley, of Washington Park, Under Trolley Car Wheels.

THROWN FROM VEHICLE

MOTERMAN'S PRESENCE OF MIND SAVES HER FROM DEATH.

Young Woman Escapes Injury—Mother Shocked — Rescued From Perilous Position by John Goodwin.

Miss Mabel Hooley, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Edward R. Hooley, of Rockview avenue, had a narrow escape from serious if not fatal injury, today forenoon, while waiting in her carriage at L. W. Randolph's drug store for her mother, who was making purchases inside. The horse she was driving was a spirited one, and suddenly the animal made an attempt to run away. Miss Hooley did her best to control the horse, but when the light one-seat runabout struck a wagon belonging to Thomas H. Taylor, of North Plainfield Township, and upset it, she was unable to hold fast to the reins.

Miss Hooley was thrown out of her carriage directly in the path of a rapidly-moving westbound trolley car. Eye-witnesses fully expected to see the young woman killed, but exceptional presence of mind on the part of the motorman of the car, John D. Lant, of Prescott place, not only prevented this, but also saved Miss Hooley from any serious injury. He instantly applied the brakes and at the same time dropped the fender, not quick enough, however, to prevent Miss Hooley from going beneath this guard. The carriage cushion was thrown under the car and the young woman was forced to get out of it, when John Goodwin, of Manning avenue, assisted her out of her perilous position.

Mrs. Hooley's attention was attracted to the accident by this time and she suffered a severe nervous shock, believing at the time that her daughter was killed. Miss Hooley was assisted into Randolph's drug store, where she and her mother received proper treatment for the nervous shock sustained.

In the meantime, Miss Hooley's horse broke away from the carriage and was caught after a lively run through West Front street. The runabout was damaged more or less. The wheels were badly twisted out of shape, some spokes were broken and one end of the seat was wrecked. The harness was also broken.

A telephone message to the Hooley residence brought the coachman with another rig and Mrs. Hooley and her daughter returned within a half hour after the accident.

HOLDS BRIDGE TOGETHER.

E. R. Ackerman's Co. Supplies Material for New Brunswick Bridge.

The Lawrence Cement Company, of which Ernest R. People Believe In It.

It has been cynically said that anything can be sold by advertising nowadays. This is not so. Many liniments have been advertised but only one—Perry Davis' Painkiller—has stood the test of sixty years' use. To-day its popularity is greater than ever and is based not upon what anybody says but upon what the remedy does. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

FOSTER M. VOORHEES' CORNERSTONE SPEECH

Oration By Former Governor Delivered at County Court House Ceremony.

HISTORICAL ADDRESS

"ALL GOVERNMENTS TO ENDURE MUST BE FOUNDED ON PRINCIPLES"

Description of First Court House —Destroyed by Invading Army—A Monument to Law's Supremacy.

Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees' oration at the cornerstone laying exercises Thursday has attracted favorable comment.

Mr. Voorhees said in part:

"That which we enjoy as a people we owe in large measure to the past. Closely linked to that past are the buildings which, from time to time, have stood in the place and served the purpose for which we erect the building whose cornerstone has just been laid with impressive rite.

"We build not for ourselves alone. Within these walls generations yet to come will find a place wherein they may transact their common business, maintain their rights and redress their wrongs.

"The spot is well chosen. Around it cluster memories that may well cause pride. For more than two centuries it has been the centre of a people's life. From it have emanated influences which have moulded and guided the fortunes of the country. And we can, with profit to ourselves, turn aside for the moment from the pursuits and activities which engross us to trace the events with which it has been associated. * * *

"They tell us that one of the first events was 'a meeting court held at Elizabeth Town, in the Province of New Jersey, the 19th day of February 1665-6'—only a little more than a year after the arrival of the first comers. Then sixty-five of the brave freeholders took the oath of allegiance and fidelity. Surely in the discharge of a duty of such solemn and formal import they must have gathered in some house of a public character. The Puritans and their descendants believed not in consecrated places. Records undisputable show that they were accustomed to transact in their 'meeting-house' the business of government, or that which pertained to the common welfare. We can assume, from evidence that we have, that the erection of such a house was among the first concerns of the founders of the county. Nothing beyond dispute that such a house was in existence prior to the month of June, 1671, for we are told by one that on the nineteenth day of that month 'he was at a meeting of several inhabitants of this town, when we met together at the town house.' And we know that the first General Assembly of the province met here on the twenty-sixth day of May, 1668, and it was in all probability in the town house, and in 1682 the laws of the province provided that this 'County of Essex Boston should be held in the public meeting house of Elizabeth Town.' However involved in obscurity may be the exact date when first the house was built, we are warranted in saying that here in this community for more than 200 years there has stood some building wherein public business has been transacted and where justice has been administered in due and orderly fashion.

"A natural curiosity prompts us to inquire about the appearance and the location of the first building. Tradition is silent as to this. Time has obliterated all records of the size, the cost, the arrangements and general appearance of the one first built. We vision was made for a meeting-house at Newark, which was 'thirty-six feet square, with the doors, and Windows, and Fine Boards as the Gable Ends.' In early days Elizabeth Town was the site of government of the province, which came to be known as the county of Essex, and embraced within its bounds the present counties of Essex and Union and portions of the counties of Middlesex and Somerset.

* * * "In the course of time the 'meeting-house'" and the "courthouse" were no longer one. Nearly a century after the founding of the province one who visited the town in 1748 tells us that 'the meeting-house of the Presbyterians was built of wood, but had both a steeple and bells, and was, like the other house, covered with shingles.' And what is of more parti-cular interest to us on this occasion, he adds that 'the townhouse made likewise a good appearance and had a spire with a bell.' The meeting-house was no longer the townhouse. A new building had been built on or near the spot where now we stand, for it is well authenticated that here, for more than a century and a half, has stood the building need for court and public purposes. Here in 1776 it stood, and Captain DeHart described it 'as the courthouse, a small frame, shingle-covered building, which has never been adorned with paint.' And he tells us that in 'the same condition and style of architecture was the adjacent building, the Presbyterian meeting-house, both of which, respectively, occupied the ground whereon now (1866, when he wrote) stands the structures devoted to the same objects.'

"An invading army burned this building in 1780, and in 1797 a new one was erected, which in turn was burned in 1808. Not until three years later was that one built which served the public needs until the creation of the present county of Union in 1857. Then the citizens of a new county enlarged and reconstructed it, and, with its additions from time to time, it assumed the form which to us of the present day has been familiar. And now that, too, has gone, as have all they that preceded it. It, too, has made way for the new in the onward march of events. * * *

"We would erect a courthouse. It symbolizes the majesty of law. It stands for its enforcement and for the due and orderly administration of justice. It signifies that they who rear it have respect for law and yield to it obedience. But of what avail its significance, if certain tendencies of modern times shall ultimately prevail? All governments to endure must be founded on certain principles. They must demand and enforce obedience to law. They must show favor to none. They must recognize the right of the individual to do as he would within the law. They must punish him in so doing with his own as others are permitted to deal with their own, whatever such may be, whether property, time or labor. A government that does not protect one in this right is a mockery. If through fear it fails to safeguard the individual, it has weakly surrendered its functions and deserves not the name. Where a self-constituted body of irresponsible citizens, crazed with excitement and lost to all reason, are permitted to assume to themselves the administration of so-called justice, there have been sown the seeds of dissolution. We cannot be blind to the alarming tendency to disregard the law and turn away with the appointed methods of government. If not speedily checked foundations will be undermined and anarchy and chaos surely follow. May it never happen in our own county of Union that a senseless and insensate mob shall arrogate to itself rights but to misuse. May this courthouse, while it endures, serve as a perpetual warning to those who would be unmindful of their obligations. May it ever indicate that a people who has builded it, and who will use it, are, above all things else, justice-loving and law-abiding. May it in time to come remain a monument to law's supremacy. May it be, at once, the citadel of justice and an abiding inspiration to good citizenship."

PASSING OF LANDMARK.

Old Structure Being Demolished to Make Room for Modern Building.

Another old landmark in this city, a relic of the days when this city was in reality a "plain field," is passing. Workmen yesterday began to tear down the old structure at the corner of Clinton avenue and West Front street to make room for a hotel which is to be erected by John Goff.

The structure, and the property on which it stands, was owned by Nicholas Mundy, whose parents purchased the place in 1871, the price of the ground being $100 an acre. The property recently sold for $3,000.

Stole Bicycle.

Sometime Thursday afternoon, between 1 o'clock and the time of the heavy shower, some person stole Lawyer Charles L. Moffett's new Crawford bicycle from the doorway leading to his office in North avenue. Unfortunately, Mr. Moffett does not know the number on the wheel and he is unable to get it.

Transfer of Property.

Oscar F. Pearson, of East Front street, has purchased the house at 68 Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, from Bolton Hall. Mr. Pearson intends putting the building in first class condition and occupying it as early date. William Jeffery, the Park avenue real estate broker, made the deal.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Florence Beekman, of Johnston avenue, and Frank W. Cleaves, of Codington avenue. Miss Beekman has resigned her position in Woodhull & Martin's.

Patent Pill Pleasure.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are De-Witt's Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot, of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did me more good than calomel blue-mass or any other pills I ever took and at the same time is effected me pleasantly. Little Early Risers are certainly an ideal pill." Sold by L. Topic.—Lessons from Paul: How we may get his passion for souls.—Rom. i. 1-17.

Few people have ever been truly converted but that they have had, to some extent at least, a desire for the conversion of others. No sooner had Andrew found Jesus as the Messiah than he sought his brother Peter and led him to Jesus, and this desire for the salvation of others has always been looked upon as one of the evidences of true conversion. But some men have been characterized by this desire far above others. The salvation of the souls of men has been a passion with them—it has been their meat and drink. Conspicuous among such stands the apostle Paul. He was all things to all men if thereby he might save some, and so great was his desire for the salvation of his countrymen, who were Israelites, that he declared that he could wish himself accursed from Christ for their sakes. In other words, he was filled with such a burning desire for their salvation that he would have sacrificed his own soul if thereby he could have saved them. Few indeed have been possessed with such a passion for souls, and we may well contemplate it in the great apostle, with the hope and prayer that to some extent at least his mantle may fall upon us, that we may be filled with a deeper desire than ever before for the salvation of the souls of men.

Paul's passion for souls is expressly set forth in his letter to the Romans: "I long to see you that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift." Sometimes I purposed to come unto you * * * that I might have some fruit among you also as among other gentiles." And with these expressions of his desire there are also some explanations as to why he was not able to do so. Now we may also become possessed of it.

1. Paul appreciated his own salvation. He delighted to call himself "Paul, a bond servant of Jesus Christ." No one more than he realized that salvation was of grace and that at the same time it was of inestimable value. Appreciating the great gift that God had bestowed upon him, he was anxious that it should be received by others. If we appreciated as Paul did our salvation more we would be filled with a greater desire to see the souls of others saved.

2. Paul realized his indebtedness to the unsaved. "I am a debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians, both to the wise and to the unwise; so as much as in me is I am ready to preach the gospel." The saved owe a debt to the unsaved. We have the gospel and can give it to them, and therefore we are under a solemn obligation to do so. Christ has commanded us to preach the gospel to every creature. This debt should impress itself upon us and not be allowed to be lightly set aside. If we could only feel as the apostle felt we would be willing to go to any length to save. It is "the power of God unto salvation." Believing this let us seek more earnestly to apply the gospel as a saving power to those about us.

P. S. C. GRANTS TRANSFERS

TROLLEY COMPANY MAKES AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Change Goes Into Effect Saturday—Transfers, a Liberal Concession.

The Public Service Corporation announces changes in the transfer system at Newark and other points, taking in some of the intersecting points not now affected. The changes go into effect on Saturday. A majority of the points affected are in Hudson and Essex counties. The management reminds its patrons that transfers will be good only when offered by the person to whom issued, and that "they are intended to afford a continuous passage by connecting lines at junction points, and are not good for stop over." Passengers are requested to take note of the time punched by the conductor when the transfer is received, in order that unpleasant disputes may be avoided.

AMUSEMENTS.

The version of "The Pit" in which Wilton Lackaye is to star under the management of Henry B. Brady, will have several big ensemble scenes, notably the gathering in the lobby of the Auditorium Theatre, the rehearsal of private theatricals at the home of the Cresslers, and the panic episode in "The Pit."

Directors General Thompson and Dundy, of the New York World's Fair, which is being held at Luna Park this year, are the two men who handled the Midway Day at the Pan-American in Buffalo, and successful as was that most successful of all days at Buffalo, and successful as was that most successful of all days at Buffalo, the promise a more magnificent series of spectables at Luna Park on this August 5.

The mecca of the music lovers of New York and vicinity these summer evenings is the Madison Square Garden, where Dunn, with the superb Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra, is the central figure of the magnificent Venetian setting. During the current week "Venice in New York" has participated more than ever of the nature of society entertainment, as the soloist is Miss Blanche Tyler, a member of the exclusive Back Bay circles of Boston society, and a friend of Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, the Boston society leader.

With practically a clear field as far as theatricals on Broadway go this summer, "The Runaways" is making things hum at the Casino. The versatile entertainers in the Sam. S. Shubert and Nixon & Zimmerman Company, headed by Miss Fay Templeton, keep the fun and tunefulness of the magnificent production at concert pitch all the time. It is never uncomfortable in the Casino, where the thermometer invariably shows the handsome auditorium to be twenty degrees cooler than it is outdoors in the summer months.

The Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz," the principal comedy role in the extravaganza which has been crowding the Majestic Theatre in New York for over two hundred performances, is a remarkable example of clever make-up. Indeed, the costume and make-up are so marvelously realistic that when Fred Stone, who plays the part, is first lifted on the stage and leaned against the stile very few people in the audience believe that the figure is that of a real man. He not only looks like a rag dummy — a veritable man of straw—but he so closely counterfeits the rigidity of one that nearly all the spectators in the audience are convinced that this scarecrow will presently be replaced, to the accompaniment of some hocus-pocus, by the real live comedian so essential to the play.

Congratulations to Chief.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the local fire department, has received a number of congratulatory letters from fire chiefs throughout the country who are members of the International Fire Chiefs' Association regarding the annual report recently issued by him. One of the letters is from Captain Brophy, at one time chief of the Boston fire department.

The charge that is now being made at Trenton that the appropriation for the State tuberculosis hospital was defeated by the connivance of Senator Cross of Somerset and Assemblyman Miller is utterly false. This denial of the statement is made on the authority of Mr. Cross, and his word is as good as his bond.—Newark Evening News.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 9.—"For the Gift of God Which Is In Thee."—Tent, II Tim. i, 6-8.

Paul, the aged preacher, is prisoner in Rome under sentence of death. His anxiety is not about his own fate, but for the welfare of the churches after his death and for the progress of the Christian faith. He naturally turns to the younger men who have been his companions in travel and preaching. Timothy is particularly dear to him, and in many letters and day by day up the scenes of his early ministry where he found the young man in a godly home circle. He now longs for the companionship and presence of this active and ardent helper. The tearful sympathy of Timothy appealed strongly to Paul, who had resolutely endured privations, bodily suffering and opposition of every kind. His own pious ancestry was held in thankful remembrance, so he will remind Timothy of the faithful mother and grandmother and the heritage received from them. Of greater value, however, was the commission transmitted by the apostle when by the laying of hands on the young disciple's head he set him apart for the special service of Jesus Christ and His gospel.

The tender heartedness which seems to have been so natural to Timothy might lead him to shrink from the hardships and woes that he has seen heaped upon Paul. Sensitiveness to shame and pain might cause a relaxation of effort and diligence. So he shall be reminded of the danger and exhorted not to be ashamed of the testimony of the Lord, nor of Paul, the prisoner, but to suffer hardship, sustained by the power of God. This is a call to the highest and noblest living. It is the recognition and acceptance of the fact that God has saved and called to high and holy work. This is not because of any business capacity or special religious merit and moral excellence. It was because "long ages ago" God had of His own grace and this purpose in Christ Jesus planned just this gift of good tidings to men. This intention of God, ages old, but concealed from men, had now been clearly shown by the appearing of Jesus Christ, who abolished death and brought life and incorruption to open view.

This glad news for men was a sacred deposit or gift intrusted to Paul of God. He was a herald, a witness, a teacher of this truth. This was the reason why he suffered as he did and yet was not ashamed. God had not given a spirit of timidity or doubt, but instead of fearfulness was the spirit of power and love and sober discipline. Because he knew Him whom he believed, he was confident the Lord would be able to fully guard and protect until the day of accomplishment of God's purpose and grace all the gift and interest committed to His herald, witness and teacher.

So fearlessly would arouse his powers and stir up the gift of God in himself.

So should every one of us Leaguers who profess to be followers of Jesus Christ bestir ourselves to increased activity and renewed fidelity to the trust given into our keeping. Never can the greater need than now of clear, Christian thought and deep heart devotion. Laxity in belief and practice widely prevails. Earnestness in living is too rare. Anxiety for pleasure and worldly gain press out of sight in too many cases the claims of God and of duty set by Him. His gift and His commission are our richest possessions. There is danger of eternal loss to us and others unless we stir up this gift of God which is in us.

Christ and Care.

Jesus Christ is able to deal with our cares. But it is important for us to notice how He deals with them. He does with them as He deals with our sins—by taking them upon Himself. He bids us cast all our care upon Him. That is the open secret of peace, the open secret of complete and continuous victory over the world. Only then when we cast all our cares upon Christ there is no sin upon us, and so we enjoy pardon; when we cast all our care upon Christ there is no care upon us, and so we enjoy peace. How simple it is! If we carry the cares we have peace; if we cast the cares we cannot help having peace.—G. H. C. Macgregor.

By Faith and Earnest Action.

If you advance in the Christian life at all it must be by a live faith and most earnest action. Every power must be brought into exercise. Speak, sing, work, pray, agonize if need be. Make a business of your religion, and a pleasing, aggressive business too. Eternity will reveal the fact that God's true service is the best that man ever engaged in.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

Your Daily Life.

Make your common daily work an instructor in divine things. Fill up the measure of your daily life with all that is pure and good and true, and these lowly temporal things shall be as the first rounds of a ladder reaching from earth to heaven. This is clearly the appointed order of development—first, the natural, then the spiritual; afterward, that which is spiritual.

A Partnership.

Life is a partnership with one another, and the things we are in proportion to what we put in. There is no investment in this business that pays better than kindness.—Lutheran Observer.

Christ's Christianity.

Christianity as Christ taught is the truest philosophy of life ever spoken. But let us be quite sure when we speak of Christianity that we mean Christ's Christianity.—Phillips Brooks.

PLAINFIELD BABIES CARED FOR AT CAMP

Praiseworthy Work Being Conducted at Fresh Air Institution on Mountain.

OBJECT OF THE CAMP

PLACE IS IN CHARGE OF THE LOCAL KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The Resources Sorely Taxed—Many Applications Received —A New Dormitory Being Built.

Every Monday morning, a load of pale, big-eyed, sickly youngsters from five months to nine years old is taken up the mountain by Henry DeMott, the borough undertaker, and landed at the King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountain. And every Saturday night another load of children goes back to the homes in Plainfield, the same youngsters transformed, eyes bright, cheeks aglow, and crowing with the joy of a healthy childhood. That in a word is the work of the Baby Camp on the mountain.

Totally different from the Netherwood Home whose object is to reach the poor of New York, the King's Daughters camp is quite as worthy of praise and encouragement. Its work lies in Plainfield itself. It benefits the poor children who are sick.

Children go there some of them barely able to crawl. A few days of the outdoor treatment and lost appetites are recovered—Oliver Twist asking for more isn't in the same class for appetite. Cheeks grow rosy and the youngsters are soon out on the lawns playing games and enjoying themselves generally with all the vigor of health.

The resources of the camp have been taxed throughout the season to the utmost. The managers are unable to keep up with the number of applications received. Fourteen children have been cared for this week by the matron, Mrs. Delaney, and the nurse, Miss Olive Delaney.

A new dormitory is being built, which will be ready for occupancy by the end of next week, and which, it is expected, will accommodate twelve more children.

OLD MASON IN PARADE.

Jacob J. VanDoren a Notable Figure in Court House Cornerstone Laying.

A remarkable figure in the Masonic parade at Milltown, in connection with the cornerstone laying for the new court house, was Jacob J. VanDoren, the oldest Free Mason in Union County, and a member of the order since 1850. He will be eighty-four years old next November, but marched with more agility than many men of sixty. Mr. VanDoren in 1844 visited England and had an audience with the late Queen Victoria. He saw King Edward VII., when the latter was only four years old. Mr. VanDoren has never crossed the Atlantic since.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS IN PUBLIC LIBRARY

Little Men and Women of Plainfield Receive a Cordial Invitation to Read.

HOLIDAY ENJOYMENT

LIBRARIAN ADDRESSES YOUNG FOLKS IN THIS CITY.

Books of Adventure, Travels, Fairy Tales and Jungle Stories—Art Gallery and Museum Attractions.

To the Children of Plainfield:—

I want to tell all the children of Plainfield, all at least who have not found out for themselves about something of which they will be glad to know especially in vacation time. And what I want to tell you about is this, a children's library, all your own, not books for grown up people, but ever so many of the very nicest book for children. There are fairy tales galore (you know what that means I am sure), and easy books that tell you how to make all kinds of things, books of exciting adventures, and books about girls away at school, and a good many books of pictures that tell how people in far off countries live, and then there are true stories, some about men and women who started out with nearly everything against them and yet who lived to do something which made people better or wiser or happier. Lots of boys like this kind. There are animal stories too, like the Jungle books.

Where are they? In the Public Library, on the corner of Park avenue and Eighth street you know, and there is a children's corner where we keep all the books that boys and girls like best to read. And you can come whenever you like and stay as long as you like. You can read the books there, or, if your mother and father will let you, you can take them home to read. Of course in vacation one likes to be playing out of doors a great deal, but when one grows tired of this, it is very nice to have a good book to read.

Don't you love fairy tales? Some of the nicest ones I know are in the "Red Fairy Book." You ought to read it. I know the names of ever so many others, but I can't tell you here, because the editor will think I am taking up too much space, but come to the Library and then I will tell you. Only you must promise not to write in them, "This is a lolly book" or "I think this story is perfectly lovely." Tell the children's librarian instead, for she always likes to know, so as to tell other boys and girls.

If you want to, you can bring your little brothers and sisters, for we have pleasant books for them, with colored pictures in. Only you will have to see that they don't tear them and that their hands are clean. We depend on you to help us to keep the books clean, so that after you have finished them other boys and girls may enjoy them too.

I mustn't close without saying that if you come on Tuesday or Saturday afternoons you can go up stairs and see the butterflies and the birds and the pictures.

Sincerely your friend,
The Librarian.

WILDCAT MOUNTED.

Stuffed Animal Owned by A. I. Smalley Now on Exhibition in a Window.

A large wildcat, properly mounted in the Somerset street pharmacy is a trophy of a hunting trip taken by A. I. Smalley early in the spring in North Carolina. It was captured after it had killed several valuable hunting dogs belonging to J. C. Stanley at East Arcadia, N. C.

The cat, when killed weighs 45 pounds. With Mr. Smalley was Augustus Trost, formerly a resident of North Plainfield. They were hunting on Mr. Stanley's reserve when it was decided to ascertain what was killing off all the sheep. They soon came across the cat, caught by its hind legs in a steel trap. Before it could be subdued three dogs met their death.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY AT THE COURT HOUSE

Beautiful Ritual Used at the Cornerstone Exercises by the Grand Lodge.

MASONS IN A PARADE

COMPLETE LIST OF ARTICLES PLACED IN THE CORNERSTONE.

Full Text of Service of Ancient Society, Conducting the Exercises—Those Participating in the Affair.

The great crowd witnessing the laying of the cornerstone of the new court house at Elizabeth Thursday was particulary interested in the Masonic ceremony, but only those near the Grand Lodge officers could hear distinctly the words of the service. Owing to lack of space yesterday The Daily Press was unable to publish the form used, which was this:

The Principal Architect presented the working tools to the Grand Master, who handed the square to the Deputy Grand Master, the Level to the Senior Grand Warden and the Plumb to the Junior Grand Warden, and then said:

"Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, apply the square to that portion of the foundation stone that needs to be proved, and make report."

The Deputy applied the square to the stone and said:

"Most Worshipful Grand Master, I find the stone to be square."

Grand Master—"Right Worshipful Senior Grand Warden, apply the level to that portion of the foundation stone that needs to be proved, and make report."

The order was compiled with and the Senior Grand Warden said:

"Most Worshipful Grand Master, I find the stone to be level."

Grand Master—"Right Worshipful Junior Grand Warden, apply the plumb to the portion of the foundation stone that needs to be proved, and make report."

The order was obeyed and the Junior Grand Warden replied:

"Most Worshipful Grand Master, I find the stone to be plumb."

The Senior and Junior Grand Wardens then went to the cornerstone, the former carrying the gavel and the latter the trowel.

The Grand Master, preceded by the Grand Marshal and the Grand Sword Bearer, then proceeded to the cornerstone, took the trowel from the Junior Grand Deacon, and having spread the cement, the covering stone, was fixed to its place by the craftsmen. He then took the gavel from the Senior Grand Deacon, struck the cornerstone three times therewith and returned to his station; the other Grand officers then returned to their places. The Grand Master said:

"This cornerstone has been tested by the square, the level and the plumb, and it is found that the craftsmen have skillfully and faithfully performed their duty. I, therefore, declare the stone to be well formed, true and trusty, and correctly laid, according to the rules of our ancient craft."

The Deputy Grand Master then presented the vessel of corn to the Grand Master, who said, as he poured it:

"This corn is an emblem of plenty, may the blessings of bounteous Heaven be showered upon us, and upon all benevolent undertakings, and may our hearts overflow with gratitude to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, for the manifold blessings and comforts which we enjoy."

Response—"So mote it be."

The Junior Grand Warden then presented the vessel of wine to the Grand Master, who said as he poured it:

"This wine is an emblem of prosperity and gladness. May the Great Ruler of the Universe bless and prosper our National, State and City governments; direct, strengthen, and cheer our rulers in the discharge of their duties, and may all nations be united in a bond of friendship and brotherly love that shall endure through all time."

Response—"So mote it be."

The Junior Grand Warden then presented the vessel of oil to the Grand Master, who poured it out, saying:

"This oil is an emblem of joy and peace. May its blessings abide with us continually. May the Grand Master of Heaven and earth shelter and protect the widow and orphan, shield and defend them from the vicissitudes of the world, and so bestow His mercy upon the bereaved, the afflicted and the sorrowing, that they may know sorrowing and trouble no more."

Response—"So mote it be."

The Grand Master, standing in front of all and exceeding his hands, made the following invocation:

"May the All-Bounteous Author of nature bless the inhabitants of this place with an abundance of the necessaries, conveniences and comforts of life; prosper the erection and completion of this building; protect the workmen against every accident; long preserve this structure from decay; and grant to us all a supply of the corn of nourishment, and the oil of joy. Amen."

Response—"So mote it be."

After the public grand honors were given, under the direction of the Grand Marshal, the Grand Master delivered to the Architect the implements of architecture, saying:

"Worthy sir, having thus as Grand Master of Masons, laid the foundation of this structure, I now deliver these implements of your profession into your hands, intrusting you with the superintendence and direction of the work, having full confidence in your skill and capacity to conduct and complete the same."

The Grand Master resumed his place on the platform and made the following declaration:

"Men and brethren here assembled, be it known unto you that we are lawful Masons, true and faithful to the laws of our country, solemnly engaged to erect magnificent buildings, to render service to the craft and to humanity, and above all to fear God, the Supreme Architect of the Universe, the great builder of worlds and creator of men.

"We have among us secrets of our art, which may not be divulged, but which are reputable and proper and not repugnant to the laws of God or man. These have been committed in faith to our keeping, and it is our duty to transmit them in our turn unchanged to those who are to succeed us, so that they may remain unimpaired to the remotest generation.

"Unless our Craft, which is good and its calling honorable, it could not, by human providence, have existed for so many centuries, nor would it have been favored with the patronage and care of so many virtuous and illustrious men.

"In the character of Masons we are gathered here today before you all to establish the foundation of a house which, we pray God, may become and continue a place for the concourse of the wise and the good; wherein justice and love may rule the actions of men, and where shall be demonstrated the beauty of harmony in all the transactions of daily life."

Preceding the cornerstone ceremony, a parade took place the route extending from the Kean building to the site of the new courthouse. This was the line of march:

Datter's Band.

Delegations of Nevistar Masons from Overlook Lodge, No. 183, Summit; Anchor Lodge, No. 149, Plainfield; Tyrian Lodge, No. 153, Elizabeth; Azure Lodge, No. 129, Cranford; Orient Lodge, No. 136, Elizabeth; Atlas Lodge, No. 125, Westfield; Herman Lodge, No. 81, Elizabeth; Essex Lodge, No. 49, Elizabeth; Washington Lodge, No. 33, Elizabeth; Lafayette Lodge, No. 27, Rahway; Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, Plainfield.

PONTIFF IS PIUS X.

Joseph Sarto, Patriarch of Venice, Chosen.

AN ABLE AND MODEST CARDINAL.

His Elevation to the Supreme Papal Dignity is Hailed on All Sides as a Blessing to the Roman Catholic Church.

ROME, Aug. 5.—The conclave, after being in session four days, has elected Giuseppe Sarto, patriarch of Venice, as pope to succeed Leo XIII., and he now reigns at the Vatican and over the Catholic world as Pius X. All Rome is illuminated in his honor. His election and the assumption of his holy office were marked by a striking demonstration and impressive ceremonies at the Vatican.

The new pope, clad in his full pontifical robes and with all ritualistic ceremony, will receive the members of the diplomatic corps, the cardinals and the bishops, who will offer their official homage, this notwithstanding the fact that twice the cardinals and many high officials of the Vatican went through a similar ceremony. The date upon which the coronation of Pius X. will occur has not yet been officially decided, but the impression prevails that it will occur Aug. 9.

The election was announced to the world forty-five minutes after the final vote had been taken by the appearance of the new pope at the window of St.

PIUS X.

[Joseph Sarto, Patriarch of Venice.]

Peter's after the conclave was formally dissolved. The cardinals returned to their various apartments in Rome with the exception of Cardinals Oreglia and Rampolla, who temporarily retain their official suits in the Vatican, and Cardinal Herrero y Espinosa, who is too ill to be moved for several days. It was to the sick cardinal that the new pope paid his first visit after being formally proclaimed pontiff.

The cardinals will remain in Rome for the ceremonies, and should the coronation be fixed for next Sunday they *are not likely to return to their respec*tive homes until after that. With the exception of the Spanish cardinal, Herrero, all the others are now in fairly good health.

The election of the patriarch of Venice was unanimous. After many ballots it was a foregone conclusion that he was the only candidate sufficiently acceptable to all to secure the necessary two-thirds which the laws of the church require. One of the cardinals said that he believed Pius X. would follow the broad lines of Leo's policy, although not likely to accentuate it. This voices the general feeling here, which is one of satisfaction. The new pontiff is a man of simple origin and although not a very prominent candidate he had been frequently mentioned as one of the possibilities who might be taken up as a compromise. In several respects he resembles his venerable predecessor, notably in his reputation for culture and piety. Having come in contact with the elections this fact alone won him much favor from foreign cardinals who were without an especial candidate. Pius X. was humorously described as "a country mouse who could not possibly find his way back to Rome." Venetians who know the new pope well say that he will soon be as much beloved as pontiff as he was beloved as patriarch of the poor of the Adriatic. In appearance Pius X. is a very handsome man. He has a fine, soft figure despite his sixty-eight years, his face greatly resembling that of the late Phillips Brooks, the eminent Boston divine. When he pronounced his first benediction at St. Peter's his voice rang out with splendid resonance, which showed he possessed beyond a doubt that he has dignity and personality in keeping with the best traditions associated with the famous pontiff who for centuries have ruled the Vatican.

Before opening the conclave Pius X. repaired to the Sistine chapel in full pontifical robes and wearing the miter, where he seated himself on the throne while the cardinals passed to occupy, as he left the affairs of the patriarchate at Venice in a certain confusion. There on the throne he received the second obedience, or so called "adoration," of the sacred college, each cardinal, as before, kissing his hand and foot as a sign that he acknowledged the new pope's sovereignty. Meantime the oration super pontificem electum was recited in low tones. Then the new pontiff rose, and, extending his hands and his powerful and resplendent voice, which is much stronger than that of the late pope, reverberating through the dim chapel, he pronounced the apostolic benediction amid profound silence.

The new pope seems to embellish the modest surroundings. Pope Pius' benevolent manner is gaining him friends from moment to moment.

All the members of the sacred college declare that they are very well satisfied with the election of Cardinal Sarto, but the Rampolla faction consider it an especial victory. When the first ballot was taken it showed that the sacred college was divided into two groups, the stronger one for Rampolla and another not quite so strong for Serafino Vannutelli. The *other votes were scattered, but includ*ed four for Sarto. On the subsequent ballots, while the two principal factions were losing ground Sarto gradually gained, drawing strength from both sides as well as from the neutrals until the ballot Monday afternoon, when his vote had increased to thirty-seven, within six of the necessary two-thirds.

When the result of this ballot was announced in the conclave Cardinal Sarto was so overwhelmed with emotion and so touched by the unlooked for confidence shown in him that he could no longer control his feelings, and, to the surprise of all, he broke down, declaring that such responsibility and honor were not for him and that he must refuse it if offered. Tears rolled down his cheeks, and he seemed firm in his determination to refuse the dignity. He was so palpably sincere that consternation reigned in the conclave and the cardinals spent the whole evening and far into the night in convincing him that his election was the will of Providence and that he must accept.

Several times he almost fainted and had to be revived by the use of salts. He seemed happy, but broken down even after all the other candidates had retired, and on the final ballot he looked a statue of resignation. Cardinal Casetta, as scrutineer, was reading out the vote. When forty-two votes had been recorded for the patriarch of Venice the scrutineer stopped, lifted the red zucchetto, saying, "Habemus pontificem." But from many sides cardinals cried out, "Continue!" As the vote approached fifty, however, the cardinals, as of one accord, surrounded the new pontiff and, according to tradition, demanded to know if he would accept the pontificate. Cardinal Sarto's lips trembled so that he could hardly articulate, but after a visible effort he said, "If this cup cannot pass from me"— There he paused, and the cardinals around him insisted that it was necessary for him to answer "Yes" or "No." Therupon he replied firmly, "I accept."

Cardinal Gibbons said that the election of Cardinal Sarto had produced the best impression in the entire sacred college, being a man of such piety, tact and culture that he was best fitted to be the head of the church at the present time. Cardinal Gibbons hopes that the coronation of Pius X. will occur soon in order that the foreign cardinals may be able to assist.

Soon after the conclave dissolved one of the cardinals said:

"We really were very, very well treated, and I never better than when I went into the conclave. The perfect rest was really a treat. We had good food, and the arrangements for looking after so many people could not have been better. After mass every day we entered the Sistine chapel and transacted our business. I can quite understand that those outside grew impatient, but I scarcely think we could have been expected to decide so weighty a matter by such a lengthy method of procedure within a shorter time. No doubt the appearance of the smoke was irritating to those who looked for a speedy conclusion, although personally I am surprised to know that the smoke was seen at all, considering that the stoves in the room and the chapel and seeing the diminutive heap which the ballots made, one could scarcely think that they would form when burned a cloud as big as a man's hand. Today of course there was no smoke at all the ballot having been a unanimous one."

SWACKHAMER TO RUN, IF FRIENDS INSIST

North Plainfielder Not Adverse to Becoming a Gubernatorial Candidate.

AN ORATOR IN DEMAND

GAINING IN POPULAR FAVOR THROUGH SPEECHES TO FARMERS.

Democratic Leaders Have Their Eyes on the Assemblyman, Who Will Run, If His Friends Want Him.

Wisecracks among politicans say that Assemblyman Samuel E. Swackhamer is gaining in popular favor every day as a possible gubernatorial candidate. His friends are working hard to place him in line for the candidacy and it is believed that he would not be adverse to running. When asked about it he smiles and says in a modest way, "Well, if my friends insist I might decide to run."

At Trenton he made a hit as a speaker and already his fame has spread throughout this section of the State. He is in demand as an orator and the farmers have asked him to address them on several occasions.

The "Tall Sycamore from Somerset" will be the chief attraction at the farmers' picnic and annual outing at Flemington on August 19. He will tell the agriculturists who wield a large influence with the up State vote something about the "Democratic Needs of New Jersey."

On that day he will have in his audience some who do not know the "man with a hoe," but who are equally at home with the political rake in this section of the State. Some of the Democratic State and local leaders will be in that farmer audience and it will be their business to poke the qualifications of the Bill Nye of Somerset as a possible candidate for the office of the chief executive of the State. His itinerary will be watched and his utterances noted.

SKIN GRAFTING.

French Method Used at the Hospital in the Case of Wilson Frederick.

Much interest is being taking in the skin grafting operations, which have been recently performed in order to save the life of Wilson Frederick, who is confined to Muhlenberg Hospistal, where he has been for the last six months. There are several methods in vogue, being used according to the judgment of the physician.

The method used by Dr. Pittis in this instance is the French, Thiersch. It consists in making antesoptic the arms of those from whom grafts are to be taken. This is done by sterilizing and shaving the forearm. The skin is held up upon the stretcher by one hand while with the other a long wide razor is applied flat to it. The two upper layers, the derm and the epiderm, are removed by a to and fro movement of the razor which is kept flooded with a salt solution.

Each graft is about half as long and about twice as broad as a match. It is immediately laid on the prepared surface upon which it is floated from the razor by the salt solution drawing the edge of the graft on to the wound surface while slipping the razor away. Each graft is then gently pressed into place and the wound surface dressed with a lattice work of protecting strips of rubber tissue which is in turn covered by a compressed kept moistened with salt solution.

No Amputation.

Charles E. Post, the young boy who was injured on the tramway on Watchung avenue near East Fourth street recently by having his limb caught in the mechanism will be discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital within a few days. He is recovering rapidly and amputation will not be necessary.

Appeal for Worthy Cause.

Miss Curry, of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, would like baby carriages, hammocks and especially a tent for the use of a sick child. Persons having any of these things and desirous of helping a worthy cause can communicate with Miss Curry.

Transfer of Realty.

Joshua Letsesny and wife have conveyed to Louis Kaddesh, forty-five links to a point in the middle of Third street; two chains and ninety-eight links to the line of Fourth street lots. The consideration was $925. The deed has been recorded at Elizabeth.

Worthy Representatives.

Frank O. Reinhart and J. Whitney Baker, of this city, and students at Princeton University, will represent the University in the coming golf tournament between American University and Oxford-Cambridge players.

Increasing Capital.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has increased its capital from $30,000 to $60,000.

JUSTICE DISMISSES AUTO SPEEDING CASE

Fanwood Township's Action Against Herman Unger, of Newark, Ended.

BEFORE JUSTICE CLARK

ASSEMBLYMAN SWACKHAMER'S FIGHT FOR THE PROSECUTION.

Judge William A. Coddington Appeared for the Defense—Technical Questions—The Findings.

Justice Joseph Clark at Scotch Plains Monday afternoon dismissed the case of the Township of Fanwood against Herman Unger, a wealthy merchant of Newark, charged with violating the new automobile speed ordinance last October, on the grounds that the charges against the defendant were not drawn according to the requirements of the law. The action of Justice Clark settles a case which has been before the people for nearly two years.

The court was called at 2 o'clock in the theatre-fire engine house on one of the side streets. Backed up on the rear was a row of windows where red, white and blue evidences of washday could be seen through the dusty panes, the sedate justice sat. The wind, caused a pair of red flannel underdrawers hanging on the line in a neighboring yard to beat against the windows in perfect time to the impatient breaths of the justice as he waited for the time to arrive when he could call the court. The witnesses, court attendants, scribes and others hung their hats on the hook and ladder truck stationed in the village theatre while small boys stood about or sought places of comfort on the hand fire engine and hose reel. A stray dog now and then would enter the court room, sniff about and slink out again when some small boy would suddenly move his foot.

William A. Coddington, counsel for the defendant, moved for a dismissal of the case as soon as court opened on grounds set forth in writing. As a member of the firm of Reed & Coddington he challenged the jurisdiction of the court and objected because the complaint was not specified enough, that the "justice did not make a special note in his docket of the day, month and year of the complaint," therefore the proceedings were lacking in legal requirements. Another ground was because the case had been dismissed in third court without notifying said defendant for a period of almost one year since the proceedings were instituted.

S. S. Swackhamer, of the law firm of Codington & Swackhamer, represented the Township in the matter. Mr. Swackhamer made a good fight for the case. He offered to show the justice by witnesses present that the defendant was operating his automobile faster than seven miles an hour and that he was violating the law. The case had been dismissed, however, and the defendant walked out of the concert hall, fire headquarters, and village court house to where his waiting auto stood puffing and trembling as if it was almost ready to shy at the fluttering underclothes of various hues on the line near by.

The case has been watched by automobilists for some time. It has been in the supreme court where the rights of the Township to make such ordinances as were made in Fanwood Township. The Township was sustained in that and it was then brought back to the justice's court, ending in a dismissal yesterday.

COUNTERFEIT COIN.

Spurious Ten Cent Piece in Circulation in This City.

Spurious money has been circulated in this city during the past few days. A sample of the ten cent denomination was received at this office and it appears to be the work of amateurs.

The dime is brass, silver plated. The imitation on its face is a fairly good one but is betrayed on close scrutiny by poor lettering and uneven milling on the edge. It has a smooth greasy feeling. The word "of" in the phrase, "United States of America" is poorly made and the "f" resembles a "p." The coin is dated "1902" and is lighter than the genuine dime.

Martin Kish, of Harmony street, is visiting friends at Atlantic City.

DeWitt is the Name.

When you go to buy Witch Hazel Salve look for the name DeWitt on every box. The pure, unadulterated Witch Hazel is used in making DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, which is the best salve in the world for cuts, burns, bruises, boils, eczema and piles. The popularity of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, due to its many cures, has caused numerous worthless counterfeits to be placed on the market. The genuine bears the name of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

IMPROVEMENT IN TROLLEY SERVICE

Prospects of a New Roadway, New Overhead Wiring and New Cars.

LOCAL OFFICIAL TALKS

GENERAL MANAGER WHEATLEY EXAMINED PLAINFIELD CONDITIONS.

Ordered Cars to be Built by a St. Louis Concern in Near Future—Latest Appliances in Machinery to be Procured.

Plainfield is at last being considered by the officials of the Public Service Corporation as a fertile field for improvements in the rolling stock, road bed and wiring of the local branch of the trolley road. This was given out yesterday by one of the trolley officials who said that the demands of the Plainfield people had been listened to and the ground had already been looked over by General Manager Wheatley.

Together with several other officials of the road, Manager Wheatley came to this city Sunday and in the company's parlor car rode over each of the local lines. An engineer was with the party and notes were made of improvements that were needed in the roadway and the overhead wiring. A visit was made to the car barns and the cars inspected.

One of the officials of the company, when asked about the result of the tour of the city, said to a Daily Press reporter yesterday, that the attention of the road's management had been chiled repeatedly to the condition of the traction service in this city. It was with a view to ascertaining the true conditions that a visit was made to Plainfield.

New rails will be ordered and will replace those now in use. The present are the original rails laid when the road was started and in many places, are practically worn out. The official said that the overhead wiring would also receive attention.

"How about the rolling stock?" queried the interviewer.

"New cars have been ordered from a St. Louis concern for the Elizabeth and Newark division," said the official, "and orders will be placed within a few days for a large number of new cars for the Plainfield service. These cars will be of the single truck type but will be longer than those now used here. The latest appliances in trolley car machinery will be ordered and the cars will be greatly improved."

BAILEY AUTO LAW NULL.

Chaffeurs Need Only Toot Horns When They Ride to New York.

New Jersey owners of automobiles rejoiced Monday over the news from New York that the Bailey automobile law in that State was declared unconstitutional by the Court of Special Sessions.

The provisions of this law required the owners of automobiles to register with the Secretary of State, obtain certificates and display the numbers on the back of their vehicles. The contention in the test case which came before the court was that the law discriminated against private owners of machines and omitted the manufacturers from its provisions.

Manufacturers have occasion to use the highways nearly as much as private owners, in displaying the machines and instructing purchasers in operating them, but they were exempted from the provisions of the law.

COUNTY COMMITTEE.

Meeting Last Night at Elizabeth to Discuss New Primary Law.

The County Republican committee met last evening at Elizabeth and discussed features of the new primary law, making arrangements for carrying out its provisions. County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean, County Secretary James G. Calvert and others, prepared the form of petition to be presented to the city clerk and also the names and endorsements of candidates for public office and election as delegates in a conference of the party leaders and this was last evening adopted as the official petition.

Miss Symons Betrothed.

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Mabel Symons, of East Third street, to Walter B. Roll, of Milwaukee, son of Mrs. Augusta Roll, of Watchung avenue, has been announced. Mr. Roll has been set for the wedding. Mr. Roll leaves this week for the West for a year's business trip.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Rapid Growth of the Society Discussed by Rev. Titus Davis in Warren Chapel Tuesday Evening.

Before the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel last Tuesday, Rev. Titus K. Davis, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church at Mound Brook, delivered an address on the "Growth of Christian Endeavor." The talk was interesting and many listened to it.

Mr. Davis is secretary and treasurer of the State Christian Endeavor League. He told interestingly of the rapid growth of Christian Endeavor Societies in this country since their organization. He said that there was an increase of 3,000 societies in the world during the past year.

WESTFIELD IS TO GO DRY

ORDINANCE ADOPTED CLOSING ALL BARS ON SUNDAYS.

Barbers, Newsdealers and Milkmen Must Complete Their Labors by Ten o'Clock.

Westfield, August 12—In the recent move on the part of certain citizens of this town to close all places of business on Sunday, a strong opposition has developed. The idea originated with the action taken on the part of the Council to close all bars on Sunday. This incensed some people and an effort to carry the movement on resulted in an ordinance being drafted recently which provides that all places of business be closed on Sunday.

The ordinance allows barber shops to remain open until 10 o'clock in the morning and newsdealers to dispose of their papers prior to a certain hour. It also allows milkmen to make their rounds before a specified early hour. Otherwise every store is to be closed for the day.

On Tuesday evening the Council met for the purpose of passing the ordinance on its second reading. The lobby was filled with citizens, nearly all opposed to its adoption. As two of the members of the Council were absent, the other members decided to lay the matter on the table for the present, or until the absentees return.

NEW HOSPITAL SOON READY

WILL PROBABLY BE COMPLETED EARLY IN THE FALL.

Favorable Progress in Erecting the Home for Nurses—More Funds Needed.

Something will be doing before long regarding the new hospital, according to the statement of a person interested in the building of the institution. For some time past work has been held up owing to a lack of funds, but from present indications it looks as though the Board of Governors will soon be able to go on with the work of building, the part likely to be needed this fall. It is confidently expected that the hospital will be ready for occupancy by patients before October. In addition to the patients' wards, there are other portions which the Board desires to complete also. This, it is believed, will be done.

The work of raising funds for the new Nurses' Home is progressing favorably, although those in charge would like to see a still more liberal response. This is also true regarding the subscriptions to the new hospital. The women hope to have the Nurses' Home completed as soon after the hospital as possible as it will be necessary for the nurses to have quarters close by the institution.

CHARGES EMBEZZLEMENT.

New York Company Claims Somerville Man Stole $75.

Somerville, August 13—A warrant was issued yesterday from Justice Juthen's office, here, for the arrest of C. C. Kemp, who is at present in the Essex county jail at Newark, on the complaint of the Credit Adjustment Company, of New York, which charges him with embezzling $75 of its funds.

Kemp boarded here at the TenEyck House and it is said left a board bill of about $40. It is also asserted that he forged the signature of the W. H. Cawley Company for a goodly sum and had R. J. Southwick cash a worthless draft for $15.

Transfers Same as Usual.

The local trolley lines are still being run on the old lines as regards transfers. The company has ordered a new style of ticket, and until they arrive the new order for giving transfers on the cars cannot be put in effect.

LOCAL TAX RATE TO TAKE A RISE

Will be Increased Two Points On Account of Change in County and State Rates.

IS ADVANCED TO $2.52

FINAL ACTION TO BE TAKEN AT MEETING OF COUNCIL NEXT TUESDAY.

Natural Increase in Property Valuations Had Been Depended Upon to Keep Down to the Old Rate.

However much the local Board of Assessors may dislike it, it will be their inevitable duty to raise the tax rate this year from $2.50 to $2.52. This increase of two points in the rate is caused by an increase of one point in the county rate and one in the State rate. A few weeks ago the local Board met and succeeded in keeping the city rate down to its old figure. Despite their efforts, however, it is impossible for them to overcome the county and State increase.

It is regretted exceedingly that Plainfield's rate for the coming year will not be the same as during the last few years, for the natural increase in property valuations was depended upon more or less to keep it down. This could have been done had not the county and State rates taken a jump. Final action will be taken in the matter at the adjourned meeting of the Council on Tuesday evening, August 18, when the books of Tax Collector Smith will be passed upon.

COLORED BOY IS A THIEF

ONLY FIFTEEN YEARS OLD AND HAS STOLEN NUMEROUS SMALL SUMS.

Abstracted Money From Vail & Gardner's Store and Afterwards Confessed.

Arthur VanNess's successor in the petty theft business in town has been cornered by the police. Walter Carr, a fifteen-year-old colored boy who lives in the row of houses back of French's mill, was caught in Vail & Gardner's grocery store this morning and it was found that he had secured a dollar in nickels from the cash drawer.

Carr visited the store shortly after 7 o'clock this morning with his aunt who desired to purchase some groceries. While the woman was being waited on, young Carr disappeared for a short time before rejoining his aunt and leaving the store. When Mr. Gardner, of the firm, went to the cash drawer shortly afterwards he found that the money had been taken. Carr has been suspected of small thefts of money in the store before this but had never been found with any of the money. When he returned to the store later in the morning, he was questioned and searched by Mr. Gardner, but stoutly denied the theft. Mr. Gardner summoned the police. When questioned at court, the boy broke down and confessed.

Carr is the little colored boy who stole a rig from in front of Dr. French's residence two weeks ago and took several of his friends to ride. He has also confessed the theft of $3 from Vail & Gardner's about three weeks ago and smaller thefts from time to time. He will receive a hearing tomorrow in Justice Huff's court.

Collided in the Fog.

Marshal Lawrence Fahn, of the borough, patrolled his beat on Somerset street last evening on a bicycle without a lantern and collided with a woman also on a wheel. Both fell to the ground. The woman did not have her lantern lighted and the officer was unable to see her in the fog until they were almost in collision. Although injured considerably about the face and arms, the woman would not give her name. She said she lived on Summit avenue.

Delegates Elected.

The postponed meeting of the Fireman's Relief Association was held last evening in the rooms of Warren Engine Company. Delegates were elected to represent the association at the convention which will be held in Atlantic City, September 8 and 9. Chief J. J. Stahl, David Bodine, Jacob Riggins and Charles Keller were chosen.

Last Week's Rainfall.

The weather bureau reports that the rainfall at Plainfield for the past week, ending with Saturday evening, has been 4.31 inches.

NO PROTEST FROM ENGLAND

Rumor That American Rifle Team Would Be Protested for Using Special Guns.

VICTORY UNQUESTIONED

GENERAL BIRD SPENCER TALKS ON THE SUBJECT.

Explanation of Failure of Captain Martin, of Company K, to Make the Team—Slight to New Jersey.

There have recently appeared in certain metropolitan papers reports that a protest from England against the American rifle team, which won the Palma trophy at Bisley, may be expected, and shooting cranks throughout the country have been more or less interested. On excellent authority it can be stated that no such protest will be made on the charge, as reported, that the Americans used a special gun in the team match. According to the reports the American team fired with a Springfield rifle with a special barrel, contrary to the requirements, which stipulated that the teams must employ the service rifle of the Government they represented.

Regarding the story, General Bird W. Spencer, president of the National Rifle Association, has this to say:

"The rifles used were United States government pieces with special barrels. No protest has or can be filed unless against practically all teams."

Major James E. Pell, inspector of rifle practice of the District of Columbia, National Guard, concerning the charge, says:

"The rifles used by the English team were not manufactured in English arsenals. If the American team violated the regulations governing the contest so did the British team.

"In the regulations which had been adopted for the shoot it was stipulated that the teams should use service rifles of the country they represented. In the case of the United States that would mean the Krag-Jorgensen. The team used the Krag, but had several guns equipped with a Pope barrel, which had eight instead of four grooves. The barrel is also slightly longer than the regulation Krag, but otherwise is the same. It is the same weight and uses the regulation cartridge.

"Regulations governing all contests in which English marksmen participate provide that the guns used shall be approved by authorities of the English arsenals.

BEST OF THEM BLUNDERED.

Ludicrous Mistakes Made by Some of the World's Most Celebrated Artists.

In Vandyke's celebrated picture of Charles I. in armour both of the gauntlets are for the right hand. Wilkie painted a horse without a bit fastening at the mouth. Angelo, in his great picture, "The Last Judgment," has introduced Charon's bark. Brenghell, the Dutch painter, in a picture of "The Wise Men of the East" making their offering to the Infant Jesus represents one of them dressed in a large white surplice, booted and spurred, offering the model of a Dutch 74-gun ship. Sir Joshua Reynolds gave one of his portraits two hats.

There are numerous similar errors, all most ludicrous, but I cannot at the moment get hold of a list of them, says a writer in the New York Press. Some absurdities are in Westminster hall. Sir Cloudesley Shovel is dressed in a Roman cuirass and sandals, but on his head is a full-bottomed wig of the eighteenth century. The duke of Buckingham is arrayed in the costume of a Roman emperor, while his duchess is in the court dress of the George III. period. Tintoret in a picture which represents "The Israelites flathering Manna in the Wilderness" has armed the men with guns. Paulo Mazzochi in his symbolical painting of "The Four Elements" represents the sea by fishes, the earth by moles, fire by a salamander and air by a camel. Evidently he mistook a camel for a chameleon, which traditionally lives on air.

PICKED UP SPILLED OYSTERS.

Fish-Monger's Boy Was Unabashed and Deliberate in Right-ing Things.

Ten feet in advance of the young man who was hurrying to a dinner engagement walked a fish-monger's boy precariously balancing on his shoulder a large shallow tray, covered by a towel, relates the New York Evening Post. The purpose that he would keep from dropping it did not long continue, for presently he did drop it with a crash. It then became apparent that the precious cargo was composed of blue points on the half shell. Oysters and shells parted company, and the cracked ice on which they had once daintily reposed was mixed with them in a miscellaneous heap on the sidewalk. Was the boy overcome with shame or fear? No. That is not the way of the unconcerned New York delivery boy. He stooped down in a deliberate manner, arranged his tray, and proceeded to gather up the bits of ice, arranging them in an even layer. Then he arranged the shells at regular intervals on this bed, the oysters all the while lying on the flagstones. Last he picked up each oyster with his fingers, and fitted it, right end foremost, into a shell of suitable size. Spreading the napkin over all he went whistling on his errand.

CASE OF COSTLY COURTESY.

One Instance Recorded in London Where It Did Not Pay to Be Polite.

The following pathetic story was told in a London police court recently:

A man was sitting in a comfortably full car, when a woman entered and broke the laws by hanging in pathetic desperation to the end of a strap. Gallantry supervened, the man rose from his seat and relieved the woman from the necessity of breaking the law, but by doing so he broke it himself. Then, says Washington Times, the policeman entered and all persons standing were ejected, and the man was forced to walk home.

On the way any number of crowded cars passed him, which refused to take on any more persons, and he went on cursing the position that medieval chivalry gave women. But his injuries were not over yet. He received a summons and was hauled before a magistrate in a police court, together with other offenders who had stood in cars. The conductor explained the situation and told how it was only politeness that made the prisoner break the law, but it was all of no avail to him. The magistrate sentenced him to pay a fine of three shillings and two shillings for costs.

GULLS FOLLOW VESSELS.

Sea Birds of Puget Sound Afford Travelers an Interesting Study.

To the traveler on Puget sound there is nothing that so holds the interest on the day's trip from Seattle to Victoria, on Vancouver island, as do the seagulls. These birds distinctly are the feature of the trip, greater in many respects than Mount Rainier or Mount Tacoma, as it is well known to the first settlers, and which rises for thousands of feet toward the southeast; greater than the Olympian mountain range on the land between the sound and the Pacific, and which rises cold and drear to no mean proportions.

The seagulls of Puget sound are an institution, and as an institution are protected by the governments of the state of Washington and of British Columbia. To kill a seagull is a crime and punishment is swift and sure to anyone who is caught committing such a deed.

Few Premature Burials.

Speaking of cremation, the London Lancet expresses the opinion that the chances of a living body thought to be dead being reduced to ashes are too infinitely remote to merit attention. In the vast majority of instances there is no real foundation for the stories of premature burial or intended burial.

SUMMER TOILETS.

A Check Costume—Shades Suitable for Two Complexions.

A smart bolero of brown and white check, made for traveling, has a skirt to clear the ground, neatly finished at the hem with three narrow bands of brown taffeta. The little coat bodice has a brown taffeta collar inserted with some very coarse lace motifs, and it is worn over a brown skirt waist with cream silk turn over collars and cuffs.

DINNER WAIST OF YELLOW LACE.

With this is worn a hat of brown straw, the only trimming being a bunch of grapes and pomegranates. To throw over this costume, as occasion required, is a brown taffeta wrap, with a hood lined with coral pink.

Brown is certainly a rather trying color to many women, but where it suits it is eminently smart and useful. There are so few colors which look really nice when traveling, and black is rather apt to show the dust, it really only remains for women to wear gray, biscuit shades and navy blue.

Currants are a feature of the new millinery. Great bunches of red and white currants look delightful, and the fruit used by the best milliners is no longer heavy.

The illustration shows a dinner waist of yellow lace with black velvet bows.

MODES AND FANCIES.

The Useful Linen Gown—Cape Effects Ever Popular.

The French are remaining faithful to the linen frock in many phases. Very charming and simple are the coarse linen embroidery gowns, but for real smartness nothing beats linens trimmed with drawn work and hand-made insertions and velvings. In spite of its apparent simplicity this fashion involves a good deal of labor, which is perhaps the reason of its unprecedented success.

The bodice or blouse of almost every frock is finished with the pelerine collar and a yoke of lace or embroidery. A very pretty biscuit colored linen seen recently had an inserted yoke of coarse ecru embroidery with raised black spots thereon. Around the shoulders, in fichu fashion, was a scarf laced into the embroidery with knotted fringed ends. The hem of the skirt was finished with black velving and the waist was encircled with a band of black taffeta.

Another cream hopsack linen had a plait all the way down of Russian embroidery, with a pelerine collar of the same coming low over the sleeves. The bodice pouched blouse fashion all around over a shaped leather band.

The cut shows a grenadine gown made with a wide collar and skirt panel of lace. The skirt is the new shirred model.

DRESSY COSTUMES.

Blue a Popular Color—Evening Dress and Its Accessories.

Blue is a color very much in favor and comes in a variety of shades, all of which harmonize well with tinted lace.

Practical frocks in biscuit yellow and ivory shades are mostly trimmed with black taffeta, but these bizarre contrasts are not effective unless carried out with consummate skill.

There is a tendency toward the bizarre in dress. Theater and evening wraps are becoming most luxurious, trimmed with jeweled embroideries and costly lace, and in nearly every case the lining consists of an accordion plaited mass of chiffon or mousseline de soie.

It is in full evening dress that artists can exercise to the full their fancy in the mixing of colors. The craze for lace is by no means abating. In fact, it seems to be increasing, and really wonderful imitations are produced.

A great many accordion plaited effects are to be seen among the more expensive gowns.

The fancy for spotted materials is by no means abating, and the early autumn will see a revival of the old shepherd's plaids and checks of various kinds.

The cut shows a dinner dress of painted chiffon and lace.

FASHION HINTS.

To Wear With Country Frocks. Smart Hats.

To wear with country frocks there is a jaunty little marquise hat which is smart in chip or tulle finished with cockades or knife plaited ribbon. There are also all kinds of bows and rosettes made in various soft materials which also form inexpensive trimmings for the country hat with the addition of a soft quill or two.

Hats made of linen embroidery have taken the place of those of muslin and when worn with a frock to match have a decided chic of their own.

The Dolly Varden hat will always have its admirers, and it is very girlish and pretty trimmed with its butterfly bows and strings and its simple wreath of flowers.

Many of the imported hats for morning wear are in coarse pale straws, very flat, with the brim lined with dark ruched mousseline de soie, tulle or velvet, with a flat wreath of flowers or a big bird on top. Wings went out with the approach of the hot days, and the revival in the fall will be tremendous.

The cut shows a blue cloth tailor made trimmed with fringe. The cuffs and collar are of mirror velvet.

FOR WARM DAYS.

New Bathing Suits—Smart Linen Robes.

Some of the new bathing suit models are cut princess fashion, with the skirt fitting the hips closely and sloping out very wide and full at the edge. Sometimes the tunic is made in the two tier fashion or the godet flounce is employed to widen the edge, but the good taste trimmed with flat bands or strappings is by far the neatest and most becoming style. Swimming toilets are usually cut in princess fashion or the bodice is separate and slightly eased into a deep band for the waist. A sash or scarf is usually worn with the bathing costume, but a shaped band is pretty, or even a smooth patent leather belt if the waist is small and round. The Swiss shape is also becoming if the bodice is allowed to bag back and front, and it should be of the material trimmed with braid or stitched in rows all around the edges.

There are some charming linen robes with hemstitched borders to be had at the summer sales. These are not difficult to make, as they are already cut out, but they require care in the arranging. Very often if they are made at home a sailor collar or a sash will hide the deficiencies.

Very pretty skirts can be bought ready to wear, many being sold with an extra length of material, which, when of cloth or other suitable fabric, can be converted into a smart little bolero or sack costee. The usual length allowed is two yards in a double width, and this is ample.

The costume in the cut is of pale blue linen, with the collar of embroidered lawn.

MILLINERY NOTES.

Hats Made of Currants—Brown Veils Popular.

A pretty hat entirely composed of red and white currants was made on a foundation of red and white tulle. It was worn with an ecru and white linen dress and the whole effect was very good.

Red is extremely popular both here and in Paris. Some clear lawns in the new shade of currant red are quite beautiful, provided they are toned down by exquisite lace.

Many French people are wearing no veils at all, still, taking it all in all, veils are generally worn and some are very becoming. The bizarre, large patterned veilings are giving place to fine, flimsy Russian nets and tulle. Navy blue spotted tulle is worn with the all blue hat, and it suits women with good complexions and auburn hair.

Brown veils are charming with brown hats. The finest Russian nets are becoming to the majority.

Everything pertaining to the pelerine shape is fashionable. Certainly the fluffy pelerines are much more becoming than the flat stoles of past seasons. These are now giving way to the pelerine collar of mousseline de soie and chiffon, and to the lace scarf draped in this fashion.

The hat in the picture is of blue straw trimmed with a blue and white silk scarf.

FASHION NOTES.

New Turbans—Long Floating Sleeves on Evening Gowns.

Nothing is smarter at French watering places than the new wide turbans trimmed with red and white currants and their own foliage. They also give a lighter effect to the heavy cloth frocks with which they are sometimes worn.

Tussore silk is being revived, but as a rule it is more practical than becoming. It is very popular for dust coats and useful traveling frocks, for it is inexpensive and wears and washes well.

Immensely long floating sleeves are a feature of nearly all the smart evening gowns. A gray mousseline de soie seen recently was trimmed with lines of the palest mauve velvet. The corsage was finished with the long floating sleeves edged with tiny ruches of chiffon. It is a matter of choice whether these floating appendages come straight from the shoulder or start from a close fitting epaulet and end proportionately short, but however fancy dictates their disposal they are always smart and pretty.

The bolero continues as popular as ever.

Some of the new hats in chip are turned up abruptly at the sides toward the back, where they are simply trimmed with a bow of black velvet and perhaps an ostrich feather. These are smart and at the same time serviceable, for there is nothing on them, if the feather be omitted, to get spoiled by wind or rain. A favorite hat has again come into favor. It is called the "Nell Gwynn." It is very large, takes most becoming lines and is trimmed with beautiful feathers coming out all round from the crown and just overhanging the brim.

The illustration shows a toque of black straw trimmed with two wings.

USEFUL GOWNS.

Soft Makes of Linen—Tailor Made Check Gowns.

There are a great many soft makes of linen this year, and they are really more serviceable wear because they do not crease so easily and are so much easier to wash and iron even if they do cost a little more at first.

A feature of the early autumn will be checks, red and white, brown and white, green and white and blue and white. They sometimes do the duty of plain cloth in the between seasons and do duty on chilly days. The Parisienne always has a check dress in her wardrobe.

A dress of this description should be tailor made, decorated perhaps, but at the same time neat and useful, with a skirt neither too short nor too long. A charming model was made with narrow box plaits on the hips, down the front and in the center of the back, with a skirt just to clear the ground. The blouse bolero was also box plaited with a shoulder piece of very coarse Italian lace and some incrustations of black velvet. The waistband was of turquoise panne, and there was a suspicion of turquoise chiffon at the neck. Altogether it was an essentially practical gown suitable for many occasions.

The cut shows a costume of spotted canvas, with a box plaited bolero trimmed with embroidery and tassels.

SENSITIVE GIRLS

A Little Talk on the Ills From Which They Suffer

"PITY the sensitive girl!" The speaker was a prettily dressed and vivacious young matron.

"Why, what do you know about it?" laughed another member of the piazza group.

"Everything," returned the speaker, an expression of pain crossing her pretty face. "I used to be a sensitive girl myself, would you believe it? Everything that it was possible for such a girl to suffer I suffered. I would have been a wretched and good for nothing woman if I had not met Paul. From the first he coaxed me along, made fun of me gently, above all believed in me, encouraged me to have confidence in myself, to act on the supposition that other people liked me and wanted me around, until out of the sheer hypnotism of the suggestion I became really popular and forgot to fancy myself injured and slighted all the time, as I used to do."

"Another case of the value of matrimony; it cures sensitiveness," laughed a girl.

"Not when you marry a sensitive man. I know of one such case. A sensitive woman married a sensitive man, and all their life has been spent in self analysis, in imaginary quarrels and differences.

"It certainly is a bad thing for a girl to be sensitive. I remember one such unfortunate at the hotel where I stayed last summer. She was always moping by herself with a book, looking sadly out of the corners of her eyes at the groups of laughing girls she was too timid to join because she imagined she was not wanted. Why didn't she go up and try? Hardly a girl but would have liked her, for she was really jolly and a good companion, but hypersensitiveness kept her away."

"I know of another girl who made a lifelong enemy through her sensitiveness," put in a quiet little woman. "She was not invited to a dance through a mistake, as it afterward turned out. It was an affair at which she had every right to expect she should be invited. The next morning she met the hostess on the street, her eyes filled with tears and she turned away without bowing. The hostess did not see the tears, but she saw the cut direct, as she thought, and she has never had the girl at her house since."

IMAGINED SHE WAS NOT WANTED.

"Sensitiveness is a good quality in a way," said another, "for I hate a girl that nothing can affect, but I must say it very often degenerates into morbidness and it certainly is a trial to have to listen to the wails of the sensitive person. 'Oh, dear me! I wonder what is the matter with me! No one seems to care for me! Now Susan Brown is so popular and yet she is so loud voiced and noisy! I never do anything out of the way and yet people are always doing things to hurt me and I never get invited to any of the really jolly things, and if I do get there I notice that no one cares to talk with me. Oh, yes, they sometimes do it out of politeness, but I can see they don't really want to. That has always been the way; I have always been out of things ever since I was a little girl. I suppose it's because I have such a homely figure and such an awkward way about me,' etc., or else the sensitive girl wails: 'I noticed Susan Brown didn't bow to me this morning. What can I have done?' And there follow a soul searching examination and self torture when perhaps Susan was in a hurry or nearsighted."

"Give me the jolly girl who is perfectly natural," remarked the first speaker, "and who takes the world as she finds it and the people as she finds them, too, without worrying over the impression she is making and without fretting over small slights."

MAUD ROBINSON.

Pair Wives the Cheapest.

A lady novelist says that blond women are the most economical wives from the viewpoint of the husband's millinery bill. "For," she declares, "a blond can wear a poor black without much trouble, but if a brunette attempts to wear anything but the best black the result will be disastrous. A brunette can wear only the strongest blacks. A pure waxy blond is the only type that can properly wear white."

WOMEN SHOPPERS.

And Some of the Pleasant Little Tricks Peculiar to Them.

In a certain successful play there is a jury scene, and one of the jurors gives vent to much cynicism about women.

"Why, what do you know on the subject?" sneers a fellow juror.

"Gentlemen, I know just how fiendish a woman can be," reiterates the man. "I am a clerk in a dry goods store!"

There is a good deal of cause for his bitterness. Of all the "aggravating" women, shoppers are the worst. Why on earth will a woman persist in looking one way while she walks another? This in a crowded store, where every inch of room is precious. Result, collision, hats knocked at angles of forty-five degrees, trains ripped and trodden on.

DOESN'T LOOK WHERE SHE GOES

Why will women bring small children with them to department stores and drag them around remorselessly while the poor mites lose their balance and bang first into this one and then into that one, not to speak of being walked over?

Why is it that at the hat counter when you have removed your hat and veil and made yourself comfortable a woman comes around immediately and pokes under your hat? There are plenty of other straw shapes around, but she simply must see the particular one which your hat conceals.

Why is it that women ask for samples and then immediately proceed to lose them outside the store?

Why is it that a woman will change her mind after a check is made out and oblige the clerk to write it all over again just because she has decided to take the parcel with her instead of sending it? Why couldn't she make up her mind in the first place? Why is it that women will lose their shopping lists and pocketbooks under the bales of goods on the counter and then set the whole department to searching for them?

Why is it that the average woman shopper seems to dispense with her thinking apparatus the minute she enters a store?

Goodness only knows!

R. DE LA RAUME.

Sensible Women.

GIANT EGG OF AEPYORNIS.

Marvelous Specimen Recently Acquired by the American Museum of Natural History.

A rare and remarkable curiosity in the shape of the largest egg in the world is now on exhibition in Bird hall of the American museum of natural history. The egg belonged to a gigantic extinct bird, called the aepyornis, formerly inhabiting the wilds of the Island of Madagascar. This huge member of the bird kingdom, for some unknown reason, was exterminated in comparatively recent times, and nothing but its fossil eggs and fragmentary remains of the skeleton can be found.

From the length and size of the limbs and feet the birds are said by scientists to have been probably twice or three times the height of an ostrich, of which they are supposed to be a distinct group. They were powerful and ever dangerous creatures to human life. It is related that they carried off cattle and sheep and the white inhabitants had to walk about with tame tigers to guard and protect themselves from their attack. The extraordinary size of the egg, which is nearly a foot long by ten inches in diameter, is vividly shown by comparison with a hen's egg, which seems nothing but a mere speck in comparison.

Nearly half a hundred hen eggs could be packed inside, says the New York Commercial-Advertiser. Only a few perfect eggs have been found. They command a high price, owing to their scarcity, averaging from $100 to $500 a piece.

QUEER KIND OF THEFT.

Mexican Hotel-Keeper Tapped Electric Light Company's Cable to Save Cost.

A hotel keeper in the City of Mexico, whose place was always brilliantly lighted by electric lamps, apparently without regard to cost, has recently been convicted by a local judge for stealing from the electric light company the current with which his hostelry was lighted. He was condemned to a year's imprisonment and a fine of $33.70, and, as an additional penalty, was "disqualified for all kinds of public honors and employments," reports the Chicago Chronicle.

The landlord who attempted to evade a corporate company's rate charged wired his house and made a connection with the company's cables, with the intention, as he pleaded, of calling at the office of the company and explaining the matter at a later day. He also declared that he had "used the current for "only a month." The company had its suspicions aroused and applied to the court for authority to make an examination of the hotel lighting system, which was granted, with the result of revealing the fraud. The legal point of interest involved in the case hinged upon the definition of the word "robbery," which the district code thus elucidates: "He commits robbery who possesses himself of a movable thing belonging to another, without right and without the consent of the person entitled by law to dispose of it."

EXCHANGE OF CHILDREN.

Where City Parents Trade Their Offspring with People from the Country.

A curious arrangement, called "The Exchange of Children," was adopted by some charitable people of Berlin last summer, and will be revived this spring, says the New York Tribune. The promoters arrange for the temporary interchange of city and country children. Children of working people there begin to contribute to the support of the family sooner than in this country. The little ones all have their tasks. This is true in the country, as well as in the cities, but the labor performed by children in the towns is very different from that on the farm. Hence some charitable women of Berlin organized a fresh-air scheme by which the children of the poor may exchange places for a few months in the summer. Those from the farms come into the city, which is a valuable educational experience for them, and those in the city have an opportunity to enjoy a little country life, without depriving the parents of either of their assistance. Families who are willing to make such exchanges are invited to report at the headquarters, where an exchange is arranged.

Highest Waterfall.

While mining in Mexico, William P. Durham, of Denver, visited what is considered the highest waterfall in the world. It bears the Indian name of Basaseachic, and is located about 190 miles west of the city of Chihuahua, near the summit of the Sierra Madre mountains. The elevation of the mountain is 8,500 feet above sea level. The cascade falls 978 feet.

Large Artificial Lake.

In a gorge of rock little more than 200 feet wide the United States government has decided to construct a dam of solid masonry, the first under the Hansbrough-Newlands act, at the Tonto Basin site, that will create in the hills of the upper Salt river and Tonto creek the largest artificial lake in the world. It will irrigate 200,000 acres.

Only One Gas Yet to Be Solidified.

Profs. Moissan and Dewar have lately succeeded, with the aid of liquid hydrogen, in solidifying fluorin, and they remark that helium is now the only gas which has not been obtained in the solid state. An interesting result of the experiments was the demonstration that, although chemical activity tends to cease at extremely low temperatures, yet fluorin, which is known to possess more powerful affinities than any other element, is capable, even when reduced to the solid state, of combining with liquid hydrogen. Such a combination, accompanied with a violent explosion, was produced when the solid fluorin and liquid hydrogen were kept at a temperature of —232.5 degrees Centigrade, equivalent to 425.5 degrees Fahrenheit below zero. —Science.

Royal Stamp Collectors.

The prince of Wales is not by any means the only royal philatelist. It is said, indeed, that every royal family in Europe has a member who is collecting stamps. Probably the most zealous collector is Princess Clementine of Belgium. She has made a study of stamps and is regarded as a authority on the subject. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and the king of Servia have for years been placing stamps in beautiful albums, but of late it is said their interest in the subject has somewhat waned. Pope Leo XIII. has a collection of exceptionally rare stamps, and frequently he spends his leisure moments in examining them. The prelates of the church are aware of his weakness in this direction, whenever they can they send him new treasures for his collection.—Golden Penny.

Finds from Pharaoh's Tomb.

There are bargains and finds to be made in the plant world equal to any picked up in old curiosity shops. Some time ago a Glasgow gentleman received from his son in Egypt an envelope full of peas, which were said to have been found in the tomb of one of the Pharaohs. He sent them to a friend of his at Hames, in the isle of Bute, who sowed them. They grew up into plants quite unlike anything at present extant, strong and about six feet high, with a great white flower having a red center. The pods were long, and full of excellent peas. This new old variety found a ready sale at good prices.—Nature.

Pewter a Rare Metal.

At the beginning of the sixteenth century, pewter was so rare in England as to be hired by the year for noblemen's houses, and even during the reign of Elizabeth was a very costly material. Gremio, in "The Taming of the Shrew," alludes to it as one of the important articles of housekeeping in his city mansion. Before the invention of carpets the rooms were spread with rushes, even in the noblest mansions, and Shakespeare has many allusions to this old custom in words put in the mouths of Iachimo, Glendower and Romeo.

Taxes in London.

Practically only the buildings are taxed in England, and this tax the occupant pays. There is now a strong movement in favor of taxation of "ground rents" and "site values," and the introduction of the plan of laying assessments on property for local improvements, as in this country. It is vigorously opposed by the wealthy class, especially by the lords, on the ground upon which London is built.—N. Y. World.

Kansas City Couple Married Without Their Knowledge

Justice Made a Sorry Blunder, But the Knot He Had Tied Unexpectedly Bound the Young People Together for Life.

A CASE where a couple was married without the knowledge and against the wishes of both came up in the recorder's office in Kansas City recently. Floravante Picavelli and Pasqualina Novelli, in company with a much older couple, Luca Picavella and Filomena Bolitta, entered the office and by the aid of an interpreter declared their intention to get married. A license for each couple was accordingly made out and Justice of the Peace William Hicks, having been summoned by telephone, appeared upon the scene.

"NO MARRICH, NO MARRICH!"

The first couple to be married was the older one. Seeing the other two standing a little to the rear and holding each other's hands, the judge addressed himself to the interpreter. "Do those two want to get married?" The interpreter nodded his assent and the work of making out the marriage certificate was begun. To all the customary questions asked by the judge the couple, through the interpreter, made the proper answers.

During all this time the other couple appeared to be too much engrossed with each other to notice what was going on, but as the judge handed the young man the marriage certificate the elder woman suddenly darted forward and snatched the paper from his hand. For *a moment she stood comparing the pa*per with the one given her by the judge a little earlier. Then she began talking rapidly to the young couple in her native tongue. For a moment they stood as though stunned. Then all began talking and gesticulating wildly with their hands. The babel of voices grew deafening and finally the judge, almost overcome by the din, shrieked into the ear of the interpreter: "Here, for heaven's sake stop that noise. What are they shouting about?"

"Why," stammered the interpreter, "they say they didn't want to get married."

"Didn't want to get married?" The *judge's voice rose with each word in as*tonishment.

"No, they say they didn't want to get married. At least not now. They were going to wait and be married by a priest. They thought that you were only making out the license."

The surprise groom here advanced, the certificate in his hand, the other man and two women bringing up in the rear. "No marrich, no marrich," he shouted, extending the paper to the judge.

"They want you to untie the knot," explained the interpreter.

After considerable difficulty the judge made the couple understand that this was impossible and the marriage must have to stand. The couple finally decided to make the best of it, however, and left the office. As the four descended the courthouse steps they were still talking and gesticulating.

SEES DEATH IN DREAM.

Montana Rancheman Murdered by Tramp He Had Wronged and Offended Twice.

Students of the occult are finding much food for thought in the murder of Fred Teasdale, a rancher of Bridger, Mont., by a tramp who refuses to give his name, but who says that he knew the dead man long ago and that Teasdale did him a deadly wrong.

"I had a queer dream last night, only it was not really a dream," said Teasdale, when he went into the field in the morning, addressing several men. "I thought that I was living long, long ago and did a fearful wrong to a man who once was my friend. We parted and met many years later, when we engaged in a quarrel. During this quarrel he shot me. The funny part of it all was that at the time I seemed to be living firearms had not been invented."

As the men were working, about noon, a tramp appeared in the field and asked to be put to work. He was given employment. When his eyes fell on Teasdale he turned pale and staggered as if hit a heavy blow.

Soon Teasdale began joking about his poor workmanship. This angered the tramp, and hot words followed. Suddenly Teasdale leaned forward and struck the tramp in the face.

"Curse you, that's twice you have wronged me in this world," shouted the tramp, "but it will be the last."

Then he drew a revolver and fired, the ball penetrating the heart of the rancher, who fell dead. The tramp was seized and taken to jail. He refuses to give his name, saying only that Teasdale knew him and that he merely took revenge for an injury done him many years before. The tramp showed indications of having at one time filled a high position in the world and is evidently a man of education.

"TWICE YOU HAVE WRONGED ME."

Girl Frightened to Death.

Mary McAndrew, an amiable and pretty factory girl, aged 17, of Scranton, Pa., became slightly ill. Her companions in the factory, to tease her, said she showed the early symptoms of smallpox, some scattered cases of which malady were in the city. The girl became so alarmed that she went home and committed suicide by taking carbolic acid.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Thrilling Experience of a Missouri Farmer Who Was Thought to Be Dead.

A few days ago G. W. Peacher, of Sturgeon, Mo., 31 years old, was struck by lightning and given up for dead. But he lives to tell the story. Peacher was visited at his residence, ten miles south of Sturgeon, and said:

"Well, I may not look like a dead man, but it seems to me like I was dead, buried, and am now resurrected. It was a close call I ever had, and if anybody could have been found about the time I was struck I would have bet them my farm against a glass of buttermilk that I was done for.

"The lightning struck me on the left shoulder and burned me to my toes. Both shoes were badly torn, and in the photograph here you can see for yourself how it treated my clothes. Well, for a few minutes I was dead. The boys gathered around me and I heard one of them say that I died easy.

"The boys told me it was fully 20 minutes before I moved, and the first thing I said was a request for water. This was brought to me, and I drank all of it. My companions asked me what physician I wanted, and I told them that I would be dead before any of those at Sturgeon could be told about the affair.

"My nerves were racked, and whatever courage I had possessed in former days deserted me. In an hour the doctor arrived, gave me an opiate, and I went to sleep. I refused to give his name, saying only that Teasdale knew him and that he merely took revenge for an injury done him many years before. The tramp showed indications of having at one time filled a high position in the world and is evidently a man of education.

Getting Close to Nature.

Richard and Cherry Kearton, who have recently brought out in England a new edition of Gilbert White's fascinating book, "The Natural History of Selborne," illustrated with photographs of the birds, animals and insects described by White, adopted methods of getting close to their subjects which are unique. Some of them are worth the attention of amateur photographers. Sometimes they concealed themselves and their camera in a stuffed sheep, and sometimes it was a stuffed cow they employed. On other occasions they built an artificial hollow rock near the haunt of the birds they were studying. Sometimes clothing, colored like the grass or the soil, served their purpose. They photographed not only birds on their nests, and feeding their young, but fish in the water, and dragon flies and beetles resting on leaves or stems, and even snakes in the grass.—Youth's Companion.

German Pine Needle Oil.

The making of pine needle oil is an industry of the Thuringen mountains in Germany. The needles and young shoots of various pines—especially of Pinus pumillio—are collected late in May or early in June, and are cut into small pieces and put into a cylindrical still, though which steam is passed. The steam is then liquefied in a condenser, when the volatile oil carried over is skimmed from the surface of the water. The portion of the steam condensed in the cylinder *falls through the bottom, carry*ing resinous, albuminous and tannated substances, and this extract is concentrated in a special vacuum evaporator, when it is added to the oil to give the necessary perfume. The oil is put up in jars as a remedy for rheumatic and similar complaints. The fibers left in the still are separated by a special machine, perfumed with the oil, and put up in packages for stuffing pillows.

Good Word for Rocking-Chairs.

Someone who was interested in the fact has discovered that while American women are shorter than their English sisters, their legs are much more symmetrical and their ankles more graceful. The belief is expressed that the reason for this lies in the great love of the American women for rocking chairs. Here a woman will sit down in a rocking chair, and, apparently happy, rock by the hour, were she not disturbed, probably not knowing that the mere movement employed to keep the chair in motion does, by repeated pushes of the toes, make the instep high, the calf round and full, and so deep from the ankle an accumulation of flesh.—Washington Post.

The Gist Him.

A good story is told showing the rapidity with which things move nowadays. A certain servant went to her mistress and gave notice.

"I'm going to be married, ma'am."

"To whom?" asked her mistress.

It subsequently transpired that the widower had a fancy to his fiancee, as "she was the only cheerful party there."—London Express.

BATTLE WITH MOSQUITO.

New Jersey Judge Fights Bitter Duel While in Without a Peer in History of Chivalry.

Loud war cries and much shedding of blood marked the battle between Recorder Jacob G. Post, of Bloomfield, N. J., and a monster mosquito of the Orange Mountain species. The recorder had held court all day and he slept like a log until shortly after midnight. Then he was awakened by a loud, strident, insistent yell of: "Him-m-m-m-m!"

So vicious was the slogan, so significant of a raging blood thirst, that the recorder trembled as he awoke, struck a light and began to search for an intruder. He found no one. Then he thought that perhaps some passing late drinker had amused himself by blowing one of the fiendish revolving bicycle whistles. He looked out of the window, but saw no one in the street. As he turned toward his bed a fierce, winged monster with a long bill like the blade of a swordfish flew at him. It was a robust Orange Mountain petroleum-nourished mosquito, mighty of wing and of a most atrocious disposition.

The recorder smashed at the monster with a heavy cane and missed him. With a yell of delight the thing darted at him again. Once more the recorder made a mighty lunge at his assailant, but again he missed. The bird of prey retreated to a shadowy corner of the room and got ready for another attack. Evidently he was up on baseball tactics, for as the recorder swung a high blow that would have batted him away far beyond Hoboken the creature swooped downward and planted his bill in one of the smaller arteries of the calf of the recorder's right leg.

His honor dropped the stick and with a mighty swat of his right hand laid the monster sprawling on the rug. It measured nearly three inches from tip to tip—the mosquito, not the rug.

The recorder's wound bled so profusely that he sent for Dr. F. G. Shoul, who treated the cut with antiseptic dressing, and after some time succeeded in stopping the flow. The mosquito was the largest ever seen in the neighborhood of Bloomfield.

duty near the Belt-Line railway at Seventy-sixth street he found a refrigerator car with the seals broken and several cases of beer missing. A trail of beer led from the car and he followed it. It led to an empty car, where he discovered McNulta and Henry West rapidly opening bottles and disposing of the contents.

"I like your story very well," said Justice Hennessey to the prisoners, "but I fear I shall have to impose a light tap on the wrist. It will be $50 each, which trifling sum I suppose you have about you."

Doctors Have Right of Way.

In the streets of Berlin doctors' carriages have the right of way. Even the emperor's carriage must pause when a doctor's vehicle is about to cut across its path.

DEGREES OF TEMPERANCE.

Funny Answers to the Question: "Do You Use Intoxicating Beverages."

Among the regular questions to be answered by applicants for admission to the examinations in the city of New York is the following, says A. M. Jones, in McClure's: "Do you use intoxicating beverages, and if so, to what extent?" It was a Yankee who replied: "No, but I take a drink," and it was a Swede who carefully estimated the extent of his indulgence at "one glass of beer in ten days." The birthplace of a man who wrote that he did use intoxicating beverages "but not as an occupation" is not recorded, but the nationality of the mournful applicant who also drank, but "not to success," may well be a matter of *doubt. One applicant of simple vocab*ulary was content to respond: "Yes—mild," while another added the assurance that he drank in a "gentlemanly way." Still another sought to remove all prejudice from the minds of the examiners by stating that he never used any "beverages" at all, and one of his companions admitted using them, though "not effectively."

The most correct answer to the question consists either of the single word "moderately" or of some equivalent phrase, which, on the whole, seems to the examiners the most suitable response. Perhaps the honest soul who reported himself "temperate" was a fair representative. Sometimes by a slip the applicant will write the reverse of what he obviously intended, as when recently one said "immoderation," and another replied: "Yes, to no extent."

MAN WHO USED A PURSE.

It Was Too Much for His Fiancee and She Broke the Engagement.

Rumor has it that a belle of this city broke her engagement with a certain Washington club man, "just because he carried his money in a purse," reports the Washington Star.

"I can't abide," she is quoted as saying, "a man who carries a purse at all; and as for one who keeps his change in it; he is simply beyond hope, and it's sure to follow that the man with the little purse will be as little and close about everything else. You may not notice it during the engagement, but it will come later.

"Fancy asking a man for money, and have him extract a miserable little purse, and begin digging down into it, half the time the little piece of leather is in the way instead of holding the amount that one would ordinarily pay for a simple frock."

And the matron to whom the young belle confided the cause of the broken engagement was heard to remark afterward that she would not be surprised if there was not considerable truth in what she had heard, and, while it might not warrant most girls breaking an engagement, still, it was a thing for them to ponder over."

KEROSENE AND MOLASSES.

Both Are Carried in the Same Tanks by Ships in West Indian Trade.

*Commerce—dull, prosaic, matter-of-*fact commerce—plays queer pranks. One of the queerest is played in the kerosene trade. Almost all the kerosene oil that is shipped from America now goes out in great oil tank steamships and barges—vessels that are practically nothing but mighty floating kerosene cans. The oil is pumped into them, and then their iron hatch covers are screwed down, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

Now, when these tank vessels carry kerosene to the West Indies, they cannot afford to return empty, for the voyage home is just as expensive to the owners as the voyage down. So, after the oil has been pumped out of them, they are cleaned again and superheated steam is forced into them until they are perfectly clean. Then the hatches are reopened and molasses is pumped in.

To put molasses into tanks that have been used for kerosene would surely be the last thing that most persons would think of. But commerce does it.

Saved by Quarantine.

A few years ago it would have seemed absurd to promise that the great commercial ports of the world could be made absolutely free from danger of invasion by such epidemic scourges as cholera and plague, but a careful investigation of the elements of danger and a rigid enforcement of quarantine regulations have made all our cities exempt from infection.

Smallpox Disfigurement.

In a recent article in a widely-read magazine Dr. Nilsen Hass and His Healing Rays" it is said: "All the world might now have smallpox without fear of disfigurement." The red light treatment was experimented with long before and much since that publication, and the results show the quoted statement to be unwarranted.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Philadelphia may be slow in some things but when it comes to newspapers the Quaker City is entitled to the gold medal. The publishers realize that there are certain interests which they have in common and are looking no time to protect them.

In referring to the admirable condition prevailing in newspaperdom at the City of Brotherly Love the Camden Post-Telegram observes: "Instead of the cutthroat policy which heretofore has prevailed, they propose to act in mutual accord, agreeing upon certain business propositions which will not interfere with legitimate rivalry, but will effect saving to all. For one thing, they propose to eliminate the 'free puff' and enforce payment for advertising which under various guises creeps into the news columns. The occasional insertion of a free notice for a regular advertiser is a matter of business discretion that will not be interfered with, but the ubiquitous press agent who works the papers for free reading matter and makes himself solid with the advertiser by the amount of space he thus secures without pay, will find it much more difficult to get his matter published, except at advertising rates. Advertising space is the chief asset of a newspaper, and when a publisher gives it away it is like giving away money out of the cash drawer. By a thorough understanding and the maintenance of harmonious business relations, the Philadelphia publishers will be able to increase their profits, an example to be emulated by competing newspapers in other cities."

New Jersey's lax laws in regard to the selling of poisons and poisonous narcotics, have often caused trouble in the past and are a frequent cause of adverse comment. The other day a Plainfield woman entered a local apothecary shop and asked for laudanum. Her object in buying it was suicide, her attempt following a long sickness and despondency. On buying the poison, she offered no explanation of the uses to which she intended putting it and the clerk who waited upon her required none. The woman took a large dose after reaching home, and but for the prompt discovery of her condition and the immediate services of a physician would have accomplished her purpose. The woman's husband immediately consulted a lawyer with a view to bringing suit against the apothecary at whose store the laudanum was sold. He was informed that he had no case, inasmuch as the law merely provides that the druggist shall state the nature of the poison he is selling and label the bottle containing it. Nothing further is required of him. This should not be so. In nearly every other eastern State, the laws governing the selling of poisons are stringent. The person buying is required to register his name and state whether he intends using the poison for himself or another; and is obliged also to state the medicinal uses to which he proposes putting it. In some places a written order from a physician is demanded. The ease with which poison is obtainable in New Jersey is undoubtedly a temptation to many to take advantage of it when the desire to "shuffle off this mortal coil" becomes overpowering. As a preventative of suicide and crime, it should be made possible to trace every ounce of poison sold in the State.

The uselessness of the tirades of fanatics was never more completely demonstrated than in the case of "Mother" Jones. Throughout her trip, the agitator has been greeted with nothing more flattering than ridicule by all the newspapers that have seen fit to comment upon her utterings and methods. People listen to her for the same reason that they go to look at the tattooed man in the circus, or attend one of "Carrie" Nation's "lectures."

The way to attack such problems as child labor is coolly and calmly. The radical reformer never accomplishes as much as the man who tries to make the best of existing circumstances and to build upon them. To lose one's head and rave insanely about everyone who does not instantly fall in with one's views is to defeat the purpose striven for. Mother Jones's attacks on the President and others in power react upon herself and those she claims to be aiding.

NEW RECORD FOR AMATEUR GOLFERS

Frank O. Reinhart Goes the Rounds at Hillside Club in 65, Lowering His Mark.

A SPLENDID SHOWING

SCORE PROBABLY THE LOWEST EVER MADE BY AN AMATEUR.

Park Club Weekly Competitions Won by Thurlow and Morris—Stockton Second to the Club Champion at Hillside.

HILLSIDE.

In competition for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday afternoon, Frank O. Reinhart, club champion, beat his own lowest mark for the course and established a new record. Under conditions that were the best, he made the circuit of eighteen holes in 65 strokes. On the outward journey Reinhart took thirty-one strokes and came home in thirty-four. This score is probably the lowest yet made in the amateur ranks and Reinhart's work on Saturday bespeaks good results in his coming play against the Oxford-Cambridge players.

The second and third honors for the Golf Committee cup were won by H. R. Stockton and H. D. Hibbard. This gives Stockton a total of 11½ points, while Hibbard has a total of four points. Reinhart's six points put him in fifth position.

Three scores were posted for the Golf Committee cup:

Frank O. Reinhart, 65, 0—65; H. R. Stockton, 78, 4—74; H. D. Hibbard, 88, 13—76; J. E. Erickson, 96, 16—78; Willard Wadsworth, 83, 5—78; Arthur Murphy, 89, 10—79; Thomas R. VanBoskerck, 89, 9—80; L. PARK CLUB.

The weekly competitions for the President's and Park Golf Club cups on the Park Golf Club course Saturday afternoon, brought about a few changes in the standing for these two trophies. Leon R. Thurlow won first honors for the President's cup, with George T. Rogers second. T. W. Morris, Jr., secured the one remaining point. For the other cup, scratch event, T. W. Morris, Jr., won first honors, while W. de la R. Anderson and Herbert S. Rogers won the other points. T. U. Dudley, Jr., still leads for the President's cup, while Morgan T. Townsend is still in the lead for the other cup, with T. W. Morris, Jr., a close second.

These were the scores for the two cups:

Leon R. Thurlow, 111, 35—76; George T. Rogers, 114, 36—85; T. W. Morris, Jr., 99, 10—89; Herbert S. Rogers, 101, 11—90; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 114, 21—93; Samuel Townsend, 106, 13—93; Frank Rogers, 110, 17—93; J. H. Howell, 108, 15—93; R. C. Wells, 111, 107—94; W. de la R. Anderson, 100, 4—96.

Westfield, August 10—In the continuation of the preliminary play for the President's competition at the Westfield Golf Club, on Saturday, E. H. Faulkner and L. D. Compson qualified. Their scores were 77 and 79 respectively. The scores:

E. H. Faulkner, 105, 28—77; L. D. Compson, 109, 30—79; A. D. Tuttle, Jr., 107, 21—86; E. D. Floyd, 93, 13—80; E. A. Merrill, 111, 30—81.

SHOOTING COST HIM DEAR

STEPHEN VAN BUHREN KILLED A CUCKOO AND PAID HEAVY FINE.

He was a Non-Resident and Justice Cooper, of Warrenville, Charged Him Over $50.

Stephen VanBuhren, of South Oxford street, Brooklyn, had a rather expensive visit among friends at Mt. Bethel on Saturday. He is very fond of hunting and when he left home he took his gun with him, fully expecting to capture a good bag of game. Much to his surprise he met Game and Fish Warden C. M. Hawkins and Deputy Warden L. C. Wyckoff, the latter of the borough.

The officials found a cuckoo in VanBuhren's possession and it soon was learned that he was a non-resident of the State. He was taken before Justice John P. Cooper, of Warrenville. The latter imposed a fine of $28.45 for shooting the cuckoo and $20.55 for being a non-resident gunner. The prisoner paid his fine and in the future will probably exercise more care in the choice of hunting grounds.

STRONG STREAM.

Chief Doane Announces Results of Tests of New Nozzles Department May Buy.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, has given out some interesting figures regarding the test of the new deluge nozzle tried on West Fourth street, last week. The stream was sent 100 feet in the air in a vertical direction and 167 feet in a horizontal direction. This was accomplished with a one and one-third inch nozzle at a pressure from the hydrant of 75 pounds. With the other kind of nozzles now in regular use in the department the farthest a stream can be sent horizontally is 140 at the same pressure.

Last week's test was preliminary and another will be made at a time set by Councilman R. L. Lee, chairman of the fire committee. At this test the fire engine will be attached to three plugs and will discharge through one of the new nozzles. Should this test prove satisfactory it is probable that a set of the new appliances will be ordered for the department.

WHAPS THIS?

New Brunswick to Have Work Done to Its Streets—Tramps to Labor.

Tramps will now give New Brunswick, and, in fact, Middlesex County, a wide berth because at a recent session of the Board of Freeholders it was decided to revive the ball and chain gang in order to rid the county of tramps. A large number of balls and chains will be ordered and all tramps captured will be put to work cracking stone on the streets.

Death at the Home.

Brought to the Netherwood Fresh Air Home from a crowded New York tenement a few weeks ago so that his last hours might be spent in pleasanter surroundings, Adolph Wagner, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wagner, of East 13th street, New York, died Saturday night at 9:30. Death was due to spinal meningitis. The child was attended by Dr. Curry. The remains were taken to New York for interment Sunday.

Pseudo-Bridegroom.

Griffith Jenkins, of Hill & Shupp's store, who left Monday morning for his home in Wilkesbarre where he will spend a two weeks' vacation, was the victim of practical jokers when he boarded his train. A party of eight of his young men friends assembled at the depot and showered him with rice. A large package was handed him by one of the party and in it was nearly a quart of rice, placed in such a manner that, when opened, the rice fell in every direction.

Drunk Dismissed.

James Nolan, who was arrested Friday night at the Hotel Rossell cafe for causing a row while in a drunken condition, and whose hearing was set for 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, pleaded guilty before the judge and was dismissed without sentence.

SURPRISES IN BASEBALL RESULTS

Alis Unexpectedly Beaten by St. Mary's in An Exciting Game at the Oval.

ST. MARY'S, 5; ALIS, 3.

One of the largest crowds of the season visited Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon and saw St. Mary's defeat Alis in a contest interesting from start to finish. The final score was 5 to 3. The Saints scored the winning runs after two men were put out in the first half of the ninth inning. The teams were evenly matched.

Neither scored until the third, when Kavanaugh, for Alis, crossed the rubber. No more runs were made until the fifth inning, when the Saints tallied twice. In the sixth and seventh innings Alis scored one run each and that was all they could make.

Great excitement prevailed in the sixth inning, when Henriques, for Alis, got a free pass, stole second and third and came home on a fumble and wild throw by Cooney, tying the score.

Mahon, who played first for the Saints, gave an exhibition that will not bear repeating in this city. He played what can be strictly termed "dirty" ball. He knocked a fly to Richardson, ran into him and tried to make him drop the ball. Another time he held Gastmeyer on first after the latter made what should have been a three-base hit; and still another time he interfered with the ball. He should have been put out of the game by the umpire.

Honors were about even between MacLaughlin and Mazer, the Saints getting five hits off the former and Alis making seven off the latter. Both Gormley and Mallay backed up their pitchers in fine style, while the rest of the players put up a good article of ball.

SCOTCH PLAINS, 6; WESTFIELD, 3.

Fully 2,000 lovers of the National game gathered about the Scotch Plains diamond Saturday afternoon and saw the crack Westfield aggregation go down in defeat before the heavy hitters of the 'Plains team. The score was 6 to 3. "Red" Waller, who has long been a terror to batsman, proved an easy mark for the locals who batted him for a total of eleven hits. The visitors could do but little with Orris's delivery. The 'Plains boys had the visitors beaten from the beginning, making one run in the first, two in the third, and two more in the sixth. The score was 5 to 0 until the eighth when Cranius, the local shortstop, made a costly error, letting in three runs and saving the visitors from a shut-out. The locals scored again in the eighth. The features were the home run by Brogan, with one man on base, and the square umpiring by Mr. Cullum, who refused to be dictated to by either side.

HIGH BRIDGE, 7; HOPE, 4.

The first game of the series between the Hope T. M. A. and High Bridge baseball teams resulted on Saturday, at High Bridge, in favor of the Hunterdon County ball team after nine innings of in and out playing.

With "Rube" Ramsey pitching, the up state boys seemed to need Manager Cone's colts home with a whitewash, but "Rube" proved easy for the Clinton boys.

"Smiling Jimmie" pitched grand ball after the second inning, only two safe hits being made off his delivery. He struck his pace too late, however, for seven bunched hits were scored off him in the first two innings which, coupled with a few errors, lost the game for Hope.

Hope deserves great credit for their showing, considering the fact that the Hunterdon boys have only been defeated once this season, and that their pitcher has a record of 120 strike outs in nine games. Martin carried off the batting honors of the day. Several questionable decisions were made by the umpire which did not benefit the Hope team and which did not meet the approval of many of the rooters.

DUNELEN, 9; BOUND BROOK, 6.

In a game characterized by ragged playing and general dissatisfaction, the Dunellen A. C. defeated the Bound Brook team Saturday afternoon by a score of 9 to 6. Ettinger was in poor form and was batted freely by the visitors. Whitley, although succeeding in fanning ten men was also hammered considerably. A one-base drive by Moynihan was lost in the weeds and resulted in a home run.

YOUNGSTERS ENTERTAINMENT.

The Nethenwood Fresh Air Children Hunt for Texts in the Bible.

An entertainment was provided for the inmates of the Children's Fresh Air Home at Nethenwood Saturday afternoon by Superintendent George H. Hall, of the Park Avenue Baptist Church Sunday-school, assisted by some of the teachers and scholars. The children did not carry out the complete programme as arranged because one of their number was fast approaching death's door.

A scripture text hunt was one of the features of the afternoon and little prizes were awarded the winners. Other games were played. Those who arranged the programme were Mrs. Nelson Runyon, Miss Henrietta Cuming, Mrs. D. M. Runyon, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, Miss Florence Hawkins, Miss Cora Broaaw, Miss Marion Hall, George E. Hall and Joseph M. Hawkins, assisted by some of the members of the Junior Society.

Cyclers Take Notice.

Chief Marshal William Campbell, of the borough, has issued a warning to all bicyclists against riding upon the sidewalks of North Plainfield. The habit has grown and many narrow escapes have been experienced by pedestrians. All who violate the law will be brought before Recorder Dood and fined to the full extent of the

COLORED MAN FOR CITY COUNCIL

Rumor That Colored People of Fourth Ward Will Nominate One of Their Number.

POSSIBLE CANDIDATES

DR. ANDERSON NAMED, BUT DOES NOT LIVE WITHIN THE WARD.

Colored People Strong Numerically in the Ward—Theory That the Property Owners Among Them Should be Represented.

Political zephyrs are being wafted about town and some of them bear strange rumors. One of the latest is that an effort will be made at the next municipal election to have the colored population of the city represented in the Common Council. The ward thus to be represented will be the Fourth, for in that part of the city the majority of the colored people live.

Since Plainfield became a city there has never been a colored man in the Council. It is said that there are 5,000 colored people in the city and some of the leaders among them have been talking of placing a man on the ticket this fall. When seen Sunday one of the prominent colored men said that there is a larger percentage of colored property owners in this city than in any other town of its size in New Jersey and that, as taxpayers, they should have some voice in matters pertaining to the city government.

It was said that Dr. J. C. Anderson, of West Fourth street, was being talked of as a possible candidate. When asked about it last Monday he said that such talk could mean nothing as he is not a resident of the Fourth ward. He lives just outside of the West Fourth street boundary line of the ward. When asked if he knew of any other person who had been mentioned as a possible nominee, he said that it was all new to him and he had not heard of any such move on the part of the colored people of Plainfield.

William Klein, a well known colored property owner, was seen Sunday at his home on West Third street and he said that while he had heard some rumors of such a move he did not know of any man being decided upon as a candidate for a nomination.

Should a good colored man be put up for office the colored people are probably strong enough, numerically, to carry the Fourth ward for their candidate.

FRIEND OF MARTINE.

William E. Dodge, the Dead Philanthropist, Was a Frequent Visitor at Cedar Brook.

William E. Dodge, the great philanthropist who died in New York last week, was a frequent visitor at Cedar Brook, the home of James E. Martine. The farm was the home of the dead man's father and uncle years ago. A small piece of iron was recently found by the present owner, Mr. Martine, which upon investigation proved to be an old stencil or branding iron lettered "D. L. D.," the initials of David Low Dodge.

Upon visit of Mr. Dodge to Cedar Brook farm recently, Mr. Martine told him of the finding of the piece of iron. He was greatly interested and said it must have belonged to his father 90 years ago. The iron was mounted on a black walnut board and is now prized as a family relic.

HISTORIC SILVER.

Mementoes of Napoleon's Campaigns Owned by George Mehl, of West Second Street.

George Mehl, of West Second street, has in his possession some interesting relics of Napoleon's conquests in Germany during the first decade of the past century. Included are pewter communion sets, bearing the dates of 1762, which are said to have been seized by the "Little Corporal" while marching through Germany. They were taken from monasteries en route.

There are also several silver medals which may have belonged to Martin Luther. The engraving on them states that they were presented to the great reformer by of arch men.

Took Jersey Lightning.

Patrick O'Brien and Frank Williams celebrated their arrival at Netherwood from New York City, Monday afternoon, by getting a big load of "Jersey Lightning" on board. Police Patrolman McGinley arrested them as they were beginning to become obnoxious. The travellers seemed deeply impressed with the police system of the town and were allowed to take a morning train back to the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Calahar, of the borough, whose wedding was solemnized at St. Joseph's R. C. Church recently, have returned from their honeymoon spent in Titusville.

BURIED IN HILLSIDE CEMETERY

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. JOHN C. HAFNER HELD MONDAY.

At the Late Home in Netherwood—Many Relatives and Friends Present—Mr. McMurray Officiated.

The funeral services of Mrs. John C. Hafner were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home in Central street, Netherwood, where a large number of relatives and friends gathered. Rev. John McMurray, pastor of the Monroe Avenue Church, officiated. After reading Scripture selections and offering prayer, E. E. Runyon sang a favorite selection of the deceased, "Leaning on the Everlasting Arm," Mr. McMurray then followed with an appropriate talk in which he referred impressively to the heavy afflictions that had so recently befallen the household, "Lead, Kindly Light," another favorite selection was then sung by Mr. Runyon.

There were a great many handsome floral tributes, including a pillow from the sisters and brothers, a pillow from the husband, a wreath from the children and another wreath from the cousins. There was also a touching tribute from Mr. Hafner's employer and numerous other flowers from relatives and friends.

The interment took place in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers were Chester B. Dennis, Gilbert S. Martin, Fred Hafner, Corra Ryno, Fred Hyler and William Graham.

SURPRISED BY FRIENDS.

Mr. and Mrs. Keating Entertained by Music Games and Dancing—Those Present.

A surprise party was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Gus Keating, at their home on John street, last Monday, by twenty young friends. Games, recitations and dancing were enjoyed until a late hour. Miss Elizabeth Carrigan and J. Michael Caffrey entertained acceptably with vocal and instrumental selections.

Those present were: Misses Mary O'Brien, Minnie Holland, Mary Caffrey, the Misses Gill, Mary Mullen, Emma Carrigan and Mrs. Thomas Dorgan; Thomas Dorgan, Michael Caffrey, John Caffrey, Paul Brabbin, John Carrigan, Charles Fuchs, Peter Lynn, George Hamilton and Harry Gould.

ON HER NINTH BIRTHDAY.

Miss Reba Marshall Was Given a Surprise Party by Friends.

In honor of the ninth anniversary of her birthday, Miss Reba Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Marshall, of 420 Grant avenue, was given a surprise party Monday afternoon. The young girl went to visit a neighbor and when she returned she found about twenty-five young folks gathered on the front porch. She was very happily surprised and the afternoon was pleasantly passed in playing games, after which refreshments were served. Miss Marshall received a number of gifts to mark the event as one long to be remembered.

No Diphtheria at Camp.

The rumor that there were two cases of diphtheria at Miss Curry's Netherwood Fresh Air Home is entirely without foundation. The case of diphtheria, which developed at the camp recently, was immediately isolated from the camp to a quarantined house some distance away. The last two deaths at the camp, which were rumored to have been from diphtheria, were from pneumonia and spinal meningitis. The rumor that there is danger of epidemic is entirely false.

Another St. Mary's Fair.

St. Mary's baseball club has decided to hold another fair at their baseball grounds on next Thursday evening, the 20th. The postponements of the last fair and the short notice of the final date made it impossible for all to attend who desired and the affair will be repeated at the request of a goodly number. The baseball teams from Woodfield and Scotch Plains, together with the Aeolian players, will attend in a body.

Octogenarian Congratulated.

Mrs. Sarah Powlison, mother of J. A. Powlison, of the firm of Powlison & Jones, Monday celebrated her eightieth birthday. She received ninety-four letters of congratulation from her friends in this and other cities.

Dugan to Build.

Daniel F. Dugan, a large owner of real estate in this city, has secured a permit for the erection of two more frame dwellings to be situated on East Sixth street near Scott place. The buildings will be two and a half stories in height and ground will be broken immediately.

Barn for Patrol Wagon.

Titus H. Lamy signed the contract Saturday for the erection of a barn in the rear of police headquarters, to be used for the police patrol horse and wagon.

TALKED ABOUT AMENDMENTS

Democratic City Committee Adopted Resolutions Advising People to Oppose Them.

URGED CAREFUL VOTING

POSSIBLE CANDIDATES FOR THE CITY COUNCIL WERE DISCUSSED.

Chairman Dilkes, County Committeemen Nolan and Moody and James E. Martine Were Among the Speakers.

The proposed amendments to the State constitution were discussed at length last Monday by the Plainfield Democratic City Committee who met in the Democratic headquarters on East Second street. Possible nominees for the City Council were also considered.

The meeting was presided over by the chairman, J. V. R. Dilkes, who introduced John Moody, of Cranford, chairman of the Democratic County Committee. Mr. Moody spoke at length upon the amendment question contending that the proposed change does not cover the ground thoroughly. He also claimed that it would place too much power in the hands of a few individuals who happen to be Judges of our State Courts. After a few remarks by James E. Martin, of this city, it was unanimously resolved "that the interests of the Commonwealth of New Jersey demand that the proposed constitutional amendments be defeated and to that end we urge all Democrats of the State to vote against the same."

County Committeeman Andrew Nolan, of this city, urged the Democrats to be careful in voting at the special election in September. He said that the matter had not been made clear to the voters as to how they should mark their ballots if they wished to vote against the amendments. Mr. Nolan was requested to bring this matter before the County Committee, at their next meeting, and also to use his power in having it brought into general publicity.

SERMON ON THE NEGRO

Dr. Rhoades Says Negro Should Not Have Been Given Ballot Privilege—Lynching a Disease.

Rev. Dr. Rhoades, of Brooklyn, who preached at the First Baptist Church, last Sunday, delivered two sermons of exceptional interest. The evening discourse treated of the negro race question. Dr. Rhoades predicted that the ultimate mission of the black race, now being educated in hundreds of schools and colleges throughout the country, is to become missionaries to the people of Africa. He said that this country made one of its biggest mistakes after giving the negro his freedom by giving him also the privilege of the ballot.

In this connection Dr. Rhoades said that the colored man was not in the proper condition to receive so much power, which eventually became subservient to the greater power of the demagogue and the politician, to be manipulated according to their own sweet will. The preacher also made reference to "lynch law" and characterized it as a disease which has developed in a certain low class of the South and is now spreading until only four States of the Union have escaped it.

RACES AT RARITAN.

Entry Blanks Received by Local Horse Fanciers.

Entry blanks from the Raritan Driving Association for its two-day meet, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 33 and 34, have been received by local horse owners. The association will give $900 in purses for the two days.

The events have been arranged so that all classes will be exclusively for trotters or pacers and there will be no mixed racing.

Wednesday's events will be a 2:20 class trot, 2:24 class pace and 2:20 class pace. Thursday's races will include a 2:18 pace, 2:24 class trot and 2:25 class trot. There will be a $150 purse for each race. Each will be for best three in five heats.

Records made on and after Labor Day, Sept. 7, will be no bar to the races. Entries will close Monday, Sept. 14, but mailed entries bearing postmark not later than 10 a. m., Sept. 15, will be accepted. No conditional entries will be received. An owner may name two horses in one race, but no horse may be named in two races for one entrance fee. Races not start ed by 4 p. m. on the last day of the meeting may be declared off.

News of Former Mayor.

Advices from East Hampton, L. I., state that Former Mayor C. J. Fisk is greatly improved by the change of air and that he is enjoying excellent health.

THE ENTRY BLANKS READY FOR THE RACE MEET AT LOCAL DRIVING PARK AUGUST 29.

Preparations for One of the Best Meets Ever Held in This Vicinity.

Further arrangements for the race meet, which is to be held at the Plainfield Driving Park Saturday afternoon, August 29, were made at the meeting held Monday night in David Smalley's office, on North avenue. Those present were: Mayor N. B. Smalley, David Smalley, J. W. Johnson, Thomas Brantingham, W. A. Coddington, James Davis and Stonewall Jackson. The list of those to whom entry blanks are to be sent were gone over and the blanks were ordered sent out at once. The entries will close Thursday, August 10. It was decided that $450 in purses should be distributed among the winners.

The track committee reported that two gangs of men are at present employed on the track grading and putting it in first class condition. Between six and fourteen inches of soil will be laid on the present track. This will be mixed with gravel and binder which make exceedingly fast tracks, springy and at the same time firm. David Smalley said this morning that when the repairs are made the track will be one of the fastest in the State and that better racing than has been seen in this city in years will take place at the park two weeks from Saturday.

THE ENGLISHMAN DEFEATED

FRANK O. REINHART WON HIS FIRST MATCH AGAINST BRITISHERS.

Is Playing on the Inter-Collegiate Team Against Oxford and Cambridge.

In the practice play among the English and American golfers, Monday at the Myopia Hunt Club course, Hamilton, Frank O. Reinhart defeated his opponent, H. G. B. Ellis, of Oxford. This match began with three halved holes, but the last was lost to Reinhart through a stymie. Then the Princetos man won four straight, each in a par 4. The eighth was halved in an indferent 6, and Ellis won the ninth in 3 to 5. Keeping on in good style, Reinhart won out by 6 up annd 4 to play, and he also won the two bye holes, the match ending on the sixteenth on account of darkness. Reinhart made a 73, while Ellis made an 81. In the morning Reinhart made an 81. In the make-up of the intercollegiate team Reinhart and J. W. Baker are among those who will play the English team.

TO EXAMINE MRS. NELSON.

Justice Dugro Appoints Commissioner Because of Her Ill Health.

George Putnam Smith, Saturday was appointed by Justice Dugro, in the Supreme Court, of New York State, a commissioner to take the testimony of Mrs. Hannah Nelson, of New Market, the mother of Mrs. Caroline D. Fair, who was killed, as well as her husband, Charles L. Fair, in an automobile accident at Trouville, France, about a year ago, in a suit now pending which Mrs. Nelson and other relatives of Mrs. Fair have begun to secure her estate. The question arose as to whether Mr. or Mrs. Fair died first. If Mrs. Fair survived her husband, Mrs. Nelson and her family became entitled to Mr. Fair's large estate, which would have gone to his wife.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., are the defendants to the action. Soon after the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Fair, the defendants, who are sisters of Mr. Fair, made a compromise, by which the Nelson family accepted $150,000 in settlement of their claims. Soon afterward they began the suit now pending, asserting that Mrs. Oelrichs and Mrs. Vanderbilt had deceived them by representing that Mr. Fair had survived his wife, whereas she had lived some minutes longer than he did. Witnesses from France were examined before ex-Justice Keener in support of this contention.

Accident to Trolley.

Two trolley cars, heavily loaded with passengers, nearly collided on Arlington avenue, Saturday afternoon, during the rush of spectators from the baseball game at the oval. One of the fenders was broken and ripped off of one car. The north bound trolley started up before the south bound car was fairly on the switch.

Plainfield Girl Betrothed.

At a dinner party in Orange, last week, the engagement of Miss Mary V. Brunson, of this city, to Elias H. Bonnell, cashier of the Second National Bank, of Orange, was announced. The date for the wedding has not been set.

Miss Long, of New Brunswick, has been visiting her college class mate, Miss Osgood, of Myrtle avenue.

STRAUSS TO ESCAPE PROSECUTION

His Two Wives Agree Not to Institute Criminal Proceedings Against Him.

HE MAY RETURN HERE

HIS SECOND WIFE LIVES ON EAST FIFTH STREET.

Husband Has Been in New York City—Agreement to Live With His Plainfield Wife—Divorce Proceedings Will Go by Default.

That Baldwin F. Strauss, the much married Brooklyn lawyer, will escape prosecution as a bigamist now seems probable, according to the latest developments in the case.

It is said that a settlement has been agreed upon by which Mr. Strauss may return to this city and take up his residence again with Mrs. Ida Perkins Strauss, who has been known as wife No. 2. She lives on East Fifth street, near Watchung avenue, Miss Florence Strauss, the pretty daughter of Mrs. Ida Perkins, is credited with saying yesterday: "I expect very soon to see my father, but when or where I can not say." It is said that Mrs. Strauss, Florence's mother, has seen Mr. Strauss and arranged for his return.

No criminal proceedings will be instituted by either wife, No. 2 or No. 3, against the Brooklyn woman. The attempt to serve Mr. Strauss by publication in divorce proceedings, which wife No. 3 was about to institute, will also be abandoned and Mr. Strauss will permit the divorce proceedings to go by default.

Baldwin F. Strauss disappeared about the time the discovery was made that he had three wives, but it was learned yesterday that the missing husband has been in New York and part of the time has been at the home of his mother, 27 West One Hundred and Thirty-second street, awaiting the result of an effort to straighten out his tangled matrimonial affairs.

AMUSEMENTS.

"What are the qualifications of a chorus girl?" was the question propounded to Julian Mitchell, stage director of "The Wizard of Oz" by a New York interviewer one night at the Majestic Theatre last week. Mr. Mitchell, who is undoubtedly the cleverest man in his line in the business, gave the following succinct reply: "First, an attractive appearance; second, intelligence; third, dancing ability; and fourth, a good voice. That's about the order in which I should rate the requirements. The ideal chorus girl should weigh about a hundred and twenty-five pounds, be about five feet two or three inches in height and possess a good figure. It is not all essential that a girl should be able to read music."

A despatch from Rome announces that Mount Vesuvius has grown more active during the last few days. Lava has overflowed 750 feet, but is confined to the upper part of the mountain. At night the eruption presents a magnificent but terrifying spectacle as burning showers rise to a great height. The above cablegram was shown to Henry J. Pain, the famous authority on eruptions, who is at present at Manhattan Beach, Coney Island. After consulting the data at his disposal, he said that there is no danger from the present ebullition. The boiling up of the lava has been too gradual to do any damage and there is no fear of seismic disturbances. He added that the study of eruptions taught him how to make the manifestation at Manhattan Beach each night, where Vesuvius does really "blow off its head" and overwhelm "Pompeii."

Sunday Excursion to Manch Chunk.

The New Jersey Central will run an excursion to Manch Chunk on Sunday, Aug. 16, 1903. Round trip, $1.50; child, 75c., from Plainfield at 9:32 a. m. Manch Chunk is one of the most charming mountain resorts in this section. The trip over the gravity railroad to Summit and Mt. LOOK OUT FOR THE BEAR

NEW YORK SUN MAN SAYS THERE IS ONE IN LORRAINE.

John Shreve Saved His Life by Fastening a Crab to Bear's Nose.

The following despatch appeared in this morning's New York Sun:

Lorraine, N. J., Aug. 11—Almost everybody in Lorraine has been hunting today the bear that attacked John Shreve last night on Westfield avenue, in the place of the electric lights. Front gates are kept locked, and all the children are under strict orders not to go out of the yards until the bear has been caught. Tonight's meeting of the sewing circle was postponed because it was to be held this week at the home of Sister Jones, who lives off the road, and the members didn't want to walk cross-lots with their sewing on account of the bear.

The folks are out in force, following the trail of the bear and of the soft-shell crabs that saved John Shreve's life. Shreve had been crabbing in the Rahway, and was coming home with a netful late last night, when the bear caught him within a hundred feet of his home in Westfield avenue.

"I had just passed an electric light," said Shreve today, "when I heard a rustling in the corn field on the side of the road. I supposed at first that it was just a gang of Jersey possoffice thieves on their way to work and didn't think anything more about it till half a minute later, when the rustling stopped and a big black bear leped out of the corn field and stood right before me on the sidewalk.

"I dodged round him and started to run for my house. He came after me full tilt. A bear looks slow when he's in a cage, but he isn't. I knew the bear was gaining on me at every jump. Pretty soon I could hear him breathe. Then I felt him breathe. It was like one of those southwest winds in dog days

"Finally, I felt a paw on my leg and then I knew I was done for unless I turned around and made a fight. The minute I turned the bear went up on his hind legs and grabbed me around the waist.

"I didn't have any weapon, but my arms were free, and, in a lucky instant, I thought of the crabs in my net bag over my shoulder. They were all alive, and were my only hope, so I took out one and reaching around the bear's body I found a place where the hair was kind of thin, and planted the crab right there. It got a good nip and took me.

"The bear howled. A nipping in just one spot wouldn't make him let go of me and he kept squeezing tighter. I had my presence of mind with me and calculated that I could stand the hugging for about five minutes more.

"I knew I had a dozen crabs left, so I worked carefully and took out one crab at a time so as not to drop any. I distributed 'em all over the bear's back and held on to each one till I felt sure he had nipped.

"Out of the dozen I guess ten got a bite into that critter's hide and hung on and kept nipping together. About the time I got the sixth crab located the bear began to weaken his strangle hold on me and to waste his breath howling. I hardly had time to plant the last crab before the bear quit, dropped down on all fours and streaked for the cornfield again. I guess the crabs stayed with him, for I heard him growl all the way across the cornfield and into the woods.

"If I had those crabs back I'd let 'em go alive into the Rahway again, I feel so grateful."

John Shreve is one of the well-known citizens of Lorraine, and there isn't a soul here who doesn't believe the bear story or who would dare hint that Shreve invented it just as an excuse for coming home without any crabs.

WELL-KNOWN FARMER.

AMENDMENTS VIEWED BY LEARNED LAWYER

R. Q. Keasbey Explains the Provisions the Constitutional Changes.

ADVOCATES ADOPTION

DECLARES THAT AMENDMENTS ARE FOR BEST INTERESTS OF STATE.

Special Election to be Held September 22—Provisions in Detail —Reason for Their Submission to the People.

Counselor Edward Q. Keasbey, a prominent member of the State Bar, has issued this interesting statement to explain the effect of the proposed constitutional changes soon to be submitted to the people:

"The amendments relate for the most part to the judiciary. Incidentally there is a change in the paragraphs relating to the pardoning power of the Executive and in a paragraph relating to the appointment of civil officers.

"The first amendment affects paragraph 10 of Article V, concerning the Executive. This paragraph gives the pardoning power to the Governor, the Chancellor and the six judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, or the major of them, of whom the Governor shall be one. The proposed amendment gives this power to the Governor, the Chancellor and the Attorney General, or two of them, of whom the Governor shall be one.

"The six judges in the Coar of Errors and Appeals provided for in the constitution of 1844, were a survival of the Council which with the Governor under the Constitution of 1776 constituted the Court of Errors and Appeals and possessed the pardoning power.

"The Senate took the legislative power of the Council, but these portions of their executive and judicial power were given to the six judges.

"The pardoning power is one of the functions of the Executive and the Governor alone can actually grant a pardon. The Chancellor and the Attorney General are selected as competent officers to advise with him on this subject.

"There are several amendments proposed to Article VI concerning the judiciary. No change is proposed in the first section, which names the courts in which the judicial power is vested.

"Section 2 of this article relates to the Court of Errors and Appeals. It declares that the court shall consist of the Chancellor, the justices of the Supreme Court and six judges to be appointed for six years. It directs that the six judges shall arrange themselves so that the seat of one shall be vacated each year, and that they shall receive a per diem compensation; that the Secretary of State shall be the clerk of the court, and that neither the Chancellor nor the justice of the Supreme Court shall take part in the hearing of cases in which the court have decided below, but shall inform the court in writing of the reasons for their opinion.

"The proposed amendment declares that the court shall consist of a chief judge and four associate judges, or any four of them. This is the important change that is made. Instead of the Chancellor, the nine justices of the Supreme Court and six other judges, the court is to be composed of five judges who are not to be members of the courts appealed from and who shall have no other judicial duties.

"Provision is made for designation of a justice of the Supreme Court, the Chancellor or Vice Chancelor to act as judge in case of the disqualification of incapacity of two of the judges. A new provision is made so as to do away with a second appeal from Circuit Court cases. It is provided that the jurisdiction heretofore vested in the Supreme Court by writ of error shall be vested exclusively in the Court of Errors and Appeals.

"The purpose and effect of the amendment of this second section of the judiciary article is to relieve the Chancellor and the justices of the Supreme Court of the increasing pressure of their duties in the Court of Errors and Appeals and to provide a bench of judges that shall devote themselves wholly to the deliberate hearing and prompt decision of cases on appeal both at law and in equity.

"The next amendment is of section 4 of the judiciary article. This relates to the Court of Chancery. The amendment declares that the Court of Chancery shall consist of a Chancellor and such number of Vice Chancellors as shall be provided by law, each of whom shall exercise the jurisdiction of the court, the court shall make rules governing the hearing of causes and the practice of the court where the same is not regulated by statute.

"As a matter of fact Vice Chancellors have exercised the jurisdiction of the court for the last thirty years. The purpose of this amendment is to give the Vice Chancellors constitutional authority and to make them de jure as well as de facto members of the court with power to sign the orders and decrees which they make. They, together with the Chancellor, are to constitute the Court of Chancery, and the court as a body is empowered to make rules regulating the practice.

"Section 5 of the judiciary article relates to the Supreme Court and the Circuit Courts. The constitution of these courts remains unchanged. The number of the associate justices of the Supreme Court may be increased or decreased by law, but must not be less than two. The Circuit Courts are to be held in every county by one or more of the justices of the Supreme Court or a judge appointed for the purpose. The first amendment authorizes the court to sit in divisions at the same or different times and places, and the second strikes out the last paragraph, so that the jurisdiction to review judgments of the Circuit Court by writ of error may be vested exclusively in the Court of Errors and Appeals. The first of these amendments will serve the public convenience by permitting the court to sit in different cities at the same time.

"The amendments to section 6 strike out two obsolete provisions limiting the number of Common Pleas judges and arranging the dates of their commissions and insert instead the following: 'The Court of Common Pleas shall be constituted and held in each county as may be provided by law.'

"The amendment of section 2 of article 7, concerning civil officers, makes provision for the continuance in office of the Chancellor and the justices of the Supreme Courvt according to their respective commissions, and provides that all judges and Chancellor and Vice Chancellors shall be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consept of the Senate.

"The only new thing in this amendment is the provision for the appointment of the Vice Chancellors. There is no provision for such officers under the present Constitution, and the appointment of these officers, like that of all other judicial officers, is given to the Governor, with the consent of the Senate.

"Each of these amendments may be voted on separately. To vote against any particular amendment you [write the word 'Against' on the margin; to vote for all the amendments you cast the ballot as printed. If there is any amendment you do not wish to vote on either way, this amendment may be cancelled by lines drawn across it on the ballot."

T. J. HANDLER BURIED.

Services Held at Home of Uncle on Lincoln Place—Interment in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Thomas J. Handler, whose death occurred Tuesday at Muhlenberg Hospital, were held Thursday at 2:30 at the home of the dead child's uncle, Thomas J. McGann, of Lincoln place. The services were conducted by Rev. Father Joseph Miller, of St. Joseph's R. C. Church, and were attended by a large number of friends and relatives. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery. The pallbearers were Louis Clary, John Gerkin, Joseph Finney and William Frey.

WEDDING ANNOUNCED.

Miss Sophia Schaefer Now the Wife of Patrick Kelleher.

Announcement has just been made of the wedding on Monday of Patrick Kelleher and Miss Sophia Schaefer, both of North Plainfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Miller at St. Joseph's R. C. Beware of Counterfeits.

There is in circulation a counterfeit five dollar note on the Morristown Iron National Bank. It is almost perfect on the face, but on the reverse side the imitation can be easily detected. A twenty dollar gold certificate of the issue of 1876 has also been counterfeited, and is also easy of detection.

Free of Debt.

J. H. CARNEY'S REMAINS BORNE TO THE GRAVE

Funeral of Popular Boroughite Attended by a Large Crowd of Personal Friends.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES

BAYONNE MINISTER HAS CHARGE OF SERVICES AT THE HOUSE.

Odd Fellows Conduct its Ritual at the Grave—Organizations Present in a Body—Interment in M. E. Cemetery.

In the presence of three hundred people funeral services over the remains of John Henry Carney were held at the home of his father-in-law, former Freeholder Jacob Voshi, on Somerset street, Wednesday, Aug. 5. The services were impressive in their simplicity. They were opened with a solo, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," by Elmer Cutting. Rev. Dr. Millard Grant, pastor of the M. E. Church at Bayonne, N. J., officiated and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved family and friends gathered at the house out of respect for the departed. "Abide With Me" was another hymn sung in a feeling manner by Mr. Cutting. At the close of the service the people were given an opportunity to pass the bier to look for the last time on the face of one of the best known citizens of North Plainfield. In the line were members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., Perseverance Lodge, No. 47, Knights of Pythias and of the Master Mechanics' Association, of which organizations the dead man was a member.

At the grave the services were in charge of the Odd Fellows. The interment was in the M. E. Cemetery. The remains were borne by pall bearers representing the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. They were John H. Cose, Morgan Turton and Andrew Saffron, of the Pythian lodge, Seaman Mantz, John Becker, Jr., and Henry Nischwitz, of the Odd Fellows. The ritual of the Odd Fellows was read at the grave in the presence of the immediate family and relatives. Chaplain C. M. Raybert, Fred Becker and S. H. Schleif were master of ceremonies.

The floral display was handsome. Set pieces were conspicuous and among others was one large piece, the gift of the Odd Fellows lodge and another from the Pythians.

It was one of the largest funerals held in the borough in some time and in the gathering of friends there were people present from many other places.

Through the real estate agency of William F. Jeffery, these deals in Plainfield property have been closed during the past week:

Sold for the Investors' Realty Company to Sarah A. Vail, of East Third street, property on West Fourth street, sold for William Birrell, to C. Elmer Gullick, the property at the corner of Jackson avenue and East Front street; sold for the Investors' Realty Company ten lots on Elk street to Mrs. Minnie Smith; sold for Sarah A. Vail, to the Investors' Realty Company, the plot of land on John street near West Fourth street; and for William Smith, to the Investors' Realty Company, the property at 619 South Second street.

Mrs. Smith, who purchased the property on Elk street, will start operations shortly for the erection of ten good sized artisan's houses. They will be ready for occupancy on or about the first of the year.

PROPERTY CHANGED HANDS.

Records of Real Estate Transfers in Somerset County.

These transfers of real estate property in Somerset County, of local interest have been recorded in the County Clerk's office at Somerville:

Calvin D. McMurtry, sheriff, to Mary J. Sandford, et al, at North Plainfield; $1,500; Alfred University to Martha Goodman, et al, North Plainfield, $2,200; Alex. E. Faber, Jr., et ux, to Cornelius E. Gulick, $1; Alex. E. Faber, Jr., et ux, to Cornelius E. Gulick, North Plainfield, $1; John Spencer to William R. Codington, Warren, $1; Will. R. Codington, to Emma Spencer, Warren, $1.

To Improve Dunr Street Property.

W. H. Kirch has purchased of the First National Bank the property, 62 Duer street, adjoining his present residence, and will make general repairs, including the erection of a glassed veranda in front, with stone pillars.

In Europe Speer's Port Grape Wine.

Is ordered by families in Dresden, London and Paris for its superior medicinal virtues and its blood-making quality. It is made from a rare grape, and used in many hospitals.

BEWARE OF THE PHAGOCYTE.

Little-Known But Much-Dreaded Creature That Frequents the Human Body.

"The hope of mankind," says Metschnikow, "depends upon the proper restriction of the phagocytes." Very few nonprofessional men know what a phagocyte is, and even numerous physicians try to get along without having made its acquaintance, while most medical handbooks ignore the thing, and the few dictionaries mentioning it describe it wrongly. Here is Prof. Metschnikow's definition: "Phagocytes constitute the police of the human body. As a big city cannot get along without officers of the law to keep crime and vice under control and the moral atmosphere pure and wholesome, so health is impossible unless the phagocytes exercise their proper functions in the streets and channels of our interior.

"Phago means eat, devour, absorb; cyte is the Greek for cell. The phagocyte, then, is an absorbing or eating cell; one might term it the scavenger of the human body. So much science recognized long ago; also that its main food consists of bacteria, the fragments of organic matter and the larvæ stage and other noxious matters."

The author continues, according to the Indianapolis Journal: "The above, my biological and bacteriological investigations and experiments proved correct, but science's further argument, namely, 'that the phagocyte, after performing this most important office for the youthful body, becomes itself food for the developing organs of the adult,' is a serious mistake."

JAPAN A CURIOUS LAND.

Almost Everything Seems to Go by Contraries in the Mikado's Kingdom.

"There is no land that I have ever seen so curious as Japan," said Robert W. Brinkley, of Yokohama, to a Washington Star reporter recently. "I have lived in Japan for the past 22 years and it is to me still a sort of wonderland.

"One of the strange features of the country is that all crops and fruits are almost certain to deteriorate. I have seen beautiful peaches grown the first year from stock imported from the United States. The second year they were still fairly good; the third season poor and after that unfit to eat. Nothing in the vegetable world would seem to retain its excellence for any length of time. Ivy is a bamboo country and everything reverts to the bamboo. Useful fruit trees covered many a plain and yet it gives no nutriment to cattle. Garden vegetables look as fine as any grown in the United States, but when cooked they have no taste. The flowers are of gorgeous hues, but they are without fragrance.

"But even with these imperfections it is a very interesting corner of the earth and many things recommend it. Its inhabitants are in their way a fine people. In the rural districts particularly is the old time politeness and honorable beings I ever met. In the cities they are sharper mentally, but not nearly so scrupulous."

WILL STUDY OLD RUINS.

American Savants on the Way to Explore Remains of Civilization in Russian Turkestan.

Raphael Pumpelly, who has been charged by the Carnegie institution with the exploration of Russian Turkestan has arrived at St. Petersburg with his son, R. W. Pumpelly, to procure the necessary permission. They will join Prof. H. H. Davis and Ellsworth Huntington, of Harvard, and Prof. Richard Norton, director of the American school of classical studies of Rome, at Baku.

The party will search for remnants of the flourishing civilization of the basin of the Sea of Aral, will investigate the climatic changes that have taken place there in historical times, and will seek to discover whether such changes have been sufficient to cause the practical decline of this region, and whether equal if not greater importance should not be attributed to economic and political changes, such as the interruption of the old caravan route by the Arabs and Turks the devastation of the country, the settlement of a population unused to agriculture and the discovery of the Cape of Good Hope route to India.

The party will remain several months, some of them perhaps years longer, future work being determined by the results of the present reconnaissance.

Will Be Bride of a Peer.

Lord Monson and Mrs. Turnure, daughter of Gen. Roy Stone, U. S. A., will be married soon, according to announcements in London. Lord Monson is the nephew of Sir Edmund Monson, the British ambassador to Paris, and was at one time intended for the diplomatic service. He was appointed to the household of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg, but by the death of his father he came to be himself a peer of the realm, the owner of the country seats and entailed estates. He is 34 years of age.

Big Wild Animal Trade.

A dealer in wild animals in Hamburg collected and sold last year 76 lions, tigers and panthers, 42 bears, 30 elephants, 64 camels and dromedaries, 720 monkeys and a large number of smaller animals and birds.

Where Man Is Small.

To ordinary eyes a man 1,000 yards away—say, on a rifle range—appears as a dot; he could not be known as a man except as being a smaller dot than a horse.

ENGLISH HOUSEHOLD TROOPS

Regiments That Date Their Establishment from the Time of Charles II.

The privileges of the household troops, which are now being called into question, date from the establishment of the regiments from Charles II., according to the London Chronicle. A fortnight before his coming from Holland he selected 50 cavalier gentlemen, and formed them into a corps of life guards, under Lord Gerard. Increased to 600 men, they formed the king's bodyguard, and escorted him into his own again.

Parliament disbanded the Ironside army, but on outbreak of fifth monarchy fanatics in January, 1661, afforded Charles a pretext for maintaining troops for his personal protection. Out of Monk's disbanded army the king increased the life guard by 500 men, raised a regiment of foot guards, transformed the Coldstream regiments into a second corps of foot guards, and converted troops of Cromwellian cavalry into royal horse guards. The Third regiment of foot guards was established in 1713, in honor of the union with Scotland. The earl of Linlithgow's fusiliers were brought to London and converted into "Scott's guards." These five regiments formed the nucleus of the British army.

CAMELS IN LOUISIANA.

Said to Have Been Introduced There by a Lumberman as Far Back as 1842.

James Boardman Cable, of Longbeach, Miss., is authority for the statement that his father, the late George W. Cable, imported a herd of camels for utilitarian purposes in 1842, reports the New Orleans Picayune. He was engaged in the manufacture of lumber under the firm name of Cable & Simpson, in the vicinity of Covington, in St. Tammany parish, La. St. Tammany parish has a very sandy soil, and Mr. Cable conceived the idea of using camels in the hauling of logs.

That was long before the days of the logging steam train. Horses and mules were unserviceable, because of the sandy soil. In 1842 a herd of camels was imported from Arabia, through New Orleans, and put to work hauling logs to the saw mill. The venture was a big success. The queer-looking beasts, with their slouchy gait, hauled logs to the mill and hauled the lumber to the river, which led to Lake Ponchartrain, over which the lumber was carried in schooners to New Orleans. Some years after the firm dissolved, and the camels were sold to a man out west. That was the last of the herd, so far as Mr. Cable knows.

ANIMALS ON ANIMALS.

Parasites That Take Up Their Lodgings on the Bodies, Beasts, Birds and Fishes.

All animals both great and small, suffer as severely as mammals in the matter of parasites, says Leslie's Monthly. The parasite of the ostrich is a formidable-looking example. The most interesting of the pigeon's parasites is the one known as the slender pigeon louse, which is supposed to do good service to the bird by thinning its body plumage as the weather grows hot. Fish also have parasites. The legs of the variety which inhabits the carp and pike are attached to the posterior part of its anatomy, and constitute paddles by means of which the organism can change its host and depart to pay its attentions to another fish. Two dark spots in the forepart of the creature represent the first pair of legs, which have been converted into suckers, by means of which the organism retains hold of its host. There is good reason to believe that this fish louse is not a parasitic torment, but rather a desired visitor, in all probability it derives its nourishment from the mucous products secreted by the skin of the fish. And when it has satisfactorily arranged the toilet of one fish it abandons it for another which needs its help.

WHEN MILES WAS DEFEATED.

Irish Woodchopper Was More Than a Match for the General in Repartee.

Gen. Miles is quoted by a fellow officer as telling the following story on himself:

"It was during our pursuit of Chief Joseph," said the general. "One exceedingly stormy night we encountered on our march in the Bearpaw mountains a few woodchoppers' cabins. The weather was not inclined to be very hospitable, but we finally induced them to share with us the protection their huts afforded.

"They consented, however, only upon condition that they should not under any circumstances be compelled to give up their beds. It fell to my lot to share the bunk of the boss, a very stern Irishman, who was not delighted with his guest.

"Hoping to establish an entente cordiale I said, pleasantingly, as we were preparing to retire:

"'Come now, Patrick, you know you'd be a long time in Ireland before you'd get a chance to sleep with a general.'

"'And it's O! that am thinking,' he instantly retorted, 'that you'd be a long time in Ireland before you'd iver be made a general.'"

Only One Arsenal.

Canada's only arsenal is at Quebec. Her main arteries run close to our frontier, and in case of war could easily be cut by raids, says a British colonel.

THOS. WEARREN TAKES A BRIDE

CHOOSES MISS MARGARET HART, OF THIS CITY, AS HIS WIFE.

Wedding in St. Mary's Church—Attendants at Ceremony—Father Egan Officiating.

The wedding of Miss Margaret Hart and Thomas Wearren, Jr., both of this city, took place in St. Mary's Church Wednesday, Aug. 5. Rev. Father Egan officiated in the presence of a large congregation of friends.

Miss Jeanette Hart, sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor; Patrick Wearren, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with lace and the maid-of-honor was attired in pink silk. Both carried roses.

After the wedding a short reception was held at the home of the groom, the couple subsequently departing for a short wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in this city. The bride received a large number of handsome presents including cut glass, silverware and furniture.

Miss Hart is a resident of Westervelt avenue and is well known in the city. Her father-in-law's gift is a house at Rock avenue on Second street.

MISS MARGARET DAY MARRIED

WEDDED TO JOSEPH ATKINSON SHEEDY, OF BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Rev. Father Egan Officiated at Ceremony in St. Mary's R. C. Church—Now on Honeymoon.

Miss Margaret Day, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Day, of East Fourth street and Joseph Atkinson Sheedy, of Brooklyn, were married August 5, at 5 o'clock at St. Mary's R. C. Church by Rev. Father Egan, assisted by Rev. Father Delahanty.

The wedding was a quiet one. Miss Day was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth V. Day, as bridesmaid and the groom was attended by Lancelot Stevenson, of Brooklyn, as best man. The bride wore white silk mustiene de sole and carried white roses. Her bridesmaid wore pink silk mulle and carried pink roses.

Following the wedding a reception was tendered the bride and groom at the bride's residence on East Fourth street, where a few friends and relatives gathered. A wedding trip of two weeks will be enjoyed and when they return they will reside in Brooklyn where the groom is employed as a draughtsman in a large manufactory.

Rare Birds.

While gathering water cress in the brook back of the Old's place, a young man who is visiting here, surprised a pair of handsome English pheasants near the bank of the stream. The birds are very rare in this vicinity and are supposed to have escaped from some place in the neighborhood as they seemed very tame.

Hypnotist to Tour.

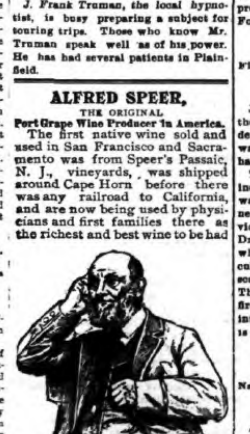
J. Frank Thimm, the local hypnotist, is busy preparing a subject for touring trips. Those who know Mr. Truman speak well as of his power. He has had several patients in Plainfield.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

RACING MEET PLANNED FOR RARITAN PARK

Two Days' Races for Good Purses to Take Place There During September.

SIX EVENTS ARRANGED

LOCAL HORSEMEN TO MAKE ENTRIES FOR BIG AFFAIR.

Band Concerts to be a Feature—Purse in Each Event $150—The Conditions of the Races—Other Details.

Plainfield horsemen are arranging to make entries for the Raritan Driving Association fall meet. Six races have been scheduled to take place at the Raritan Driving Park. The meet will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, September 23 and 24, and the purse for each of the six races will be $150. The winners must get three out of five heats.

There will be three races for pacers and three for trotters. The races for each day have not yet been arranged, so that the programme for each day cannot be announced yet.

The classes as decided upon are as follows:

2.18 pace, 2.24 pace and 2.30 pace.
2.20 trot, 2.24 trot and 2.35 trot.

In connection with the races there will be a band concert, so that the meet promises to be very attractive, and should be well patronized by local people. The association is deserving of support.

LITERARY.

The first article in The Popular Science Monthly for August is the Romanes Lecture, given by Sir Oliver Lodge at Oxford, the press reports of which have attracted much attention. The lecture now published for the first time is certainly of unusual interest, giving a clear and comprehensive account of the new discoveries regarding the breaking up of the atom and the transmutation of matter. President Jordan, of Stanford University, contributes an article on the training of the physician, which like everything that he writes contains many new and suggestive ideas.

The fiction number of Scribner's Magazine has become an institution. For fourteen years it has appeared every August with its wealth of beautiful illustration, much of it in color; its stories by famous writers, and the first remarkable stories of entirely unknown writers who soon became famous. The fiction number this year is a notable successor in this series. As the earliest attempts at color printing in an American magazine appeared here, it is fitting that the best modern color pictures should adorn this number. They are of great variety in method and design. The cover is an elaborate and beautiful reproduction of a design by A. E. Foringer.

JIM IN HARNESS.

Fire Horse Wounded in Flank is Ready for Active Service Again.

Jim, the fire horse which was cut in the flank three months ago in an accident on Park avenue, when the truck was responding to an alarm of fire, has been placed in the service again.

The wound was almost eighteen inches in length and at the time it was thought that the horse would never again be fit for any kind of service. The wound was cared for by Dr. Lewis Pocock and was healed by what is known in veterinary vernacular as "first intension." Not even a scar is now visible from the wound. The horse answered its first alarm of fire a few mornings ago and came up into the harness in excellent style. It is not even lame.

EXPLANATION OF NEW ELECTION LAW

Assemblyman E. E. Gnichtel Makes Clear Its Applications and Meaning.

THE LAW OF PRIMARIES

AFFECTS ALL POLITICAL PARTIES HAVING CANDIDATES AT LAST ELECTION.

Specifies in Detail the Method of Conducting Primaries—It Prescribes the Manner in Which Votes Shall Be Polled.

The new primary election law is somewhat perplexing to the average voter and for this reason the party leaders have been endeavoring to make clear its provisions. One of the best elucidations is that made by Assemblyman E. E. Gnichtel. He says in part:

"The new law instructs how, when and where to conduct the primaries and by whom they shall be conducted; how the candidates may be nominated and the manner in which the delegates to the different conventions are elected. It applies to all political parties which, at the last election, polled for members of Assembly at least five per centum of the total vote cast in this district or division in which the nominations are made or delegates are chosen.

"Hereafter, the first registry day and the primary of both parties shall be held at the same time, and the place shall be designated by the city clerk. The polls shall be open from 1 in the afternoon, to 9 at night, on the second Tuesday in September, and every man who is entitled to vote on election day has the right to vote at the primary.

"Upon entering the polling place to vote at a primary the voter asks for an official primary ballot of the party in whose primary he desires to participate. He then retires to a booth and prepares his ballot. He has the right to vote for any person whose name is not printed on his party ticket by adding the name to the ticket. He can vote only for the number of delegates or candidates to which the district in which he votes is entitled.

"The ballot is folded in such a way as to disclose the city clerk's official indorsement on the back. The Republican ballot is deposited in the Republican ballot-box and the Democratic ballots in the Democratic box by the election officers of the different parties. A ballot deposited in the wrong box will not be counted. At the close of the primary election the officers count the votes cast and make a statement of the result to the city clerk. The person receiving the highest number of votes in the whole ward as candidate of any party for any ward office shall be the candidate of that party for that office. The persons receiving the highest number of votes in each election district as delegate to a party convention, to the extent of the number of delegates to be elected in that district, shall be the delegates.

"The chairman of the county committee of each party participating in the primary may appoint two persons in each election district, who have the right to hear and see the ballots counted and to challenge a voter offering to vote. The candidate whose name is printed on the official ballot has the same privilege. A voter may be challenged for not being a legal voter in the district, or because he is not a member of the political party whose ticket he has asked for. In both cases the voter has the right to swear in his vote.

"The candidate for a ward office, such as freeholder, alderman and school commissioner, is nominated by a direct vote of the party voters of the ward. Hereafter there will be no ward conventions. Delegates will only be elected to the city, county, State and Congressional conventions. The names of the candidates for ward nominations and for delegates to the conventions will be printed on the same ballot.

"All candidates for nominations for public office or for election as delegates at the primary can have their names placed upon the official ballot by complying with the following regulations: A petition is presented to the city clerk, signed by not less than ten legal voters, who are members of the same political party and who reside in the same election district, giving their names, residences and addresses, and stating that they indorse the person or persons named in the petition as candidate or candidates for nomination for the office or offices therein named, or for the office of delegate or delegates at the ensuing convention. They state the political party to which they belong and request the city clerk to print upon the official primary ballot of said political party the names of the person or persons indorsed by them. Such petitions must be verified by each or affirmation by at least one of the signers.

"The signers of any petition may not indorse more persons as candidates or delegates than are to be chosen at the primary election district in which the signers reside.

"It is not necessary to secure the signers for every delegate to be voted for at the primary. Ten legal signers to the petition are sufficient for the whole number of delegates to which the district is entitled to all the different conventions. But the same signers may not petition for more than one set of delegates to the same convention. All candidates for office or delegates to conventions indorsed in this manner shall file a certificate consenting to stand as such.

"There are no requirements in the primary law as to, who or in what manner those petitions shall be prepared. All that is necessary is that when the petition is presented it shall comply with the requirements of the law, and that it shall be filed with the city clerk not less than ten days prior to said primary election. The city clerk shall prepare the ballots at public expense and distribute them among the various election boards on the morning of the day preceding the primary election. Each party will have but one ticket for every election district, and the names of all candidates for office of delegate to a party convention in each election district shall be arranged in alphabetical order.

"On receiving this ticket you may vote for as many candidates and delegates as your district is entitled to and erase, with black pencil, all names thereon other than those for which you desire to vote. The law makes it a crime for a member of one political party to sign his name to any petition purporting to indorse any person as a candidate for office or delegate to a convention of another political party.

"The object of the law was to make the primary election a more important factor in political affairs, and when it is better understood it will do effective service in the interest of good government."

RESTORED TO PENSION LISTS

SUCCESSFUL EFFORTS OF JUSTICE MATTISON, OF THE BOROUGH.

Mrs. Headley, Widow of Soldier, Married Again and Lost Second Husband—Again Pensioned.

Mrs. Lydia A. Headley's claim for back pension was proved by Justice Mattison Thursday and Uncle Sam has presented the poor widow of one of his soldier boys of '61 the sum of $391.30 in payment of arrears. Mrs. Headley's name has again been placed upon the pension lists, entitling her to $12 a month.

This is only the second case of the kind in North Plainfield where a widow of a soldier who has married again and become a widow for the second time, has been restored to the lists for pension. William E. Mattison, the Justice of the Peace, some time ago discovered an old law which enabled him to secure a place on the pension list for a poor widow of the borough, thus situated.

Hearing of that case Mrs. Lydia Headley-VanArtwick, of Jersey City, placed her case in Justice Mattison's hands. She proved that she was the widow of Jeremiah Headley, a private in the 9th New Jersey Regiment during the war of '61. Her husband died and she married a Mr. VanArtwick, of Jersey City. The latter died recently and his widow has been having a hard time eking out a livelihood.

Her brother-in-law, William N. Pangborn, of Linden avenue, took up the case and put it in Justice Mattison's hands with the result that Thursday she received $391.30, the amount of pension due her from the time she made her claim and a monthly allowance of $12.

Gas in Demand.

The Plainfield Gas Company has had hard work keeping pace with the growing demand for gas. Residents of all parts of the city have been putting gas into their homes, and the consequence has been that in some sections the company has been obliged to lay the mains before connection to houses could be made. This, together with a difficulty in getting pipes, has caused considerable delay.

Wedded in September.

The wedding of Miss Genevieve G. Sturges, of Kensington street, New Haven, Conn., and Markus Gallispie, of Woodmont, Conn., will be celebrated in New Haven, on September 9. Both are well known in this city.

Potent Pill Pleasure.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are De-Witt's Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot, of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did me more good than calomel, blue-mass or any other pills I ever took and at the same time it affected me pleasantly. Little Early Risers are certainly an ideal pill." Sold by L. W. Randolph.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 16, "Endure Hardness as a Good Soldier"—Text, II Tim. ii, 3, 4.

Paul had become well acquainted with soldiers and military life. From the time he was rescued from the Jewish mob in the temple at Jerusalem by the Roman commander of the garrison until the time of the writing of this his last letter his companions night and day had been Roman soldiers. In Cæsarea he had been for two years handcuffed to one of them. On his voyage to Rome, in the shipwreck and after, Julius was still a prisoner under close guard. His residence in Rome was part of the time in the camp of the prætorian guard, and when he was allowed to live in his own hired house he was still, in all probability, chained to a soldier of that guard. So he had become very familiar with the customs and manners of that class of men. Their vices and good qualities were known to him. He had largely entered into their experiences and modes of thought and action. It was a natural result that his speech and writings should be colored by this life. His own privations and sufferings would be looked at by him as a kind of military necessity in the service of his sovereign Jesus. He was prisoner of Christ. He endured all things for the sake of Jesus, who had enrolled him as a soldier. He was in active service and must take his share in the sufferings and the hardship common to all soldiers in such service.

This view of Christian life has ever been of great influence and of much value in shaping character. Difficulties and trials come to nearly every one. Very few have a course sheltered from care and temptations. A certain circumstance must be met. The way in which they are treated very largely determines the individual character and destiny. Many sensitive natures, like Timothy, shrink from the rude contact and are inclined, as perhaps he was, to avoid as much as possible the disagreeable things. To all such this warning exhortation of the aged apostle rings out like a bugle call: "Suffer hardship with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus!"

When so much is being said of the "strenuous life" and athletics are so popular this appeal for the development of Christian fortitude should have special heed. Is there not great danger that young men will come on to fail both in duties to be done and in the attainment of personal strength in religious life? The pressure and strife to attain excellence and position in business and professional life are unrelaxing. Competition is keen, rivalry intense. The good things of the soul life are not to be won less easily. Carelessness lets opportunities slip unimproved, and once past they never return. Timidity courts defeat and wins while cowardice secures victory.

At the present time we need as young people more of the spirit in Christian work with which we train for and contest tennis tournaments, golf championships, ball games and boat races. On the training a young fellow will break a leg, an arm, a rib, and glory in the pain if by his grit and skill he makes a point for his team. Shall we for greater gains and under the eye of our great Captain shrink from sacrifice and suffering in this our Christian race?

Thoughts.

Much advice is given from indulgence to others; more from indulgence to ourselves.

Who dwells with pleasure on the faults of others only confesses that he has plenty of his own.

To be delivered from all other fear one must have one fear—the fear of God.

It needs but little courage to confess one's ignorance; it needs much knowledge to know it.

Religion offers no immunity from storms, but it does offer an anchor in the storm.

What is truly done is beautifully done, and if it is not beautifully done it is because it is not truly done.—Ivan Panin in Christian Endeavor World.

God's Machinery.

This world is a machine shop to make mechanics of us. The machinery is not meant to hurt us. There is nothing accidental about it, though accidents occur while we are learning to manage it. If we lose our balance and get a hand caught in the machinery is it the fault of our Father in heaven? No. When we fall it is against God's will. Yet it is God's will that by that fall and from that machinery we should learn not to fall, learn how to use the machinery, that we should be expert through experience, workmen that need not be ashamed though they carry scars.—Sunday School Times.

A Friendly Spirit.

All who would reach those in the lower walks of life and advance their temporal and spiritual interests must approach them in a friendly, cordial and sympathetic spirit and adapt themselves as much as possible to their nature, character and circumstances. As we put ourselves in others' places we can best see things from their viewpoint and understand best how to relieve and help them.—Presbyterian.

The Hardest Work.

I do believe the common man's work is the hardest. The hero has the hero's reward—that kills him to his labor. All great duties are easier than the little ones, though they cost far more blood and agony.—Phillips Brooks.

Bearing the Burden.

Oh, ask not thou. How shall I bear
The burden of tomorrow?
Sufficient for today, its care.
Its evil and its sorrow;
God imparteth by the way
Strength sufficient for the day.
—J. E. Saxby.

HE TRIED TO KILL HIMSELF

JOSEPH PENNINGTON TOOK POISON TUESDAY SAYS WESTFIELD PAPER.

Was Not Hurt by Fall From Roof—Gives No Reason for His Rash Act.

The Daily Press of Wednesday, August 8, stated that Joseph Pennington, of this city, was seriously injured by a fall from a roof. The Westfield Standard, of August 7, has it that Pennington attempted to poison himself. The Standard has this to say concerning the affair:

"Joseph Pennington, of Plainfield, had a close call Tuesday, and it was only through the heroic efforts of Dr. Laird that the man is alive today. Pennington is a slater in the employ of a man named Graves. Graves had a roofing contract in Westfield and one of the men on the job was Pennington. The latter left his co-workers on the roof Tuesday morning, saying it was too hot for him. He climbed down the ladder and was missed for about ten minutes. Soon the attention of the men on the roof was called to his actions. They hurried to him and found that he had taken poison and was in horrible agony. He was led to the police station and Dr. Laird sent for. Officer Toucey and others kept the man on his feet and walked him up and down to keep him from the deadly slumber that follows certain kinds of poisoning. Dr. Laird used a stomach pump on Pennington and worked over him for nearly an hour or more. An ambulance was sent for at Plainfield and later in the afternoon Pennington was removed to the Plainfield hospital.

"Pennington is a married man and has three children. It is not known why he took the poison or where he got it."

MRS. JOHN C. HAFNER DEAD

ACCIDENT MONDAY, AUG. 3, FOLLOWED BY DEATH AT THE HOSPITAL.

Funeral Will be Monday Afternoon —Peculiarly Sad Circumstances Connected.

Mrs. John C. Hafner, of Central street, Netherwood, died Friday night at 6:45 at Muhlenberg Hospital, where she was taken Thursday evening for an operation. August 3, while doing some cleaning at her home, Mrs. Hafner suddenly stepped off a chair, causing a rupture of a blood vessel in the abdomen. At first her condition was not considered serious, but later, when Dr. W. Kempton Browning was called in, it was decided that an operation was the only thing that would give a chance for recovery. Complications followed and death resulted Friday night.

The death is a particularly sad one as Mr. Hafner, the husband, lost his mother three weeks ago, and a sister who died six month ago. Mrs. Hafner was in the twenty-fifth year of her age and was the daughter of Peter Suthpen, of Somerville. She leaves a husband, a son, five years old, a daughter two years old, two brothers and five sisters.

The funeral services were held from the late home on Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the interment was at Hillside Cemetery.

KODOL
Digests What You Eat.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion fermenta and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Kodol

Digests What You Eat

Mrs. Lorlog Nichols of Penn Yan, N. Y., writes: "After using, my food would distress me by causing my heart palpitate so, I would become very weak. Finally I got a bottle of Kodol and it gave me immediate relief. After using a few bottles I am cured.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders, and gives the heart a full, free and untrammeled action.

Bottles only $1.00 Size holding 2½ times the trial size, which sells for 50c.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 16—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Lesson from Paul: How to use tact in dealing with men.—I Cor. ix, 16-23.

In calling the fishermen Simon Peter and Andrew to become his disciples Jesus said unto them, "Follow Me and I will make you fishers of men." One of the first and most important qualifications of a successful fisherman is what we call tact, which, though not so easily defined, is clearly understood by all. No blundering, thoughtless, heedless person can ever be a successful fisher. It requires a person of cautiousness, of intelligence, of tactful skill, who, instead of alarming and driving away the object of his desire, will lead them to him in such a way that they themselves shall be unconscious of it. Men, like fish, hesitate to be caught, even when their soul's salvation is concerned. They are wary of the net of salvation, and unless those who try to win them are "wise as serpents and as harmless as doves" they are more apt to frighten them away from the kingdom than to lead them into it. The wise man says, "He that winneth souls is wise." "Win" is the correct word. Souls are to be won, and by winning a very necessary qualification on the part of the winner is tact.

Paul exemplifies in a large measure the necessity and the successfulness of tact in dealing with men from a religious standpoint. He was a great soul winner and most successful in developing Christian character. And one of the secrets of his success with all nationalities and classes of people was his tactfulness. "Unto the Jews he became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them under the law; to them that are without law, as without law; * * to the weak became I weak, that I might gain the weak; I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." The apostle did not, of course, in any ignoble sense become all things to all men. He was not willing to sin or lie and something that was inconsistent with that to a Roman. He studied the dispositions of all classes and adapted himself to their peculiarities and their wants that he might win them to Christ. He talked to men in a language they could understand and presented Christ from a viewpoint that they could comprehend, and thus only can any one be successful in dealing with men in their relation to God in Jesus Christ.

To be able to adapt himself to the peculiar dispositions of men required thought and study on the part of the apostle. A Jew had to be dealt with in one way and a gentile in another, and to deal with each in the proper way required a certain kind of knowledge which can only come from study and experience. Parents to deal successfully with children, teachers with scholars, employers with employes and Christian people with the unsaved and irreligious must study their particular dispositions and thus learn how to reach them. The aquirement of such skill requires time and labor, but it should be a cheerful one. Men only men that they may be successful in dealing with them in business and in politics. Why should we not, then, as Christians be willing to give the time and study necessary to so understand men that we may deal with them successfully in the salvation and sanctification of their souls?

Endeavor Across the Ocean.

The Italian weekly paper L'Italia Evangelica hereafter will have in every number a special page relating to Christian Endeavor in Italy.

In the annual meeting of the Bulgarian Evangelical society and in the summer school held in Samakov it was voted to recommend to all evangelical pastors in Bulgaria the organization of Christian Endeavor societies. These resolutions were printed and sent to every pastor as well as published in the weekly paper Zornitsa.

The latest statistics give Spain a total of twenty Young People's societies, seventeen Junior and seven Mothers' societies. There are 552 active members and 707 Associate, so that the Spanish Endeavorers have passed the thousand mark.

In Switzerland a committee has been established for the publication of a monthly Christian Endeavor paper.

Mission Juniors.

There is a Junior society in New York state composed entirely of children from a mission district, among whom the comforts of life are unknown and to whom their Junior society is a very bright spot indeed.—Miss Grace L. Jones.

Tenth Legion Enrollment.

The Tenth legion enrollment has now grown to the splendid figures 19,822.

90. S. M. N., Topeka, Kan.—The first Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was formed Feb. 2, 1881, in Williston church, Portland, Me., by the pastor, Rev. Francis E. Clark. There are now over 62,000 societies in all parts of the world, with a membership of 3,500,000.

91. K. N. M., Portland, Ore.—The first Christian Endeavor society in France was organized in 1890. The general synod of the Protestant church in France recommended that all the churches in France adopt this means of Christian nurture.

GREETED BY LOCAL KNIGHTS

PERSEVERANCE LODGE, K. OF P., TENDERS ELABORATE RECEPTION.

J. B. Higgins, Master of Finance, Honored—Musical and Other "Stunts."

Members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, turned out in full force last Friday at the reception given in honor of J. B. Higgins, the master of finance, who has the record of a thirty years membership in that organization.

The entertainment was entirely by local talent. Several tenor solos were rendered by Elmer Cutting, as well as a few by Tommy Muir. William N. Runyon accompanied on the piano. Joseph Loughhead presented some masterful selections on the mandolin and banjo. The Lodge Jews harp quartette also entertained.

The "Coon Comedy Company" quartette gave songs and some first class buck dancing. "Skinny" Wilcox, the manager, was especially active with his feet and won the contest of the buck dancers by truly remarkable work. The quartette next got to work on a watermelon eating contest in which some record breaking time was made by all. Each coon was seated before two quarters of a melon, his hands were tied behind his back, and as the word, the eating began. The winner put away his half melon in three-and-a-half minutes, and was awarded a melon as a prize.

In the name of the Lodge, William N. Runyon presented a mammoth bonquet to Mr. Higgins, accompanying with a brief address in which he ascribed to him the honor justly due a member who has served the Knights so long and faithfully. Mr. Higgins replied with well chosen words of thanks.

The entertainment was concluded by the selection of a committee of twenty-five members who departed for the beer house and presently returned each, bearing a huge melon right off the ice.

Walter L. Hetfield, William N. Runyon, Charles McGinley, William Mattox and Elmer Cutting were the committee in charge of the affair.

PERMANENTLY BARRED.

The Colored People Not Allowed to Enter Galvin's Park, Even on Thursdays.

Colored people have been denied the use of Galvin's Park at all times and if they persist in attempting to enter will be forcibly ejected. Last Thursday a number of colored people went to the place from Plainfield, and were told that they could not enter.

Mr. Galvin makes the distinction, he says, because he is obliged to by the white patrons of the resort. The *action of the colored people is prac*tically boycotting the place, has led him to deny them its privileges at all times. There is now talk among some of the colored people of this city of instituting suit against the management.

DEATH OF FORMER CITIZEN.

Alexander Runyon Died Sunday in Iowa—Well Know Here.

Word has been received by Mrs. Jeremiah VanWinkle, of Central avenue, of the death of her brother, Alexander Runyon, of Schellsberg, Iowa. Mr. Runyon had just completed his second term as mayor of Schellsberg. He was well known in this city, *although he left it at the age of six*teen. He was seventy years old and is survived by one daughter, Mrs. J. P. Shea, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., and h's sister of this city.

Mr. Runyon died August 2, after a four weeks' sickness. He was the son of Elisha Runyon, at one time Plainfield's city judge.

Waking Up at "The Home."

The Somerset County Telephone Company, better known as the Home, *is again on an independent basis, hav*ing cancelled its lease to the State Telephone Company. Spencer Weart has succeeded Mr. Atkinson as president, and the lines are being rebuilt and put in a first-class condition under the supervision of foreman Wm. Trumbull. Is is expected that the service will improve.

Large Sum Realized.

As a result of the charity euchre given at the Hotel Netherwood Thurs*day evening the sum of* $235 was realized as profit for the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. G. H. Brown, a guest at the hotel, was general manager of the affair and at his own expense furnished refreshments to the guests.

Eat All You Want.

Persons troubled with indigestion or dyspepsia can eat all they want if they will take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. This remedy prepares the stomach for the reception, retention, digestion and assimilation of all of the wholesome food that may be eaten, and enables the digestive organs to transform the same into the kind of blood that gives health and strength. ACTRESS APPEARS IN DIVORCE CASE

Further Complications in the Suit Brought by Mrs. Adele Watt, of the Borough.

THE CO-RESPONDENTS

TWO ACTRESSES INVOLVED IN COUNTER SUIT AGAINST HUSBAND.

Gladys Renshaw Was Questioned Concerning Sum Promised Her by Mr. Watt—Refused to Give Account and Trouble Follows.

Further complications in an already complex legal case in the divorce courts were added Thursday in the suit of Mrs. Adele Watt, of Rockview avenue, against her husband, Archibald Watt. Gladys Renshaw, an actress, served a notice of appearance through her attorney, former Senator Frederick Werner, of New York, in the counter divorce suit between the husband and wife.

Miss Renshaw is one of the two women named by the wife as correspondents in her suit against her husband. By serving the papers yesterday Miss Renshaw follows the example of Rev. George Van De Water, the Episcopal rector, who is named as correspondent by the husband in his suit for divorce against his wife. Mr. De Water did not make his appearance and also a bill of particulars.

Miss Renshaw's action, it is said, is the result of an attempt on the part of John C. Shaw, Mrs. Watt's counsel, to secure a statement from her showing how she spent the $20,000 she is seeking to collect from Mr. Watt. It is said this sum was promised her by Mr. Watt for absenting herself from New York City following a mutual agreement.

Judge Delahanty, in a court of Special Sessions in New York some time ago ordered that such a statement be secured and it is the intention of Mrs. Watt's attorney's to force the mandate, Miss Renshaw having failed to make out the itemized bill.

NEARLY KILLED.

Charles Leffler Thrown From His Carriage in New Market.

Charles Leffler, a nephew of Mrs. Charles Fair, who was killed a year ago in France with her husband in an automobile accident, and who formerly lived at New Market, had a narrow escape from death Friday while driving through Union Township. The horse he was driving became unmanageable and ran away. Leffler was picked up unconscious and taken home. His condition is critical.

Youngsters in Trouble.

Edward Bimble, Fred Conklin, William Perry and Peter Allen, all Prideville youths, were up before Recorder Dond in the borough court last Friday charged with disorderly conduct. Marshal Fahn charged them with having taken a street roller into the middle of the road and endangered traffic. The Recorder fined them each $1. Young Allen's father threatens to appeal the case to Somerville.

More Oysters.

Congressman Howell, of New Brunswick, is said to favor an appropriation by Congress for the construction of the proposed tideway between Manasquan river and the head of Barnegat Bay, which it is claimed would open thousands of acres to oyster and clam growing in the upper part of Barnegat Bay.

Suicide of Aged Farmer.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Aug. 8—Peter G. Quick, seventy-two years old, a wealthy farmer, committed suicide at his home near South Branch yesterday morning. He became melancholy over the prolonged illness of his aged wife. He believed she was about to die and said he would kill himself.

Real Estate Sold.

William Jeffery and W. S. Terhune recently sold a large piece of property to George P. Maynard, of this city. The land is located at New Riverhead, Long Island.

Landlord vs. Tenant.

The landlord and tenant case of Love against McCallum in Justice Hand's court has been settled out of court in a manner satisfactory to both parties.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of William Moorhouse, of McKinley place, to Miss Amy Chadwick, of East Seventeenth street, New York, is announced.

WHO WILL BE THE NEXT GOVERNOR?

Supporters of Mr. Kean Certain That He Will Be a South Jerseyman.

EDW. STOKES NAMED

WILLIAM M. JOHNSON ALSO MENTIONED AS A POSSIBILITY.

South Jerseymen Think It Is Time They Were Represented in the Gubernatorial Chair — The Reasons for Their Position.

The supporters of Mr. Kean are so sure that the next Governor should be a South Jerseyman as they are that the tax levy for 1904 will be made and collected. On the other hand, the opponents of Mr. Kean are as confident that the next Governor should come from North Jersey as they are that the State's income from corporations has notably decreased within the last six months, says a correspondent of the New York Tribune. Incident and important to the situation is the fact that South Jersey will demand that the Republican candidate for Governor shall come from that end of the State. The Republicans there would not object to the selection of a United States Senator within their boundaries, but first and last they proclaim that the party candidate for Governor must be a citizen of South Jersey, and that his name is Edward Casper Stokes. There are exceptions, of course, to the nomination of the present clerk in Chancery, but in this case, as in some others, they prove the rule, and it is entirely safe to say that the great majority of South Jersey Republicans are supporting Mr. Stokes. They assert not only the exceptional ability and qualifications of their candidates, but recite, on every occasion, the fact that South Jersey has not had a Republican candidate for Governor since the defeat of General Bird Grubb, about twenty years ago, and that the party has not had a Republican Governor from South Jersey since Governor Olden, in 1863. In fact, many of the more strenuous and locally particular Republicans in that part of the State say that Governor Olden was a Middle Jerseyman, and that South Jersey proper has never had a Republican Governor, and that the nearest to having one was when William A. Newell, "the Boy Congressman," was elected in 1857. The argument of these Republicans, therefore, is that it would not only be the perpetuation of injustice for North Jersey to claim the right to name the next Republican candidate for Governor, but that such a course, if successful, might jeopardize Republican success in the State, and might enable the Democrats to choose the Governor and the United States Senator to be elected in 1904. So confident are the South Jersey Republicans that the northern part of the State will concede to the southern part the right to name the next candidate for Governor that a number of their leaders have said that ex-Senator Stokes will be nominated by acclamation.

But not by any means all of the North Jersey Republican leaders and others accept this view of the political situation as final. Nor can it be said that the leaders in South Jersey are a unit in favor of the nomination of ex-Senator Stokes. A number of North Jersey Republicans of prominence and influence are very decidedly of the opinion that the next Republican candidate for Governor should be and will be ex-Assistant Postmaster General William M. Johnson, both because of his eminent fitness for the place and because of his freedom, as they say, from every sort of factional entanglement, and the impossibility of connecting him with any of the factional political proceedings of the last or preceding legislatures. These Republicans are not in any way meddling with the matter of the succession to Senator Kean. On the contrary, they are leaving that matter to an entirely secondary position to that of the selection of the Republican candidate for Governor. They make no exception to Senator Kean as his own successor at this time, nor is it at all likely that they will do so unless a more acute straining of the present situation than now seems probable should be the result of the Republican situation. They apparently are paying no attention to the frequently repeated rumors that Senator Kean and ex-Senator Stokes have formed a combination whereby the former is to succeed himself and the latter is to be the candidate for Governor. These North Jersey Republicans appear to be content with the prevailing deduction of public opinion among shrewd and thoughtful Republicans that such an alliance would alienate the strong and aggressive following which Congressman Charles N. Fowler has among the younger and numerically powerful Republicans of the State.

In fact, many of these Republicans make no secret of the fact that they would ask no more welcome work than the opportunity to support Mr. Fowler for United States Senator, and among them is heard expressed the hope that Senator Kean and ex-Senator Stokes will enter on an agreement to aid each other, because, as they believe, it would result in the defeat of both, and in the nomination of ex-Senator Johnson for Governor, with the canvass for United States Senator open to anybody, Charles N. Fowler preferred.

It is not to be understood that Mr. Fowler is in any way connected with this outline of possibilities or probabilities, or that he has encouraged or will encourage any of his political supporters to engage in any sort of work which will entangle him either for or against Mr. Stokes or Mr. Johnson. As is well known, he has long been a staunch political friend of the South Jersey candidate for Governor, but it is equally true that he recently said to a Tribune correspondent that he was not pledged to any candidate for Governor, and the same time expressing an equally warm admiration for both Mr. Johnson and Mr. Stokes, either of whom, as he said, would be an honor to New Jersey as the Chief Executive of the State. Republicans, moreover, who are familiar with the political situation in New Jersey, and who know the party factional spirit which exists as between Senator Kean and Congressman Fowler, say that Mr. Stokes would seriously, if not fatally, jeopardize his prospects as a candidate for Governor if he should consent to a compact with Senator Kean now or hereafter, pending the oncoming State convention. Such a course would arouse the antagonism, they say, of every friend of Congressman Fowler in the State, and, as one of Senator Kean's closest political friends said, referring to this rumor of a Stokes-Kean alliance only recently: "John Kean is able to take care of himself. His following in the State has been entirely too largely discounted and injudiciously misrepresented by his few opponents. He has the call, and he will be his own successor." There are hundreds of Republicans who do not agree with this statement as to Mr. Kean's capacity or following, but they pretty generally admit that he is by far too intelligent to form any alliance with a candidate for Governor which would array against him a support which is important if not necessary to his success.

Save the Children.

Ninety-nine of every one hundred diseases that children have are due to disorders of the stomach, and these disorders are all caused by indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is just as good for children as it is for adults. Children thrive on it. It keeps their little stomachs sweet and encourages their growth and developement. Mrs. Henry Carter, 708 Central St., Nashville, Tenn., says: "My little boy is now three years old and has been suffering from indigestion ever since he was born. I have had the best doctors in Nashville, but failed to do him any good. After using one bottle of Kodol he is a well baby. I recommend it to all sufferers." Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

REMARKABLE TIMEPIECE.

Plays Tunes and Hands Out Checks at Rowley's Store.

Frank Rowley, the West Front street druggist, is exhibiting an intricate Yale clock at his store. It stands nearly seven feet high and is so arranged that by dropping a nickle in the slot you hear a popular tune, and at the same time you get a check for the value of your money good for a purchase at the store. Occasionally checks worth from two to five times the amount of the coin dropped are received. The clock is brilliantly lighted, making a great attraction.

Sale of Real Estate.

POPE PIUS X. FAINTS.

Overcome by Heart Weakness and Strain of Audiences.

MUST NOW HAVE COMPLETE REST.

His Physician, Dr. Lapponi, Insists Upon Suspension of All Official Work and Receptions.

ROME, Aug. 12.—Pope Pius X., overcome by the strain of his duties, fainted while at mass. His collapse is considered to be due to heart weakness.

His holiness was very much agitated, but still he insisted upon admitting to hear his mass all Venetians who had journeyed to Rome purposely to attend the ceremonies. They numbered about 300 when the mass began in the Pauline chapel, and the air was vitiated, with the temperature above 90 degrees.

The pope had already given the communion to 200 people when he began to feel ill. Those about him soon perceived that he was not himself by his nervousness and impatience, which showed itself when his attendant handed him his spectacles.

He pushed them aside and drew another pair from his pocket. When another attendant tried to tie the ribbons of his robes behind he told him to stop and did it himself, a most unusual occurrence with him. The consternation of the Venetians when they saw him faint was great, and they rendered matters worse by crowding around him.

Mgr. Bisleti, however, kept his presence of mind and ordered the Swiss guards to clear a space about the pontiff. Smelling salts were brought hastily, and they had the desired effect.

Dr. Lapponi has thought it more prudent for his holiness not to leave his apartment and not to go into the garden of the Vatican, as he desired. The doctor further insisted on a suspension of all audiences.

MINES ARE CLOSED.

Colorado Miners' Strike Affects Cripple Creek District.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Aug. 12.—Practically all the mines in this district except the Portland and those operated by the Woods Investment company are closed down in consequence of the union miners' strike.

The number of miners on strike is estimated at 2,700. Hundreds of miners are leaving the camp for other localities. At the miners' union headquarters it was asserted that no more ore will be shipped from the camp to the mills and smelters of the United States Refining and Reduction company and the American Smelting and Refining company until they concede an eight hour day and agree to pay the union scale of wages.

Tropical Hurricane Threatens.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The tropical hurricane was apparently central south of the central Cuban coast and recurving in such a way that no course cannot now be determined, but it is dangerous for vessels to sail for southern ports. It has passed over Santo Domingo and Martinique and is probably approaching the south Cuban coast, with indications recurving, but at what angle the weather bureau officials are unable to state. A report from Havana said that the wind was blowing thirty-six miles an hour and was from the northeast. The hurricane probably will continue in its course northward somewhere close to the Florida peninsula. Hurricane warnings have been sent to points from Port Eads on the gulf coast around the Florida coast up as far as Jupiter and storm warnings to Atlantic coast points from Jackson to Charleston, S. C. The weather bureau regards it as extremely unwise for vessels to sail for gulf or Cuban ports or the Bahamas this week. The storm was central at Kingston, Jamaica.

Color Line Drawn by Labor Union.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Aug. 12.—The color line has been drawn by a union labor organization here. The Machinists' union of Newport News, the local branch of the International Association of Machinists, voted to sever its affiliation with the Central Trades and Labor council. The latter recently admitted representatives of negro labor unions to its membership despite the protests of the Machinists' union, which is the strongest and most influential labor body in the city. Other withdrawals from the Central council may follow.

Strikers Paralyze Business.

KIEV, Russia, Aug. 12.—The strikers have completely paralyzed business and will not allow finished machinery to be delivered from manufactories. The men turned girls out of dressmaking and other workshops under threats of death. The streets are full of soldiers, according to these advices, and shooting occurs daily. The price of bread has risen 150 per cent and is still going up. The troops are working the waterworks.

Drowned by Auto Going Into Canal.

FONDA, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Harry Spaulding, a Buffalo automobilist bound from Amsterdam to Syracuse via the towpath of the Erie canal, was drowned about two miles above Sprakers. He lost control of his machine, which bounded into the canal. The body was recovered. On it was found a New York draft for $5,000.

Hailstorm at Owego.

OWEGO, N. Y., Aug. 12.—A heavy hailstorm struck here, doing heavy damage to several fine fields of tobacco. The wind blew down many trees about town, tearing telephone and electric light wires with them.

IRONDEQUOIT WINS.

Sailed by A. Hannan of New York, an American Yacht Wins.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 12.—The dissatisfaction evinced over the manner in which the American challenger for the Canada cup had been sailed in the first two races led to the summoning from New York of Mr. A. Hannan to take charge of the Irondequoit.

Mr. Hannan went aboard the yacht, and the Irondequoit turned the tables on the Strathcona. He was in full command. Skipper James Barr acted as helmsman.

All conditions favored her—a course with fourteen miles of reaching in it and plenty of wind, never less than twelve miles an hour. It surprised no one that the American boat should show the way to the first buoy. After her performance in a reach on Saturday it seemed the most natural thing in the world that she should draw away from the Strathcona. Skipper Jarvis carried every possible sail and overhauled Irondequoit just a trifle, but he was at least three-quarters of a mile astern at the finish.

The official times were as follows: Irondequoit, start, 11:00:18; finish, 2:15:55. Strathcona, start, 11:00:35; finish, 2:20:19.

Ethel's Pride Got Westchester.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Threatening weather kept the attendance down at the Empire City grand circuit meeting. In the Westchester stake for three-year-olds Tireless sold for $30 to $50 for the field, but Ethel's Pride took the lead and held it to the wire, with Mary Gage a close second. In the next heat Ethel's Pride broke at the top turn, and Tireless won. The daughter of Directum made no mistake in the next heat, winning it and the race. The 2:23 pace was a quick and hot race. Al Beck sold $100 every against the field, and he gave his backers no trouble.

Gimcrack Won Delaware Handicap.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Another dark day and slow going marked but failed to mar the racing at the spa. The Delaware, a handicap for three-year-olds and upward at one mile, was the stake feature and was won by James R. Keene's Gimcrack, by Ornament—Joppa. Gannon up, by three-quarters of a length from E. R. Thomas' Hunter Raine, who beat R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Highlander for place by half a length in the stretch. James R. Keene's Ben Brush filly Birch Broom won the third, a selling race, from Flara by a neck.

Croix d'Or Won by a Length.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 12.—The feature of the card at Delmar, an all aged sprint at five furlongs, went to Croix d'Or, the longest priced horse in the race. Shortly after the field broke Fitzkanet, the heavily played favorite, was cut down, and Miss Mae Day, played by many to win the event, was thrown out of her stride. Croix d'Or and Malster were out in front running as a team. Coming into the stretch Miss Mae Day was fifth. She passed Malster, but could not catch Croix d'Or, who won by a length.

Bessie McCarthy Won in a Canter.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Bessie McCarthy, the outsider in the betting, proved an easy winner of the mile and a quarter handicap at Harlem. She had speed to loan and raced head and head with Bondage for a mile and an eighth. Then she drew away and won as she pleased by three lengths. Bondage tired at the end and barely got the place from John McGurk, the favorite.

Alleged "Ringer" Is Held.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 12.—Oscar Rhodes, who has been a prisoner at Clayton, St. Louis county, was held to await the action of the grand jury in the alleged "ringer" case at Delmar race track in which an aged horse was substituted for one entered to run as a two-year-old. Untrue by name. In the opinion of Justice Campbell the information was sufficient to warrant holding Rhodes.

Counterfeit $1; Look Out For It.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The secret service has discovered a new counterfeit one dollar silver certificate. The general appearance of this note is said to be excellent and calculated to deceive careful handlers of money. It is in imitation of the issue of 1891, check letter D. Tillman is the portrait of Hamilton and the seal and some notes have the number 7,701,348.

CHILD LABOR AND THE PRESIDENT

Were Subjects of "Mother" Jones' Speech on Watchung Avenue, Saturday.

PASSIONATE HARANGUE

LARGE AND GENERALLY RESPECTFUL CROWD LISTENED.

One Man Jeered and Was Thrown Out—President Roosevelt Was Bitterly Attacked—The Mother Explains Her Mission.

In a tirade against President Roosevelt and the Governments, "Mother" Jones lectured to four hundred people at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fourth street Saturday evening. The object of her visit, she declared, was to tell the people of this city about the economic conditions in Philadelphia and to awaken public sentiment against the employment of children under sixteen years of age in factories. President Roosevelt's action in refusing to see her and the three small boys with her led to her severely critising his methods of administration.

"Mother" Jones arrived in town Saturday afternoon and made her headquarters at the Hotel Kensington.

The platform was a chair and on it at 8 o'clock Saturday night, a tall striker introduced the "Mother," a little woman, with snow white hair, small dark blue eyes, a determined chin and a voice which, although weakened by constant use, could be heard distinctly almost a block away.

Opening her address, the agitator told the people her object in trying to see President Roosevelt. She said that on June 1, the employes of the textile mills in Philadelphia struck for fifty-five hours a week and pay for the same amount of time. She said that the strike has practically been won.

"Child slavery" in the factories was explained by the "Mother." She said that in Pennsylvania children are put to work in the factories at the age of six to eight years. With her she said she had children not yet ten years of age who had never seen the inside of a school room.

"The children of the great city as well as in the country towns are sacrificed for the greed of money-making capitalists. If one half of the people living in this country were aware of the conditions existing below their eyes in the large factories, they would be ashamed that they lived beneath the American flag." Some figures were given showing the percentage of child labor in the factories. "I protest against the intellectual murder of children to satisfy the greed of the mill owner, because the future of the Republic depends upon the intelligence of the growing children. If they go to work in factories at the age of six years at which time they should be in school, we will have a nation of idiots and law breakers.

"We started out to let the world know about the conditions existing in the factories. Our destination was Oyster Bay where we intended placing before the President the true conditions of child slavery in the factories. I wanted him to recommend a bill to Congress to protect them. We got there and the Secretary said to me that the President's sympathies are on record in the State of New York. Said he, when the President was Governor of New York, a bill went through both houses prohibiting children working in factories at an age less than 14.

"That bill is inadequate. We want not a State bill but a federal bill which will cover the ground thoroughly. Everybody knows where he stood then," cried the woman, "and Mr. Reporter," turning to The Press representative, "you can tell them this for me, everybody knows where the President stood when he ordered out the soldiers to Croton dam to compel the men and children to work there under guns.

"President Roosevelt could not see three little children, representing the white slaves of America, but his Congress will at their next meeting appropriate $950 a day of our good money to keep three yachts at his service so that he can live at his ease.

"There was an awful cry recently about the cruelty of Russia. I believe that Russia is more humane than America. She does not kill her children by allowing them to work in factories when they should be in a cradle."

During the meeting, one young man laughed in derision of the speaker's remarks and the latter directed toward him a tongue-lashing which caused the young fellow to retreat in great confusion amid the jeers of the rest of the audience.

The Misses Helen and Laura Houtman, of New York, are visiting Miss E. Harrigan, of this city.

ATTRACTIVE WEDDING IN THE FOURTH WARD

Marriage of Miss Sarah Blimm and Edward Clark Attended by Many Friends.

AT HOME OF THE BRIDE

GROOM IS SON OF THE COUNCILMAN AND IS IN BUSINESS IN NEWARK.

Couple Well Known Among a Large Circle of Friends—House Decorations Were Beautiful—Bride Charmingly Gowned.

In the presence of only relatives and near friends, Miss Sarah Isabelle Blimm, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Blimm, and Edward Osborne Clark, son of Councilman and Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., of Jackson avenue, the borough, were married Monday night at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents on Somerset street. Rev. J. N. Morris, of Trinity Church, Newark, and a former pastor of the groom's father, officiated.

The ceremony was performed in a corner of the large double parlors, the bridal party standing in front of a bank of palms and ferns. The rooms were brilliantly lighted with many incandescents lamps and were made attractive through the use of palms, ferns and flowers. Southern smilax entwined about the balustrade in the hallway formed a pleasing part of the decorations. The prevailing colors in the parlors were green and white and in the dining room green and red.

The bride's gown was of white crepe de chine over taffeta and was trimmed with real lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Her attendant, Miss Sadie Brown, of New York, was gowned in green French veiling over green and the trimming was embroidered chiffon. Her bouquet was pink roses. The best man was Albert Clark, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Harry Blimm, brother of the bride, and Carl L. Smith, of Philadelphia.

While the wedding march was being rendered on the piano by Mr. Westervelt, the bridal party entered the parlor from an adjoining room and took its position in front of the officiating clergyman. The ceremony was performed with a ring. Congratulations were then showered upon the young couple by the guests, after which supper was served. Later in the evening many of the younger set enjoyed an informal dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark left early in the evening on their honeymoon. Their coach was elaborately decorated with white ribbon, and a dinner bell played a merry part in the send-off, the bell being tied on the coach. A shower of rice fell on the couple as they left the house. To escape any further pranks Mr. and Mrs. Clark went to the Netherwood Station, where they boarded a train for an unknown destination. Upon their return they will take up housekeeping in South Seventh street, Roselle, where the groom has completely furnished a home.

The bride was the recipient of a handsome array of gifts, including silverware, cut-glass, furniture and two substantial checks, one from her father and another from the groom.

In a large circle of acquaintances the couple are popular. The bride is a member of the German Reformed Church, and the groom belongs to the Trinity Reformed Church. He holds a position as bookkeeper in the large hat manufactory of Wharton & Company, of Commerce street, Newark, of which firm his father is the junior member. The best wishes of a host of friends go with Mr. and Mrs. Clark.

Among the guests present were people from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Rahway, New Brunswick, Philadelphia and Plainfield.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

Tendered John McKeon—Euchre and Dancing Enjoyed.

A birthday surprise was tendered John A. McKeon, Jr., of West End Park. Progressive euchre was the feature of the evening. The woman's prize was won by Miss O'Neil, of New York and the gentleman's by Andrew F. McKeon. Miss McCann and Mr. Frasee won the booby prizes. Refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed. Friends from Brooklyn, New York and Jersey City were present.

Repairing Culvert.

Workmen are engaged in repairing the Carlton avenue culvert at the junction of Watchung avenue. The culvert during heavy rains is not large enough to carry off the water and in order to make it equal to any emergency the course of the stream over which it is built will be straightened. The gutter on the west side of the street will also receive attention.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

EXAMINATION OF ASSESSORS BOOKS

Occupied the Attention of the City Councilmen at Last Night's Meeting.

HIGHER TAX EXPLAINED

COMPARISON OF THE RATES FOR THIS YEAR AND LAST.

Bids for Macadamizing Streets Will be Received by the Council Monday—Petitions for Hydrants—About Ballot Boxes.

Chiefly for the purpose of examining the books of the assessors, the Common Council held an adjourned meeting last Tuesday. There were just enough members present for a quorum, the absent ones being Councilmen Garrigues, Tyler, vanHerwerden and Tolles. Mr. Daniel moved to suspend the regular order of business, after which he moved that the Council adjourn to Monday evening, August 24, when bids for macadamizing certain streets will be received.

Mr. Daniel stated that the occasion for last evening's meeting was principally to examine the books of the assessors. He said that the rate for the coming year will be $2.55, an increase of two points over last year's. He explained this as due to a jump of one point in the county rate, to the interest on the new Court House bonds and to an increase of another point in the State school rate, making the aggregate increase two points. He then moved that the members examine the books of the assessors and a recess was declared for that purpose.

After the recess the following figures were given out showing the difference in the rate for last year and this year. This is the comparison:

	1902.	1903.
County tax	.40	.40
State school	.17	.19
Fire department	.24	.26
Library	.0054	.004
City and city light	.60	.0054
Poor	.0054	.004
Free school and bond	.60	.0054
Principal sewer bonds	.07	.06
Interest sewer obligation	.09	.07
	$2.50	$2.55

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution, which was adopted, approving the books of the assessors.

City Clerk MacMurray read a letter from S. Ruling Ryno, clerk to the Union County Board of Freeholders, offering the city $25 each for nine ballot boxes, now owned by the city and which are desired by the county officials. According to the new primary law each polling place will have to be equipped with three ballot boxes, one for the Republicans, one for the Democrats and a third for all other parties. The city now has eighteen boxes and if these are sold to the county, it will be the duty of the county to see that each polling place in the city has the necessary three boxes.

Mr. Daniel moved that the ballot boxes be disposed of at a price not less than $25 each, less such sum needed for repairs. The motion was adopted.

Residents of Evergreen and Martin avenues petitioned the Council for two fire hydrants, one on each of these avenues, claiming that inasmuch as several fine houses have been and are in course of construction that the fire protection is needed. The petition was signed by E. M. French and others and it was referred to the proper committee.

City Clerk MacMurray reported that the agreement between the city and Titus H. Lowry for the erection of the barn back of police headquarters, had been approved. The clerk also reported that he had received from County Collector Wood an abstract of ratables and exemptions for Union County and on motion of Mr. Daniel this was filed with the clerk for future reference. This concluded the business of the evening and the Council adjourned.

Bridge Building in Progress.

The new Grand avenue bridge, now being built by Union and Somerset counties, is progressing favorably, although of late the high water has impeded the labors of the men somewhat. The same difficulty was experienced in building the Madison avenue and Dunr street bridges. Yesterday afternoon representative from the two Boards of Freeholders inspected the work.

Building Permit.

Charles H. Hand, of 319 Watchung avenue, has filed plans with Building Inspector T. O. Doane for the erection of a three story frame house on West Third street, opposite Fund place.

HOSPITAL NEARLY COMPLETED

WORK ON THE MEN'S WARD WAS BEGUN YESTERDAY.

Women's Ward Will Soon be Ready for Occupancy—Need for Assistance.

Work was began yesterday in building the men's ward at the new Muhlenberg Hospital and it will be pushed through with all practical speed. The women's ward is about completed and it is believed that everything will be in readiness to take possession this fall. A member of the Board of Governors of the hospital, in speaking of the new building, recently, declared that its appointments equalled those to be found in the largest and finest hospitals in New York, which speaks well for those who have been in charge of the work, as well as Evarts Tracy, the architect.

One has merely to visit the hospital now in use to see what a great work is being done with a limited amount of room. Additional money will be necessary to complete the new building and the Board of Governors hope that the people of Plainfield will not be slow to recognize the importance of their assistance. Visitors are welcomed at the new hospital and the man in charge will be glad to show any interested person through the building.

COURT HOUSE DAMAGED.

Big Derrick Ripped Out Material of Elizabeth Structure.

Part of the walls of the new Union County court house, which is being erected at Elizabeth, N. J., was demolished Tuesday by the falling of a big derrick, which ripped out part of the marble and granite on the Rahway avenue side of the building.

There were several men at work on the walls at the time of the accident, but the noise of the derrick tearing away the scaffolding as it crashed down caused them to ran away in time.

The police say the scaffolding was not strong enough to sustain the weight of the big derrick, which was used for raising stones from the street and placing them on the top of the walls.

STILL ANOTHER LEVY.

U. S. Marshal on Ferryboat Bound Brook at Elizabeth Yards.

Elizabeth, Aug. 19—The ferryboat Bound Brook, of the New Jersey Central Railroad, which is undergoing extensive repairs at the New Jersey Dry Dock Company's plant here, has been levied on for salvage by the owners of some tugs which went to the ferryboat's assistance when it was in danger of destruction by fire some months ago. The railroad company refused to pay the claims, on the ground that they are exorbitant. A deputy United States Marshal is in charge of the vessel.

Lane Lost His Eye.

Somerville, Aug. 19—The medical staff of Somerset Hospital yesterday performed an operation on Augustus Lane, colored, cutting out his eye. Lane was strolling down South street Saturday night, it is said, with a "jag" on, when someone jumped on him and beat him soundly. During the "scrap" Lane was struck in the eye, the ball of which was broken.

Going to the Lake.

The first annual excursion of the U. O. of B. H., and M. S. A. will leave tomorrow morning for a day at Lake Hopatcong. Fully three hundred will attend. The excursion is arranged by William Phillips and Spencer Conway for the benefit of their invalid wives. The committee in charge consists of William Phillips, Spencer Conway, Nathan Pollard, Phillip Brown and Charles Shelton.

Able Instructor.

Prof. A. S. Herr, now teacher in the Penn. Business College, has been engaged to take charge of the Commercial and English work at the Plainfield Business College this year. Prof. Herr has had much experience in public and High School work and is most highly recommended.

Hen Convention.

The Atlantic City Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Show, will be held at Young's Ocean Pier, Atlantic City, August 27 to 31. It is expected that the exhibit will be the largest in years.

—Neuman Brothers will receive tomorrow morning seventy-five baskets of Mountain Rose and Reeve's favorite peaches. A shipment of three cases of fancy Texas muskmelons will also be received tomorrow morning. Get the best by trading at Neuman's.

IN GALA ATTIRE.

Somerville is Entertaining Many Delegates to Encampment of P. O. S. of A.

Somerville, Aug. 19—Every train that came to Somerville yesterday afternoon brought delegates to the fifteenth annual State Encampment of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, which is in session here, and until a late hour this morning the delegates continued to arrive. Nearly all the business places on Main street and many of the private residences are handsomely decorated with flags and bunting.

At 10 o'clock this morning, when the convention was called to order by F. L. Condict, of New Brunswick, the State president, over 300 delegates were in attendance in Somerset Hall and answered the roll called by J. Wiggins Thorn, the State secretary. Lawyer Fred. A. Pope, who is a prominent son, is the chairman of the local committee on arrangements and has done good work in so efficiently handling so many outsiders.

New Jersey has over 7,000 members in the order. The reports presented this morning indicated an increase in membership in the State during the past year of between 900 and 1,000, which is a larger proportionate gain than has been made by any other State.

FIRE HOUSE SHOCKED.

Iron Work at Fire Headquarters Charged With Electricity—No Danger.

A shocking discovery was made at fire headquarters at 10 o'clock Tuesday night. One of the men who happened to put his hand on some iron work down stairs in the fire house received the shock—an electric one. The restlessness of the horses was the first sign of anything wrong and investigation showed that all metal work in the stalls as well as throughout the entire building was charged with lighting current of electricity. Considerable time was spent in trying to locate the seat of the trouble and a lineman from the electric light company was finally called in to disconnect the lighting for the entire building. This shut off the current on the charged metal. This morning the seat of the trouble was discovered in the crossing of two wires and electric lighting re-established. While the current was not strong enough to be dangerous it caused considerable trouble among the horses, which would neither eat nor drink on account of the current circulating through the mangers.

VETERANS TO ASSEMBLE.

Wm. Johnston, of the Plains, Issues Invitations for a Reunion.

William D. Johnston, of Scotch Plains, as secretary, has issued invitations to the fourteenth annual reunion of the Fraternity of the Survivors of the Sixth Regiment, N. Y. Volunteer Heavy Artillery, to be held at the Hall of Delancy Cole's Camp, No. 78, Sons of Veterans, No. 996 Main street, Peekskill, N. Y., Monday, September 7.

The Fraternity will be the guests of the Sons of Veterans, and there will be the usual attractive programme. Comrades are requested to wear Grand Army uniforms and to signify their intention of attending by communicating with Mr. Johnston. The question of the publication of the history of the Regiment will be brought before the meeting, and there will be several good speakers present.

New Jersey's Tomato Crop.

There is much speculation at present as to the tomato canning industry of South Jersey, and various opinions are expressed. As a rule, the vines look thrifty except in localities where heavy rains with hot sun made the scald detrimental, and in some sections the usual blight was severe. In Cumberland County there was a rather rank growth with light settings. Those who are in a position to know say that there will be plenty of tomatoes. The canning industry means much to Southern New Jersey. Of the fifty-two canneries in the State, most of them are in the lower part. Statistics show that more than 7,000 persons are employed during the packing season, a majority of whom are women.

Fire in a Chimney.

A verbal alarm of a chimney fire at 235 North Front street near Westervelt avenue was received at fire headquarters at 8:15 this morning from Wesley Dunn, a clerk in a grocer's delivery wagon. The department proceeded to the spot and found a chimney fire under headway. Five minutes work settled the trouble without any loss.

—The Plainfield Seminary, Miss Kenyon and Miss Arnold, principals, will reopen Thursday, September 17, for its thirty-sixth year.

POLITICAL SUICIDE TO NOMINATE BRYAN

Or Cleveland Either, Says James E. Martine to The Daily Press.

FACTIONS IN THE PARTY

TARRIFF AND CURRENCY MATTERS WILL BE ISSUE OF NEXT CAMPAIGN.

Available Man for Democratic Nomination Has Not Yet Been Named—Free Silver is Dead—Other Political Views.

"To nominate William Jennings Bryan or Grover Cleveland for the Presidency, would be political suicide," were the words said by James E. Martine, at his home at Cedar Brook, this afternoon, when interviewed by a representative of The Daily Press regarding his views about Cleveland's running for the Presidency next year.

The "farmer orator" was in a fix frame of mind to talk politics. He had his oratorical powers right with him as he explained that his hired man resigned unexpectedly last night and left him alone to harvest a healthy crop of hay, and when asked for an interview anent the political outlook at Washington he took a chair on the front porch and said:

"So far as my own personal views are concerned I want to see the victory of the Democratic party at the next presidential campaign. If with my own vote I could make a President I would vote for William Jennings Bryan because I think that he could give us an administration which would be the nearest approach to that of Andrew Jackson.

"I realize full well, however, that we cannot elect Bryan and that it would, in fact, be political suicide to nominate him. I believe it would be political suicide also to nominate Grover Cleveland. I see that "Staff" Little and James Smith say that New Jersey will go strong for Cleveland. In my opinion there is a large portion of the people of New Jersey who are opposed to Cleveland because of his silence during Bryan's last campaign when a word from him would have meant thousands of votes for the man of his party. Instead he remained silent and by his silence turned many Democrats against their party.

"It is a well known fact that Cleveland and a large element of the Democratic party on the Bryan side have been at sword's points, and it seems to me that it would be a slap in the face of Bryan to nominate Cleveland.

"I do not think gold and silver will be the issues in the next campaign. The question in my opinion will be tariff and matters regarding currency."

"What do you think of David B. Hill or Gorman, as candidates?" suggested the interviewer.

"I do not think either of them will make a good fight, and I doubt if they get a nomination."

"Then how about Hearst?"

"I would say that it is remarkable what a following he has among labor organizations. He is now about the man that he is he proprietor of a newspaper, the editorials of which are doing a great deal of good in raising the morals of the masses. My fear is that his training and identification with matters of state are not sufficient to enable him to properly govern eighty millions of people.

"I believe Senator Smith in conscientious and honest in his opinions but I cannot see through the same lens as he. I do not think the available man has been mentioned yet. What we want is to nominate a man that can win. The rank and file, in my opinion, are against Cleveland.

"There has been much talk about the prosperity which we are enjoying today. To me the recent collapses in Wall street, the failure of the shipbuilding trust, for which the son of Senator Smith has been appointed receiver, cause me to believe that there is a consistent pricking of the prosperity bubble and that prosperity exists only in spots."

More Fresh Air Children.

A party of fifty children arrived last night at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home for a two weeks' stay amid the pleasant country surroundings of Miss Curry's little colony. There are now two hundred city children at the camp and all are in the best of health, a marked change from their often sickly condition when they arrive.

Mrs. Mollie Lyons and Mrs Katherine Sharkey have returned from a two weeks' vacation at Asbury Park.

DR. WOODS IN JERSEY.

So Counsel Says—Will Answer Larceny Charge, Not Murder—May Surrender Himself.

Frank M. McDermit, of Newark, as counsel in New Jersey for "Dr." John D. Woods and his wife, who at one time were residents of Watchung avenue, this city, who are being sought in connection with the suspicious death of Colonel William J. Best, at San Rafael, Cal., is in communication with Prosecutor Riker, and it is possible that the couple may shortly surrender themselves.

Mr. McDermit declared yesterday that his clients were in New Jersey. They were willing, he said, to answer to the indictment found against them at San Rafael for grand larceny, but were unwilling to return to California until they were assured that this charge was not a ruse to get them into the jurisdiction of the California courts and then try them for murder.

Alfred G. Best, at his home last night, was asked about the report that Woods was willing to surrender himself.

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Best, "that is what he has been saying all along. I haven't seen him make any move to give himself up, though. He knows pretty well the charges which can be brought against him, and that probably will be brought. He isn't running any risk."

BICYCLES MET.

James Dunbar and William Dominski Collided and Dunbar Was Hurt.

James Dunbar, of New Market and William Dominski, of Grove street, met in a bicycle collision at about 6 o'clock p. m. Tuesday at the corner of North and Park avenues. Both were riding at a good rate of speed and were thrown heavily. Dominski was unhurt but Dunbar, who is a man of considerable weight, was in great pain when picked up by Patrolman Quaas. He was carried into Armstrong's drug store and was found to be severely injured in the right side at the waist. It is thought that one of his ribs was broken but he refused the services of a physician and subsequently was taken home in a carriage. His bicycle was reduced to a wreck, the front wheel being shattered and the frame twisted and bent.

ASKED TO SHOW CAUSE.

Middlesex County Affair Will be Investigated Sept. 15.

New Brunswick, Aug. 19—Supreme Court Justice Franklin Fort, of Newark, has issued an order directing the Board of Freeholders of Middlesex County to show cause why a commission should not be appointed to investigate the affairs of Middlesex County. The order will be served on the members of the Board and upon County Collector David Servias, and will be returnable September 15, the opening day of the next term of court here.

Copies of the order have not been served so far, but will be shortly. It is presumed that Justice Fort will question the members of the Board in order to satisfy himself whether a commission would be warranted. Both Freeholders and the petitioners for a commission, it is thought, will agree to this arrangement.

$50,000 FOR SPECIAL ELECTION.

What It Will Cost to Vote on Constitutional Amendment.

Trenton, Aug. 19—County clerks have been supplied with election matter for the special election to be held in September on the constitutional amendments.

Two official ballots were sent out for every vote cast in the last Gubernatorial election. It required 731,864 official ballots to cover the 1,149 voting districts in the State. The pay of the registry boards for registering the votes is $3 for each member and $5 for work on election day. There are four members to each precinct.

To this must be added the cost of printing, transportation, etc., which will bring the expense of the election very near to $50,000.

Five Stitches Necessary.

While chopping wood at his home on Westervelt avenue yesterday morning, Thomas Kolb was struck in the head by a flying chip which inflicted a painful injury. Five stitches had to be taken in the wound which is directly above the right eye. Mr. Kolb was much weakened by loss of blood and is now confined to the house.

Pleasant Announcement.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lucy Smith, daughter of C. H. Smith, of John street, to John R. W. Judson, formerly of Orange county, now of Plainfield. The marriage will be in the early fall.

THE ENGINEER DIDN'T STOP

WAS EXPECTED TO TAKE ON PARTY OF PLAINFIELDERS LAST NIGHT.

Train Had to Wait at Wayne Junction for the Seventh-Day Baptists.

There was considerable excitement at the North Avenue Station, Tuesday night, when the delegation of Seventh-Day Baptists failed to get aboard a through train which was supposed to stop here for them. David E. Titsworth had previously communicated with C. M. Burt, general passenger agent, asking him to have the train which leaves New York at 7 o'clock in the evening stop here for the party. Mr. Burt granted the request, and a special car was attached to the train.

The party, consisting of nearly twenty people were at the station on time, but to their great disappointment the train did not stop. A green lantern was placed on the tracks, and afterward waved at the engineer, but even this did not have the desired effect. A person standing at the station at the time says that the engineer appeared to apply the brakes just as the last car of the train passed the station, but quickly released them and continued the journey as fast as ever.

There was much hustling on the part of the leaders of the delegation and as a last resort Mr. Beeler was found at his home. Upon his order the fast train was held at Wayne Junction until the arrival of the 8:20 train from this city. By way of explanation it was said last evening that the engineer had not received any word to stop at Plainfield. Whether this is true or not, it seems as though the display of a green light should have brought his train to a stop. The party finally caught the train and continued on their journey to Salem, West Virginia, where they will attend a conference which opens this evening.

AFTER TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS.

Plainfielder Found Turtle With Initials Carved on Back.

Westfield, Aug. 19—Twenty-seven years ago, when J. Warren Brown, of Plainfield, was a young man, he captured a land turtle on the Brown farm on the Jerusalem road. With a pen-knife and a sharp nail he cut the initials "J. W. B.," and the year "1876" in the little animal's shell and let it go. In 1903 someone else captured the turtle and described the initials "C. P." and the year "1880," and again the little animal was liberated.

Yesterday afternoon Robert M. French found the turtle on the French farm opposite the Brown property, and near the scene where it was first captured. Mr. French gave the turtle to Mr. Brown, who expressed great surprise at seeing his old-time friend. Mr. Brown fixed up a cosy house for the little animal at Welch Bros.' store and fed it upon apples. Last night the turtle accompanied Mr. Brown to his home at Plainfield.

Death of Well-Known Farmer.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Mt. Bethel Church over the remains of the late Jonathan Moore, who died at his home in Dead River, Saturday. The remains were interred in the Mt. Bethel cemetery. The dead man was one of the most widely-known farmers in that vicinity. He had lived in Dead River for many years and his death followed an illness of considerable length. He was seventy years old. His wife died about six years ago and since then his health has gradually been failing. He leaves no children.

Smiths to Congregate.

Arrangements are being made for the annual reunion of the Smith family at Peapack on Wednesday, Aug. 26. There will be the usual pleasant features and everybody will be a Smith for that day, at least. The reunion will be held at the farm of the late Peter Z. Smith, a mile east of the town. Rev. C. H. VanGlahn, pastor of the Bernardsville M. E. Church, will speak. Music will be by the Raritan Cornet Band.

Small Borough Fire.

A chimney on the building occupied by Mathias Mennenbach, Somerset street, took fire Monday night and a still alarm was sent into Warren Engine Company, next door. Several firemen rushed up on the roof and extinguished the blaze before any damage was done.

Examining Assessor's Books.

The North Plainfield Common Council met last evening for the purpose of going over the books of the assessors, Elston M. French. Three sessions will probably be necessary before the work is completed. Secret sessions are the rule.

NO RIVAL FEARED FOR NEW JERSEY

No Alarm Felt at Increased Corporation Facilities in Washington.

BUSINESS IS GROWING

STATE STILL THE "MOTHER OF GIGANTIC COMBINATIONS OF CAPITAL."

There is Plenty of Trade in Franchises Available at Trenton, Notwithstanding Washington's Temptations.

Trenton, Aug. 19—The corporation department of the office of Secretary of State is in no wise disturbed by the news sent out from Washington, D. C., this week that the fat corporation business done by New Jersey was in imminent danger of ruin by the discovery that the new corporation laws of the District of Columbia offered such great inducements to big and little companies that they were deserting this State for that district.

It was alleged in the Washington story that the falling off in last month's New Jersey business could be directly attributable to this competition. Attention was called to the small filing charge, which is but $1.35 in Washington, no matter how large the corporation, and from that fact it was argued that in the future all the business would be attracted to the National Capital. According to the story the National Government was already a competitor with every State in the Union for this rich corporation business.

When shown the story by a correspondent, Corporation Clerk John W. Brooke, said: "All of these stories about New Jersey losing her supremacy in fostering corporations is the veriest kind of rot. Every day or two I read of some State that is going to wipe out this department and when I show the articles to the lawyers that are counsel for corporations, they laugh at the stories. Take this story, for instance, the mere fact that because the District of Columbia exacts only a nominal fee for filing charters is urged as a reason for concluding that all the corporation business will eventually go to that point. While New Jersey exacts a filing fee of $20 a $100,000 of authorized capital, no charge less than $35, the superior advantage of this State's corporation laws is the incentive to come in under our laws. The filing fee is a mere bagatelle to these corporations and should any State offer to file charters for nothing, there would be no danger to New Jersey.

"Under the laws of this State stockholders are only liable for the amount of their holdings in a corporation, so that a crash would only wipe out this stock and no action would be valid against any other property a man might have in any other venture or be possessed of, like real property. Action does not obtain in but a few States.

"In the great majority of cases liability is double a man's holdings of stock. If I mistake not, this is the law in the District of Columbia.

"Another great advantage under our laws is that corporations need but start their businesses with nominal capital, and when growth comes it is a little matter to file returns in this office showing that more money had been paid into the business. In this way concerns are not burdened with corporation tax on stock not yet issued, as they are compelled to do in other States.

"Perhaps the greatest safeguard to officers and directors of New Jersey corporations is that which provides for non-attackable decisions of these officers except where fraud can be shown. The decisions of boards of directors regarding property purchases in corporations must be final and not open to attack if there is to be any stability to shares of stock. In other States these decisions are open to review in the court upon the complaint of any disgruntled stockholder that the property was not worth the value set upon it by directors, and there are many instances where irretrievable harm has been wrought by such actions. No stockholder of a New Jersey corporation has any standing in a court of law on such a matter unless he can prove fraud. Great corporation lawyers consider this a vital factor in the success of New Jersey as the mother of gigantic combinations of capital.

"These are only a few reasons why

A WOMAN ARTIST

Work In Stained Mary L. Tillinghast

THE new stained glass window to the entrance hall of the Pittsburg observatory, the gift of two women, the Misses Smith, and it is the conception and work of a woman, Mary E. Tillinghast of New York. Miss Tillinghast was the pupil and assistant of John La Farge, who may be said to have created the stained glass window industry in America. The pupil learned her trade so well that she herself is now the leading artist in this field in our country. I recently saw both the Pittsburg window and its maker. The exquisitely beautiful window, occupying a place only three feet above the floor of the observatory entrance, is of ordinary size. It represents Urania, the muse of astronomy. In the background is a filling in of marvelous blue glass so deeply dense in color as to be nearly black. The light shining through shows the blue in various shadings. Above the head of Urania are the quarter moon, the Pleiades and a constellation of stars. The stars are small points of light upon the dense blue background.

"But how did you manage to get those stars in?" I asked the artist.

"Well, that was rather difficult. I did something that I don't think any body ever did before. The stars were to be so small that I could not lead in the pieces, so I just drilled holes in the blue glass and covered them with another piece of glass of the right color for the light to shine through as I wanted it."

The nobly formed muse is represented with the globe in her hand. Her white robes with purple opal tints gleaming through them remind you of the lining of a pearl shell. Near the feet of the muse upon a pedestal is the classic lamp of wisdom. In the background is the Acropolis of Athens. The conception is purely Greek except in one point—across the bottom of the exquisite glass picture, just where the groundwork is cut off, are the splendid iridescent rainbow colors in their order. The observatory authorities ordered that the solar spectrum should be "put in somewhere" in recognition of the fact that one of the special branches of investigation there is astronomical spectrology.

That spectrum at the bottom of the window is the American of it. You will be interested to know how Miss Tilling hast fixed in her mind the exact idea for the stained glass rainbow. She got a large prism, which separated the white sun rays into their component colors. This she placed in the window of her studio where the sun shone brightly upon it. Then, having provided herself with yards and yards of sheeny, pearl white Chinese silk, she had a friend move this up and down and wave it to and fro while the radiant spectrum flashed across it. "violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange and red." Her remarkable intuitive color sense seized on the proper tints and she brought samples of glass and compared them with the spectrum till she got the right ones.

PITTSBURG OBSERVATORY WINDOW.

And that was how Miss Tillinghast worked the solar spectrum into her stained glass window. But the artist is always greater than her work and the most interesting part of my theme is Miss Tillinghast herself. Stained glass work is only one of the departments in which she excels. She is alike at home in portrait and other painting, in tapestry, mosaic and leather work and in modeling and architecture. A few years ago she designed and executed a noble mansion for a wealthy American. Just before the actual construction began the gentleman invited Miss Tillinghast to accompany himself and family on a tour through Egypt.

"But the tomb?" said Miss Tillinghast.

"Oh, never mind. That can wait."

But workmen were engaged for the mausoleum. They had her written contract; she had theirs. She would not break with them, and the party left her behind, following their course with longing eyes. She could not go to Egypt with the family because she had to stay at home and build their tomb.

But there are more years. She has often wandered over Europe, studying in picture gallery and cathedral, and Mary Tillinghast yet hopes and expects to go to Egypt, extending her journey even farther—to Palestine, the Holy Land—always to add to her knowledge of that beloved art which is her life.

GETTING HIS SEA LEGS.

Life on the Ocean Wave Has Its Drawbacks for the Young Navy Recruit.

The phrase "acquiring the sea-habit," which is frequently used in connection with the training of recruits in the navy, carries to the lay mind something of an impression of a rolling gait, a chronic hitching at the waistband of the trousers, a salted vocabulary and a canny knowledge of the brands of eating tobacco. The navy department knows the epoch as one in which the recruit is learning to make himself comfortable aboard ship, and during which he is liable to fits of depression, in which more things than sea water look blue. It is the period in which the romance of a life on the rolling deep becomes temporarily obscured and life seems hard.

During such a period the recruit is likely to write to his family or his congressman in such terms as seem to warrant an abolition of the service, and a considerable part of the work of the navy department lies in assuring inquiring friends that the recruit will feel better when he gets over it. If the investigation which is made in each case of complaint happens to cover some weeks, it is likely to get to the recruit about the time he is beginning to take notice and enjoy himself, and he is quite willing to admit that "things look different."

The present conditions of the service which seem likely to be permanent, says the Washington Times, make it absolutely essential that the enlistment contract shall be enforced as strictly as it has been enforced since the date of the executive order which abolished the former privilege of discharge by purchase.

WAIL OF A DEPOSED KING.

Paris Chef Who Has Cooked for Royalty Tells of the Good Old Days.

Casimir, the chef of the Maison Doree, in Paris, which closed its doors some months ago, now describes himself as a king without a kingdom, says the Detroit Free Press. He has been lamenting to a correspondent that the beaux jours have gone forever. He says:

"In the olden days—in the days of Rosini and the duke of Hamilton and others, or during the empire—the people knew how to dine. M. Le Nardon would come and consult me five hours in advance and Mme. La Marquise two days ahead. They came down to the kitchens, and we consulted, and a dinner in those days was a poem, not a meal. The kings, alas, have changed all this; ah, they have much responsibility, the kings.

"Your King Edward was a customer of mine; but what do you think he preferred? The simplest dishes. And Leopold of Belgium—Casimir's dark eyes blazed with scorn—"soup, and a slice of beef. Alas, is that a dinner for a king? The king of Portegal is the only one who knows in these degenerate days how to eat. The last time he dined with me he sent for me and ten times over it is worth omitting a few of the scallops and frills and bows from your garments and dressing with a little less ornamentation as to clothes, so as to get more ornamentation in your body itself. That is the real thing after all, the ornamentation of a beautiful skin, bright eyes, full chest and graceful carriage. These will wash and wear.

How to walk is to be considered You must wear loose, comfortable shoes and a walking skirt. You must be loose as to the waist, or you can't walk at all, much less get any good of it. The ideal of feminine beauty is now the American athletic girl and she cannot be developed with anything on her that binds and crushes her beautiful body. Wear high heels, long skirts and corsets if you want to in the house in the evening, but never outdoors on a walk.

Next, hold your chest up and take long, slow breaths from the lowest point of your body. Take in all the air you can hold. Aerate your whole body. Oriental wise men say the human race has not been educated to breathe properly. They recommend the long, slow breath and the taking of as much time to exhale as to inhale. They lay great stress on this last. You will be surprised at the fine chest development that follows the deep, slow inhalation and exhalation, especially if you continually obey the injunction to hold your chest up. This draws upward from about the waist and muscles that the corset usually allow to sag in so slovenly a way. It makes the region of the lungs and bust rounder and fuller, the waist more slender. Finally, holding the chest up gives a noble, queenly carriage that is admired by everybody who beholds it and that nothing else will give. Don't hold the chest up spasmodically and then slump, but train yourself to hold it up constantly.

Then there is the walking party or picnic or promenade dance—away, and eanister, which is employed against detachments of men lacking protection within close range.

WALK, LADIES, WALK!

Be You Shall Gain Health, Power, Joy and Knowledge.

Lately there was a walking match between twelve girls under twenty and twelve women of forty. Which won? I suppose you would instantly guess "the girls." Well, they didn't, not by a long chalk. The forty-year-old women won with the greatest ease and quite astonishly. A woman of forty who has developed her muscles and minded her health has twice the endurance of a girl of eighteen.

Then, too, the forty-year-old women had been walking twice as long as the girls, consequently their muscles of locomotion had become steady and powerful.

Half the girls and women nowadays lead a sedentary life. There are the women who sew, the stenographers, clerks, teachers and others. The clerk in a store stands upon her feet all day, but in an atmosphere of confusion and vitiation. She, more than many of the rest, needs the bracing that a morning walk in the open air before going to her work would give. Many of the sedentaries are too tired to walk in the evening after work, but not one of them but could walk one to two miles daily in the pure morning air if she would. All she needs is the clear grit and the keeping before her mind that this early morning walk is sure to add ever to her beauty, health and happiness.

THE MERRY WALKERS.

You have not time? Take it. What is time for if not for us to use a proper amount in getting health and good looks? Considering what the early morning walk will do for you, it is worth going to bed an hour early so as to get up in time for it. It is worthten times over it is worth omitting a few of the scallops and frills and bows from your garments and dressing with a little less ornamentation as to clothes, so as to get more ornamentation in your body itself. WHERE ASPHALT IS CHEAP.

Indian Territory Contains an Extensive Mine That Is Being Utilized.

Not far from the town of Ardmore, in Indian territory, and partly within the corporation limits is an asphalt mine which is thought to be extensive enough to pave all the streets in Indian and Oklahoma territories. Ardmore proposes to build her streets of native asphalt, says a report from that place. She will be prodigal in the use of asphaltum, for the reason that it is more economical than crushed rock and cement. The plan is to take the asphaltum as it comes from the mine and make a foundation six inches thick. This will be pounded and rolled until compact. Upon this will be spread a coating of the same material crushed into coarse gravel size, mixed with the powdered material that results from the crushing.

This also is thoroughly tamped and rolled. The last coat is made of the same material ground to a powder and then heated. No wagon ways have been made, but many sidewalks have been built in this manner and they are giving most satisfactory results. The crude asphaltum can be laid upon the streets at about half the cost of crushed stone.

Projectiles in Navy.

Four classes of projectiles are used in the United States navy—armor-piercing projectiles, for use against armor; common shell, for use against unarmored, or very thinly-armored parts; chrapnel, for service against exposed detachments of men at considerable distance away, and canister, which is employed against detachments of men lacking protection within close range.

Locating Ores.

It is claimed by the Draft-Williams method of locating ores by the deflection of electrical currents that not only can deposits be located, but that the extent and depth of the lode can be determined with an accuracy that is quite impossible with any existing system of prospecting.

A Film of Oil.

According to Lord Rayleigh, a film of oil on water may be so thin that its thickness is no more than one twenty-five-millionths of an inch, which is computed to be, in all probability, the size of a molecule of the oil.

THE FALL FASHIONS.

Beggy Blouses Will Be Out of Vogue Later in the Season.

I am not sorry to write and I think few will be sorry to read that the day of loose and baggy blouses as street waists is over, and we are going to have snug fitting waists in tailor gowns and long and half long tight fitting coats of different kinds. Some of the new models on which the manufacturers are now working are very neat and pretty, while some of them, especially which as are to be worn in visiting, are really elegant in form and in finish. The mania in vogue for these new suits is as mannish as is possible, including covert, cheviot, cloth, berringbone, tweed and mixtures, also many cloths with sibeline finish. Herringbone in soft drabs and browns so interwoven that one can scarcely pick out any one color makes very stylish suits.

There are many slight differences in the shapes of these suits, particularly as to the coat, but they are all snug to the waist line with the skirts half to three-quarter length. A few have as a sop to Cerberus a sort of stole tab down each side of the front, but the majority are plain and carefully tailor finished. Buttons, large and medium, are used as a trimming on one which is shown herewith, and they are applied on the skirt as well as waist. Another style which will be very much liked has a three-quarter length and the fronts loose, while the back is fitted. This is a good shape for every reason, and it may be noticed that there are pockets! The sleeves are for the present mostly flowing, some of them having deep upturned cuffs more or less ornamented.

These semiloose coats are made of kersey, tweed, cloth, cheviot, moleskin and of cravenette. A handler garment was never invented, but they are made to be worn with any kind of dress, while the other styles are only to be worn as a suit.

There is a novelty in the corset coat, and this also goes with the skirt of the same material. There are several variations of this. One has a cunning little cutaway skirt effect where the coattail is ten inches deep in the back and nothing in front. The back of the coat is fitted like a man's coat, ending, however, at the belt, which is of the material stitched on both edges. The fronts are adjusted to the figure by two seams tailor stitched on each side and reaching the shoulders. There is a narrow vest of white satin closed with gilt buttons. There are buttons down one side of the waist and buttonholes on the other, put there for ornament, for they are not useful at all. A small mannish collar of black velvet and small self revers complete the waist. The sleeves are not far from plain coat shape, with deep, upturned cuffs. The skirt is strap stitched on every seam, and clusters of three buttons are set on along the two front breadths. The material is flecked cheviot.

A corset coat I recently saw was made of fine brown broadcloth, the skirt being of the same. The skirt was cut in many gores, each seam being slot stitched from top to bottom. No other trimming was put on the skirt. The coat, which was open in front with eleven buttons—practical ones—was made in many pieces of the material cut on the seams all started at the neck and extended to the bottom edge, which was about twelve inches below the waist line. These seams were so shaped that they caused the coat to follow the outlines of the figure to perfection. And it must be a perfect figure to wear this worthily. Each seam all around was slot stitched on both sides, like the skirt, and the long, plain, coat shaped sleeves were done in the same way. All edges were tailor stitched as well as finish, but with so much seaming and stitching no other trimming could be desired. These corset coats will certainly have a great vogue.

In the suits intended for rather more dressy occasions than a simple promenade collarless shapes obtain. Some have wide collars that can be left off if occasion demands. Very handsome tailor gowns with close coats and rich full skirts are very abundant among the fall styles, and as they are made with a fine vest of satin or silk, prettily embroidered, they are quite fine enough for visiting, receptions and luncheons. Nearly all of the vesting suits have the skirts long and flaring, and are finished with all the neatness and care with which are distinguished the fixtures of the tailor-made gown. SEEN HERE AND THERE.

Some Dainty Toilets That Street and Carriage Wear.

A most exquisite toilet recently seen in Paris was of cream soie de chine made with a cape collar of Irish point mixed with black chantilly lace and further decorated with Louis XV. bows of silver sequins and edged with a green and white fringe. The waist was encircled with a soft band of green peau de soie caught with Louis XV. clasps. The skirt was accordion plaited and deorated on the hips with the same Irish crochet and black chantilly lace, which also inserted the very full hem. The sleeves consisted of the material and two laces, disclosing the most attractive undersleeve of finely accordion plaited cream chiffon.

The hats of the autumn promise to be larger than ever.

An exceedingly smart tennis gown is of white linen with the skirt clearing the ground all around and box plaited from the waist. It is finished at the lower edge with three straight ruffles of different widths. The bodice is arranged in three large box plaits back and front, each plait terminating in a large embroidered motif below a shaped yoke piece of stitched linen. It was finished with a high collar and a chic stock.

The cut shows a bathing suit of embroidered red brilliantine.

FASHION NOTES.

Skirts More Voluminous—The Fashionable Coats of the Moment.

There is no doubt that skirts are becoming more voluminous and sleeves fuller than ever before, while dress is becoming more and more complicated with its insertions, incrustations and bands of muslin, chiffon and lace.

Half the coats are cut bolero fashion and the other half three-quarter length with snugly fitting waist lines. The long shoulders and pelerine collars are more popular than ever.

The accordion plaited skirts are very smart and are becoming to both tall and short people, if they have slender figures.

Although the hairdressers are trying to introduce the smoothly parted hair with the simple coil at the back of the neck, the styles demand a more fluffy type of hairdressing, and the loose wave and general fullness will be with us some time longer. The wreath is again revived especially for the debutante, whose favorite colors are white and rose pink.

Dead white Irish point lace is singularly heavy and hot in appearance, and the eye turns in pleasant relief to some tinted lace of filmy kind, which reminds one that the feeling for French blond lace is very much on the decrease, as also is the furore for the loose lace paletot. It is the very daintiest, quaintest and most adorable thought La Mode has permitted us to [illegible]

Rousing Hats—Styles of White Oak Green Feathers For Dressy Wear.

Exquisite rose hats have been popular this summer and the fall will see many more of them, for nothing is more cheerful and more universally becoming.

The type of hat which exhibits both flowers and feathers is not always pleasing, but the large picture hats are lovelier than ever. The foundation is usually of crinoline or the more summery tulle, elaborately tucked and gauged.

Pale flesh colored crepe de chine is useful to line yokes, and many lace gowns are made up on a crepe de chine foundation instead of being interlined with chiffon. The smart type of muslin gown is made up over silk, but the ordinary kind has a simple lawn lining.

Stoles of white ostrich feathers or of marabou and ostrich intermixed are generally worn, and reversible stoles of two colors are also popular, but not nearly so much so as white.

Furriers at this season are busy remodeling, and many of the large boas of white or pointed fox are being opened out and made into flat stoles.

The cut shows a yachting or mountain coat of blue cloth, trimmed with white braid. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR SUMMER WEAR.

Linen Costumes Look Cooler Than They Are—Silk Voile Gowns.

The linen costume looks cooler than it really is, but the most comfortable style is to have an unlined blouse coatee with a V or square opening for a chemisette and the sleeves gathered into a large decorated cuff. The colored leather belts are smart with these linen costumes, but if the belt does not match exactly it is best to fall back on black or white. The tight fitting belt, high in the back and low in front, is the accepted fashion with a short coat or bolero. Fancy scarfs and cravats are in great demand. For the open coat a soft, fancy front is pretty and economical.

A new neck scarf from Paris has its two ends fastened in front—one to the right of the other to the left—with fancy pins.

Silk voile made up over taffeta and inlet with lace of the Paraguay or point d'arabe type is very smart, but the lining should match the voile, as a different color is entirely out of style.

Now that the means have been made known to us, the applique embroidery of linen coats, collars, etc., has become a popular pastime, and we are all wondering why the hint was not given sooner. This decorative stitchery is arrived at by means of one line with traced design placed over another and a buttonhole stitch worked around all the edges, after which the upper linen is cut away round the pattern. This is really more quickly done than is the blind embroidery, which is a latter day term for the thick swiss work so much used on linen and lawn shorts, which is, in its way, an equally pleasant form of work.

THE NEW WOMAN

She Is Marching On

A CURIOUS and profoundly interesting phase of social development is reported from Philadelphia. A number of ladies, possessing wealth and belonging to the first rank of fashionable society, have turned from the amusements of the rich and joined themselves to the handful of those who believe the ultimate destiny of the human race on this planet is more splendid than that of the angels and work to bring their theory into realization. The Philadelphia ladies labor largely among the wage earning women, seeking to make them strong, intelligent and individual, able to hold their own and to climb upward.

Philadelphia is classed as the most conservative city of the northern states and some have wondered that so many of its leading women should become workers to promote the coming of a pure democracy among mankind; yet there is no cause for wonder. Old Philadelphia families are descended from the Quakers and the original Quakers were the "come outers" and radicals of their time. Always strictly conservative in their morals, yet were they always open to the leadings of the "inner light," and the inner light ever guides those who follow it to higher, better ideals for the race, even though these ideals sometimes involve total destruction of the old order.

One of the leaders in the woman's movement for the social state in which there shall be neither pauper nor billionaire is Miss Innes Forbes, a beautiful, high bred young woman. When she was a girl at Philadelphia's most fashionable seminary she wrote an essay advocating the right of women to vote and declaring it to be their duty. Yet another woman who practices her belief that wealth and so called high social station mean service to the race is Miss Laura C. Platt, president of the Working Women's association. A third is Miss Caroline Pemberton, who is so forceful, clear headed and intellectual that they say she has a "male brain." Oh, yes, of course!

Progressive development is the law for the human race through eternity. Whatever has been in the past, whatever there is something better in the future for us to know. So let us hold ourselves always gentle and tolerant toward propositions that differ from our own fixed opinions lest the very ideas we most need for our enlightenment pass us by in disgust. Many a time such ideas pass us in the humblest guise.

Heaven help the woman of the narrow, cast iron forehead!

Don't take medicine at the table, at home or abroad. Have some regard for other people!

If all mothers made themselves strong and true this would be a better and happier world.

We ought not to expect a material reward for being born any more than for washing our faces in the morning. The thing itself is its reward.

Somebody talks about the "softer sex" in a recent newspaper sketch. Which is the softer sex? If there is anybody softer than a man at certain stages of his career that person has not yet appeared on this planet. Anyway, girls, don't be soft headed.

Not many of the tens of thousands of girl stenographers know that a little while ago were incinerated at the fresh Pond (N. Y.) crematory the mortal remains of Mrs. Eliza B. Burns, "the mother of stenography." More than half a century ago Mrs. Burns came to New York city full of the idea of opening up a new employment—stenography—to her own sex. A storm of ridicule and disapproval met her. It was not thought a woman had brains enough to be a shorthand writer. Only one human being encouraged her, and that was Peter Cooper. He gave her a room in Cooper Union free of charge in which to teach girls. She began, she worked, she overcame. She lived to see women constitute a majority of the stenographers in this Union, and now she has entered into rest. Do not forget her.

Professor Elie Metchnikoff, one of the most distinguished of living scientists, declares that old age itself is a malady. Don't let's have it.

Let us not call a person a crank or a fool merely because that person holds to ideas that are new to us or that are different from our own. Maybe we are the ones that are on the wrong side.

The woman who always does and says exactly the conventionally correct thing is the most tiresome of her sex.

A man complains in court that he has to cook, wash dishes and do the housework while his wife studies art. Well, what of it? How many centuries has woman cooked and washed dishes while man studied art?

The women of American fashionable society set a fine example to their sisters in their development of physical strength and activity. No wealthy ones are they, but sturdy bare-woman fencers, golfers and swimmers. At Newport some of them, including Mrs. Burke-Roche, are learning to drive four-in-hand.

Hoosier State Proves Great Field of Exciting Romance

From Delivery Boy to Husband of Proprietor—Particular Suitor Refuses Twelve—Romeo Meets Unromantic Souls.

THERE is small wonder that Indiana has become noted for romancers and fiction writers. After reading an account of a few occurrences in that state within a few days it will be observed that all the prospective writer has to do is to sit on his front doorstep and watch the drift of affairs in his immediate neighborhood.

In Mishawaka a young man who had been a delivery boy in a dry goods store was married to the owner, a woman 22 years his senior. He was Alton S. Winey and she was Mrs. Rhoda D. Lusher. If a romancer could not make a good story in telling how their love grew up among the calico bales and how the proprietor's gentle glances followed the boy as he left the store with his packages to deliver he would be a bad romancer—that's all.

The prosaic account of this courtship merely says the woman learned to love the boy, but there is a better story in it than that, as can be seen. There is a success story, as well as a romantic one. "From delivery boy to husband of the proprietor"—that would sound pretty fair as a title.

Wabash furnishes another tender little story. This concerns the efforts of an even dozen Indiana women to satisfy the ideals of a mourning widower with 11 children clamoring for a mother. Eleven have tried it and have failed. The Chicago Tribune says that David Overmire is the particular man who is looking and advertising for a wife. His children, he says, are all grown up and prosperous, so there need be no obstacle to the marriage on their account. Since he has advertised that he needs a wife 12 women have answered the "ad" and have returned declaring that he was a brute—because he did not accept them.

A North Manchester woman was the last to offer her hand to the particular Mr. Overmire. She was taken to dinner and treated with elaborate courtesy by Mr. Overmire. While dining he sounded her opinions on various subjects, which are not mentioned, but which, in the hands of the skillful romancer, might make a brilliant chapter, and at the end of the conversation he rested on the expectant woman:

"You won't do."

She has been added to the others who declare Mr. Overmire is a brute.

Logansport offers some more material. There was a young man in that place, Charles Townsend by name, who was about to marry a young woman of the same place named Miss Emma Toothman. Everything was prepared for the glad event. The license had been secured, the railroad ticket purchased, the children engaged, the home decorated, the friends assembled, the bride waiting, and the bridegroom on the way, when Miss Toothman suddenly exclaimed that she had changed her mind.

It was a sad blow for the bridegroom, and all the flowers were withered, but there was no wedding. It certainly is within the province of a woman to change her mind even at the altar. That never has been denied, and the rejected bridegroom is getting what consolation he can out of the case.

From Newcastle comes a story which in its way is almost as tender a thing as Romeo and Juliet, there being some points of resemblance between the two tales, although in the telling of them it is possible that a slight difference may be detected. Then in the Indiana Romeo story a policeman figures, and that element is not in the Shakespearean story.

In fact, getting down to the real truth of the matter, it may be the only semblance is in the fact there was a balcony scene in both. A. N. Watcher is the lovestricken youth. Miss Winifred Woods plays the part of Juliet. Miss Woods lived in Newcastle and the young man elsewhere.

"YOU WON'T DO."

Romeo had a desire to look upon his love, and he took the romantic but unsafe way of getting beneath her window, hoping that she would look out and be gladly surprised by his unexpected presence. He may have whistled to attract her attention.

He was successful in arousing the neighbors, but not Juliet. They saw the balcony scene, but did not understand it. It is possible that if Romeo attempted his stunt in these days he would be taken for a porch climber. Anyway, that is what the neighbors thought Mr. Watcher was. They called the police, unromantic souls that they were. The lover was dragged away to prison, and the next morning he was given the pleasure of explaining in court how he happened to be under that window.

When Juliet heard of his misadventures she came gallantly to the rescue with the statement that he had a perfect right to be there if he wanted to be, and married him as soon as the police magistrate discharged him.

CROWLS INTO SEWER.

Queer Plight of an Aged Woman in England and Her Heroic Rescue by a Constable.

An old woman at Aldershot, London, had a most extraordinary adventure the other night. She was missed from her bedroom. The police were called in and a constable, on examining the room, found that the bedroom window was open and a clothesline broken just underneath.

A careful search of the premises failed to reveal her presence. At the end of the garden, and just over a small hedge, ran a drain pipe, and the constable fancied that he could hear a groan coming from its direction. The pipe itself was about 20 inches in diameter, and, despite the fact that it was quite half full of filthy matter, the plucky constable divested himself of his tunic and crawled with difficulty some 18 or 20 yards up through the filth.

His search was rewarded, for he was able, when all but choked himself, to catch the woman by the heels and to drag her out into the open. He handed her over to her daughter in an unconscious condition sent for a doctor. The woman was all but dead.

SNAKE HOLDS UP MAIL.

authority for a remarkable snake story.

Thomas says he was driving along, sorting his mail, when suddenly his horse stopped. Thomas spoke sharply to him, but the horse did not budge. Again Thomas spoke, but this time his horse began snorting and backing. At this unusual proceeding on the part of a usually peaceable horse Thomas looked out of the mail wagon and was confronted by a monster blacksnake. Thomas called for help, and soon had two farmers to his assistance. The snake showed fight, but was killed after a struggle. It measured eight feet four inches, and Thomas thought it was as large around as his arm. They opened the snake and found three large bullfrogs and a robin in its stomach.

For the past three or four years the residents of that portion of Richland township have been frightened by the story of a big snake in their fields and appearing at times along the roads. It is believed that this is the one.

THEY DIVIDE FAIRLY

Tomcat and Owl Have Formed Queer Partnership.

The Feline Catches Frogs, the Bird Gobbles Up Field Mice, and Then the Pair Exchange the Delicacies.

A Vermont correspondent of the New York World says that Jerome Perley, who came from Fitchburg, Mass., late last winter to carry on an abandoned farm in the hills above Tyson village, has a tomcat which has struck up a strange acquaintance with a barn owl. The cat and owl have virtually formed a partnership, and at night, after Mr. Perley and his family have retired, the howls of one and the hoots of the other can be heard at intervals until daylight.

The tomcat, which glories in the name of Whiskers, had never been in the open until he arrived in Tyson. He was born and raised in the city, and for nearly two weeks after the family reached the farm he could not be induced to go more than a dozen rods from the barn or house.

His timidity, however, gradually disappeared, and when the pantry, cellar and corn cribs had been freed from mice and the ground began to warm up, Whiskers took heart and started a series of nocturnal expeditions into the fields. He was pleasantly surprised to find among the grass hummocks many mole holes, in each of which dwelled a family of moles. In catdom these animals are considered on a par with quails on toast, and Whiskers grew fat.

Not comprehending that demand is frequently in excess of the supply Whiskers dined liberally, taking no thought for the morrow, until one fine night he awoke to the fact that moles were getting scarce. The field in which the moles lived was searched carefully, and finally, when there were no more of the dainties to be had, Mr. Cat began to mope.

It was then, so Mr. Perley and his family declare, that Whiskers struck up an acquaintance with the owl. While Whiskers was interesting himself with the moles the owls was raising a feathered family in the hollow of a weatherbeaten and broken down oak on the edge of a swamp not far from the barn. Up to the time the little owls began to test their wings and look after the filling of their own stomachs Mr. Owl had all he could do to provide Mrs. Owl and family with the necessaries of life. Later on he found time to sit on the ridgepole of the house and make night hideous with long, weird hoots.

This was about the time the moles ran out and Whiskers began to lose flesh. Just how the introduction came about even Mr. Perley does not know. He declares, however, that the two got on good terms. It was generally suspected for a time that Whiskers had designs on the brood of little owls, but this is merely a matter of surmise. If he did he gained nothing and probably escaped severe chastisement.

The first Mr. Perley knew of the intimacy was one night when he came in late from the village. As he drove into the yard he saw Whiskers sitting between an apple tree and the house. He was carefully guarding a frog that was making strenuous attempts to hop to the safety of the swamp.

While he was wondering what the cat could be doing with the frog, he heard a hooting in the distance, and a few moments later the owl flapped into the apple tree and dropped a mole near the cat. An instant later he swooped down and picked up the frog. Whiskers apparently had no fear of his feathered friend, for he purred hoarsely and proceeded to devour the mole.

Mr. Perley, who is something of a student of the habits of animals, was interested, and made up his mind to watch developments. On the following night he posted himself in a window and saw the mole and frog performance repeated three times. On the fourth there was an exchange of courtesies twice. On subsequent nights the same thing occurred. When the owl had left the mole and devoured the frog he would fly off into the darkness and the cat would disappear in the recesses of the swamp. Whiskers generally got back first, always lugging a good-sized frog. There was much hooting and considerable caterwauling, and once there was a great fuss when the owl returned empty-handed. Mr. Perley is at a loss to account for the strange partnership.

TOUGH PROPOSITION.

Riding a Bucking Steer Is Called a Harder Task Than Sticking on a Bucking Bronco.

"A bucking broncho," said the retired cowboy to a New York Sun reporter, "is generally considered the hardest proposition to ride in this land, but until a man has tackled a bucking steer he has not realized all the possibilities of the gentle art.

"Out in the cow country they have just begun to learn the art, and it is really an art. None of the Wild West shows has yet got hold of the few fellows who have mastered the straddle and seat, and until they do their congressmen of rough riders will not be complete.

"You can cinch a horse up until there is little possibility of the saddle's slipping, but it can't be done on a steer, for the simple reason that the skin is so much looser and there is no place in which to gather up lost motion. The horse has 18 ribs and a steer but 13.

"When the horse bucks, as he does when he is burdened with something he doesn't want to carry, his rider can get a pretty firm bridge at most any place between the crupper and the shoulder. When the steer bucks, as he generally does when he feels a saddle on his back, there is a rolling motion that is for all the world like that of a vessel at sea. The steer pitches with a head and tail movement, while a horse stops his side swings before they range far.

"The steer-riding fad had its start down in Texas, where the animals are wild enough to suit even the most exacting cowpuncher, and it is now being introduced further north. A puncher's playtime is often long enough to give him a chance for such experiments, and some of the more skillful have got it down to a fine point.

"But the hombre who thinks it is an easy task to stick to a wild boy who knows enough to do the grand buck and pitch is down for an experience he will carry in his book of remembrance for a long time."

WALKED IN HIS SLEEP.

Wound Up Midnight Expedition by Leaping from Window and Being Caught on Iron Hook.

Jacob Cugameck, of Manayunk, Pa., aged 12 years, is in a serious condition at St. Timothy's hospital, resulting from injuries received when he jumped from the second-story window of his home during a fit of somnambulism.

Cugameck, Sr., is a butcher, and has his store on the first floor of his home. Young Jacob slept with his mother in the second story front room, directly over the store. She was awakened by her son arising. The latter went to the window and raised it to get some air, his mother thought, as the night was very sultry. Suddenly he began to climb out, and before she could reach him he had made the leap.

In front of the store is a row of heavy iron hooks, used to suspend meat for display. In his fall young Jacob's right leg was caught on one of these hooks, and he hung suspended head downward for a minute or two. This broke his fall, but before assistance came the hook had torn through the flesh and the boy fell to the ground.

Assistance was quickly summoned, and the injured lad hurried to St. Timothy's hospital. Examination showed that his flesh had been horribly torn, and physicians say his condition is serious.

REPTILE ON HIS ARM

Perilous Adventure of Locomotive Engineer in Kentucky.

With Big Rattlesnake Coiled About Him He Stuck to His Post and Then Steamed the Reptile to Death.

With a big rattlesnake coiled around his left arm and his right hand gripping the reptile just back of the head, which, spread agape, showed the pink forked tongue and the poison fangs that held certain and agonizing death, Engineer Johnnie Clark, of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, guided his train over the Kentucky Central branch of the Louisville & Nashville. The brave engineer knew that to quit his post would mean a wreck and endanger the lives of the passengers, so he held the reptile at bay with one hand while he manipulated the lever with the other, despite the fact that the heavy coils of the reptile wound about his arm made it difficult for him to move. Finally he brought the train safely to its next station, and after stopping it put his dreaded companion to death in a unique manner.

Clark was bringing No. 11 down from Paris to Rowland. Between Lancaster and Paint Lick are two tunnels, both located in a remote and rocky section. In the high ledges and crags the rattlesnake, or, as the scientist terms it, the crotalus horridus, makes its loathsome lair.

On Monday, a week ago, a rattlesnake appreciating the hygienic value of a sun bath, coiled itself on one of the rocks just above the longest tunnel. Clark brought No. 11 through, and just as his cab passed the snake, dislodged from its post by the jar or having fallen in fright, landed in the cab. Seeking to escape, it ran up the reverse lever, and before Clark had realized its presence, had coiled about the engineer's left arm.

It was fortunate for Clark that the reptile did not attempt at once to strike.

THE COILS TIGHTENED.

If it had it would have meant the end of Clark and the probable destruction of the train. But the snake, after wrapping around Clark's arm, swayed to and fro a moment, fixing its stony eyes on the engineer. The coils tightened, the neck arched, the jaws slowly opened and Clark heard the buzz of the rattles.

At that sound Clark realized that it was time to do something and gripped the snake just below the head with his free hand.

His first thought was to tear the reptile off and throw it from the cab, but with one arm held by the snake and the other engaged with its head he could not do this. His train was also jumping over the rails at a rapid speed on a rough part of the road, and he knew he could not take any chances.

Mile after mile sped by with Clark keeping off the snake and running his train. Rowland was near, and if he could reach the station and stop the train he would be able to find help for the rattler. The fireman, terror-stricken by the very sight of the rattler, was back on the tender, not daring to enter the cab.

Rowland drew near and Clark reversed the lever. The train slackened its speed and the engineer brought it to a stop at the station. The fireman leaped from the cab and fled.

Then with his left hand Clark opened a stop cock, while with his right hand he brought the snake's head into the steam that poured forth. The ugly body writhed as the snake, under the pain of its execution, tried with all its strength to get away. But Clark, although his hand suffered some from the fiery stream, doggedly held on until the snake's writhings grew more and more feeble and finally ended.

The rattler measures three feet six inches and had eight rattlers. Clark took the body to Cincinnati, where he will have it mounted and hung in Superintendent Hood's office. The rattles will be used for a watch charm.

The Hen Is a Cosmopolitan.

The hen embraces nearly all the world, and its range would be as great as that of the dog if it extended farther north and south; but it is found north of the arctic circle only in Norway and Sweden, and is yet lacking in the southern part of South America, except where the Scotch have settled in Patagonia. Travelers throughout the most of Africa and India and in many little-known parts of the world can usually add chicken to their food resources without difficulty; but there are some large islands, like New Guinea, where the hen is not found, and more than half of Australia is destitute of this animal.

Like the Dungeons of Old Is This Jail in Arizona

Hewn from Solid Rock Like the Prison of Monte Cristo—Thrilling Rescue of an Inmate During the Flood of 1891.

IT IS strange in this enlightened age to find in use a dungeon hewn from the solid rock after the fashion of the historic Chauteau d'If.

But such a place exists, and in the United States at that. It is the "cooler" of Clifton, Ariz.

It is cut off into the rocky side of the mountain, a sort of T-shaped tunnel, with an adobe hut at the base of the T for an entrance. There are two small apertures to admit air, so cut above that only for a few minutes on sunshiny days do the rays reach the two cells which compose the jail.

The crossbar of the T tunnel is divided into the two cells, each 6x12 feet, and when a visit was made to the place a few weeks ago they had six Mexicans in one cell and four Chinese in the other. When the sun's rays disappear candles are lighted. Reading or even card playing is impossible. One candle is allowed each cell.

THE GRIZZLED OLD JAILER.

Sanitation there is none, drinking water is brought to the prisoners in cans, and as for baths and shaving, that would sound to a criminal of that country like stopping in a palace. After 100 days in such a place a prisoner reappears looking like a dime museum representative of a wild man.

To intensify the bad conditions, the weather in that part of Arizona is almost continually hot. To think of a place not as large as an ordinary bathroom containing 12 to 14 drunken Mexicans, as is often the case after payday, carries one far back in history.

The jailer is about as queer as the jail. He has a grizzled visage, covered with almost white whiskers, and hair to match. Neither hair nor whiskers have been cut or trimmed for years. In the past he has done duty as a miner, but now he earns his three meals by keeping the keys to the iron door and bringing food and water to the prisoners.

The jail was blasted out of the rock in 1880 by the Longfellow Mining company, and used by them to put away the miners when they had partaken of too much firewater.

As the town of Clifton grew and became more pretentious a jail was found necessary, and the city officials have, with the permission of the mining company, made use of the dungeon.

The river flows between the city and the "cooler." A story is told how, during the flood of 1891, a character of Clifton known as "Friday" came near "passing in" through the route said to be in force in some of the Russian prisons.

"Friday" had done something which put him out of society for a short retirement and was enjoying the solitude when the flood broke on the town. The river rose in a single night and carried away the only bridge for a known distance that led to the other side. Higher and higher rose the river, and by the middle of the next day it had touched the adobe house at the entrance of the jail. "Friday" had been forgotten in the excitement. In viewing the rise of the water some one thought of poor "Friday."

A brilliant thought struck the sheriff. He painted a large sign, "Get Friday Out of the Balliwax," and stood it so that the miners on the other side could read it. Signals were passed back that it was understood, and shortly they could be seen working along the cliff to the jail.

It was impossible to work the bars free, so they had to cut another opening down through the top. This was ticklish work, for it means blasting, and a heavy charge would have finished "Friday." All the day and night they worked, taking the rock away in blasts as large as they dared use, but it was slow work at the best, and by morning it became a race between the rescuing party and the flood.

Just before noon, nearly 24 hours after the jail had been painted, the last charge sent a shower of rock on the poor man and the opening was made large enough to set him free. "Friday" was found in the water to his waist and bleeding from the last blast, but by the time the miners had subsided and he was able to get to town he was none the worse for his experience except that he became a better citizen through his wholesome fear of the county jail.

STRANGER IN GOTHAM.

Starts to Explore the Wonders of Broadway and Gets Into All Kinds of Trouble.

It was evident, says the New York Press, that a dignified stranger from the south had come to town for the first time and was exploring Broadway. He stole a glance at the flower girl on the corner and jammed his left shoulder into a Wall street banker. Both grunted. As he turned to apologize to the banker a blow in his side whirled him around, bringing his face to face with a young woman who seemed in a dreadful hurry. He sprang lightly aside to let her pass and came down on the toe of a portly Vesey street merchant, who scowled viciously, paid no attention to his "I beg youah pahdon, sir," and hastened on. A long beam on the head of an Italian swung round, taking the stranger's silk hat off. His quick stoop to rescue it suddenly checked the rapid progress of a member of congress, who swore softly. The impact sent Sir Dignity down toward the pavement so fast that he put one hand through the crown of his hat. Gathering in the wreck, he started to straighten up, when the back of his head caught the chin of the garter man of the Park bank, putting that worthy's jaw out of business.

A kind-hearted policeman then gave him some useful advice, which he thus jotted down in his memorandum book: "To see Broadway: Push right along as if you are trying to catch a train. Look neither to the right nor left. Don't see anybody. Don't try to get out of anybody's way. Never stop to apologize, even though you knock a man in the gutter. Walk straight ahead and he will think it was his own fault. Don't lose your temper."

NICE SORT OF GHOST.

Spirit of a Woman Leads an Old Prospector to Fabulously Rich Vein of Gold.

Old John Willis, a prospector, who has been a familiar figure on the streets of Pendleton, Ore., for several years, will prospect no more—he has found a gold mine so rich as to place him in the ranks of the country's millionaires.

Willis has just returned from a long visit to the Blue mountains, and the tale he tells is remarkable, to say the least. With him he brought a sack full of big nuggets, which have been examined by half the assayers, who pronounce them pure gold running nearly $22 per ounce.

The aged prospector has interested two of the bankers of this section in his find, and a party of workmen will proceed at once to the claims of Willis in the hills.

Willis has always been a man of mystery. He appeared on the streets of Pendleton many years ago, but as to his history he always has been silent. That there was a romance in his life he had admitted, but the nature of it he never would disclose.

He has been regarded as eccentric in many ways, and when he announced on his return the other day that he had named his mine the "Haunted Luck" he was looked on as an unbalanced.

It is the claim of Willis that he was led into the mine, which he claims is a world-beater, by the ghost of a woman named Lucy. This woman has been with him in the spirit, he says, for more than 25 years, and to her he lays his good fortune.

This is the first time that gold has been found in considerable quantity in the Blue mountains.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY, PUBLISHED AT
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The contemplated action of incorporating the borough as a third class city deserves the most serious consideration. Doubtless there are potent arguments both for and against the proposed step. It certainly seems as though the borough would gain by being allowed to control the liquor traffic within its borders and this control can probably be obtained in no other way than by incorporation as a city. In a matter of so much importance the borough fathers should consider carefully all the grounds before acting definitely, and this they will undoubtedly do.

Civic pride is always to be encouraged; it is necessary in a progressive city. He who has no pride in his environment usually has no ambition to improve it. And the most effective expression of pride is not in vainglory but in the constant endeavor at improvement.

Plainfielders have much in their city of which to boast, were bragging not rendered unnecessary by conditions which speak for themselves. The Plainfielder does not refer to the schools, streets, residences and various advantages of the city with any overweening sense of their superiority. Rather it exhibits the true civic pride. He accepts the situation with a consciousness of satisfaction, indeed, but practically as a matter of course; and if the standard is not maintained he is not slow in protesting. He demands the best and is never satisfied unless working to make what has been the best better.

In appreciating his advantages he also realizes that he is paying for them. The news that the tax rate has risen is perhaps not altogether welcome but it is accepted philosophically and with the knowledge that the extra money will be used for worthy and necessary ends. The understanding is that the advance in tax rates is in line with the determination of those in power to be satisfied with nothing less than the best. If the best costs more, the outlay must correspond.

It has been a matter of pride with the local Board of Assessors that a uniform rate of $2.10 has been maintained for a long time in Plainfield co-incident with so many expensive though needed improvements. Had it not been for the State and county increase, the conscientious efforts of those in power to so manage the finances of the city as to make increased taxes unnecessary, would have been successful.

A theatre in Plainfield is a time-honored and usually fruitless topic for discussion and speculation. That there is a field for the presentation of high class dramas in the city nobody doubts. The need is for capitalists with the courage to sink money into the enterprise, and for men with executive ability to manage it.

There is the chance, it is said, that Music Hall will be called into service again, but nothing definite has been decided in the matter. The rumor that a new and expensive theatre will be built has little reason for existence. The project is impracticable. It would be impossible, in the first place, to obtain the funds necessary to be subscribed by people in Plainfield. Then the selection of a site would present new difficulties; and, it is doubtful finally if the returns from such an undertaking would be sufficient ever to meet the expense of building.

The thing to do is to take the hall already available and to use it for strictly first-class shows only. If the high class character of the productions be insisted upon from the start, there could be no failure for lack of support. This matter of presenting clean plays should be the first, last and strictest rule observed. A trial of low comedies and vaudeville performances of a questionable sort has already been made in Plainfield and proved a flat failure financially as well as every other way.

A theatre manager in Plainfield should present the best actors and actresses of the day as well as high class plays. The nearness of Plainfield to New York would make this easily possible. Whenever unable to present plays and players of this calibre he should darken his doors. That would be his only wise policy from a business standpoint as well as in accordance with the wishes of all Plainfield theatre-goers whose patronage is worth the having. As to the question of support, no citizen would take the trouble and expense of going to New York to see a performance when he could see the same kind in Plainfield. Then, too, he would probably attend four shows in Plainfield where he would go to New York once. Others from the city and surrounding towns would become frequent patrons who never think of attending a New York production.

The efficiency of Plainfield's fire department is probably a leading cause for the city's popularity as a home. When you have a total loss of only $226 from fires in more than seven months in a city of 18,000 population, you may understand that the building inspector and the fire department are working with a full knowledge of their duties. Chief Deane's doctrine that the first five minutes at a fire are the most important of all is sound common sense. Citizens should remember always, however, that part of the responsibility for the prevention of fires and the lasting of them when once started rests with them. Unless prompt notification of a fire is sent to headquarters the department cannot be expected to utilize the first five minutes that are so valuable.

ADVENT OF TWINS.

Caused Merry Time at Their Christening Saturday—Children of Michael O'Brien.

A christening was held Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Brien, at 841 Richmond avenue, in honor of their twins, Mary and John O'Brien. The affair was extremely pleasing and dancing and music were features.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Green, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Connolly, Mr. and Mrs. James Bernow, Mr. and Mrs. James Dunney, Mr. and Mrs. John Corrigan, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick D. Corrigan, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Kneting, Mr. and Mrs. John Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. John Hurley, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guiney, and Mr. and Mrs. John O'Day; Henry Cassedy, James Maloney, James McDonald, of New York; Martin McNamara, Michael Dillon and James Maloney, of Elizabethport; William Horne, John Conway, James Fitzpatrick, Patrick Corrigan, John Brabban, Joseph Sweeney, Patrick O'Brien, Harry Phelan, and Misses Lizzie Corrigan, Emily Corrigan, Minnie Howden, Mary O'Brien, Mary Corrigan, Mary Flynn, Maggie Flynn, Nora O'Day, Hannah Lynch, Mary Hanlon, Jane Reusch, Mary McCabe, Anna Tierson, Margaret Flattery and Delia Nolan.

GIVEN AN OVATION.

Assemblyman Swackhamer Greeted With Enthusiasm by Six Thousand Farmers.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer received an ovation from six thousand farmers at Lake Gresnell, where he spoke Saturday afternoon, to the people of the northern part of Sussex County. The great square, where the speechmaking took place, was filled. Congressman Hughes, of Paterson, preceded the North Plainfield speaker and when the latter climbed upon the platform he was greeted with loud acclamations of "Governor." "Ate Lincoln" and applause which took several minutes to subside. Wednesday, August 19, Mr. Swackhamer will speak at the Farmers' Alliance near Franklin Park.

SEEK WOOD IN JERSEY.

Son of Colonel Best Notifies Newark Police He Saw Him in Asbury Park.

Detective Sergeants Tuite and Wriggins, of Newark, with a detective from San Rafael, Cal., are scouring the summer resorts along the Jersey coast for Dr. John D. Wood and his wife, at whose home in California Colonel William J. Best died last April. A son of Colonel Best notified the Newark authorities a few days ago that he had seen Dr. Wood on a train passing through Asbury Park, but he did not know what his destination was.

Dr. Wood is a former resident of Plainfield.

Concerning Mr. Martine.

The Trenton Times calls James E. Martine "the blatant farmer orator." Calling Mr. Martine the blatherskite doesn't lessen the effectiveness of his arguments and statements concerning matters in which he is interested. Mr. Martine has the happy faculty of indulging in clean-cut, pithy comments on various subjects, political and otherwise. He is all that a blatherskite is not, for he is intensely sincere and earnest in his public activity.—Elizabeth Times.

Death of Mr. Harris.

Juniah Harris, of Philadelphia, a well known resident of Plainfield up to 1865, died Thursday at his home in Philadelphia. Mr. Harris had been ill for some years and died of Bright's disease. He was seventy-two years of age. The funeral and interment were held yesterday at Philadelphia.

Settled for Picnic.

The Union Trolley Benevolent Association held a meeting Friday evening at the car barns at the Rahway Junction to settle up the affairs of the recent picnic held at Union Grove, North Plainfield. It was estimated that the picnic netted the association nearly $300.

FIELDING WAS WEAK

ST. MARY'S AND HOPE HAD A BATTING BEE AND COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Acolians Went to Asbury Park and Downed the Locals—Results of Other Games—Alls Management Could Not Arrange Game.

Poor playing was the rule in Saturday's baseball games. Scotch Plains' infield worked like a lot of "selling platers" and were responsible for most of Westfield's five runs. Westfield played clean-cut baseball. Considerable "dummy" work characterized the St. Mary's-Hope game, as the score of 18 to 10 indicates. Alls did not appear on the diamond as their management had been obliged to cancel the game scheduled with New Brunswick.

WESTFIELD, 5; SCOTCH PLAINS, 1.

The Scotch Plains' ball team, Saturday afternoon, went down in defeat before Westfield at Recreation Park, in one of the poorest games of the season. The home team played rings around Manager Johnston's colts and had they been able to bunch hits would have snowed them under. Westfield put up a fine game in the field and on bases and Scotch Plains played like a lot of "barn stormers" doing a one-night stand. The only redeeming feature of their exhibition was the work of the outfield. The infielders seemingly outdid themselves in their efforts to present the game to Westfield. Several little infield flies were allowed to come down to earth while the players did the "you first my dear Gaston" act. Chick's work at short was ragged. Several balls went through him that he would have "eaten up" in other games. As to throwing he could not seem to find first base at all; but he was not the only offender.

It is a wonder Davis pitched as good a game as he did, with such support back of him. When little pop flies to the infield have to be recorded as hits, it is enough to take the heart out of any pitcher. The two teams meet again on Saturday afternoon on the Westfield diamond and unless the Scotch Plains team recover from their dope Manager Denman's pets will add another victory to their list.

ST. MARY'S, 18; HOPE, 10.

"Aw Gee, I could do better'n that myself," said a juvenile fan at Saturday's St. Mary's-Hope game and judging from the character of play the urchin could doubtless have made good his boast. The game was loose from start to finish, a see-saw contest, with seemingly half hearted work on the part of both teams, finally won by good batting for St. Mary's with a score of 18 to 10. The runs came in bunches on both sides and some of the innings resembled merry-go-rounds. Hope started off with three and St. Mary's with six and the Saints kept their advantage throughout. Neither pitcher was in his best form. Carr gave four free passes to first and Montrose two. Three St. Mary's men were unable to play and their places were filled by substitutes who put up a game well up to the standard of the regulars.

AEOLIAN, 5; ASBURY PARK, 2.

The Aeolian baseball team crossed bats with the Asbury Park nine at Asbury Park on Saturday, and in one of the best and most exciting exhibitions of the season won by a score of 5 to 2. A number of Plainfielders were present and cheered for the visitors. Score by innings:

GARWOOD, 8; WATCHUNG, 6.

The Watchungs met defeat on the Maldive avenue grounds Saturday at the hands of the Garwood A. C. in a decidedly ragged game. The locals played anything but baseball. When in the field they distinguished themselves by making as many errors as possible, and when it came their turn to wield the stick they batted as if they were using broom handles. There pitcher had a fairly good game and would no doubt have pulled out with a victory if he had received any kind of support. The visiting pitcher struck out twelve men without making very much of an effort. The score by innings:

DUNELLEN, A. C., 2; BOUND BROOK, 1.

In an extremely exciting game of baseball the Dunellen A. C. defeated the Bound Brook team by a score of 2 to 1, Saturday afternoon, on the latter's field. The Dunellen team started off in the first inning with two runs and were unable to work a man around the bases again. Ettlinger was in fine form and the Bound Brook team, who had batted him so freely the week before, were unable to connect with his puzzling curves. Bradley, the crack New Brunswick pitcher, twirled for the Bound Brook boys and put up a fine game. The line-up was as follows:

Dunellen—Ettlinger, p; Brown, c; Daily, 1b; Charles Smith, 2b; Driscoll, 3b; Giles, ss; Rosberg, lf; Giddes, cf; Smalley, rf.

Bound Brook—Bradley, p; Mathers, c; Koechlies, 1b; Moynihan, 2b; Smith, 3b; Enright, ss; McDonnell, Knats, cf; Whitley, rf.

UNDER HORSES FEET.

Mrs. Weeks Passed Between the Wheels and Escaped Injury—

Mrs. Emeline Weeks, of Madison avenue, narrowly escaped severe injury on Monday while crossing the street at the corner of Park avenue and Second street. She was on her way toward Front street at about half past ten and was struck and knocked down by the horse of Patrick Leary, of South Plainfield. Although horse and wagon passed entirely over her, she was between the wheels and was unhurt.

Mrs. Weeks, who is an elderly woman of defective eyesight, crossed directly in front of the brewery wagon and alarmed Leary's horse, which became uncontrollable. She was struck by the horse's shoulder and thrown directly beneath its feet. When picked up by Policeman Overbaugh she was carried into Schreiner's drug store where an examination by Dr. W. K. Browning showed her to be uninjured. She subsequently continued her shopping. Leary had lost control of the horse and was not held responsible for the accident.

SURPRISED HIS PEOPLE.

Rev. Scott Wallace is Preaching Such Forcible Sermons Because He Plans to Get Married.

Rev. Scott Wallace, the pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, delivered a special discourse last Sunday, taking for his text "Why halt ye between two opinions?" There was a large attendance and considerable interest in the service. The pastor denounced fortune-telling and witchcraft and urged his people to forsake that sort of teaching and to follow Christ.

The congregation was somewhat surprised at the close of the sermon, when "Rev." George Jones, the stepson of the pastor, and former superintendent of the Sunday-school, announced that the reason the pastor was preaching such forcible sermons was due to the fact that he is about to take unto himself a new bride. Her name was announced, but Mr. Jones stated that she does not live in Plainfield. The important event will take place in the near future.

"Mother Jones" Wild Talk.

"Mother" Jones, the socialist labor agitator, is reported to have said in a speech in Camden, Tuesday, that "her recent march had resulted in thirty-five children being taken from a lace mill at Rahway." The only lace factory here is that of F. B. Barnes & Co., and in an interview with our representative today, Superintendent Beers stated that none of their employes had either left or been "taken from them." This is a fair sample of the reliability of this woman's statements.—Rahway Advocate.

THEATRE PROJECT RECEIVED WITH INTEREST

Leaders in Enterprise Backed by New York, Chicago and Plainfield Men.

SEN. REED AT THE HEAD

PLANS ALREADY SUBMITTED BY FRANK McCLURE A CHICAGO ARCHITECT.

Many It is Said Would be Willing to Become Stockholders if Company Was Formed—$40,000 Worth of Bonds to be Issued.

There seems to be a well-defined plan under consideration to build a modern playhouse in Plainfield and if the scheme, now being considered by persons from this city, New York and Chicago, is feasible and practicable, there should be no trouble about the institution becoming a fact. The idea is to erect a large building at some convenient place in the city. This structure will contain seven stores and eight flats and the main part will be devoted to the new theatre. Plans for such a building have been drawn by Frank McClure, a well-known architect of Chicago, who will become a stockholder, if a company is formed.

It is proposed to form a company to control the theatre and Senator Charles A. Reed is now at the head of the movement. $40,000 worth of bonds will be issued in this city. These bonds will be of $1,000 denomination each paying 5 per cent. and will be guaranteed. The plan will be to pay off three bonds every year, for which a guarantee will be given. Those fifteen Plainfielders have signified their intention of taking from one to five bonds and from present indications it would not seem a difficult matter to place the $40,000 worth.

There has been an impression that Klaw and Erlanger, the New York theatrical concern, will own a portion of the theatre. This is wrong. It will be owned by a company composed of Plainfield, New York and Chicago people, and arrangements will be made with Klaw and Erlanger, whereby certain first-class plays will be booked for the Plainfield theatre. Charles H. Band, of this city, is interested in the scheme and in fact was instrumental in getting it started.

Mr. Band was in New York yesterday for the purpose of advancing the interest in the matter and getting things in shape for starting the building. It is estimated that it will take five months to erect the structure. This would mean its completion by February 1, provided work is started at once. The question as to a possible site has not been considered strongly as yet, but Mr. Band says that there will be no trouble along that line, after the other details are once determined.

IN JAIL 2,015 DAYS.

Charles Williams, of This City, Has Been Committed 37 Times Since 1880.

Charles Williams, of this city, who was brought to Elizabeth Friday evening and lodged in jail to await the action of the grand jury, charged with the larceny of a coat, has an unenviable jail and prison record. For various offenses he has been committed to the Union County jail on 37 different occasions. The actual time served by Williams in the Union County jail, not counting the time of waiting for trial, is 2,015 days. He has also served one year in State Prison and several sentences in the Somerset County jail. His first commitment was June 1, 1880. His sentence on that occasion was 15 days.

Funeral of Mary Thomas.

*Simple funeral services for five-*year-old Mary Powell Thomas were held at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon at her late home at 1316 Watchung avenue. The little maid's former pastor, Rev. E. Vicars Stephenson, officiated and spoke well chosen words of comfort to the bereaved parents. Miss Etta Raybert sang two solos during the services, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Abide With Me." The pall bearers were Walter Peterson, Roger Murray, Abner Wilcox and Harry Johnson and the interment was at Hillside Cemetery.

Mrs. Werner Buried.

Funeral services were held Sunday over the remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Werner, who, on Friday, was found dead in her room on New street. They were in charge of Rev. John Justin, pastor of the German Reformed Church and the interment was in Sampstown Cemetery. The bearers were William Beiter, William Garner, Frank Metz and Herman Kohl. The dead woman's relatives, who are supposed to live in Chicago, have not yet been located by the local authorities.

Miss Bessie Leighton, of Park avenue, is visiting friends at Perth Amboy and Red Bank.

PARK CLUB.

Leon R. Thurlow proved a new factor in the weekly play for the President's cup at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, winning the first three points with a net score of 80. This gives him a total of six points and places him among the leaders. J. H. Howell captured second honors and a total of six. T. W. Morris, Jr., and Samuel Townsend tied for the one remaining point with an 86 net, Townsend, as a result, tying for first position.

In the competition for the Park Golf Club cup, scratch event, Morgan T. Townsend won first honors, giving him a total of eighteen and a substantial lead. T. W. Morris, Jr., was in second position and brought his total up to 15½ points. Charles B. Morse and Samuel Townsend divided honors for the one point, which gives the latter a total of three and the former a point and a half.

These scores were turned in for the two cups:

Leon R. Thurlow, 101, 21—80; J. H. Howell, 101, 16—85; T. W. Morris, Jr., 95, 9—86; Samuel Townsend, 100, 14—86; Charles B. Morse, 100, 13—87; George T. HILLSIDE.

The weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup was the only event at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday. There were nine scores posted, all indicating play of the first order. H. D. Hibbard won the major honors with a 73 net and Elliott T. Barrows second with a 76. Walter Peterson, who leads in the competition with a total of fourteen, took the one remaining point. Notwithstanding the few scores posted, the course was well occupied with players. The day was perfect for the game.

These were the scores for the Golf Committee cup:

H. D. Hibbard, 85, 13—73; E. T. Barrows, 91, 15—76; Walter Peterson, 88, 5—77; George T. VanBoskerck, 91, 13—79; Olaf Sangstad, 89, 9—80; Daniel T. Glass, 99, 18—81; C. B. Morgan, 95, 13—82; Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, 89, 6—83; George E. Cathcart, 113, 30—90.

MRS. BLACKFORD DEAD.

Had Suffered for a Long Time From Paralysis — Funeral Will be Held Wednesday.

Mrs. Ann Janett Blackford, widow of the late Stelle Blackford, died Sunday morning at about 5 o'clock, at her home on East Second street. For a long time past she had been an invalid and for two years was unable to talk on account of paralysis. Only a few days ago she suffered another stroke. Notwithstanding her long illness and intense suffering she was patient through it all and her brightness and cheerfulness in her affliction were often remarked by those who knew her. She was a devoted Christian and a member of the First Baptist Church. It was just about a year ago that her husband died.

Mrs. Blackford was a daughter of Jefferson and Jane Dunn, of Plainfield, where she was born. Afterward she lived in Piscataway, from which place she moved to Plainfield about four years ago. She was 67 years old and she leaves a daughter, Mrs. John Brokaw, with whom she lived, and a son, Herbert Blackford. The funeral services were held yesterday at 2 in the afternoon at Mrs. Blackford's late residence. Rev. J. A. Cubberley, of South Plainfield, was in charge, assisted by Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

MUST GET CERTIFICATES

NURSES CANNOT PRACTICE THEIR PROFESSION WITHOUT THEM.

Only Graduates From State or National Hospitals Can Receive the Documents.

In the interpretation of the new State law which allows graduate trained nurses to follow their profession, it has just been learned that only those who have been graduated from hospitals in this State or in fact in this country, are entitled to certificates, after the payment of the registration fee of fifty cents. Those who did not register prior to July 1 last, are required to take an examination and as a number of trained nurses who have been graduated from hospitals in other countries, especially in Canada, have received certificates after registration, they have been notified to return their certificates and get their fee.

In the drafting of the law the purpose was to protect as far as possible graduated trained nurses, as the profession has been seriously interfered with by nurses who have not taken the regular course and who have not obtained a certificate. They have been working under the name of "experienced nurses," and besides charging much less for their services they offer to do other work besides nursing when in charge of a case. This the graduate nurse will not do. They confine their work strictly to the care of the patient and the regular weekly charge is $25 a week.

There are a few graduate trained nurses in this city who received their diplomas at Canadian institutions and who will be obliged to take an examination before they can get a certificate and if the law is strictly carried out they will not be able to practice their profession until they do get a certificate. The law may be amended at the next session of the Legislature, but until such time, the present rule must hold.

TAXES DISCUSSED BY BOROUGH COUNCIL

Assessments, Chairmen's Reports and Other Routine Business Were Considered.

FOUR MEMBERS PRESENT

WITHDRAWAL OF BANK STOCK FROM THE COUNTY RECEIVED COMMENT.

Additional Appropriation for the Care of the Streets—Petition to Macadamize Pearl Street—Mayor and Council to Go to Boonton.

Regular routine business was transacted at the adjourned meeting of the North Plainfield Common Council last Monday. Councilmen Clark, Lee, Van Arsdale and Arnold were present.

A petition was received from Elston M. French and C. Frank French asking the Council to macadamize Pearl street from Somerset street to the eastern terminus at the head of Tice's lake, and stating that $100 had been subscribed to the fund. The Council will consider the petition at the next meeting. A letter was received from the members of the West End Hose Company requesting the presence of the Mayor and members of the Common Council as their guests on the trip to Boonton, where the firemen's day festivities will be held. Mayor Smalley urged all who could to attend.

There was some discussion over the proposed enforcement of the poll taxes. It was suggested by the Mayor that in order to partly make up for the taxable property withdrawn from the borough by A. J. Brunson, the New Jersey poll tax law should be enforced. There was also some question as to whether it would be wise to tax the bank stock for its full valuation and allow the legality of Mr. Brunson's action to be tested in court. The matter was allowed to drop temporarily.

Reports were read by the chairman of the various committees. Chairman James K. Arnold, of the street committee reported an expenditure of $657.17, on pay roll and $614.80 for stone. Chairman Clark, of the fire, water and lamps committee, reported an expenditure of $18.94 and $2,600 on the fire engine house fund. Chairman Lee, of the police committee, said that there had been 11 arrests during the month of July and that $18 had been collected for fines. Mr. Arnold, chairman of the committee appointed to have the borough's plot in the M. E. Cemetery cared for, reported an expenditure of $25. Claims amounting to $4,671.64 were ordered paid.

On motion of Councilman Arnold a resolution was adopted directing that assessments be made amounting to $21,800 to cover the borough expenses. $1,000 was added to the street fund from the fire and police appropriations to allow for the continuance of the street work. It was explained that while the appropriation for the work on the streets was large enough and had been used with care, the additional cost of laying 4,500 feet of storm sewers caused a heavy drain on the funds which had to be replenished in order to let the work go on.

Councilman Arnold offered a resolution accepting the dedication of the Green Brook boulevard.

Tax Collector George F. Brown's report follows: Receipts for taxes and interest, $143.75; Board of Health, $1.14; macadamizing, $105; licenses, $17.50; dog taxes, 20; dogs registered, $1.10; sidewalks, $47.50; refunded on interest, 05; Recorder, $5; balance on hand, July 1, $10,275.29; total receipts, $10,399.54; disbursements, $5,668.63; cash on hand, $6,910.93; engine house fund, $6,962.58; borough fund overdrawn, $2,051.65.

Meetings will be held every evening this week for the auditing of the Assessor's books.

Frazee Shot An Eagle.

In the loft of a barn in the rear of Edwin H. Hooley's house in the borough Friday, James Frazee, a coachman, saw in a field a great commotion between a large bird and a small animal. He shot the bird which proved to be an eagle measuring a little less than seven feet from tip to tip of its wings. The bird was trying to get a squirrel from a steel trap. Frazee will have the bird stuffed.

Case in Contract.

Summons has been issued in the contract case of Murphy vs McDonough to satisfy a hundred dollar demand of the plaintiff. The case will come up in Justice Hand's court next Tuesday at 10. Swackhamer and Codington are attorneys for the plaintiff.

BOROUGH TO BECOME CITY?

North Plainfield Objects to Somerville's Control of the License Privilege.

ACTION BY THE COUNCIL

Resolutions Passed Asking for Opinion of Counsel—The Borough Would be a Third-Class City if the Action Should be Taken.

North Plainfield has at last risen in her wrath against Somerville and the way in which she is treated by the latter in county matters; and at the Council meeting last Monday steps were taken to transform the borough into a city. Disappointed in the attempt to become a part of Union County, and failing in consolidation, the question of throwing aside the government of a borough for that of a city, for a last resort, acted upon. A resolution was adopted directing the clerk to ask Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed what steps would be necessary to secure home rule and the control of licenses, which power can only come through the organization of city government. If such action is taken, North Plainfield will be changed from a first class borough to a third class city.

Following the transaction of the regular business, the Councilmen settled down to a serious consideration of the best way to control licenses in the borough. The discussion was brought about through the revelations in the columns of The Daily Press in regard to the existence of "speakeasies" in the borough. Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., advanced the idea that the scheme for forming a city government be ventilated. The plan had evidently been well thought out by some of the members of the Council as the lines of argument were clear cut and well made. For nearly an hour the matter was talked over and finally closed with Councilman James K. Arnold offered this resolution:

"Be it resolved, That the Borough Clerk secure from the Corporation Counsel his written opinion regarding the legal steps which would be necessary to take in order to change the government of North Plainfield from that of a first class borough to that of a third class city.

"And be it further resolved, That the opinion of the Corporation Counsel be read at the next meeting of the Council."

The resolution was passed without a dissenting vote.

In speaking of the plan after the meeting, Councilman Lee said to a representative of The Daily Press that one reason the matter had been suggested was because of the fact that the people of North Plainfield had no voice in the matter of issuing licenses. On that side of the brook the hotels are granted licenses as inns and are thus entitled to keep open all night. By becoming a third class city the Hillside would not be granted at the Somerville courts but would be controlled by the people who live in the cities where the saloons, or "inns" are located; and where, if there is any objection to granting the permits, the people who suffer most from their presence, could have an opportunity of raising a voice against them. If North Plainfield were a city a more effectual crusade could be carried on against the unlicensed dealers, who sell liquor in the back rooms of a fruit store.

Mayor Smalley says that it is high time for the borough to be free of the tyrannical rule of Somerville. No voice is allowed her in the issuance of licenses for saloons, in spite of the fact that North Plainfield contributes almost one-third of the County taxes.

It was said that if North Plainfield should become a third class city she would lose many of her present privileges. The action would affect the municipal ownership of public works. The matter of licenses is said to be only one of the many advantages which the borough would derive from such a step which might mean a better police force and other improvements not now enjoyed by the borough under the Somerset County rule for boroughs. The slogan suggested last evening was "Representation for Taxation."

THROUGH FIRE AND SMOKE TO SAVE LIFE

Mrs. Robert Yetman Barely Had Time to Rescue Daughter in Saturday's Fire.

THE ONLY EXIT CUT OFF

CHILD TOSSED OVER BANISTERS TO SAFETY IN HALL BELOW.

Mrs. Yetman Roused Sleeping Husband and Both Reached the Ground by Climbing Down From the Piazza Roof.

Few people who witnessed the fire Saturday afternoon on West Third street shortly after it broke out knew anything of the danger of Mrs. Robert Yetman and her three-year-old daughter Laura, both of whom barely escaped with their lives.

According to Mrs. Yetman's story, she was in the garret at work when the fire started, while her husband, who works for the city and who had just returned home, was lying down in the bedroom directly adjoining that in which the flames first appeared. Little Laura was playing about the hall on the second floor. Suddenly Mrs. Yetman heard a scream from her daughter and imagining some accident, hastily rushed down from the garret. At the foot of the garret stairs, a dense cloud of hot smoke rolled out and through this the mother saw her daughter directly in the door of the burning room. The stairs from the first to the second floor have a landing directly in front of the room where the fire broke out and, seizing the frightened child, Mrs. Yetman made her way in this direction through the dense smoke. A high wall of flame from the burning room shut off her exit by this avenue of escape but reaching along the banister which runs parallel to the hallway Mrs. Yetman tossed her daughter to safety in the hall below where she was cared for by neighbors.

Returning through the dense smoke to the room where her husband was still asleep, Mrs. Yetman finally succeeded in awaking him and the two made their exit from the blazing second floor out of a front window to the piazza roof and thence to the ground.

Almost the entire second floor and garret of the house is a gutted wreck and the Yetmans are now living with neighbors. Mrs. Yetman said yesterday that her loss entire would amount to more than $600 and that Yetman carried $600 worth of insurance. No clue as to the cause of the fire can be discovered but Mrs. Yetman believes it to have started from the chimney.

New Jersey will not lose her great corporation business. We never hear of a New Jersey corporation going elsewhere to incorporate. All the solid concerns are chartered in New Jersey. The laws give stability to stock.

"As to the statement that the corporation business is falling off here, I believe the figures will show that this year's business will run ahead of last year. For the seven months to August, 1903, there were 1,361 concerns chartered, for which there was paid filing fees of $204,165.67, while for the past seven months of 1903, or to August 1, this year, there were 1,368 companies chartered and filing fees of $218,266.67 paid. This shows that there was a falling off of but thirteen companies in this corresponding period of time, something not at all to be frightened at. There was also a falling off in receipts of $75,900.80, or the difference between $294,166.67 and $218,266.87. This looks large at first sight, but it also is nothing out of the ordinary when parts of years are considered. In the period of 1902 under consideration there were several very large combinations chartered, which swelled very much the receipts of this office. That fact accounts for the seven months past of 1903 not showing such great receipts.

"There is nothing to these stories about New Jersey losing her corporation business."

Sold Their Vineyards.

Nicholas and Theodore Martone, of this city, and their brother, John, of New York, on Monday had deeds passed in New York transferring a large tract of land in Italy, a part of the old Martone estate. James Wersila, an uncle of the local fruiterers, purchased the property, paying the former owners $10,000, which was divided between them. The property is cultivated with grape vines and olive orchards and is in the belt of the vineyard section of Italy.

FAMILIAR "CHARACTER" DEAD

DENNIS KANE POPULAR IN PLAINFIELD WHERE HE HAD LONG LIVED.

Suffered His Last Sickness in Philadelphia.—Will be Buried in This City.

Dennis J. Kane, son of Margaret and the late John Kane, aged 25 years, and a life-long resident of Plainfield, died Monday after a lingering sickness at his home in Philadelphia, where he had recently moved. Mr. Kane is survived by a mother and four sisters and a brother, the Misses Sarah and Katie Kane and Thomas Kane, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Chas. Greader and Mrs. Thomas Connor, of Plainfield.

"Denny," as he was familiarly known by everyone here, was probably one of the most unique characters in the city. He was of large build and fine physique. He established a reputation for the great number of runaway horses he caught, preventing serious damage and probably loss of life. At times he followed the occupation of a motorman both in this city and at Asbury Park, as well as in other parts of the country. At one time he was engaged by a well-known Newark house to sell badges at various celebrations throughout the country and at events in college towns. He also sold newspapers with considerable success, and whatever he undertook, in fact, he carried through to success.

The funeral services will be held from his late residence, 2610 North Fairhill street, Philadelphia, at 8:30 a. m. today and from St. Eward's Church at 9 o'clock, where a solemn high mass will be offered for the repose of the soul. Interment will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, this city. The funeral party accompanying the remains will reach this city today at 12:30.

RENOVATING BOROUGH CHURCH.

Plasterers and Decorators at Work on Church of the Holy Cross.

The repairs on the Church of the Holy Cross, of North Plainfield, which have been under way for almost a month, are now nearing completion. The replastering and redecoration of the church nave are expected to be finished tomorrow, and work will then be started on the chancel. The interior has been painted in two shades of tan. Extensive improvements have been planned for the chancel and considerable time will elapse before the completion of work there. A new oak floor is to be laid and the step from nave to chancel will be extended its entire breadth. The choir stalls and pews will be repaired and repolished.

HE HAD MATCHES.

Young Venable Boy Burned Two Tons of Hay and His Father's Chicken Coop.

The well-known combination of children and matches was the cause of the fire Monday afternoon at Arthur Venable's home at 614 West Third street. The Venable boy's unprecedented success at building a bonfire on the top of the haystack in the rear of his home destroyed more than two tons of hay and his father's chicken coop. A telephone alarm was received at fire headquarters at 3:30 and Companies 1 and 2 proceeded to the scene. Two lines of hose were laid and after considerable trouble the fire was extinguished. The loss was $60 with no insurance.

Grocers Going to Coney.

The Grocers, of this city, are planning to hold an excursion to Coney Island on Monday, September 7. A large number of tickets have already been sold.

PLAINFIELD'S NEXT ASSEMBLYMAN

Who He Will Be Is Causing No End of Speculation in Political Circles.

DETAILS OF SITUATION

COUNCILMAN BUCKLE AND FORMER SHERIFF KIRK CONSIDERED.

City Clerk J. T. MacMurray Would Probably Decline to Run—Fowler-Kean Factions a Strong Factor as of Old—Fowler for Senate?

The question as to who will be Plainfield's next representative in the lower house of the State Legislature, to succeed the present incumbent, William Newcorn, whose term expires this year, is just now agitating the minds of a few politicians, who are taking an interest in politics at an early stage of the game.

While the nomination of City Clerk J. T. MacMurray has been talked of by many, it is understood on good authority that he does not want it, but that he would like to see James F. Buckle, now president of the Common Council, go to the Assembly. Mr. Buckle's term in councilman will expire this December thirty-first of last year and these have been extinguished with such promptness that the losses have amounted to but $835, $685 of which has been to buildings and $150 to contents. The probable key to this record is the doctrine of Chief Doane that the first five minutes at a fire are the most valuable five minutes. To this end the running gear's perfect condition, horses' speed and drivers' skill have contributed much.

Sparks from locomotives, together with defective heating apparatus have been the principal causes of fires in this city, during the year; twelve fires having resulted from each in the last half year. Aside from this there have been 9 chimney fires, 6 from unknown causes, 3 from gas jets, 3 from children and matches, 3 from bonfires, 3 from lamps and the remainder from various causes, no two of which are alike. Of the 56 alarms received at headquarters 35 have been from box alarms, 25 by telephone, and 6 verbal.

More fires have been conquered by hand extinguishers than in any other way. Sixteen conflagrations were nipped in the bud in this way "in the first five minutes." Thirteen fires have been extinguished by the chemical engine while it has been necessary to lay a hose line for but eleven.

Four have been extinguished by pails of water and at the remainder there has been no duty for the firemen.

At one time in the history of the department, day and night fires were of the same number for some months but recently almost ninety per cent. of the fires have been in the day time. Of these eleven have been in the morning from four until eleven, thirteen at the dinner hour, from eleven to one, twenty-eight in the afternoon from one to nine and the remaining four at night. By a finer subdivision it is seen that there have been more fires at the time of kindling the fire in the morning and at noon time than at any other hour of the day.

Too Much Noise.

Persons living near the various ends of the trolley lines in this city have been complaining of the manner in which the conductors turn the seats over for the return trips, especially during the late hours of the night. They do this in so careless a fashion as to ruthlessly disturb the quietude of nearby residents. The noise very much resembles the discharge of a small gun.

Tickets for Boynton Beach.

The Retail Clerks' Mutual Aid Association is arranging for its second trolley excursion to Boynton Beach. The trip will be made Thursday evening, August 27, and tickets can be had of these persons who comprise the committee: Caspar Waglow, chairman; James McLean, Edward Baker, Albert Cook and George Ayers.

Thrown From Her Carriage.

While driving a fractious horse, Thursday, Mrs. Thomas Kolb, of West Fifth street, was thrown from her carriage. The horse became frightened about five miles from the city and balked, stumbling and falling to the ground. Mrs. Kolb was heavily thrown and sustained several bruises. The horse kicked the dash board of the rig to pieces and broke one of the shafts, badly wrenching other parts of the wagon.

CITY'S SPLENDID FIRE RECORD

Total Loss From Conflagrations During Present Year Amounts to Only $835.

FIRES FEW AND FEEBLE

CAUSES, TIME AND METHODS OF EXTINGUISHING THEM.

Chief Doane Acts on the Doctrine That the First Five Minutes at a Fire Are the Most Valuable —Record Up to Date.

Few of our citizens realize when they see the fire apparatus making a quick dash through the streets to the scene of some conflagration to how great an extent Plainfield owes her popularity as a home city to the efficiency of this department. No other city in Union county of the size of Plainfield has a fire department so completely equipped, so efficient and so quick to arrive at the scene of action.

The success of the department is conclusively revealed in the work of the past eight months. There have been fifty-six fires in this city since December thirty-first of last year and these have been extinguished with such promptness that the losses have amounted to but $835, $685 of which has been to buildings and $150 to contents. The probable key to this record is the doctrine of Chief Doane that the first five minutes at a fire are the most valuable five minutes. A VATICAN MYSTERY.

Fisherman's Ring Said to Have Been Lost or Stolen.

A Symbol of Papal Authority Which Has Been Worn by Pontiffs for Hundreds of Years—Lost Twice Before.

The celebrated fisherman's ring, symbol of papal authority, has disappeared. Authorities at the vatican at Rome say they expect to find it among Leo's possessions in the apartments recently occupied by him, but fears are expressed that the ring was stolen from the pope's dead hand. The authorities say Leo hid the ring.

When the cardinal camarlengo certifies the death of a pope he receives the ring of the fisherman from the chamberlain of his holiness. It is then destroyed in the presence of all the cardinals at the first meeting of the sacred college held after the pope's death.

But when Cardinal Oreglia, the present camarlengo, had certified to the death of Leo XIII, Mgr. Bisletti was a prey to the deepest despair and had to admit that the ring had disappeared. Cardinal Oreglia, who had, as is the custom, brought his declaration of having received the ring from the papal chamberlain, all written out, had to put it back in his pocket.

The fisherman's ring is known to have been lost twice before.

Among the state papers preserved at Simancas, near Valladolid, Spain, is a letter from Count Olivares, then Spanish ambassador at Rome, to Philip II., dated September 5, 1588, saying:

"Sixtus V. has been very ill from anxiety and vexation. The vexation to which I refer was at missing the fisherman's ring. He carried it with him in a purse, and he discovered that he had been robbed of it by a cup-bearer."

THE FISHERMAN'S RING.

In September, 1899, the late Pope Leo was one day insistently asked for an audience by an under servant, and, yielding to curiosity, he granted it, whereupon the man entered, and, kneeling, said:

"Your holiness, I have to restore to you what has been a loss not only to you but to the world."

After these words the man gave the pope the fisherman's ring, which he had found. Pope Leo looked at it in surprise and then, solemnly putting it on his finger, said:

"The thanks of the church are due to you, my son. I shall see that you are rewarded."

The next day the man called at the treasury and received three dollars.

On two occasions the ring was taken from its papacy by force. In 1797 the French republicans, invading the papal states, despoiled Pius VI. of all his valuables, among them the fisherman's ring. It was returned the next day.

When Pius VII. was kidnaped in the middle of the night and was made to give up this ring, the pope gave it up after breaking it in two pieces, which were kept in Paris until returned to Rome by Louis XVIII.

The ring of the fisherman was the official seal used by the pope in all his personal documents and private letters. The origin of the ring was a custom adopted many centuries ago by popes in order to keep alive the memory of the poor fisherman of Galilee. Every one of the popes since that time has sworn and used a signet ring which bore the device of St. Peter seated in a boat and drawing a net from the waves. The authorities as to the date of the origin of the custom are not agreed. Mabillon claims that no evidence exists as to the precise date. Bongratia says it is believed that Peter himself used this ring. The first mention of the ring occurs in a letter of Clement IV., written in 1265. Martin V., who was elected in 1417, left three briefs, all sealed by the ring of the fisherman. Eugene IV.'s successor also left letters sealed with the ring. In 1468 Gastano Cenni wrote a treatise on the ring and published it in Rome. The custom of destroying the seal of the pope immediately after his death is of considerable antiquity. Each pope has had his own ring and seal. The illustration shows that used by Pope Leo XIII. It was of plain gold, weighing one and one-half ounces, and had an oval plate, with a very shallow representation of the subject.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY.

To Buy an Excellent Lot at a Moderate Cost—Locality Excellent.

An excellent opportunity is now offered to the people of Plainfield to own a home at a small cost, through an auction sale of fifty choice building lots located southwest of Rock avenue and Third street. The Plainfield Land and Building Company, of which A. D. Thompson is the president, has recently purchased this desirable tract of land and opened up a fine boulevard through it connecting Plainfield and Dunellen.

The property has also been graded and several streets and avenues laid out. The land is high, dry and has perfect drainage. The trolley is but one block away and the Clinton Avenue Station but five minutes walk. West Third street has been opened up and graded from Rock avenue to Dunellen and South avenue has been extended through the tract. The land has been cut up into about 200 lots, 33 1-3x125 feet, and fifty of these will be sold at auction Saturday afternoon, August 22, at 2:30 o'clock. Four cross streets have been laid out and graded, namely, Oak place, Chestnut place, Poplar place, Hazlewood place. These lots will be sold on the easy-payment plan and any further information can be obtained from A. D. Thompson.

ANNOYED BY DOGS.

Patients at Muhlenberg Hospital Disturbed at Night by Their Continual Howling.

Although the nurses and directors at Muhlenberg Hospital have repeatedly complained about the number of dogs allowed to run at large in their neighborhood, the dog population seems to be on the increase instead of the decrease. Their continual barking causes much annoyance to those who are confined to the institution. Patients who need sleep are constantly awakened during the night by the yelps of a herd of half breed mongrels which are allowed to run at large, in many cases without muzzles, in that neighborhood. A police officer with a trusty pistol would be a welcome visitor when the dog carnival is at its height.

JERSEY AT WORLD'S FAIR.

Contract for Erecting Administration Building Awarded.

The contract for erecting New Jersey's administration building for the St. Louis Exposition has been awarded, by the commissioners to a St. Louis construction company. Fifteen thousand dollars is the contract price. There were several bidders from this State, but ex-Governor Voorhees and the other members of the commission thought the work might be done at less inconvenience by a man better acquainted with his surroundings and particularly so, as his estimate was lower than those from New Jersey. Mr. Voorhees, who is chairman of the commission, said that he thought the building would be completed by the first of November.

Adjourned Case.

The case of Charles Barry, who was arrested Wednesday for violation of the cabmen's ordinance, has been postponed until Monday, Aug. 31, at the petition of S. S. Swackamer, his attorney.

Last of the Season.

The Warren Chapel excursion will be the last to Asbury Park from Plainfield this year. Thursday, August 27, is the date.

KHEDIVE OF EGYPT.

Although an Orthodox Mohammedan He Is a Monogamist of the Strictest Type.

Abbas Pasha Hilmi, khedive of Egypt, has been in London on a short visit, going there from Paris incognito. During his stay in London no entertainments of an official character were given in his honor, but he had an audience with King Edward.

This is the third visit of the khedive to London, his last one being in 1900, when he was received at Windsor by Queen Victoria, whose guest he was for two or three days.

The khedive, who was born on July 14, 1874, has a pleasant face without being exactly handsome. He is short and rather inclined to be stout. His face is full and round, with a fair complexion, bronzed by much out-of-door exercise. His eyes are light hazel, and impart a great charm to his face.

THE KHEDIVE OF EGYPT.
(Mohammedan Potentate Who Believes in Western Civilization.)

His father, the Khedive Tewfik, having English tastes, provided English nurses for his children, and intrusted the education of his two sons, Abbas and Mehemet, to English tutors until the former was 12 years old.

It was Tewfik's wish that the princes should be educated in England, but owing to political difficulties he was never able to carry out his intention. The two young princes were therefore sent to Vienna, first touring through Europe to Rome, Paris and London.

Early in 1892, when a youth of 17, the sudden death of his father called Abbas to the throne of Egypt from the gay and irresponsible life of a Viennese student. His time had not, however, been wasted.

Abbas II. has shown himself an excellent administrator and an accomplished linguist, speaking fluently English, French, German, Italian, Turkish and Arabic. During his stay in Vienna Emperor Francis Joseph took a great interest in his education, and had him specially initiated in a soldier's training.

While most particular regarding the etiquette and formality due to his rank, Abbas II. cares nothing for the pomp and ceremonial of state. He is fonder of a quiet life at home, and is devoted to his wife and children. He is a strict monogamist, as his father was before him.

At Koubbeh palace he lives the life of an English country gentleman. He is a keen sportsman, a great rider, and devoted to dogs. His stables contain horses of every breed. The kennels and poultry houses have been stocked from every land.

Besides being a good sportsman, Abbas is a great admirer of cricket and football, games which he has introduced among his tenantry.

In his camel stables there are nearly 200 camels. The khedive is always trying to encourage his subjects to give attention to camel-breeding, for the prosperity of Egypt largely depends on the camel.

The authorities of the printing office suspended Miller, but the president ordered him reinstated. Miller's official position is assistant foreman of the bookbinding department. He was suspended from this post for the same reason that he was expelled from the Bookbinders' union, but the officials of that organization refuse to make public their charges except to the civil service commission.

PLAINFIELD GIRL HELPS SAVE LIFE

Holds Boat at Ocean Grove Steady Until the Lifeguard Hauls Youth Aboard.

MANY SAW THE RESCUE

MISS EDITH BURT, A SOCIETY BELLE, WAS THE HEROINE.

Bosey Reiter, the Lifeguard, Prevented Venturesome Swimmer From Sinking—Miss Burt Exhibited Skill and Courage.

A young girl, pretty, athletic and remarkably self-possessed, played a very important part in a sensational rescue made at the Lillagore bathing grounds at Ocean Grove Wednesday afternoon, winning the plaudits of the thousands of spectators who assembled on the pavilion, sand and boardwalk.

She is Miss Edith Burt, a popular Plainfield society belle, who lives on West Seventh street and is staying at the Vermont, on Embury avenue, Ocean Grove.

An unusually large number of people were in bathing and many of them swam beyond the channel to the sandbar, between 100 and 150 yards from the shore. Bosey Reiter, the Princeton football man, well known in this city, leaving his brother Kirk to look after the bathers in shore, launced his boat, the Princeton, and rowed out to the bar to watch the more venturesome parsons.

Miss Burt got into the boat with Mr. Reiter for a lark and handled the stern oars in a manner that showed she wasn't "green." The waves were coming very high and most of them breaking, and it was no easy task to handle the small boat. Both occupants found that it required their entire attention to keep it from capsizing. They had been out but a short time, when a young lad about 15 years old, whose name could not be ascertained, but who wore a Ross suit and was said to be an excursionist, was carried beyond the bar by the strong current and after a short struggle threw up his hands in despair.

He sank twice and the crowds watching him thought he must perish before aid could reach him, but the boat occupants had seen his distress and with difficulty rowed toward him. Reiter sprang from his seat and seizing the large life preserver threw it to the drowning boy.

Just here is where Miss Burt's nerve, strength and skill came in and made the rescue possible. With the immense waves beating against the boat and threatening immediate disaster, she grasped the oars firmly and with amazing coolness kept the light craft steady. It was hard work and her arms and shoulders ached, but she could not rest until Reiter had pulled the exhausted lad safely into the boat. Then they rowed ashore, while the crowds cheered the brave rescue.

There were many other rescues at the Lillagore grounds, especially in the morning, when the tide was high, and Kirk and Bosey Reiter were kept on the jump constantly. One woman who was brought ashore by Kirk after a hard struggle soon ventured in again and a second time was brought back to safety. Then she was satisfied to go to her bathhouse and dress.

Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION.

Frederick Andrews Leader of Assembly at Lake George—Helpful Motto Chosen.

The report from the Silver Bay Convention, Young Men's Christian Association, held at Lake George from July 31 to August 9, indicates that it was one of the most successful yet held. Frederick H. Andrews, of Central avenue, was chairman of the convention and presided over the various sessions.

A unique and helpful motto for the convention was chosen by Mr. Andrews and widely distributed. This is the motto:

"May every soul that touches mine,
Be it the slightest contact, get therefrom some good."

Some little grace, one kindly thought,
One aspiration yet unfelt, one bit of courage for the darkening sky,
One gleam of faith to brave the thickening ills of life,
One glimpse of brighter skies beyond the gathering mists,
To make life, death, worth while, and heaven a surer heritage."

Once more the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, under the name of Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, of New Jersey, has consolidated six subsidiary roads of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $16,454,000 in $100 shares. The companies absorbed are Lehigh Valley Terminal Railway, 32 miles; Greenville and Hudson Railway, 3½ miles; Middlesex Railway, 13 miles; Perth Amboy and Raritan Railway, 6 miles; Pittston Branch Railway, 4 miles; Easton and Amboy Railway, 69 miles.

ONLY ONE CONCERT IN THE BOROUGH

North Plainfield Council Find That They Cannot Make Appropriation.

TO CANVAS FOR FUNDS

ERNEST BALL WILL BE THE SOLOIST AT CONCERT OF AUGUST 29.

Band Stand Will be Located on Fairview and Watchung Avenues —Movement for a Series of Concerts Next Year to be Started.

Only one band concert will be given in North Plainfield this summer, instead of the four as anticipated when the movement was inaugurated. This, however, is not because of a lack of interest in the project, but because the Common Council finds that the borough law prohibits the making of an appropriation for that purpose.

About half the amount necessary to give a concert has been subscribed by prominent residents of the borough. Most of the Councilmen have given sums varying from two to five dollars, and it is said that the amount needed has been more than half subscribed for. A systematic canvass will be started this evening by Benjamin La Vere and Mayor Smalley.

Fairview and Watchung avenues has been selected as the location for the band stand and the work of erecting it will begin shortly. Mr. LaVere announced this morning that Ernest R. Ball, of the firm of Whitenack & Son, New York, will be the singer. His selections will be "I'm Longing for You in sweetheart" and "Sing me a Song of the South." The same musicians who appeared at the concerts on this side of the brook will be in the band Saturday evening, August 29.

Mayor Smalley said this morning that the movement would be started next season for a series of band concerts in the borough. He said the season was a little too far advanced this year but thought the people favored the project.

HAD TO GET OUT.

Four Families on East Front Street Had to Move for Improvements.

Four families have vacated the Durlach property on the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue. This was made necessary by the proposal to widen the avenue at that point. The city is gradually trying to bring about this improvement, which has been pending for a long time. It is not known whether the Durlachs will fight the action or not. At any rate the city will do nothing in the matter until Corporation Counsel Marsh returns from Europe.

Jersey Farmers Happy.

This is a great year for New Jersey farmers, says a Trenton writer. Large crops are being produced and good prices are obtained. Early in the year it seemed as if the farmers were doomed to a cropless season. Everything was dried up, grass and hay were withered, the fields were mere beds of dust, corn and other crops could not be planted and the outlook was discouraging, but the constant rains that have been falling since early in June have changed all this. Nature's recuperative forces worked with all the greater energy from being held in check by the droughts and she has more than repaired damages. Great crops of hay and other farm products have been raised and they are in large demand at big prices. Potatoes fetch more than double what they brought last year. The farmers of New Jersey are almost happy.

BOROUGH FLORIST'S VALUABLE INVENTION

Edward Conroy Has Built a Machine Which Aids in the Cultivation of Flowers.

IS USEFUL TO FARMERS

KILLS BLIGHT ON TREES AND DESTROYS MILDEW ON ROSES.

May Also be Used in the Sick Room for Disinfecting Purposes—Experiments Have Been Uniformly Successful.

Edward J. Conroy, of North Plainfield, has built a machine which, he claims, will make the cultivation of roses much more inexpensive and reduce their cost in the retail market. In his green house, at the end of the Somerset street trolley line, he has worked out the problem of preventing mildew, the deadly foe of the rose cultivator, from settling on the plants. So successful have the experiments been that he has applied and received patents for his contrivance in the United States and Canada.

Millions of dollars are lost through mildew every year by florists who make a specialty of cultivating roses. In order to prevent its appearance in the green house large quantities of tobacco stems and sometimes are purchased and laid in the beds where they are allowed to sweat out. This method is not altogether successful and many thousands of plants are lost by it each year. Some florists use the steam heating pipes along the walls of the houses and, by covering them while hot with a mixture of sulphur, vaporize the plants. From one to two tons of coal are required in that operation and in warm weather, when the mildew is at its worst stage, there is danger of overheating the plant and not only ruining the bud but spoiling the foliage and making the flowers small and stunted.

The machine is a contrivance about three feet high, running on four wheels. When complete it weighs between seventy-five and a hundred pounds. It is claimed by the builder that it will vaporize an area of 15,000 square feet in forty-five minutes at a cost of one dollar. Gasolene under six pounds pressure will enable the machine to operate for five hours and in that time it is claimed that no insect will be able to survive the disinfection. The machine can be used in an open orchard to kill the blight on peach trees and the lice on apple and pear trees. The small machines, the owner declares, will be of a size possible for disinfecting purposes in houses where there are contagious diseases.

The National Pipe Bending Company, of Brooklyn, made the coils over which the chemicals are placed for vaporizing, and Lewis Ely, of the A. M. Griffen Hardware Company, constructed the framework. The plan was suggested to Mr. Conroy by the antiquated methods employed in all large green houses. By the old method the temperature in the house would be increased twenty points in sweating out the plants but by the use of Mr. Conroy's machine the temperature is increased only two degrees, and there is no danger of injuring the plants in any way. The machine could readily be employed for the destruction of potato bugs and the like pests.

The machine was put in operation yesterday while a Daily Press reporter was present. It work, apparently, in a satisfactory manner and the condition of the plants showed that they thrived under the treatment.

DANCED ON DIAMOND.

St. Mary's Baseball Club Gave the Second of Their Summer Night's Carnivals Last Evening.

Dancing on a baseball diamond is something of a novelty but over four hundred people enjoyed the waltz and two step on the large platform erected on St. Mary's baseball field on West Fourth street last Thursday. It was the second of the mid-summer night's carnivals held at the grounds by the St. Mary's nine and was even more successful than the first. The committee in charge consisted of Henry Wierenga, chairman; James Kane, William Connolly, R. J. Birmingham, John Doyle and John P. Owens. Representatives of baseball nines from Westfield, Scotch Plains, Dunellen, Bound Brook and New Brunswick were present. The music was provided by Eugene O'Reilly.

Potent Pill Pleasures.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot, of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did me more good than calomel blue-mass or any other pills I ever took and at the same time it effected me pleasantly. Little Early Risers are certainly an ideal pill." Sold by L. W. Randolph.

BLUE BANDS REWARD MERIT

BRAID ON ARMS OF MOTORMEN AND CONDUCTORS.

Denotes Faithful Service—Adopted Recently—Rules Regulating Their Use.

Passengers riding upon the local trolley cars have noticed that the conductors and motormen are wearing on their sleeves blue bands. Some of the older employes of the road wear gold braid which denotes longer service.

The braids went on the arms of the motormen and conductors when the Public Service Corporation took hold of the local road. It was in line with other improvements and changes contemplated by the corporation. There were hundreds of men in their employ who have been in the service of the various roads ever since electric traction was introduced in New Jersey. When their salaries were raised, in proportion to the length of time in which they have handled the controller and the brake, the company decided to place on the uniforms of their faithful employes these decorations.

The blue band on a conductor's sleeve signifies that he has been collecting fares honestly for one year. When he has obtained five of them he receives a gold one.

TO BE ILLUMINATED.

Red Light Will Reveal the Location of Fire Boxes at Night—Some of Them Being Moved.

Men employed by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company are at work in different parts of the city on some of the fire-alarm boxes of the Gamewell system. The plan is to have the location of the boxes designated at night by red street lights which are placed at or near the poles to which the fire alarm boxes are attached.

The change will necessitate the transfer of several boxes. Some will be placed nearer the junction of the streets designated in the printed schedules while others will be moved a few feet further away. For instance, Box 41, at the corner of Madison avenue and West Third street, will be moved almost twenty feet nearer the corner. The designation of the location of fire boxes at night by means of red street lamps enables a citizen to locate a box at several blocks' distance, avoiding confusion in case of fire.

JAMES H. BINNING DEAD.

Passed Away in England—Relatives in This Vicinity.

A cable has been received by Robert Binning, of New York, formerly of this city, informing him of the death of his father, James H. Binning, of Moor Row, Cumberland County, England, on Sunday, August 9, in the 83d year of his age. Mr. Binning was born at Halfway House, Polkemmet, Scotland. He is survived by a wife and six children, two of whom are Robert Binning, of New York, and Mrs. Hiram Perrine, of Ampere, N. J. Mr. Binning leaves a large circle of friends both in this country and Europe. Andrew Muir, of Essex street, is a nephew.

HAHR-PENDERS MARRIAGE.

Ceremony Performed by Justice E. D. Moffett.

Miss Cathrine Penders, of New York, and Felix Hahr, of Martinsville, were quietly married Monday, Aug. 10, by Justice Elmore D. Moffett at his home in Orchard place. The couple drove from Martinsville to this city early in the evening and called upon Justice Moffett, who made them man and wife. The groom, who is engaged in the real estate business, gave his age as 35 years, while the bride said she was 21 years of age. The couple will reside at Martinsville.

APARTMENT HOUSES.

To be Built Soon by the Mono Investment Company.

The Mono Investment Company, of this city, is planning to erect apartment houses in Plainfield similar to those in Philadelphia. Several available sites have been under consideration for some time past and one desirable location on West Fourth street is likely to be purchased for the above purpose. It is understood that an offer has been made for the property and that the company is now waiting an answer.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 25, "Making Our Lives Count"—Text, II Tim. iii, 10-15; II Cor. xi, 23-28.

Sir William Hamilton said, "Of goods or absolute ends there are but two—perfection and happiness." It seems impossible for us to separate these. Whoever gets one is sure to find he holds the other. No happiness is possible without some degree of excellence, and no gain in excellence is made but it brings a corresponding degree of enjoyment and satisfaction.

The important thing is to settle our aim and decide what we shall undertake to gain, and then, when we have chosen our course, make steady effort to reach the goal. Too many lives are failures because they never started for any point in particular. Drifting may perhaps win in a yacht race, but doubtless it never will in the race for eternal life. No one ever yawned a good deed into being. Wishes are not horses, and no beggars do not ride, now or hitherto. Thomas Chamberlain of Maine, the great English jurist, is cut no Greek or Latin motto, but the incisive English sentence, "Success is the child of hard work."

It is immensely important what kind of children we shall produce by our work. The same material might make the statue of a Judas or a Christ, a palace or a prison. From this earth life we may mold enduring hell or heaven.

What shall this life of mine count when finished? This question should have sober consideration now. The full result no one can prophesy. The general worth any one can estimate quite accurately. Which way you are headed decides where you will fetch up.

It is enough to be always busy. Some of the busiest people accomplish the least work. What you are at is the chief matter. Better do nothing than do some things. Of one man at least it was true "it were better he had never been born." The same may be true of others. Whether it would have been better for us never to have begun to live depends on how we live. We may live nobly if we will. But to do so we will have to select our course carefully and keep to it persistently.

Conspicuousness is not the test of human worth. Success cannot be accu*rately gauged by the applause of the* crowd. Lives that count are not always popular. Nero was judge and Paul an accused prisoner. Both had made men talk because of their deeds. Both had ideals which they followed with intense zeal. One reached the highest pinnacle of earthly power and posing as a god, the other died as an evildoer as a god. The other died as a criminal. No one now hesitates in deciding which was benefactor of men. No one is in doubt as to which life was high and which was low. Both lives counted, but counted differently.

"We are what we make ourselves, and, I had almost said, we may make ourselves what we will."

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime."

"Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

The Cave of the Winds.

"I went through the Cave of the Winds when I was at Niagara," said a lady, speaking of a recent trip. "The path was narrow, the noise of the falling water drowned every other sound, the spray blinded me, and I could not see a thing except he who was coming after me. I seemed to be deaf, blind and alone—but for the touch of a hand—in the midst of that whirling cataract. But it was a strong, steady hand, and I did not feel really afraid. The guide held on fast and drew me forward, and I had nothing to do but to follow step by step until we were safely through." The soul knows many such lonely passages—places where the sheer pressure of human voices dies into silence and uselessness; when the way is hidden in gloom, with no chance to see whither the path is tending and there is nothing to do but to follow the hand of Providence that leads and, we trust, will lead us. But there is really no reason for fear. The hand of the Guide is strong and tender. It will neither mistake nor fail, and if we yield trustfully to its leading we shall "come safely through."—Forward.

Faith, Fact and Hope.

The gospel of Christ is a religion of faith, fact and hope. No event illustrates this more forcibly than the resurrection of Christ from the dead. By faith David sang, "Thou wilt not suffer Thy holy one to see corruption." As to fact, the triumph of Christ over death is as well established an event of history as the surrender of Napoleon at Sedan or the triumph of Grant at Appomattox. On that glorious fact, rendered immutable by the caution and testimony of the enemies of Christ as well as by his subsequent reappearances, the Christian rests his hope of ultimate victory o'er the grave. —Philadelphia Methodist.

The Sufficiency of Christ.

No soul can ever be really satisfied until it can give up all hope of adding anything to Christ and has come to the place where He alone is enough. He Himself, just as He is, without the addition of feelings or emotions or doctrines or experiences or revelations or any other thing either inward or outward. All other things change or fail, and the soul finds in them no permanent rest, but Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever, and the soul that rests on Him alone can never be moved.—Christian Work.

Prayer.

Prayer is so mighty an instrument that no one ever thoroughly mastered all its keys. They sweep along the infinite scale of man's wants and of God's goodness.

AMUSEMENTS.

At Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, "Dolly and Daisy," a comedy in three acts by F. C. Burnand, is the attraction. The cast is headed by Frederick Bond and Miss Beatrice Morgan. Others assuming important roles are Hudson Liston, Paul McAllister, George Edwin Bryant, Miss Alice Gale, Miss Loretta Healy, Miss Lorna Elliott, Miss Alice Baxter, Albert Roberts and many other Proctor favorites. The vaudeville includes The Valmores, dancing artists; Dorothy Kenton, banjoist; Gorman and West, in "A Special Meeting;" Ernest Nisarries, novelty ring specialty and many others. The usual Sunday concert will begin at 2 p. m., and run continuously until 11 p. m.

History is repeating itself at the cool and comfortable Casino, where the big company playing "The Runaway" fills the house at every performance. The Casino is the one theatre in America in which it is always twenty degrees cooler than it is out doors in the summer months. Managers Sam. S. Shubert and Nixon & Zimmerman have in "The Runaways" an attraction of unusual magnitude and splendor, and with the highest salaried list of players ever on Broadway are more than pleasing the summer crowds of visitors and the city's "stay-at-homes." Miss Fay Templeton, Arthur Donaldson, Lester Clark, William Gould, Charles Dox, Sol Solomon, Joseph Carey, Miss Lottie Medley, and the pretty Hengler Sisters, are the ones who contribute most materially to the rollicking fun of the big show.

The last few weeks of "The Earl of Pawnbroke" at the Manhattan Theatre prior to its taking up its habitation at another Broadway house is announced, beginning today. Evidence that the interest in this comedy has not decreased is shown by the fact that there is still a brisk demand for the seats four weeks in advance. This is prompted by the fact that the play does not discontinue its run for a single performance.

Lawrence D'Orsey, whose inimitable personation of Lord Cardington has created a sensation, still continues to make the house echo and re-echo with laughter over his merry eccentricities.

The last three weeks of the comedy at the Manhattan Theatre will be marked by the appearance of Miss Marguerite Hayden, the daughter of the late William R. Hayden, the American manager, in the part of Ella Seaford. There are several other changes in the cast that will tend to strengthen it and make the comedy if possible more enjoyable for the thousands of people who have visited it during the last seven months and who will see it again as well as the thousands yet to come.

Still Another Night's Carnival.

The members of St. Mary's baseball team, encouraged by the success of the past two mid-summer night's carnivals on their baseball diamond, are planning to hold another on a still larger scale, on Labor Day evening. It is expected that the lighting of the platform will be by electricity.

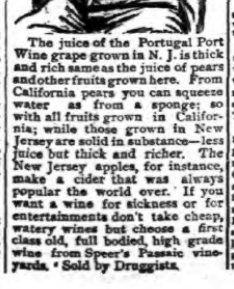
Mrs. P. H. LaTourette, of East Fifth street, is entertaining Mrs. William DeMott, of Stanton, N. J., and Mrs. George Laine, of Raritan.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn, before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug 25—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—Lessons from Paul: How to make our lives count like his.—II Tim. i, 6-8; II Cor. xi, 23-28.

Few lives have counted for more than that of the apostle Paul. Converted under most miraculous circumstances, he at once inquired, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me do?" and from that time on the doing of the will of God was his chief business in life, and as the apostle to the gentiles he achieved undying fame in the annals of the church and had the most conspicuous part in spreading the gospel throughout the Roman empire. And in the letters that he wrote to churches and to individuals he left the church a legacy of inestimable value, and being dead his life still counts for God and for Christianity in a most powerful way in spite of the intervening centuries.

But what was the secret of Paul's success? How was he able to make his life count for so much in his own day and to exert an influence that is still felt today after nearly nineteen centuries have passed away? Without going into any detailed analysis of the apostle's character we may be satisfied with asserting that his success was due to his sublime faith in God and in the gospel of Christ and his absolute consecration of himself to the one great idea of saving the souls of men. Paul had a great faith and a great desire that all men should possess the same faith, and he consecrated his powers to so great that this might be accomplished. As a minister of Christ he was "in labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent." He was beaten, stoned, shipwrecked, "in journeying often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren, in weariness and painfulness, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness." Such a record abundantly explains the secret of Paul's success. A life of such self sacrifice could not but count. "He that loses his life shall save it."

But how can we make our lives count like Paul's? By following in his footsteps. If we, with a faith and power born of God, as in the case of the apostle, "make ourselves partakers of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God" our lives shall also count for God and for the uplifting and saving of humanity. Any one who believes strongly in God and in the power of the gospel to save men, and will at any cost of self denial act up to these beliefs, can make his life mean much for God and much for his fellow men. Paul's success should inspire us to imitate his example, for

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

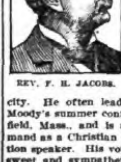
A Musical Endeavorer.

Rev. F. H. Jacobs, who, with Mr. Percy S. Foster, directed the splendid choruses at the Denver convention, is an "Endeavorer through and through."



REV. F. H. JACOBS.

He is a member of the New York state executive committee and holds the responsible position of state superintendent of evangelistic work. He is the director of the famous Fulton Street noon prayer meeting in New York city. He often leads the singing at Moody's summer conferences at Northfield, Mass., and is also much in demand as a Christian Endeavor convention speaker. His voice is wonderfully sweet and sympathetic in gospel solo work. He has also given to the world several very effective song compositions.

Interdenominational.

Christian Endeavor has been interdenominational from the beginning, and its fellowship has grown steadily through the years. It now includes more than forty evangelical denominations. No organization in Christendom compares with it in unifying power. This has made for the society a host of friends among far seeing Christians.—A. R. W.

MISSION WORK IN INDIA

MISS A. A. BROWN TOLD OF ITS SUCCESS AND NEEDS.

Addressed King's Messengers of the First Presbyterian Church Last Evening.

Miss A. A. Brown, church missionary of the First Presbyterian Church, of this city, August 12, addressed the meeting of the King's Messengers, the junior branch of the Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the church.

Miss Brown returned to this country last summer from Kodoli, West India, where there is a large Presbyterian Mission school. It was of the work of this school that she spoke, giving a most interesting talk on the manners and customs of the people together with anecdotes of the school and pupils. She referred to the excellent work of the mission during the recent famine and told several interesting experiences in seeking to provide food for the starving. This famine did much toward bringing many to the school who had hitherto led heathen lives but who were moved by the religion of a people who would subscribe such munificent funds for the assistance of those whom they had never known.

In conclusion Miss Brown made an earnest appeal for assistance. She said that the need for workers is far greater than the need for funds.

In the absence of Miss Freda Grey, the president of the band, Miss Gertrude Hayward, the first vice president, conducted the meeting, which consisted of singing, a scripture passage and prayer. There was an exceedingly large attendance and a goodly collection was taken up for work in the mission field.

LIGHTING UP LINCOLN.

New District System in Operation—Tax Rate and Assessed Valuation of the Town.

The inhabitants of Lincoln are much gratified over the fact that their town was illuminated on Saturday for the first time under the new district system. Lamps have been placed on Lincoln Boulevard and Harris lane, also Mountain, Sherman and Drake avenues, and at night the town presents an attractive appearance. The tax assessor of the new lighting district, which comprises the 200 acres that S. D. Drake purchased six years ago Informed Mayor Drake yesterday, that this property is assessed this year at $54,000, one-third its value, and the tax rate will be $1.41 per $100. On this basis the property known as Lincoln is valued at $350,000. The low tax rate is a source of pride, as is also the enhanced value of the property. Lincoln has a splendid trolley service, artesian water, fire protection, two railroad stations, sewer system, paved streets and other advantages.

County Democrat Facetious.

The question of the Government continuing in the seed business is attracting considerable attention now*adays. The Hunterdon County Democrat* has this to say on the subject: "The seed men of the county are uniting to protest against and prevent, if possible, the seed business carried on by the Government. We wish them *success. The Government seed busi*ness is a public fraud. If you don't believe it come to our garden and see a dozen hills of the measly muskmelon sent out by the department as a new kind of cucumber. Then if cutting off the seed distributed should retire a lot of Congressmen from public life, it will be another mighty good thing. Just as long as this practice prevails we will have a whole lot of seedy representatives in Congress."

A Pretty Compliment.

The eastern delegates to the recent convention of the International League of Press Clubs at Atlantic City selected the New Jersey Central as the official route from New York. And in the last issue of the New York Insurance Journal the appreciation of the party was expressed as follows: "The New York delegation journeyed over the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The trip over this excellent road, which has been greatly improved in recent years, is most delightful, and the trains are equipped with every appliance for the comfort and convenience of passengers."

Save the Children.

Ninety-nine of every one hundred diseases that children have are due to disorders of the stomach, and these disorders are all caused by indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is just as good for children as it is for adults. Children thrive on it. It keeps their little stomachs sweet and encourages their growth and development. Mrs. Henry Carter, 705 Central St., Nashville, Tenn., says: "My little boy is now three years old and has been suffering from indigestion ever since he was born. I have had the best doctors in Nashville, but failed to do him any good. After using one bottle of Kodol he is a well baby. I recommend it to all sufferers." Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

GOVERNOR MURPHY ON CHILD LABOR

The Chief Executive Takes the Proper Stand With Reference to Manufacturers.

MUST OBEY NEW LAW

SOUTH JERSEY GLASS MANUFACTURERS MAKE STRONG OBJECTIONS.

New Law Favored by Labor Unions —Employment of Children Under Fourteen Punishable by Fine of $200 or One Year in Jail.

Governor Murphy has taken the only proper stand a Chief Executive could possibly take with reference to the belligerent attitude of the South Jersey glass manufacturers toward the child labor laws. The factory owners have served notice on Chief Factory Inspector John C. Ward that they intend to disregard the law enacted last winter and that they will employ boys under the age of fourteen to work in their factories, in violation of the express provisions of the law. This, they say, is in order to make a test case. They are advised by several able lawyers that the law is unconstitutional, and they are determined to overthrow it upon this technical ground or any other they can discover, says the Newark Evening News.

Governor Murphy has been fully informed of the proposed violations of the law, and he says: "I shall insist upon its rigid enforcement, and if the case is taken into the courts I will direct the attorney-general to defend it. The complaint of the glass men that they cannot make business pay without child labor seems incredible, but if it is true, it will not change the enforcement of this necessary law. The wrong of such employment is too grievous to be palliated upon any consideration."

There is no other stand for the Governor to take. He is the Chief Executive, and it is for him to exe*cute the laws, not to question their* validity or propriety; yet the mere announcement that he intends that the State shall make the most vigorous fight possible in defence of the child labor laws will send a thrill of satisfaction into every section of this commonwealth wherein citizens of humane sentiments have been watching the progress of this matter. He does not temporize or afford room for misconception. The complaint of the manufacturers that they cannot make glass bottles at a profit unless they are privileged to destroy a lot of boys he does not believe, and whether it is true or not the law must be enforced and the grievous wrongs of such employment will not be palliated upon any consideration, much less upon the plea of pecuniary profits to a few wealthy factory owners.

Chief Factory Inspector Ward will be very properly held to a strict accountability in the enforcement of the new law and his official orders thus far indicate that his duty is plainly before him. He has notified his six assistants that their official obligations are imperative. Explanations will not be accepted; violations of the law must be investigated and the responsibility placed where it belongs.

The new law is a just law. It *makes the wilful employment of chil*dren under fourteen years of age in workshops and factories punishable by a fine of $200 or imprisonment for one year in State prison. The age of fourteen is now held, in all the States furthest advanced in education and industrial development, to be the lowest at which children should be compelled to work, and for a child under that age, a child loving sunshine and school and outdoor life, to be incarcerated in a pent-up hot, glass bottle factory, day in and day out, is no less severe punishment than for a man to be shut up six months or a year in State prison.

The new law was favored by Governor Murphy and by the labor unions, and by humane citizens everywhere. It was opposed by the glass manufacturers and by the politicians they were able to influence. It is even now intimated that political schemes are behind these intended violations of the law, and that South Jersey will witness a struggle of no small magnitude and severity. If it come, and if the question be definitely settled, whether the children of New Jersey are to be preferred to a few, or even a good many, dollars in the pockets of bottle-makers. The overwhelming sentiment of the State is with Governor Murphy and the law. The fight that is now on is a fight for those who are now the State's children, but who will soon become the State's wage earners, citizens and voters. They have a right to all the privileges that will qualify them for the duties which the State will expect of them, but never will such rights be theirs if they are compelled to work in the factories while under fourteen years of age.

MAMMOTH OUTING FOR SWEDISH CHURCHES

Young Peoples' Societies of Congregational Churches of N. Y. and N. J. Met.

AT EDGEWOOD GROVE

MUSIC AND SPEAKING AT MORNING AND EVENING SERVICES.

Dinner Occurred at Noon in the Grove — Participants Included Prominent Men From New York and Philadelphia—Details.

A mammoth outing of the members of the Young People's Societies of the Swedish Congregational churches of New York and New Jersey was held at Edgewood Grove on Somerset street all day Sunday. Congregations from all the Swedish churches within a radius of several miles, augmented by numerous delegates from churches in New York and distant part of New Jersey joined in special services at the first of the annual outings planned by the Young People's Society.

On account of delay in railroad connections, the services for the day did not commence until 11:30 in the morning. These services were held in the open air in the grove where a platform had been built for the speakers. A small parlor organ furnished the music for the singing.

The morning celebration was attended by nearly three hundred members of the Swedish churches and was carried on according to the following programme: Singing by congregation, Bible reading and prayer by Rev. C. M. Ahlberg, of Montclair; solo by Professor J. Scott, of Philadelphia; address of welcome by Rev. L. T. Lindholm, pastor of the Swedish Church in this city; vocal duet by Miss Emma Petterson and Miss Elizabeth Strandberg, of East Orange, with guitar accompaniment; address by Rev. Otto Nelson, of New York City, singing by the congregation; solo by Professor J. Scott; address by Rev. C. W. Holm, of Philadelphia; vocal duet by the Misses Petterson and Strandberg with guitar accompaniment.

At the close of this order of exercises, an excellent dinner was served to nearly 150 at the Edgewood House in the grove. This was in charge of Josef Tinglof, assisted by the ladies of the church.

During the noon intermission, almost two hundred more members arrived from New York and the afternoon session opened at 3 o'clock with an attendance of five hundred. The order of service was as follows: Singing by the congregation, Bible reading and prayer by Rev. Julius Quist, of New York City; singing by a picked choir of fifteen with guitar accompaniment, address by Rev. C. W. Holm, of Philadelphia; singing by the congregation; solo by Professor J. Scott; selection by the picked choir; address by Rev. C. J. Peterson, of East Orange; reports from various pastors and informal speeches and selections, both vocal and instrumental, benediction and farewell by Rev. Theodore Englund, of Perth Amboy.

After this session, coffee was served to all and the various delegations departed for home. The meeting was exceedingly successful and the society has decided to make it an annual affair. Good collections were taken at both morning and afternoon sessions and the money will be devoted to church work.

Eat All You Want.

Persons troubled with indigestion or dyspepsia can eat all they want if they will take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. This remedy prepares the stomach for the reception, retention, digestion and assimilation of all of the wholesome food that may be eaten, and enables the digestive organs to transform the same into the kind of blood that gives health and strength. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

Sermon by Mr. Tulp.

"Every Life a Plan of God," was the subject of A. F. Tulp's discourse in Trinity Reformed Church, Sunday morning, from the text: "As the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in My hand; O House of Israel," Jeremiah 18:6. Mr. Tulp's sermon evidenced much care and thoughtfulness in preparation and delivery. He held the close attention of everyone from his earnestness in presenting the truth.

THREE HUNDRED DOLLAR FIRE

A DOUBLE HOUSE ON WEST THIRD STREET WAS THREATENED.

Colored People Became Frightened and Alarm Was Delayed—Building Owned by Jerry Manning.

Fire broke out in the double house situated at 649 West Third street at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon and for a time threatened destruction to the building. The cause is unknown although the flames are believed to have started in a closet on the second story rear bedroom of the apartments occupied by Robert Yetman. They spread rapidly through the room, reached the garret and swept over to the other side of the house. There was delay in giving the alarm caused by a panic among the colored folk who reside in that locality and some time elapsed before an alarm was sounded from box 45. At the arrival of the department, the fire was so far advanced as to make it necessary to lay three lines of hose. It was quickly controlled. The loss, which is covered by insurance, will amount to three hundred dollars, principally to Yetman. Mrs. Eliza Williams, the other occupant, suffered considerable damage from water. The building is owned by Jerry Manning.

EXPERT RIFLEMEN.

Chosen to Compete for Second Regiment Team—Those Selected.

Col. D. F. Collins has detailed nine officers and enlisted men to compete for places on the Second Regiment Rifle team. Among them is Captain Martin, of Co. K. They are: Lieut.-Colonel Joseph F. Clime, Burlington; Capt. Horace M. Bell, inspector of rifle practice, Haskell; Capt. Wm. B. Martin, of Elizabeth, commander of Company K, of Plainfield; Captain Robert W. Watson, Company H, of New Brunswick; Capt. Wm. Libbey, Company L, of Princeton; First Lieut. E. Yard Breese, battalion adjutant, of Trenton; Battalion Sergeant-Major Richard W. Evans, of Newark; and Sergeant A. Gibby Spencer and Private Wm. M. Hooley, Company M, of Somerville.

Five will be selected. Captains Bell and Martin and Sergeant Major Evans are pretty sure of places. Capt. Bell will be captain of the team.

Machinist Jailed.

John Wilson, who said he was a machinist from Scranton, Pa., was found on Albany street, New Brunswick, by Officer Van Deursen at an early hour Saturday morning and unable to take care of himself. He was taken before the Recorder and was committed to jail for ten days.

Not Engaged.

The reported engagement of Thomas H. Stafford, of Grove street, to Miss Edith Makenzie, of Brooklyn, is entirely without foundation. Mr. Stafford knows no young woman by that name and desires the report contradicted.

Will Wed in October.

Mr. and Mrs. Usal Barton Crane announce the engagement of their daughter, Grace Agnes, to Hugo Morgan Smith, son of the late Dr. U. T. Smith, of Westfield. The wedding will take place in October.

FORMER RESIDENT.

Death of John H. French, at Ode Time Prominent in City Affairs.

John H. French, a resident of North Plainfield for many years, died early Friday morning at his home, 150 Macon street, in Brooklyn, after a short illness. Word of the death was received by D. W. Littell, treasurer of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, of which order Mr. French was a member. For many years Mr. French was a well-known clothier here, his store being on West Front street. He was at one time a member of the Common Council, also of the Reform Club, of which he was president. He owned considerable property both in the borough and city. Several years ago he and his family moved to Brooklyn, where they have lived ever since. Surviving Mr. French is a wife and three daughters. The interment was in the family plot in New Brunswick, on Monday.

PARTICULAR CARE.

Will be Exercised in Appointments to District Election Boards—County Board to Meet.

The Union County Board of Elections will meet today, to organize formally, and the names of those to serve on the district boards of elections will be presented.

It is understood that more than usual care will be exercised this year in making such appointments.

Immediately following the presentation of names of those whose appointment is asked the clerk of the board, S. Reading Byne, will forward to each person named an election blank, which must be filled out and promptly returned.

The blanks ask the usual questions as to the full name of the nominee, age, occupation, residence, ward and district, political affiliations, prior experience in the position, knowledge of the present law on registry of voters and methods of conducting an election and the opportunity which the nominee has had for qualifying himself for service as a member of the district board. Another question which must be answered is, "Have you ever been convicted of any violation of the laws of the State of New Jersey or of the United States? If so, what offense?"

DEATH OF MRS. BOGUE.

Montreal Woman Passed Away at Home of Her Plainfield Nephew.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Bogue, wife of Thomas Finnigan, of Montreal, Can., died Tuesday at 12:10 noon at the home of her nephew, W. H. Furristel, manager of the Bellview Avenue Nursery, off Park avenue, near Hillside avenue. She came to Plainfield on June 6 last and since then had been ill with a complication of diseases. She was 60 years of age.

Mrs. Bogue leaves a husband, three sons, one living in Atlanta, Ga., another in Chicago and the third in Oneco, Conn., and one daughter, Miss Finnigan, of Montreal. The remains were taken to Montreal Tuesday and the funeral services will probably be held there this morning.

Miss Guinee, of Hill & Shepp's store, has returned from her annual vacation.

TURKS DRIVEN BACK

Sultan's Battalions Suffer a Heavy Loss.

BULGARIA HAS MOBILIZED AN ARMY

Reign of Terror at Uskub, Where Christians Fear a Massacre, as They Get No Protection From Soldiers of the Porte.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 19.—A fierce battle is reported to have occurred in the neighborhood of Monastir. Three Turkish battalions attacked a thousand insurgents, and after the fight had raged for six hours the Turks were repulsed, with the loss of 230 men killed or wounded. The insurgent loss is not given.

Reports received here from Constantinople, and believed to be authentic, confirm the previous statements that when the Turks recaptured Krushevo they slaughtered the entire Christian population without exception. It is pointed out that among those killed were the employees of the government tobacco establishments, which were under European control, as the proceeds from these establishments were assigned to the service of the Turkish debt.

A reign of terror prevails at Uskub, where the Christian inhabitants are afraid to leave their houses. The visit has issued the strictest orders to the Mussulman population to remain quiet and not molest their Christian neighbors, but the Mussulmans, meeting in the mosques, have resolved at a given signal to massacre the whole Christian population immediately the first insurgent band appears near Uskub or on any other pretext. The Christians are terrorized. The Turkish troops, who are their only protection, do not show the slightest disposition to aid them. The attitude of the Turkish troops was recently plainly manifested when a train load of soldiers shortly after leaving Uskub fired on the Bulgarian workmen who were repairing the track. Three of the workmen were killed, and their bodies were left lying on the line.

Telegraphic communication between Sofia and Constantinople is interrupted, the wires having been cut between Adrianople and Constantinople. No telegrams from Constantinople have been received here since 6 o'clock Monday evening. The Turkish officials at Adrianople refuse to state where the break occurred. Fears are expressed here regarding the safety of the railroad between Adrianople and Constantinople.

Advices from the Balkan peninsula state that Bulgaria has practically mobilized an army, as the troops under arms in the principality now number more than 200,000, which is double what is considered as the peace effective. The Bulgarian government, however, is unwilling to venture for the time being on any hostile movement against Turkey as it does not wish to forfeit the support of Russia. It hopes, however, that public opinion in Russia will force the government to help Bulgaria against Turkey, and the dispatch of a Russian squadron to Turkish waters encourages the Bulgarians in this view.

A band of Bashibazouks has crossed the Bulgarian frontier in the district of Teledere, killed three frontier guards with yatagans and wounded two others. They also set fire to several houses.

The insurgents, after two unsuccessful attempts, have succeeded in destroying with dynamite the bridge at Eschesse, thereby absolutely stopping communication between Salonika and Monastir.

Discovery at Roman Forum.

ROME, Aug. 19.—A most important discovery has been made during excavations in the Roman Forum, consisting of the base of the celebrated equestrian statue of the Roman Emperor Domitian, which is of the greatest interest in determining the topography of the Forum during the early centuries of the empire. The base stands five feet below the present level of the Forum. It is 40 feet long, 20 feet wide and over 10 feet high. On the top are three blocks of travertin stone, showing where the feet of the horse stood. The fourth block is lacking, indicating that the right forefoot of the horse was raised. The distance between the blocks is so great that it is calculated that the statue was six times life size.

Utica Boy Killed Ithacan Youth.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Herbert Moon, a Utica boy, thirteen years old, shot and killed Lucian Drew, aged twenty, of Ithaca, Mich., on a farm near this city. All the morning the boy and man had been quarreling, and the latter had severely choked young Moon. During the quarrel the boy broke away and got hold of a 22 caliber rifle that he had been using. He shot Drew while the latter was walking away from him at a distance of sixty feet. There was only one witness, the maid-servant on the farm. She says that the boy shot at random.

Convict Shot Dead In Cell.

RAWLINS, Wyo., Aug. 19.—James Williams, a convict, was shot to death in his cell in the state penitentiary by Ernest Goodsell, night turnkey. Reaching through the bars, Williams seized Goodsell and reached his keys from his hand. After a struggle Goodsell succeeded in drawing his revolver and shot the convict in the head. Williams, who was serving a sentence for grand larceny, escaped from the prison June 5 last, but was recaptured.

Murat Halstead Denies.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19.—Murat Halstead has requested denial of the published statement that he has been chosen as dean of the school of journalism endowed by Joseph Pulitzer.

YACHTS MEASURED.

Reliance to Allow Shamrock III. 1m. 45s.

DEFENDER SPREADS MORE SAIL

Both Skimmers of the Sea Ready For First Real Race—Designers Herreshoff and Fife Spectators of Official Measurement.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The Reliance and Shamrock III. were measured in the Erie basin by C. D. Mower, the official measurer of the New York Yacht club. As a result of his measurements and calculations it was announced at the Yacht club that the Reliance would allow the challenger 1m. 45s. over a thirty mile course.

It was found that the Shamrock III. was slightly longer on the water line than the American boat, but the latter proved to have nearly 2,000 more square feet of sail area than the challenger, and it was this enormous sail spread that taxed the American boat so heavily.

The announcement of the time allowance in favor of the challenger caused but little surprise at the Yacht club, as the very general belief that the Reliance would prove considerably larger all around than her opponent.

Reliance and Shamrock III. swung lazily at their moorings inside Sandy Hook, ready for the international contest for the America's cup, the first race of which will be sailed tomorrow. The Shamrock III. merely returned to her old mooring place, the Reliance coming there for the first time. The day was one of exceeding interest to all directly interested in the international race, being devoted to the official measuring and final groomings of both yachts. The cleaning of the underbodies of both has been completed, and Charles D. Mower, the official measurer of the New York Yacht club, stretched his steel tape from truck to deck and from the end of the bowsprit to the extreme point of the after overhang of both racers.

As one result about eight inches of the end of the spinnaker boom of the Shamrock III. was sawed off owing to the fact that it was estimated to be that much longer than the base of the forward triangle, which covers the head sails of the yacht, which would mean penalization if allowed to stand. Sir Thomas Lipton as well as Mr. Iselin and Designers Herreshoff and Fife were interested spectators of the work of Mr. Mower. Designer Fife evidently desired that the Shamrock III. should be measured while down by the bow, as much as possible, for everything movable, even to the jib sheet leader blocks, was moved and stowed amidships.

Caleb Powers' Trial.

GEORGETOWN, Ky., Aug. 19.—The direct and cross examinations of Caleb Powers, on the stand in his own defense, has been concluded and developed little that was new. He adhered closely to his story told on direct examination. He admitted bringing several companies of soldiers in citizens' clothes to Frankfort, but said he had before that time interviewed and with Governor Taylor that if the legislature did not heed the petitioners he would then call the militia into service, and he (Powers) wanted to have the militia on hand. MacKenzie Todd of Frankfort, private secretary to Governor Taylor, testified to seeing Youtsey about the executive department and the private office of Caleb Powers a few days before the shooting armed with a gun and looking at the windows. Former United States Senator W. J. Deboe is here to testify for the defense.

Officer Sentenced to Death.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—A correspondent at St. Petersburg describes a sensational incident which occurred during the Kiev strikes. On one occasion when the troops were ordered by the governor to fire on the strikers a young captain stepped in front of his company and forbade the troops to fire upon "their poor starving brothers." The soldiers obeyed the counter order, and the captain made a flaming revolutionary speech to his men. He was immediately arrested and brought to St. Petersburg, where he was tried by court martial and sentenced to death.

Miners' Strike at Howesville Ends.

GRAFTON, W. Va., Aug. 19.—The strike of the miners at the Kingwood Coal company's mines at Howesville has been settled, and the men have resumed work. Three miners had some misunderstanding with the storekeeper and were discharged, which called forth the strike in sympathy. Organizer Hickey of Parkersburg went to Howesville and effected a settlement, the discharged men being taken back, with the exception of the one who created the trouble.

Professor Killed by Dynamite.

WALTER, Okla., Aug. 19.—Professor E. Horn, until recently prominent in Alabama educational circles, was fatally injured here by the explosion of a stick of dynamite. He was horribly mutilated. Both hands were blown off, abdomen and breast were blistered and portions of his nose, cheeks and chin were torn away. Professor Horn had intended throwing the dynamite into the creek to kill fish.

Private Bank Failed.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Aug. 19.—The private bank of Kinney & Co., at Angola, has closed its doors. The owners of the bank are John Kinney and the estate of the late Peter W. Russell, represented by the heirs. Mr. and Mrs. Morton Beal of Toledo. The immediate cause of the failure was the attempt of County Treasurer George W. Williams to withdraw $17,000.

BOROUGH TAXES JUMP SKYWARD

Rate for Coming Year Will be Increased From Twelve to Fourteen Points.

WITHDRAWAL OF STOCK

FROM THE COUNTY, AND COST OF NEW ENGINE HOUSE ARE REASONS.

Increase in Assessed Valuation of Property Offset by Withdrawal of Bank Stock by A. C. Brunson From the County.

An increase of from twelve to fourteen points in the North Plainfield tax rate is probable this year. This is due partly to the withdrawal from the borough of 861 shares of the First National Bank from the taxable property of the borough by A. J. Brunson, vice president of the bank, and partly to the fact that the bonds for the construction of the engine house are now outstanding and that there are other public obligations. The Daily Press of June 16 told exclusively of the withdrawal of the shares to Atlantic county in order to benefit by the lower tax rate in that county. The shares, as they were assessed last year, are worth $65 each, amounting practically to $56,000 for the entire block of 861 shares. They would be taxed something over $1,000. This means that the people of North Plainfield would be taxed to raise an additional $1,000 in order to meet the deficit caused by the withdrawal of the stock.

Last year the tax rate was $2.50 but this year it will, according to the figures of the assessor, amount approximately to $2.69 or $2.64. The withdrawal of bank stock will increase the rate six or eight points and the cost of the new engine house will also bring up an additional six or eight points, making a total of about fourteen.

Another interesting fact regarding the assessed valuation of North Plainfield this year is that in four years the actual increase has hardly been apparent. Last year the property valuation in the borough amounted to $3,409,000, while this year it will be $3,415,000. There has been an increase in the valuation of property in North Plainfield during the past year of something like $60,000, but this has been offset by the withdrawal of the stock to Atlantic county and the cost of the engine house together with other unforeseen public obligations.

It has been the aim of Mayor Smalley and the Common Council to keep the tax rate in North Plainfield down to the same amount as last year but the action of Mr. Brunson and the unexpected increase in the cost of erecting the engine house has caused the tax rate to soar in spite of their efforts. The increase will probably mean that the sewer project and the widening of Somerset street will have to be deferred until some future time.

LOOK FOR THE BAND.

New York Cigar Man Arrested for Selling Inferior Goods.

The arrest of Henry Silberstone, a cigar dealer at No. 283 Bowery, charged with having refilled cigar boxes, marked the beginning of a war that will be waged by the United States Internal Revenue agents against dealers all over the city who have been engaged in similar practices. For some months past a large cigar concern has been greatly annoyed by complaints that inferior cigars were being sold under its label, and notified the revenue agents.

Silberstone is alleged to have bought several boxes of "Cremo" cigars, and after selling the genuine article at the regular price (five cents), refilled the boxes with a cheaper article, which he sold at eight for 25 cents, explaining to his customers that the only difference in the cigars was in the matter of the bands.

The cheap cigar was sold without a label, while the real "Cremos" have bands about them. In this manner Silberstone is alleged to have made a profit of considerably more than 100 per cent. He was arraigned before Commissioner Shields and held for examination before the Federal Grand Jury.

A cigar manufacturer interested in the case, said:

"Substitution of cigars or refilling of boxes has been going on for some time. We have spent thousands of dollars advertising one particular brand of cigars, and it is the name of this cigar that has been illegally used.

"The bands were placed upon our goods to protect our customers against just such a fraud. The Federal authorities expect a number more of arrests shortly. There are Federal and State penalties."—From N. Y. American.

ENDEAVORERS WILL CONVENE AT ORANGE

Rev. Titus E. Davis, of This City, Will Read His Treasurer's Report.

PROGRAMME IN DETAIL

WILL BE THE SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF N. J. SOCIETY.

To be Held October 15 and 16 in the First Presbyterian Church of Orange—Sessions Morning and Afternoon—List of Speakers.

Rev. Titus E. Davis, of this city, will be present to read his report as treasurer of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, at its seventeenth annual convention to be held at the First Presbyterian Church in Orange, October 15 and 16.

This is the provisional programme so far as prepared:

Delegates will be called to order at 10:30 o'clock on the morning of the fifteenth by A. W. Abbott, president of the Orange Union, and devotional exercises, addresses of welcome by representatives of the city, Rev. Dr. Charles Townsend, pastor of the Church, and others will be made. The response will be by Rev. W. T. S. Lumbar, State president. The morning session will be devoted to reports from the State secretary, Miss Ida B. Stephens, of Hackettstown; the treasurer, Rev. Titus E. Davis, of Plainfield, and the superintendent of the press department, Alfred B. Johnson, of South Orange, as well as to miscellaneous business and the appointment of committees.

At the afternoon session Rev. Dr. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, will preside and after a devotional service reports will be made by Mrs. Joseph S. Peacock, of Camden, superintendent of the correspondence department; Mrs. Florence Rudolph, of Jersey City, superintendent of work among the colored people, and Rev. J. C. Austerberry, of Milville, for the committee on Christian citizenship and Sunday observance. An address by Rev. Dr. Bernard L. Whitman, of Philadelphia, and a talk on Christian citizenship by a speaker to be announced, will follow.

John T. Sproull, at Arlington, who is first vice president of the union, will preside at the evening session, which will be opened with a service of song. President Lumbar will deliver his annual address, Rev. Frederick C. Klein, of Newark, will report as superintendent of the evangelistic department, and the convention sermon will be preached by Rev. Dr. John C. Carson, of Brooklyn, on the topic "Personal Work in Soul-winning."

Arthur N. Pierson, of Wesfield, superintendent of the fresh air department, will report at the morning session on Friday, and will conduct an open parliament. Rev. William D. Stulis, of Mansquan, second vice president, will preside. Charles A. Cook, of Bloomfield, will report for the Bible study department and conduct an open parliament on the question "What Are We Doing with the Bible?" Rev. Dr. Edward D. Ingersoll, of New York City, will make an address on "What is the Bible Doing for the World?" "A quiet hour" will be conducted by Rev. Ambrose White Vernon, pastor of Grove Street Congregational Church, East Orange. Robert A. Alberts, of Jersey City, superintendent of the missionary department, will report, and the missionary address will be delivered by Rev. Dr. John H. Wyckoff, of the Arcot Mission, India.

Friday afternoon sessions will be held in Central Presbyterian Church, as well as in the First Church. At the former the third vice president, Rev. Dr. A. W. Bailey, of Atlantic City, will preside, and a report will be made by Rev. George C. Horter, of Camden, superintendent of the junior department, who will conduct an open parliament on junior work. At 2 o'clock the juniors will form in line at the soldiers' monument and march to the First Church, where a junior rally will be held, Rev. Mr. Horter presiding. The exercises will be in charge of Mrs. Mary E. Klein, superintendent of the Essex County Junior Christian Endeavor Union.

At the business session Friday night reports will be made by committees, and the election of officers, the presentation of banners and an address by Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, will follow.

The music at the convention will be in charge of Professor M. C. Lincoln, director of the Philadelphia Convention Choral Society. Prominent soloists will sing, in addition to the large chorus.

Engagement Announcement.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Carrie Weiss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weiss, of Regent street, to Frederick J. Dixon, of West Sixth street. The date has not been set for the wedding.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVI. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1903. NO. 35.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

COUNTY DEMOCRATS APPORTION DELEGATES

Plainfield to be Represented by Thirteen Men at Coming County Convention.

IN ALL 103 DELEGATES

DETAILED APPORTIONMENT FOR CITY OF PLAINFIELD.

Elizabeth Given Fifty-five; Summit Five; Rahway Ten and Westfield Four Delegates.

In the apportionment of delegates to the Union County Democratic convention, which is fixed by the Union County Democratic committee, Plainfield's representation will be this:

First ward—First district, 2; Second district, 1. Second ward—First district, 2; Second district, 1. Third ward—First district, 1; Second district, 1. Fourth ward—First district, 2; Second district, 2; Third district, 1, making a total of thirteen for the city.

Elizabeth's representation for the twelve wards will be fifty-five, while from Rahway's five wards there will be a representation of ten delegates. Summit will be represented by five delegates from two wards. From each of the following places there will be one delegate, excepting Cranford, which is entitled to two: Clark township, Cranford, first and second districts; Fanwood township, Fanwood borough, Linden township, Linden borough, New Providence township, New Providence borough, Mountainside borough, Roselle borough, Roselle Park borough, Springfield township, Garwood borough. From the four wards in Westfield there will be four delegates, one from each ward.

BALL PLAYERS DANCE.

St. Mary's Club Hold its Third Mid-Summer Night's Festival.

The third midsummer night's festival of the St. Mary's Baseball Club was held last evening on the ball grounds. Dancing was the order of the evening and some two hundred took part in the merry two-step and waltz. Later the dancers adjourned to T. A. B. Hall where the evening of joy was concluded.

TEMPERANCE RALLY.

Lovers of Adam's Ale Will Gather at Boynton Beach Saturday.

There will be a temperance and prohibition rally at Boynton Beach, Saturday, and many prohibitionists and temperance folk from this part of the State will gather for all-day meetings. The first meeting will be held at 10:30 in the morning. Prof. Gilbert J. Raynor, of Brooklyn, will represent the "Anti-Saloon League," of New Jersey.

In the afternoon at 2:30 the W. C. T. U. will be represented by one of its speakers, after which the Prohibition party will be represented by Rev. E. A. Boom and others. Mr. Boom will speak in the evening at 7 o'clock.

New Election Officers.

Trenton, August 26—Gov. Murphy, Attorney-General McCarter and other State officials yesterday decided that newly named election officers shall have charge of the coming primaries. In the county the party adviser first decided that the old officers should serve at first registry day. At a meeting of the county committee it was decided to accept Attorney-General McCarter's officers.

The Flaks Successful.

Bids were opened yesterday at the Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department in Washington, for the purchase of $8,000,000 certificates of indebtedness of the Philippine government. Harvey Fisk & Sons, New York, bid for all or any part of the amount at $103.94. This was the only bid for the whole amount and it was accepted. The bonds are deliverable in New York on September 1.

Now Improving.

Miss Anna Vanderweg, of Elm place, who, sometime ago, attempted suicide, continues to improve at the hospital. She will probably return home within a short time.

Kirby's Cigars

are sold at all first-class places. If they have none, call at main store, 106 Park avenue. 8 20 6

COUNTY REPUBLICAN CONVENTION DATE

To Take Place at Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth, Thursday, September 10.

A COMMITTEE MEETING

PROVISIONS OF NEW PRIMARY LAW EXPLAINED TO COMMITTEEMEN.

Westfield to Have Five Delegates—Plainfielders at Meeting—Discussion as to Possible Candidates.

The new primary election law was discussed and instructions given to the members by the chairman of the committee at a special meeting of the Union County Republican Committee last Tuesday at Elizabeth. The county officials, as well as the Board of Registry and Election, have found it difficult to understand the new law. Nomination blanks were given out to the various members and it was announced that the county convention would be held in the Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth, on Thursday, September 10, two days after the special election to be held on September 8.

An opinion of the Supreme Court regarding the disputed question as to the number of delegates to which Westfield is entitled, was read. According to the opinion Westfield will have five delegates. Another question affecting Westfield, that is the dispute regarding the number of members on the county committee to which she is entitled, was not discussed and nothing whatever was done with this matter.

The Plainfield representatives of the committee present at last evening's meeting were Assemblyman Wm. Newcorn, James Morrison and Frank R. Smith. There was some informal talk regarding probable nominees for the various offices to be held at the coming election, but nothing definite resulted.

PRESIDENT ACCEPTS.

To Attend Unveiling of New Jersey's Monument on Antietam Battlefield.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 26—Governor Murphy, of New Jersey, and Senators Kean and Dryden, of the same State, visited President Roosevelt, at Sagamore Hill, Monday afternoon. On behalf of the people of New Jersey, Governor Murphy and the Senators invited the President to attend the ceremonies incident to the unveiling of the monument erected on the battlefield of Antietam, in memory of the New Jersey soldiers who fell in that historic engagement. The ceremonies are to take place on September 17, the fortieth anniversary of the battle. After some consideration the President accepted the invitation, and agreed to make an address at the unveiling.

DEATH OF MRS. SELKNAP.

Well-Known Resident of Borough Dies From Heart Trouble.

Mrs. Sophia Selknap died Tuesday at her home at 105 Somerset street of acute inflammation of the tissues of the heart. She was sixty-eight years of age and had been ill for almost three years. Mrs. Selknap was a widow of some years and is survived by a son, Charles, who is employed with the Jersey Central at Elizabeth, and two daughters, Mrs. Charles Grey and Miss Mande Selknap. The funeral will be from the house this afternoon at 4 o'clock and the interment will be at Hillside Cemetery.

Suspicious Characters.

Chief Marshal Campbell arrested two suspicious characters shortly after midnight this morning. They were prowling around on the upper part of Somerset street and attracted considerable suspicion by their actions. Their names are not known. They will be brought up before Recorder Dond tonight for a hearing.

Fined for Drunkenness.

Joe Monahan, of Manson place, was arrested yesterday by Chief Marshal Campbell and was haled before Recorder Dond at a session of the borough court charged with being drunk and disorderly. The Recorder imposed a fine of $5 which was paid.

Veterans Inactive.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met last evening for the first time in several weeks. There was no special business, and it was decided to "call off" until the last Tuesday in September.

ALL READY FOR THE CALL OF THE STARTER

Out-of-Town Flyers Have Arrived for Saturday's Races.

GOOD SPORT CERTAIN

SPEEDY STEPPERS FROM TWO STATES TO GO UNDER THE WIRE.

Some of the Favorites—Revised List of Entries—LaVere to be There With His Band—The Races Start at 2 o'Clock.

Everything begins to take on a racy aspect at the Driving Park in preparation for Saturday's events. Already several out-of-town horses have arrived, among them Tom Hunter, from New York, in fine trim, to show his heels to his opponents in the 2:20 class. The supporters of Sir Arthur Wilkes, of East View, N. Y., say he can't do it, however, and the gray gelding, Col. Julius, from P. H. Powers & Sons' stables in Brooklyn, the horse that won the large sweepstakes at Parkway this spring, "has it in" for both of them. The winner of this race will be subjected to the stiffest kind of opposition.

The same sort of a fight is on in the 2:35 class. Albert L., the little whirlwind owned by M. H. Brandon, of this city, has many followers who believe that they have first money already counted, but Fred. V., formerly owned by Mayor Smalley, and J. H. Greene, Jr.'s Glitters Lad will make him march. Dan P. and Woven Wind are also favorites and there isn't a one in the bunch of five that looks like an "also ran."

The 2:20 class has a fine list of seven matched horses entered. Belle, Manners, Flora Downing and four others will start. This race is going to be a "beaut," also worth the price of admission.

The races will start promptly at 2 Saturday afternoon. Carriages will be allowed on the grounds free and preparations have been made for the comfort of those using them. LaVere's band has prepared a special programme.

The grandstand has been painted and cleaned and a part will be reserved for ladies who will be admitted to seats free of charge. Stages will meet all the cars on Park avenue below Randolph road and there will be no delay in either direction. Below is a corrected and final list of the entries:

No. 1—2:20 Class Trot or Pace. Purse $150.

FREDERICK IS IMPROVING

SO FAR 145 MEN HAVE AIDED IN THE SKIN GRAFTING WORK.

Dr. Good, of Philadelphia Board of Health, Visits Afflicted Man—More Grafting Tomorrow.

The process of skin grafting in the case of Wilson Frederick, of Dunellen, was not continued at the hospital last evening, owing to the illness of some of those who were to furnish skin. Arrangements have been made to have the work go on tomorrow evening, when several employes of the U. S. Express Company will visit the hospital.

Notwithstanding the recent warm spell Mr. Frederick improved and his general condition is good. Last evening he was visited by Dr. Good, of the Philadelphia Board of Health staff. The physician was surprised to learn how well the patient seemed to be. Thus far fifty-two Masons and ninety-three employes of the U. S. Express Company have bared their arms in aid of the work.

KOHLER'S ANTECEDENTS KNOWN

MYSTERY SURROUNDING PAST OF YOUNGSTER SOLVED.

Ward of State Living With Stelton Farmer—Ran Away With Colored Boy—To be Returned.

The fifteen-year-old wanderer, Louis Kohler, discovered in the Hotel Kensington, Monday, unable to explain himself or his antecedents and yesterday placed as work in the store of a local plumber, was a ward of a Stelton, N. J., man.

This is according to the statement of John V. Baird, of Stelton, who telephoned to the police yesterday that Kohler had been placed out at his farm for two and a half years. Kohler has always been a good boy said Mr. Baird, but ran away at the instigation of a colored boy.

Chief Kiely this morning received a telephone message from Mrs. Williamson, representing the State Board of Children's Guardians at Jersey City, stating that the boy is a ward of the State and asking that he be sent back to Jersey City. He will be given over to the charge of the State Board as soon as arrangements can be completed.

PYTHIAN FIELD DAY.

Crescent Company, Knights of Pythias, to Have Special Car for Trip to Asbury Park.

Crescent Company, Uniform Rank, K. of P., met last night for the transaction of business in connection with the field day to be celebrated by the order at Asbury Park on Labor Day. The full strength of membership will be out for the day under command of Captain Flannery and members from Perseverance and Unity Lodges will accompany the excursion. A special car for the local knights will be attached to the Elizabeth train. The car will go through from Plainfield to Asbury Park. Those who wish to make arrangements for attending should communicate with the committee, David Bowden, J. B. Higgins and Phillip Jahn.

FRIGHTENED BY FIGHT.

Mrs. Sprague Goes Into Hysterics Over Quarrel.

Some excitement was caused on Central avenue this morning by one of the tenants in the Manning flats, Mrs. Sprague by name, who went out into the front yard and performed what is commonly known as the operation of "throwing a fit." Mrs. Sprague had been frightened by a quarrel between some of the other boarders, and imagining that murder was being done, went into hysterics. She was calmed by Patrolman Higgins.

REVIVAL MEEETINGS.

Evangelistic Services to be Held by Reform Club.

A meeting of the Reform Club in Reform Hall last night was for the purpose of making arrangements for a series of revival exercises to be held the second week in September. The musical part of the observance will be made a feature. W. C. Smith, of this city, is chairman of the committee and he is assisted by Benjamin Hand and Mr. Richards.

—Peach headquarters in this city is at Neuman Brothers', Fifth street grocery store. All of the best kinds of eating and preserving peaches are received at the store in fresh consignments each day.

NEIGHBORS INCENSED OVER GALVIN'S PARK

Strong Sentiment Against It Being Run Wide Open on Sundays.

UP TO THE AUTHORITIES

PROBABLE THAT ACTION WILL BE TAKEN TO SUPPRESS NUISANCE.

Petition Westfield Town Council for Aid—What Clergyman Has to Say Regarding Subject.

The open manner in which Galvin's Park has been conducted as a place for amusement on Sundays for several weeks past has at last aroused a storm of sentiment from the people residing in the neighborhood who have appealed to the officials of Fanwood township and the town of Westfield to relieve them of what they declare is a nuisance, a place of disturbance on the Sabbath day, and a place that will depreciate property in the vicinity.

Galvin's Park is located along the trolley line of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway Company, connecting Elizabeth with this city, and is situated in Fanwood township just over the Westfield line and opposite the Westfield Golf Club. The running of vaudeville shows, merry-go-rounds and other attractions on Sunday, as well as balloon ascensions, have brought great crowds of people to the Park.

The residents of Embree Crescent, a fashionable section of Westfield, petitioned the Town Committee last evening to be relieved of what they declared was a nuisance and prevented them from enjoying quiet at their homes during the day or night. The petition was signed by twenty-five residents of the neighborhood. Acting President Arthur N. Pierson, of the Westfield Town Council, stated that he wished the petition was signed by 125 residents and that something should be done to close up Galvin's Park.

Town Treasurer Morehouse, who resides at Embree Crescent, stated that the Fanwood township officials had also been asked to suppress the doings at the Park. Attorney Oliver upon being asked how best to act in the matter informed council that the Park was under the jurisdiction of the county officials, and suggested that council appoint a committee to wait upon Prosecutor English and to lay the case before him that steps might be taken to at least close up the Park on Sundays.

The Rev. F. B. Ham told of how the neighborhood near his home on Prospect street was thrown into a state of excitement when the big balloon fell upon the trees in front of John Jacques' property on Sunday afternoon, and of how men from the Park destroyed the handsome shade trees by cutting the limbs to remove the balloon yesterday afternoon. Mr. Ham declared he did not want to live in a neighborhood where shade trees could be cut without authority and where such actions were permitted upon Sunday. The matter was referred to the law committee of council and a committee comprising Councilmen Dickerson and Alpers and Attorney Oliver appointed to lay the matter before the county prosecutor.

NEGRO PUNISHED.

Sentenced to Sixty Days Imprisonment for Using Indecent Language to Women.

For indecent behaviour and annoying women and children, Charles Johnson, colored, was sent to Elizabeth for sixty days by Mayor Jenkins in the city court this morning. Johnson is an old offender. He was discovered by Patrolman Higgins last night lurking about back yards near the corner of Liberty and Front streets. The officer called upon him to surrender himself but the colored man resisted, and the officer had a hard time of it before he was able to subdue him and take him to headquarters.

Will Lecture to Youngsters.

The little tots, as well as the older people at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, will be entertained this evening by George E. Hall, superintendent of the Park Avenue Baptist Church Sunday-school. He will give an illustrated lecture, showing views of exceptional interest.

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER "TINKER" SMITH

The Body of Brave Old Fireman Borne to the Grave in Hillside Cemetery.

THE SKETCH OF HIS LIFE

PALLBEARERS MEMBERS OF THE EXEMPT FIREMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Aged Eighty-six and is Survived by Two Sisters and a Brother—Interment at Hillside.

Funeral services for James M. C. Smith, who was found dead on the porch of his farm on Green Brook, near Dunellen, Tuesday morning, were held at 2 o'clock p. m. yesterday from his late home. The pall bearers are members of the Exempt Firemen's Association. The interment will be in Hillside Cemetery.

Death resulted from a general breaking down due to old age. "Tinker" Smith, as he was familiarly known in Plainfield, was eighty-six years old and leaves two sisters and a brother who reside at Elizabeth. He was the oldest fireman in the city and many stories are told of his good work in conquering fires with his tin buckets in the early forties. He was successful in the hardware business and owned property on Front street, which he later sold to the First National Bank. He then bought a farm for an exorbitant price and lost practically all of his money.

"Tinker" was always the first at a fire and the last to leave. The study of astronomy was one of his hobbies and his habits of spending the nights viewing the celestial bodies was the salvation of many a building which would have been burned to the ground but for Smith's habit of seldom sleeping. He belonged to the Harmony and Gazelle Engine Companies and to the Exempt Firemen's Association.

A PUBLIC NUISANCE.

Mrs. McGuiggan, Who Holds Record for Disturbance, May Finally Land in County Jail.

For the third time in as many months, Maggie McGuiggan, of South Second street, was arrested and brought into the city court on a charge of using indecent language, being drunk and making generally a nuisance to her neighbors. Mrs. McGuiggan has been especially abusive towards Mrs. Mary McCann and her children who testified against her before Mayor Jenkins this morning. His Honor suspended sentence with the warning that should Mrs. McGuiggan offend again she would be sent to the county jail for sixty days.

IVINS & CO. OUT.

Old Established Firm Conveys Its Business to J. D. Loiseaux.

The coal and lumber business conducted for a number of years by D. C. Ivins & Co., on Watchung avenue, has been sold to J. D. Loiseaux, of East Second street. The papers were signed yesterday and Mr. Loiseaux is now in possession of the business. The work of taking an inventory is now progressing, but the yards will not be closed. Mr. Ivins has retired from the coal and lumber trade in this city and will devote his entire time to his New York business. Mr. Loiseaux has planned to open an auxiliary coal and lumber yard at the corner of Rock avenue and West Second street.

EXCHANGE OF COURTESIES.

Colored Man Returns Compliment in Brick Throwing.

Walter Thompson, a colored expressman of North avenue, yesterday threw a brick through the window of his neighbor, Mary Clyne, also colored, both of them dwelling on South Second street. Thompson told Mayor Jenkins this morning in the city court that the brick had been thrown through his own window and that he had taken the liberty of retaliating by returning it through the first window that presented itself. As no serious damage had been done the Mayor contented himself with administering severe reproof and suspending sentence.

Cold Water Rally.

Arrangements have been completed for a temperance and Prohibition rally at the W. C. T. U. rooms, Madison avenue, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. E. A. Boom will speak and Mr. and Mrs. Gibbon will sing. All interested in temperance work are invited to attend.

JOCELYN JOHNSTONE DIES IN SANITARIUM

Former Rector of Church of the Redeemer Passes Away in New York.

A MUCH VARIED CAREER

FIGURED IN POLITICS—ACTIVE IN VANWYCK ADMINISTRATION.

Convert to Roman Catholicism—Conducted Private School Here—Services in St. Columbus' Church Today.

Jocelyn Johnstone, lawyer, clergyman, instructor and politician, died Tuesday at a private sanitarium in East Thirty-fifth street, New York City, as the result of an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Johnstone resided here for three years, coming here in 1894.

He was chosen rector of the Church of the Redeemer, of North Plainfield, at that time a "split" of Holy Cross Church. He was succeeded by Rev. W. Montgomery Downey in 1896, the latter rector effecting a reconciliation of the parishioners. While in town he conducted a boys' school on Prospect place. Mr. Johnstone afterwards became a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

It was in this city that his career as a politician began. At the nomination of President McKinley for his first term, Mr. Johnstone made a strong campaign speech for that leader from the balcony of the Hotel Kensington.

Mr. Johnstone was probably one of the best known men in New York politics during the four years of the Van Wyck administration when he acted as private secretary to Council President Randolph Guggenheimer. Mr. Johnstone was a prominent members of Tammany Hall and of the Democratic Club but was appointed secretary to President Fornes of the Board of Aldermen when the fusion faction came into power and about a year ago resigned from this position to accept a similar one with Borough President Swanstrom of Brooklyn.

On his arrival in this country from Ireland, his mother country, some seven years ago, Mr. Johnstone spent some time teaching and later was admitted to the legal bar. He was a graduate of Oxford and the author of a Latin grammar and other works. Four children survive him, one of whom is a cadet on the School-ship St. Mary.

The funeral services will be held this afternoon from his home in New York City and there will be requiem mass said in St. Columbus' Church. The funeral arrangements will be in charge of the Horatio Seymour Club, of which he was a member.

PRIZE FIGHTER COMING.

"Terry" McGovern, of Brooklyn, to Cover Second Base for St. Mary's Nine.

The management of St. Mary's team will probably present a change in the lineup for next Saturday's game with Scotch Plains. Hughes, who formerly twirled for the Saints, wants a chance to redeem himself and he has made the management a flattering offer Malloy will do the catching and it is reported on the best of authority that "Terry" McGovern, of Brooklyn, will cover second base. There will also be some other changes, both in the outfield and infield.

MISS CALANTHE'S TRIP.

Famous Pythian Goat Sojourning in Lone Star State.

After traveling two years on a tour of the United States, "Miss Calanthe," the Pythian goat, has reached Texas, having visited Pythian lodges once or twice since that time.

Miss Calanthe was in Elizabeth in the fall of 1901, and was entertained by Volunteer Lodge. From there she came to this city where she was given a royal reception as the guest of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74. Samuel Robinson was her host during her stay here. From here she went to New Brunswick, where another jubilee was held by the local lodges.

She is the only female member of the order, and is therefore accorded much honor wherever she goes. "Miss Calanthe" is headed for the National Pythian convention which will take place in 1904. She will keep going from lodge to lodge until that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Millard Poole, of Chester, Pa., have been the guests of Miss Susan Pound.

TWO KINDS OF GIRLS

Exponents of the Wide Open and the Shut in Policy

"WHAT! Only two?" the bachelor laughed cynically. "Why, my dear woman, there are 243 kinds, and the wise man can't tell between. That is too simple a classification."

"I will either to it," retorted the woman who knew. "There are just two kinds of girls—those who pursue the wide open policy and those who favor the shut in policy."

"Misty Moses!" groaned the man; "sounds like politics!"

"Yes, it is—politics of the heart," she returned, "and you can tell the follower of either policy after you have talked with her for so short a space as half an hour even. About the time a girl reaches the age when she first sees something serious in life she realizes all at once that joy and pain and knowledge are all very closely connected; that she may start out with one to find herself with the other interested; that if she is venturesome and opens her heart to people and to things she is bound to be hurt; that if she investigates life for herself and starts out to follow her own opinions and to do things differently from those of the other women sheep she is bound to be hurt, and she stops and says to herself: 'I can't stand pain. I will be cautious and spare it to myself as much as possible.' And that's the beginning of the shut in policy. Poor girl! She doesn't realize that in shutting out pain she shuts out knowledge and joy. So when a love affair comes her way she stops and says to herself, 'Will it benefit me?' And if she sees no immediate pleasure or gain in it she passes it by and her heart grows the smaller because she refused it. And if an original idea or achievement occurs to her mind, instead of attempting it, she exclaims: 'I wonder what they will think. I wonder if the world will not think it odd and not to its liking and whether it will not turn on me and hurt me with its condemnation.' So her brain and her soul shrink. In the end, after she has turned away many experiences because she was afraid to open wide her arms and take them in, she reaches that age where nothing can change her and she is just what she has wished to become—a shriveled soul like hundreds of others—without sorrow, but also without joy."

"ENABLES HER TO SYMPATHIZE"

"But the girl who follows the wide open policy, who, like an open door, receives every experience that comes along, what of her? Does she not suffer?"

"Yes, indeed. But with the pain comes the ability to bear it and the knowledge which makes her soul and even the very features of her face noble and strong. When sorrow and hardships come to her she does not shirk or refuse to bear them. She puts her shoulder bravely to the wheel and turns them into triumphs. Because one friend proves false or one experience cruel she does not for that reason shirk all friendships or all similar experiences. Her sorrows indeed have the gift of broadening her heart and mind and of enabling her to sympathize with all who suffer. And, above all, she does not deny love because it will not bring her money, power or position, but she loves nobly with her whole soul and heart, as a true woman should love, and in return her whole being grows in understanding, in beauty and in mental strength."

"And which policy has the greatest number of followers?"

"Can you ask me? Look around you and watch the world of women. Are they not all the time seeking to save themselves pain, even the expending of energy? There is, perhaps, one epoch in the ordinary woman's life when she rises to sublime heights, and that is the first time she falls in love. Her soul and heart are stretched, as it were. She has new and wonderful ideas. She dreams of noble aspirations. Even if, for some reason, the love affair falls through she becomes imbittered and small for the rest of her days. Often, too, in the rare cases when she marries that first love and her ideals never receive a blow she is content to forget all her noble aspirations and wonderful dreams of mental advancement, and she becomes stupid and even lazy, she is so fond of her comfort. Sometimes her husband wonders at the change in her, but whence he reflects that all women become that way when they are nearing middle age."

UP TO DATE STYLES.

Contrasts For Traveling—Return of Flounces and Rushings.

At this time of the year one sees all sorts of charming traveling costumes. Scotch plaids are very popular for the purpose. A charming example in green and blue has a skirt which touches the ground all around and is plaited from the hips downward, the top being composed of strappings of the plaid piped with red and trimmed with little buttons to match. The bodice is made bolero, finished with a red turnover collar and cuffs and a red leath waistband. With this is worn a soft batiste skirt and a perfectly flat hat, the only trimming being a few blue and green wings.

The French stage is largely responsible for the return to flounces, and ruches are seen on many smart frocks.

LINEN DRESS.

There is no doubt that the bodice or blouse of the 1830 period, as well as the mantle and coat of that era, is in accordance with the ruched flounced skirt, for the tremendous fullness around the feet necessitates a fair amount around the shoulders.

Mantles are of really beautiful shapes and lovely models can be picked up at this season at small cost.

Birds and wings will appear on early fall felts.

The illustration shows a linen costume with a long shouldered yoke having strappings of darker linen. The belt and collar are of spotted silk.

SMART GOWNS.

Coarse Hopsacks and Serges Useful For Mountain Wear.

With the short walking skirt, the short bolero, the wide soft leather belt and the wide brimmed French sailor hat turned up at the back with clusters of flowers or choux of ribbon are entirely in keeping.

Coarse hopsacks and serges are admirable for general wear in the mountains. Linens and lighter makes are for the warm days one has every now and then even in the fall months.

Cream is the prevailing fashionable color at both English and French watering places. Many heavy fabrics in this shade, such as English and Irish homespuns and all kinds of rough serges and tweeds are being sold for fall wear in the mountains.

Alpaca is a fabric which is never out of fashion. It is eminently useful for traveling. An alpaca gown will give the same service as a linen one, besides being smarter and useful for wear on more occasions.

The full flattered skirt and the 1830 shoulder and cape effect give the appearance of smallness to the waist without any pulling in, but they require an erect and graceful carriage on the part of the wearer.

The girl shown in a gown of flowered muslin trimmed with shirrings. It is made over a contrasting shade of silk.

DRESSY GOWNS.

Even Substantial Dresses Are Not So Simple This Year.

Dressmaker gowns will not be so simple this year as formerly. Take, for instance, a ball gown which is being made by a prominent dressmaker. It is of white chiffon de soie with a berthe of shirred muslin. The waist is encircled by a wide band of old rose taffeta caught at the back with some old paste buckles. All around the edge of the skirt is an insertion of the shirred muslin, and the fullness of the hips is held in place by tiny straps of passementerie with a suspicion of pale pink and pale green introduced.

A beautiful black soie de chine frock now being made has very fine guipure net let in around the knees and hips. This is outlined in a fine design of cut beads with a sprinkling of silver paillettes. The bodice has a yoke and sleeves entirely composed of the ecru guipure with a layer of black soie de chine underneath. This is extremely becoming to the skin and is heavily dotted with jet and silver. The wide belt of oriental satin appears to knot in the back, although no fastening can be detected.

The cut shows a visiting gown of gray crepe de chine trimmed with gaugings. The sleeves are of velvet, with silk buttons and tassels.

COLORS AND FABRICS.

Crepes and Crepolines Are Smart. Pale Blue Is Very Popular.

The flat crowned hats have made the low coiffures more fashionable and the sides are dressed very widely whether arranged in pompadour fashion or in waved full bands.

Crepoline and crape effects are very popular and there are many lovely effects in gray, putty and fawn which make up beautifully with lace ribbon and featherstitching. The sack bolero, much plaited and trimmed with lace and silk tassels, is very effective. The vest of white silk should have a transparent yoke and a deep frill of lace. Touches of color can be introduced easily into such neutral tinted gowns, which are equally charming worn with toques or floral or big black picture hats.

Blue is most fashionable in the paler shades, and a pale blue gown worn with a brown hat has a very smart effect.

Pink muslin worn over a softer pink is charming with a tuscan hat of the capeline shape trimmed with half a dozen roses in different tints of pink. The costume should be completed by a white parasol and white gloves.

The cut shows a bolero of fawn cloth, stitched and strapped. It has gilt buttons.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Some Smart Black and White Effects. The Short Skirt.

Many women look their smartest in black, which is of course always useful, but navy blue runs it very close in popularity. A charming blue alpaca skirt seen recently was made with five flounces, just clearing the ground, with a smart little bolero fastening into the waist by a broad satin band. This bolero had a collar of frish crochet decorated with black appliqué, and the sleeves were loose and open. This was lined with a spotted black and white foulard and was worn with a foulard blouse and a toreador toque of black straw trimmed with a black and white bird.

The short skirt with box plaits is practical and becoming. The plaits look their best coming from a small shaped hip piece, which keeps the hips plain while the fullness is allowed to spring out around the feet.

Deep purple hats are, smart with linen costumes, and especially so when worn with purple petticoat and stockings and a purple sunshade.

Very full elbow sleeves are seen on lace evening dresses.

The illustration shows a gown of silk mull having a fichu effect and a large chiffon rosette.

WHAT IS WORN.

Smart Wraps Both In White and Colors—Walking Skirts.

A smart evening dress seen recently was of rose pink taffeta cut princess with a high sash belt of point d'alencon, which lace also fell in points on the low decolletage. The sleeve consisted of a tiny puff at the top of rose chiffon. This chiffon also formed innumerable frills right up the trained skirt to the knees.

The popularity of the sack coat never wanes. There is no more becoming garment for mountain wear, and in fact for outing wear generally.

Many walking skirts are made in checks and plaids, and most of these have a little short bolero to match.

AUTOMOBILE COAT.

Red and white and green and gray are considered the smartest, but of course they can only be worn by women with slight figures.

Skirts are more gauged than ever and the smarter ones are cut all in one piece with a fullness around the feet sometimes measuring ten yards. They are pretty in muslins and other suppleo fabrics.

The white wrap is a very modish thing and ranges from the little sack coat to the elaborate half length sack of white lace on a foundation of white satin or taffeta.

A beautiful evening gown is of yellow chiffon over yellow satin, the chiffon, embroidered with gold paillettes, running in long lines from waist to hem. Pale pink roses and clusters of forgetmenots are worked on the skirt in satin ribbon embroidery, and on the low bodice there are little hanging garlands of ribbon forgetmenots. A large black hat, with a white ostrich feather under the brim, is worn with this lovely frock.

WARM WEATHER FROCKS.

Embroidered Linens For Morning Wear—Lace Afternoon Gowns.

The simple embroidered linen or voile gowns are very popular.

Some of the linen frocks have hats to match, also embroidered and rather a flat shape, with shady brims. Some of the linens are embroidered in coarse cottons, others in satin stitch.

Red and white mixtures continue favorite wear, and green and white also looks cool on really hot mornings. But all these neat gowns for morning should be worn with morning hats. Many women absolutely ruin the appearance of their chic little linen frocks by wearing them with picture hats, which are entirely out of keeping. Picture hats should be kept for fete toilets and carriage wear.

In direct contrast to the simple morning costume is that reserved for afternoon. It is a model of costly beauty. Irish lace and very fine guipures seem to trim most of the mousseline de soie and soie de chine gowns. Beautiful embroideries are more and more used, and black chantilly lace, jet and silver paillettes have a revival in favor.

Soft, voluminous effects are the aim of the leading dressmakers as far as skirts and sleeves are concerned.

The illustration shows a collarless evening gown of pale blue nun's veiling and chiffon.

FROCKS AND FRILLS.

Grass Lawn a Popular Fabric—New Sheer Materials.

A biscuit colored gown patterned in blue is charming with a hat of tuscan or chip, trimmed with wreaths of forgetmenots and reseda ribbon and accompanied by a pale blue sunshade.

Grass lawn is a fabric which makes ideal summer gowns and is extremely smart when inlet with motifs of ivory lace or insertions. Crepe de chine in an ivory white shade is appliqued with lace of the deepest ecru and string color, and many of these gowns have plaited flounces or spotted net or broad insertions of the net adorned with incrustations of lace and tiny edges of drawn ribbon.

Champagne colored cambric with black embroidered spots and figures is very smart, with creamy insertions drawn through with ribbon. The very fine lawn with an amplitude of embroidery or liberal incrustations of lace is smart when relieved with a bright color. Soie de chine and crepe de soie are exceedingly ethereal textures in silk which have a semitransparent effect and are inlet with lace and mounted in a different, but quite soft, tint.

The black dress has amazing opportunities this year allied to the cobwebby lace of the hour. Another stupid tradition has been sweept away by the acceptance of the fact that the effect of coolness is quite as much a matter of material as of color. A floating black gown, for instance, through which glimpses of the neck and arms are revealed, is infinitely more replete with cool summer suggestion than a heavy robe of course

A GARDEN PARTY.

How to Give This Attractive Out of Door Entertainment.

September is an excellent month in which to give a garden party, for the weather is then fairly certain and the sunshine just comfortably warm. Flowers are also to be obtained in quantities, which is not always the case in the early summer.

Nasturtiums, goldenrods and even field daisies make pretty decorations when arranged in glass bowls and tastefully placed in a nest of green leaves. The tables are much prettier made of rustic wood, but ordinary tables may be wreathed in vines and placed under the trees with good effect.

There are two kinds of garden party—the simple and the elaborate.

The simple is merely an afternoon tea with conversation on the shady lawn and plain refreshments—thin bread and butter, cress sandwiches and punch served under an awning or tree.

The elaborate garden party may take the form of a musicale or follow the English fashion of games—tennis, croquet, etc. One of the best plans is to have a little programme of music and dancing or perhaps a little out of door play, followed by supper under the trees lighted by the harvest moon and Japanese lanterns.

Instead of the lanterns, which sometimes catch fire in a strong wind, there have been introduced this year garden party lamps. These are candlesticks made of glass or metal with a candle set into a high bell shaped chimney to protect it from drafts.

While fancy ices are very pretty they are sometimes expensive, and plain ice cream may be made doubly attractive if it is served in long, narrow glasses surmounted by a spoonful of whipped cream. Blackberries frozen in vanilla ice cream are delicious, and coffee parfait is easy to make, for it does not require to be put in the freezer. Serve each slice of cream with a flower by its side and the slices of boned chicken with a small tomato split open and filled with mayonnaise.

Fruit punch is always appreciated, and a ginger punch can either be made with Canton ginger or good ginger ale mixed with lemon and orange juice.

Selters or other carbonated water adds much to a punch and should always be used in preference to plain water.

For the out of door supper little tables seating four will be required. These are prettiest if decorated in different colors throughout. Hot bouillon, chicken or clam broth is the first course; then a croquette of boned chicken with rolls or sandwiches and a dainty salad. Ices, bonbons and coffee complete the little feast. Cigars and cigarettes should be provided for the men.

THE FIREPLACE.

An Up to Date Rendering of an Old English Fashion.

The attractive fireplace in the picture is so simple it could readily be carried out in any country house. The arch over the fireplace is particularly graceful and lends an air of dignity. The stained glass window effects on the sides can be improved by placing an electric bulb on the other side of the panes.

The hood is of copper and the fireside implements are of the same metal. The settles on each side are of greenish wood upholstered in Spanish leather in green, gold and brown tones. The woodwork of the entire entrance hall in which the fireplace is situated reproduces the greenish tone. The ledges on both sides of the hearth hold green and red-dish china and pottery and the rugs on the hardwood floor carry out the general color [illegible]

THE NEW WOMAN

Her Stage of Action

A LADY was just going to sleep at night in her handsome suburban home. It was luxuriously furnished and had in the dining room much silverware. The lady's personal jewels were also valuable. Nobody was in the large, isolated house except the lady and her maid. She thought she heard a rustling noise just as she was dozing off. It brought her to her wideawake senses at once. She arose and investigated, but thought her dogs were making the noise and went back to bed. Presently she heard a low whistle. "I am sure burglars are in the house," she said to herself. She arose softly and went into the hall. On the floor below she saw a light. She slipped back and got a revolver. It was loaded too. The brave woman went lightly downstairs to the kitchen and found a man just in the act of escaping with a great bag of plunder. She fired, and he dropped. He was not killed, however, and managed to crawl through the door, and before the police could come had got away, with the help of a pal outside. In the yard was a big sack full of the household silver. The outside pal had dropped it. Another new woman example. It is an example that other women should follow. Let women learn to protect themselves and their homes even to the extent of putting a bullet through an evil doer if necessary. Then desperadoes of all kinds will beware how they attack lone women. There will be fewer lynchings when women assert the courage that is in them and become able to take care of themselves. Pistol practice, athletic culture, a cool head and dauntless courage are needed by women now as they never have been since Indian times. None is so well protected as those who protect themselves.

So, after all, it seems, the objection to women immigration inspectors at New York was not that they were unable to climb ships' ladders, as alleged by the male political tooters who wanted everything for themselves. After the immigration commissioner had succeeded in working the women out, pressure was brought to bear on him, so it is said, from a quarter where there is a sense of justice and decent courtesy, and after some squabbling and quibbling, the latter evidently to have official power under the trees lighted by the harvest moon and Japanese lanterns.

Instead of the lanterns, which sometimes catch fire in a strong wind, there have been introduced this year garden party lamps. These are candlesticks made of glass or metal with a candle set into a high bell shaped chimney to protect it from drafts.

While fancy ices are very pretty they are sometimes expensive, and plain ice cream may be made doubly attractive if it is served in long, narrow glasses surmounted by a spoonful of whipped cream. Blackberries frozen in vanilla ice cream are delicious, and coffee parfait is easy to make, for it does not require to be put in the freezer. Serve each slice of cream with a flower by its side and the slices of boned chicken with a small tomato split open and filled with mayonnaise.

Fruit punch is always appreciated, and a ginger punch can either be made with Canton ginger or good ginger ale mixed with lemon and orange juice.

Selters or other carbonated water adds much to a punch and should always be used in preference to plain water.

For the out of door supper little tables seating four will be required. These are prettiest if decorated in different colors throughout. Hot bouillon, chicken or clam broth is the first course; then a croquette of boned chicken with rolls or sandwiches and a dainty salad. Ices, bonbons and coffee complete the little feast. Cigars and cigarettes should be provided for the men.

The attractive fireplace in the picture is so simple it could readily be carried out in any country house. The arch over the fireplace is particularly graceful and lends an air of dignity. The stained glass window effects on the sides can be improved by placing an electric bulb on the other side of the panes.

The hood is of copper and the fireside implements are of the same metal. The settles on each side are of greenish wood upholstered in Spanish leather in green, gold and brown tones. The woodwork of the entire entrance hall in which the fireplace is situated reproduces the greenish tone. A Really True Fairy Tale

How a Poor English Girl Got $2,500,000 Because of Her Kindness to a Lonely Old Manchester Factory Owner.

A LITTLE English girl living near Manchester has been made the heroine of a real, actual fairy tale—like one of the kind she loves. She won the heart of an old, seemingly crabbed man. He is dead now, and "Janey," at the age of nine, is worth $2,500,000.

The story of Janey Loft's good fairy begins 70 years ago, when there was born in a mean street of an ugly Manchester suburb a boy who in the ordinary course of events was christened John Port. His parents were among the poorest of the poor, and the boy had hardly emerged from babyhood before he was plunged into factory work.

Other boys in his position had no hope. They were reconciled early to the prospects of dreary work and hopeless poverty, but John was angrily ambitious.

"I hate poverty; I will be rich some day," he told the foreman.

Living in this state of rebellion, he attained his majority. He was earning $7.50 a week then, and for eight years had been saving a little from his wages. He found himself able to set up a small shop and start out on his own endeavors. Manchester was then a growing city, constantly spreading out. People were beginning to swarm to its suburbs, and particularly to the suburb in which John Port's shop was located.

"Sell the people necessaries; let others sell them luxuries," was the maxim he worked on. He realized that the people flooding the new district must have beds and he began the manufacture of them. His success was immediate and great. In time he had built a large factory and soon had become one of the wealthiest men in Manchester.

He also became one of the loneliest and least known of the citizens. He played no part in public life. He had nothing in common with the other citizens. He had married, but his wife died and left him childless. He was a self-centered man. Business was his all in life. He had succeeded as he had told the foreman he would. He was rich, but he was a soulless old man.

Here begins the romance of a hitherto unromantic life. A little girl of four years managed to entwine herself in the heart of the old martinet. Without knowing that he was yielding to her influence, the man found that he could not live without the girl. He took her to his home and her welcome when he returned at evening from his factory was the one pleasant feature of his life.

They used to romp about the house together to the surprise of the servants, who never had seen the head of the house unbend. The old man called the girl his "little ray of sunshine" and was a brighter and happier man in her company.

He died a few weeks ago and when his will was opened it was found that everything had been left to little Janey Loft with the stipulation that she take his name and be known as Jane Port.

Good fortune has not changed the girl, who is now nine years old. A visitor found her the other day playing the piano in the drawing-room—a tall, graceful little maiden dressed in white, her well poised head fringed with dark brown ringlets. On a footstool near her feet sat listening silently another pretty little miss with long fair hair, and curled up on the floor between them was a yellow and white dog, slumberously indifferent to the charms of music. A dainty picture the three of them made.

Miss Port played with unusual skill for one so young. Presently she sang in a pleasing child-lish treble.

The song over, the little musician introduced first her friend, then Jackey, the dog. "Isn't he a beauty?" she exclaimed, carrying the dog—a description which, it is to be feared, a canine expert might question.

"Jackey is my greatest friend. They would not let me take him to Wales with me, and I missed him so much that I hurried back home to see him."

Miss Port does not realize the good fortune that has befallen her, although her school companions have hinted at it to her. She, by the way, declines to leave the public school she has been accustomed to attend and have her education undertaken by a private governess.

"What would you like to do, Jane, if some day you became a rich lady?" asked the visitor.

"Please do not call me 'Jane,'" was the reply. "I like 'Janey' better."

Miss Port gave the visitor to understand that she did not care in the least for horses and carriages or fine dresses and jewels. All she wanted, it appeared, to complete her present happiness was a bicycle—a modest request when all the time of the visitor's departure seemed on the high road to be complied with. "And I Hope I shall go to the pantomime next Christmas, for I so love the fairies."

Little "Janey" Port has had her own real "good fairy," who has made her one of the richest children in England.

PUT BOY IN DRAWER.

Jersey Man Dreamed of Burglars and Kidnapers and Wanted Young Son Safe.

Henry Heidecke, of Lincoln street, and the Hudson boulevard, Jersey City, nearly smothered his six-year-old son, Frederick, early the other morning. He dreamed that burglars broke into the house. Exactly what followed Mr. Heidecke does not know, except as it was revealed by subsequent happenings. One of these was that Heidecke and his wife were awakened by a scream. Heidecke lighted the gas and then Mrs. Heidecke discovered that the boy's crib, which stood in the same room, was empty. She felt sure that burglars had abducted the boy until she heard his voice in the adjoining room crying for help. She ran into the other room and traced the sounds to a bureau, in the upper drawer of which the boy was found.

The only explanation of the affair Heidecke can give is that he arose in his sleep and put the boy in the drawer to save him from the burglars of whom he was dreaming.

SWUNG BABY BY FEET.

Infant Was Nearly Drowned, But Doctor's Extraordinary Treatment Saved Its Life.

Dr. D. C. Mangen, of No. 95 Park avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., resuscitated a half-drowned baby the other afternoon by swinging it around his head by its feet. The baby was the 14-months-old son of Edward Taggart, of No. 21 St. Edwards street, Brooklyn. It fell into a tub of water in the kitchen, and was unconscious when its mother found it.

GRASPED THE BABY'S ANKLES.

Dr. Mangen, who was called, saw that extreme measures were necessary, and grasping the baby's tiny anklets he swung the almost lifeless form around his head in much the same way as a hammer-thrower swings a hammer before hurling it. The strenuous method availed. It forced the water out of the infant's lungs, and when an ambulance arrived the baby's heart was beating almost normally and its breath again coming even and strong.

SEA ISLAND COTTON

Porto Rico Now Gaining One of the Largest Crops Ever Raised.

Bright Outlook in the Island for This Valuable and Important Crop—How the Quality Is Improved by Selection.

The new ginneries which have just been erected on the water front of San Juan, Island of Porto Rico, are busy working up the crop of sea island cotton which is the most precocious and significant crop which has yet been raised in the island. It is expected that the output will be something like 10,000 bales of some of the finest sea island cotton grown.

About three years ago the first systematic attempts at growing sea island cotton were made in Porto Rico, and the results thus far obtained are most gratifying. The principal promoter of the new movement declares that the island should grow 50,000 bales of this superior quality of cotton each year, and where it is properly cared for, and the grade of plants improved by selection, it should net the grower $60 per acre, while the sugar planter is contented if he clears $15 per acre.

Sea island cotton differs from the common upland variety in the greater length and silkiness of its fiber. The localities where it can be successfully grown are limited. In 1786 the first sea island cotton was raised on the coast of Georgia from seed obtained in the Bahamas. The first successful crop was grown by William Elliott in 1790 on an island in the mouth of the Savannah river. The superior quality of the cotton was soon recognized. It is now largely cultivated also in South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama.

Porto Rico is the latest section to endeavor to grow the cotton for commercial purposes. As in the growing of the upland cotton, the process of selection to improve the length and fineness of the fiber must be resorted to by the planter. It proves essential also in increasing the yield, encouraging early ripening, and hardier plants. The first care is the choice of the field from which the selections are to be made. It must be good soil and thoroughly cultivated in order to insure a good development of the plants and satisfactory conditions for making selections. Just before the first picking, the field is gone over and every plant examined with reference to the productiveness, number and size of bolls, vigor and shape of plant, earliness, etc.

The seed of the individual plant selected the first year is planted in the spring of the second year and plainly marked to distinguish from the seed of any other plant selected. Care is taken to note whether these plants grown possess the desired qualities, thus showing their power of transmission. If they do not they are discarded. The seeds of those that do are carefully preserved and planted the third year, and thus the process is carried on until the plants of the desired qualities are obtained. Our illustrations show a field after the first and third selections are made and the undesirable plants are removed. The planter will use the seeds produced from the selected plants in the future planting.

The sea island cotton industry is a most important one, but like all other desirable products the plant had its natural enemy. A few years ago the industry was threatened by a serious disease, which attacked the roots of the plants, oftentimes affecting whole fields, thus greatly reducing the yield. After careful study the government experts discovered that the disease was a minute fungus, which through its action on the roots cut off the water supply and caused the trouble, to which the cotton growers gave the name of "wilt." The effort to discover some fungicide which would destroy the fungus was unsuccessful, but it was noted that in fields which were very badly affected by the disease there were plants which seemed to be immune. The method of selection briefly outlined above was employed and a cotton plant developed which was a resistant to the disease. Thus was overcome a condition which threatened the entire industry.

Care is being taken in Porto Rico to produce the best plants for its effective and sell by the process of [illegible] It is only another demonstration of the importance to [illegible] of the [illegible]

WASHINGTON STORIES

Glimpse of Life and People at the Nation's Capital.

HERNANDEZ, THE MAIMED ONE

Extraordinary Character of Venezuelan Minister—Mrs. Cushman K. Davis' Marriage—Miss Nina—Marine Band Growing Old.

Washington.—Washington is to have an acquisition to its diplomatic colony this winter in the person of Gen. Jose Manuel Hernandez, the new minister from Venezuela, who has just arrived with his credentials. Hernandez is one of the most extraordinary characters in all South America. There is no man in all that turbulent continent who has had a more stormy career. He has gone through so many perilous experiences that he is commonly known in his own country as "El Mocho" (the maimed one). He has followers who would obey his slightest call even though he led them to death, and yet he has little impressive or inspiring about to the ordinary observer—just a plain, unassuming, rather shabbily dressed South American.

Gen. Jose Manuel Hernandez.

Hernandez has been a revolutionist ever since he was 20 years old. He got his first taste of powder away back in 1868, and there has been few years since then that he has not spent more or less time in the field. Venezuela has not had a president in all that period whom Hernandez has not tried to overthrow. His last attempt was against the present President Castro.

It was only two days after Castro ousted Andrade that Hernandez raised the standard of revolt against him, and less than a year ago the beaten leader was wearing 60-pound shackles and substituting as best he could on banana meals while suffering the imprisonment that Castro had sentenced him to. Had it not been for the joint attack of Germany and England on Venezuela last summer Hernandez would probably still be in prison. But in the face of the country's peril he was liberated by Castro, and he is now regarded as one of the Venezuelan president's strongest supporters.

Mrs. Davis a Bride.

No happening in Washington in a good many months has caused more comment than the announcement of the marriage of the widow of Senator Cushman K. Davis. For in the past 15 years there has been no woman in the capital who was generally known and in whose personality greater interest was shown. The circumstances of her marriage to the late chairman of the foreign relations committee, the social feud which that marriage inspired, the political fortunes which it made and marred, all conspired to lend to it a romantic interest. Added to this was the interest which attached to the woman herself in the long period of her social prominence in Washington.

It was as Mrs. Cushman K. Davis that she held her place in the life of the capital, and it will doubtless be by the same name that she will be referred to hereafter, in spite of the ceremony which has made her Mrs. Hunter Doll. While Senator Davis was alive his wife played a conspicuous part, and was especially true after he became chairman of the foreign relations committee, which carries with it a certain social prestige belonging to no other chairmanship in either senate or house.

When the Davises went to Paris at the time of the meeting of the peace commission, of which the Minnesota senator was a member, Mrs. Davis became easily the most conspicuous of the women attached to the mission, and her doings were chronicled on both sides of the Atlantic throughout the time of the sittings. Her receptions were the most crowded, and the number of notables in her train was greater than that of any other American woman.

Marine Band Celebrates.

The oldest musical organization in the United States has just celebrated its one hundred and fifth anniversary—for that is the venerable age of the United States marine band, which comes very near to being for the American government what the various royal and court bands are for the different capitals of Europe. The Marine band has done more for the cultivation of the right sort of musical taste in a popular way than any other organization in America, and yet it has always been compelled to labor under the greatest conceivable disadvantages. It is stationed in Washington at the marine barracks.

"And the Band Played On."

Its members are all enlisted men in the marine corps, including the leader, who by special ordinance, is allowed the pay and commissions of a lieutenant. They are all, including the leader, subject to the discipline of the corps, and with the exception of the leader none of them receives higher pay than a private in the corps—$13 a month.

The only way in which it had been possible to maintain for so many years the superlative quality of the organization is by the dispensation that members may secure engagements privately to eke out a beggarly income, and the musical talent has been so bitterly opposed to this that the band has had to fight its way against prejudice and narrowness for many years.

Only a few days ago, when they were engaged to march in the official procession in Baltimore, the members of the union threatened to strike and leave the procession without any other music than the Marine band unless the contract was annuled. However, the contract was adhered to, and the band played on. It was as leader of the Marine band that Sousa made his reputation as the march king. He composed his most famous pieces of music while drawing a salary of $1,200 a year as an enlisted man in the marine corps.

Newspaper Men and Scientists.

The interesting contest which has been going on down the Potomac between the newspapers and the scientists, who have been experimenting with Prof. S. P. Langley's aerdome, has had rather an exciting denouement. For a month the newspapermen have been on the qui vive, and Prof. Langley, during the whole length of time has kept himself and his machine as much a profund secret as possible. And now the machine has been found judging from its antics is more of a fish than a bird, for it made straight for the water after beginning its flight. Prof. Langley has been at work on his invention for over 20 years. He is an old soldier, and if after the launch the machine is repaired it should still refuse to fly it will prove bitterly disappointing to him. He has devoted his best energies and beside has spent $50,000 of a government appropriation set aside for military purposes in his endeavor.

Scientist Fleeing from the Ostrich's Reporter.

About a month ago he sent his apparatus down the Potomac in the keeping of a party of scientists and machinists, there to make the all-important test under the most approved conditions. They have a houseboat from which the machine has just made its disastrious flight and all sorts of other paraphernalia. In their trail went representatives of every important newspaper in the country. The scientists have devoted themselves to keeping out of the way of the reporters. They have been living at the Mount Vernon Ducking club, of which Prof. Langley is a member, and they have relentlessly driven out everybody who ventured too near the sacred precincts. Now it happens that there are other members of the club than Prof. Langley and they resented its monopoly by the scientists to the exclusion of everybody else. Consequently one of these, Truxton Beale, who was once United States minister to Persia, notified the professor of his intention to occupy the club with a few of his friends and the friends he chose were the newspaper reporters who had hitherto been kept out in the swamp. Then it was the scientists who had to shift for themselves.

So much for the contest which had almost eclipsed the interest in the flying machine itself.

Prof. Langley's Airship.

As for the latter much of the mystery—a mystery which has been purposely intensified by those having it in charge—has been cleared by the view which was obtained from the press boat which was not more than 50 feet from the houseboat when the aerdome let it in its aerial flight and submarine dive. It is constructed on the principle of the aeroplane, being equipped with four wings, two on each side. These wings are about four by six feet in dimensions, made of fine sheet oil silk and held upon delicate wooden rods. The wings are in the shape of a tent. The body of the machine consists of an intricate arrangement of fine steel work, with gasoline tanks, and boilers carefully balanced thereon. Between the two sets of wings are placed the propellors, which are two in number. Each fitted with two blades. The steering gear is situated in the rear and is composed of fine materials similar to that of the wings. The motor carried by the machine is supposed to generate something in excess of two-horse power.

According to all the scientists there is no question as to the safety of the machine to remain suspended in the air after it has once got a start. While the machine is being repaired the same profound atmosphere of secrecy, which even a newspaper man is not able to penetrate, prevails about Prof. Langley's houseboat, and the next flight is awaited with unabated interest.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE

Story of Real Modern Ulysses

How Home-Coming Jack Passed the Sirens of New York and Succeeded in Buying a Snug Little Farm.

OF THE temptations that beset the homecoming of Jack; of his weakness in the face of them, and of the Ulyssean measures which one old salt, made wise by many sad experiences, employed to secure himself against the song of the sirens, a naval officer of high rank has this story to tell in the New York Sun:

There was an old boatswain named Sam on board the last ship which this officer commanded before going on shore duty. Sam had served his country some 30 years when his last cruise took him to the Asiatic station and kept him there for more than three years. At the end of that time he had some $800 to his credit, which would be paid over to him as soon as the ship reached New York.

One evening, just before the home shore was sighted, the captain was on the quarterdeck when Sam approached him, tugging his old-fashioned forelock and scraping with his foot as he bowed. He was an old favorite and could get an audience at any time.

"We'll soon be home, Cap'n," he began.

"Right you are, Sammy, and I suppose you'll be happy to get a rest at last."

"Maybe I am and maybe I ain't—there's my sister Sally."

"Well, won't you be glad to see her?"

"Maybe I will and maybe I won't—there's the $800 coming to me."

"The more welcome you should be, Sammy."

"Ya-as; and Sally wants me to buy a farm and stay home."

"Splendid idea, Sammy. I'm sure you'll end as a bloated landholder."

"Ya-as; but there's New York 'tween Sally and the money."

"And what of it?"

"Well, you know, New York is a pretty fine city and—and I've been gone a durned long time and—if I get through New York with any money left, that'll be the first time in my experience."

The captain understood.

"How far away does Sally live?" he asked.

"Thirty-five miles, cap'n."

"Can't you get there without passing New York?"

"Can't be done, cap'n, and that's just the rub."

"It's the worst blankety-blank thing I ever heard of," remarked the captain, reproachfully, "that an old, seasoned, sensible chap like you must be so weak."

"It's a ship's length beyond all excuse," the old man admitted in a mournful tone. But I can't help it, cap'n. I suppose it's the land air."

The captain was thinking hard.

"How would it be for me to send an officer with you through the city?"

"That's terribly kind o' you, cap'n, but—there ain't no man strong enough in the navy to hold me when I feel the smell of the grogshops."

"I shall go with you myself," the captain declared.

Sam shifted from one foot to the other and looked indescribably unhappy.

"I'm afeerd—" he began.

"I'll take a carriage—a closed one."

"God bless you, cap'n, but I'll be blamed if I don't think I might jump out."

"Then I'll be danged if I know what to do for you," the captain concluded, in despair.

"There might be just one way what I've been thinking of—but, of course, that's really too much—"

"Sling out, and don't be afraid."

"S'posing you went with me in a carriage—and the carriage was closed—" the old man was twisting about as if in pain—"and—and my hands and feet were tied up, and you didn't let me loose till we got outside the town—I don't know, cap'n, but I guess I might get through with the money."

"CAN'T BE DONE, CAP'N."

The old man's plan was carried out to the letter. He begged and prayed and swore while the carriage was passing through the streets of New York, but, like Ulysses tied to the mast, he was helpless, and the captain remained as deaf to the old fellow's entreaties and outbursts of profanity as if his ears had been filled with wax, like those of the Ulyssean crew.

Once beyond the city, Sam calmed down. At Sally's door, but not until the money had passed into her hands, the captain left his charge. That's how the farm came to be bought.

But to this day Sam vowsthat but for the ropes that held him during those moments of supreme temptation, he would still be cruising on the high seas, as poor as ever.

WAS TOO GARRULOUS.

Disagreeable Experience of a New York Peddler Who Was Fond of Gossiping.

The New York Herald chronicles this story of a broom peddler who was offering his wares to every one he met and was trudging up the avenue, when he saw a large man standing on the curb.

"I'M THE HENPECKED HUNT."

"Do you want a broom, sir?" questioned the peddler.

"Nope!" snapped the large man.

"Oh, I see! You are a bachelor. Well, you are lucky. Do you see that little house over there with brown steps?"

"Yes; what of it?"

"Well, I have an order for a broom over there."

"You have, eh?"

"Yes, and the lady wants a strong one. She said she wanted one to suit her husband, and from the way she said it I guess she intends to hammer him across the shoulders. Well, the chances are he hasn't the courage or strength to defend himself against henpecking. It serves him right."

"Aren't you a little hard on the poor man?"

"Not at all, sir. But you don't happen to know the little henpecked runt, do you?"

"Perhaps."

"Perhaps? S-say you—"

"Yes, I'm the little henpecked runt that you refer to. I'm the dried-up man that hasn't the courage or strength to defend himself. Take that! and when you get up if you don't get out of the neighborhood I'll eat you up, do you hear?" But the broom peddler couldn't hear, as he was already scooping in the mud from the cobblestones.

DISHES AND BUNS FLY.

Lunchroom Waiter and Customer Argue Over Order with Heavy China Weapons.

The other day there was a panic in one of the Kohlsaat lunchrooms at Chicago, and incidentally a pitched battle in which flying plates, cups and saucers figured prominently between the heads of a customer and a colored waiter. The "rough house" lasted only a few seconds and ended when the customer made a hasty exit, and the waiter an inglorious retreat to the kitchen.

The customer ordered wheat bread, and the waiter served him with graham bread.

"That is not wheat bread," said the customer.

"I know it, suh," replied the colored man, "but it is good."

"Of course it is good, but I ordered wheat bread."

"This is much bettah than wheat bread, suh."

"Who is doing this ordering? I want wheat bread."

"You don't have; we ain't got no wheat bread, suh, and this—"

A cup of coffee thrown by the customer interrupted the waiter's words as it struck his mouth.

The customer lifted a saucer to shy at the colored man, but just then a blank hand swung through the air and two plates smashed on top of the customer's head. He let fly the saucer and it struck the wall on the opposite side of the room.

Other customers left their seats in alarm, the waiter, dripping hot coffee, ran to the rear, and the man who wanted wheat bread dashed out the front way before his name could be learned.

The cashier refused to reveal the identity of the belligerent waiter.

When anyone talks to you about the thirteen superstition, just remind him of the fact that the late Pope, one of the wisest, most successful and influential pontiffs known to the past few centuries was the thirteenth of his name.

Rev. Dr. Mitchell, of Cleveland, thinks that there is a demand for men who can earn $5,000 a year and that there are to many of the $20 a week kind at the present time. It is sufficient to say that generally the fellow who draws the $20 really does the work for the man who is getting the $5,000.

Does anyone suspect that Grover Cleveland seeks to run for the Presidency again? It is more rational to believe that he desires an opportunity to decline the honor from his party, which in convention jeered his name. Such a privileges would make a fitting climax to the public career of the great advocate of tariff reform.

An exchange informs us that New Brunswick consumes 1,250 gallons of milk daily. Keep up the good work, neighbor, and some day you may grow up.—Plainfield Press.

And drink what Plainfield does? Never!—New Brunswick Daily Home News.

Won't someone tell us what that New Brunswickian is driving at?

There ought to be enough polo players in Plainfield and vicinity to make the proposal of polo grounds at the Driving Park of unusual interest. Polo is a society game to a great extent; expensive and for this reason not accessible to everyone. It is popular none the less and calls for an alertness of mind and body and a quality of horsemanship that make it well worth the while of those who are able to play it. With polo established in Plainfield athletics next year, the city will be as well represented as possible in almost all lines of modern sport.

Assemblyman Swackhamer, of Somerset, in addressing the Hunterdon County Farmer's Alliance picnic crowd the other day said: "I believe the time has come when the people are looking towards the Democratic party with some hope and confidence, and if the party should select for office men of high integrity and marked ability success would be sure." Which, being read between the lines, means that the man whom the Democracy should nominate for Governor next year is the Honorable Samuel Swingarm Swackhamer.—Camden Post-Telegram.

Call him swingarm or what you like just now, brother; it's just possible that you may feel honored to call him Governor some day.

The strenuous efforts which Benjamin LaVere has made to provide band concerts for the city and borough are deserving of appreciation. Mr. LaVere has striven earnestly for several years to arrange a satisfactory series and the concerts that he has been able to give have been heartily enjoyed by thousands in this and surrounding cities and towns. His money backing has not been encouraging, however, although the borough Mayor and Councilmen have taken active interest in the project of late. It is to be hoped that the intention of holding a fair for the purpose of raising a fund for a series of twelve concerts next year will not be relinquished. It seems a most excellent means of accomplishing the purpose. The city, too, could readily make possible the holding of concerts at least once a week through next summer. What is needed, is that influential men take hold of the matter early and continue persistently until success is assured.

SATURDAY GOLFERS FEW IN NUMBER

Smallest Attendance of the Season at the Park Club—Carroll Won First Honors.

THE SCORES WERE GOOD

STEWART MADE BEST SCORE AT GOLF COMMITTEE CUP PLAY AT HILLSIDE.

Several Changes in Standing at the Park Club—Carroll in Third Position—Townley Won at Westfield.

Notwithstanding that there was the smallest attendance of the season at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, some good scores were made and some changes occurred in the standing for the two Hoops. Ray B. Carroll won the first three points for the President's cup, and Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll and Morgan T. Townsend divided the remaining three points. This gives the latter a total of four points and Dr. Carroll 6½. For the Park Golf Club cup, Morgan T. Townsend increased his lead three points, gaining a total of 31. Samuel Townsend won second honors, with a total of five, while Rev. St. John McCutchen increased his lead by a half point and Ray Carroll got the other half of the point.

The scores for these cups:

Ray B. Carroll, 101, 17—84; Morgan T. Townsend, 85, plus 2—87; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 109, 23—87; Samuel Townsend, 100, 12—88; William A. Townsend, 103, 14—89; S. St. John McCutchen, 101, 11—90; George T. Rogers, 118, 22—96.

Westfield, Aug. 24—W. M. Townley won the regular monthly handicap event at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday with a net score of 68. He was also one of those to qualify for the President's competition. There was a tie between E. H. Stern and S. V. Brewster, with an 86, for second place. Next Saturday will conclude the qualifying play for the President's competition and on September 5, play will begin for this cup.

The other scores on Saturday to this competition were these:

C. Halsted, 90, 10—80; J. A. Woodward, 95, 13—82; R. I. Townley, 99, 13—86; Chas. Hansel, 100, 11—89; L. D. Compson, 116, 26—90; A. D. Tuttle, 110, 17—93; F. G. Harris, 121, 25—96.

SERVICE AT FRESH AIR HOME

REV. R. F. H. JACOBS CONDUCTED THE SINGING AND GAVE INTERESTING T ALK.

Six Hundred People Present—Much Interest in the Exercises—Children Entertained Saturday.

Since the Children's Home at Netherwood was opened there has never been more interest shown in the work than yesterday at the Sunday afternoon services conducted by Rev. R. F. H. Jacobs, of Brooklyn. Six hundred people were present.

A service of song was rendered by twelve members of the Park Avenue Baptist Church Sunday-school, lead by Dr. Jacobs. D. M. Torrey, of Netherwood, a worker at the camp, conducted the service of prayer and Mr. Jacobs sang the solo, "Will There Be Any Stars in My Crown?" Little Willie Pomsford, one of the brightest children at the camp, sang an effective solo. Mr. Jacobs rendered two stanzas of the hymn, "Saved By Grace" and the last two stanzas were sung by Miss Florence Hawkins and Mr. Jacobs in duet. Mr. Jacobs' talk was along the line suggested by the story of the "Healing of Naaman, the Leper," from which the speaker drew lessons of obedience.

The singing by the congregation was a special feature of the afternoon. Those in charge of the services were Miss Ella Benedict and Miss Florence Hawkins, of this city; and Clarence Titus, of Elizabeth. Mr. Jacobs, the speaker, is the secretary of the National Central Committee of the Twentieth Century National Gospel Campaign. He is a well-known speaker in this part of the State.

The children at the camp were entertained Saturday by the members of the East Third Street Mission. Webster Grant provided each boy with a soldier cap and a battalion drill was held by the children in the yard. Watermelons were served during the afternoon.

MRS. EMELINE WEEKS BURIED

FUNERAL HELD AT HOME OF HER DAUGHTER, MRS. VAN NAME.

Interment at Staten Island—Member of Trinity Reformed Church.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Emeline Weeks were held last Monday from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry VanName, in Madison avenue. A. P. Nip, of Marcoonier Chapel, conducted the services, and the interment was at Staten Island, Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Weeks was born in New Haven and for many years lived in Oswego, N. Y., coming to Plainfield from that city. She was a member of Trinity Reformed Church. She leaves two sons living at Oswego and one daughter, Mrs. Henry VanName, of this city. One of the sons visited his mother a week ago Sunday, unexpectedly, and she was overcome with joy, not having seen him for some time.

Trip in Mr. Beeler's Car.

General Superintendent Huntington, of the New Jersey Central, returned last week accompanied by his family from a two weeks' trip from their former home in Iowa. The party travelled in the private car Atlas, belonging to Vice President, W. G. Besler, of North Plainfield. Mr. Huntington's mother returned with him and will visit the family in Elizabeth.

Realty Sales.

D. Foster Updike, the insurance agent, announces the sale of the following real estate within the last month: House and lot, corner Third place and East Ninth street, to Dr. R. W. Emerson, of West Front street; house and lot on Arlington avenue; house and lot at 603 West Seventh street to J. W. and M. T. Walsh, of German Valley; house and lot on Bergen street; and four lots on Halsey street to Isaac V. Davis, of Trenton.

Skin Grafting Case.

The New York Herald in its magazine section on Sunday published a half page illustrated article on the Wilcox Frederick skin grafting case by its local correspondent, Ralph L. Morrow.

ALIS TEAM WINS IN THE FIFTH INNING

Downs St. Mary's Nine in a Hard Fought Battle by Score of 5 to 2.

BATTLE OF PIOTHERS

WARRY M'LAUGHLIN SUPERIOR TO NATIONAL LEAGUE TWIRLER.

Other Games Making Up Saturday Schedule—Good Ball the Rule—Big Crowd at Alis-St. Mary's Match.

Alis and St. Mary crossed bats on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon in the second game of the series of five, and it was one of the finest exhibitions of the season. The first game two weeks ago between these teams resulted in a victory for the Saints by a score of 5 to 3. On Saturday Alis turned the tables and defeated their opponents by a score of 5 to 2. The management of the Saints materially strengthened their team, practically having a whole new line up. Doscher, the Brooklyn National League pitcher, and Dove, veteran catcher from the same city, occupied the points for the Saints, but even this strong battery could not defeat Alis.

The Alis boys touched Doscher up for eight hits, while "Warry" McLaughlin held his opponents down to four hits. The strike outs were in favor of Doscher, he having fifteen to his credit, as against five for "Warry." The latter had his own catcher, Murray, and he caught a superb game. Not a base was stolen on him and he did not have a pass ball.

In the first inning Alis drew a blank, while the Saints made one run, Taylor scoring on an error. In the next inning Bonner, at short, tried to stop a hot liner off Gastmeyer's bat and he split his left hand, taking him out of the game. Keen then went to first base and Seaman played short. In this inning Lederer scored the first run for Alis on a wild pitch and passed ball.

Neither side then scored until the fifth inning, when Alis tallied four and won the game. In the last half of the fifth inning the Saints scored one run and they failed to get any more. In the fifth inning Quinby, the new second baseman for Alis, got a two base hit and Richardson made a three bagger, scoring Kavanaugh and Quinby. Murray then singled and brought Richardson home. Murray stole second and came home on a passed ball, making four runs in all. Alis did not score after that.

The last run scored by the Saints was made by Doscher, who made a three bagger and came home on an error by Kavanaugh.

The local men on St. Mary's team, Keen, Montross, Taylor and Hewitt played good ball, but it was the opinion of many that they were in pretty fast company. It was a disappointment that Bonner, the old Crescent League player, could not stay in the game. His friends would have liked to see him play.

The Alis boys played a snappy game throughout. Quinby at second proved a valuable acquisition and put up a fine game, in fact the whole infield played up to standard. Gormley occupied center field in place of Davis, while Barnes played right field and Lederer was in left garden. They did not have much to do. In the ninth Lederer dropped a fly. He was too sure of catching it, but luckily it was not a serious error. The defeat of the Saints was largely due to their inability to hit MacLaughlin, he having them completely at his mercy.

The line-up:

Alis—Kavanagh, ss; Gormley, cf; Quinby, 2b; Richardson, 1b; Murray, c; Barnes, rf; Lederer, lf; Gastmeyer, 3b; MacLaughlin, p.

St. Mary—Hartman, cf; Seaman, 1b-ss; Montross, 3b; Bonner, ss; Burke, 3b; Dove, c; Hewit, rf; Taylor, lf; Doscher, p.

Score by innings:

Alis	0 1 0 0 4 0 0 0 0—5
St. Mary	1 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0—2

Mr. Blyth, of Brooklyn, umpired the game, and he gave entire satisfaction, his decisions throughout being fair and unimpartial.

WATCHUNG SWAMPED.

The Watchungs of Dunellen were swamped by the Metuchen ball players at the former place by a score of 24 to 1. The Dunellen team was outplayed in every way and at no time of the game was the outcome in doubt. Jesse Ayers, the Watchung writer, says freely that after the fourth and the errors behind him helped increase the score. The score by innings was as follows:

Watchung	1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—1
Metuchen	0 0 1 5 4 5 3 2 4—24

D. A. C. WON.

The Dunellen A. C. defeated the Plainfield Eagles at Dunellen Saturday by a score of 17 to 3. Good ball was played up to the seventh, when the Dunellen boys found Thron for some heavy hitting. The Eagles' game was unsteady at crucial moments and many errors were made by them. The score by innings:

Dunellen	2 0 2 0 0 2 7 1—17

NEW MARKET SHUT OUT.

The Clinton Avenue baseball players won from New Market, Saturday, 5 to 0. While making [few errors the the New Market players were weak at stick work and were unable to score. Squires received poor support.

The score by innings:

New Market	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0
Clinton Avenue	1 0 2 0 0 1 0 1 0—5

AMBITION IS THE NEED

DR. C. B. MITCHELL SAYS THE WORLD WANTS MEN OF CHARACTER.

No "$20 a Week" Man Need Apply —Sermons at City and Borough M. E. Churches.

"God pity the young man of this age who has no ambition," said Rev. Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell, pastor of the First M. E. Church, of Cleveland, O., last Sunday to an unusually large congregation in the Grace M. E. Church in North Plainfield. "To him who has not an ambition I pray that God will give one. To you who have ambitions let me say that if the world has not yet found you out it is because you have not what the world wants. If you have what the world needs and wants and cannot get unless you supply it, you can get your own market price for it. The demand today is not for $20 a week men but for men who can earn $5,000 a year. That is the kind of men that are wanted; the woods are full of the $20 a week fellows. The world, above other things, seeks a character. A man with a character can always forge ahead."

"No man living in the twentieth century can help but find Christ. He is apparent in a hundred ways. He is present in politics and in social circles, in business and at home. He cannot be driven out. Obauncey M. Depew is credited with saying that there are five millions of Pilates in this country. I say, that all these five millions of Pilates are forced to stand by with chagrin in the presence of Christ and hear his disciples repeat 'And low, I am with you always.'"

In closing the preacher said that what we do not need today in the pulpits of our churches is evangels who go about proclaiming that there is sin in the world and telling how sinful the people are. What is needed is a man with the remedy. Not the one with the statement that men are sinful. We want to know and to lean on Jesus: He is the only remedy. "More remedy and less proclaiming about the wickedness of the world," said he, "is the chief necessity of the world today."

During the offertory Miss Grace Carroll, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church choir, sang a solo and Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney offered the prayer. Dr. H. K. Carroll was in charge of the services.

In the morning Dr. Mitchell preached at the First M. E. Church and in the evening he occupied the pulpit of the borough church. The preacher is well-known in this city and many were present to hear him.

LITERARY.

In the September number of Scribner's Magazine Frederic Irland adds another to his remarkable articles on little known regions of the wilderness on this continent. "The Wyoming Game Stronghold," which leads this number, describes that great valley between the Shoshone and Wind River Mountains on the East and the Tetons on the West, where antelope by hundreds and elk by thousands congregate, and where the wild geese still undisturbed make her nest. Mr. Irland spent two months this spring, while the snow was still in the passes, observing and photographing the wild game in their stronghold.

The Popular Science Monthly for September contains the following articles: "Palm and Solo Impressions and their Use for Purposes of Personal Identification," by Professor Harris Hawthorne Wilder; "Some of the Extra-artistic Elements of Esthetic Emotion," by John Cotton Dana; "Karl Lamprecht and Kulturgeschichte," by Professor Wm. E. Dodd; "Pulse and Rhythm," by Mary Hallock; "Theories of Sleep," by Dr. Percy G. Stiles; "Hertzian Wave Wireless Telegraphy," by Dr. J. A. Fleming; "Mosquitoes and Suggestions for their Extermination," by W. L. Underwood; "The Ascending Obelisk of the Montagne Pelee," by Professor Angelo Heilprin; "Professor Shaler on Animal Intelligence," by Dr. Eug. L. Fisk and the usual departments.

Miss Carrie McLoughlin, of Elizabeth, has returned after a two weeks' visit with Miss Lizzie Cole, of Washington Park.

UNIDENTIFIED LAD NEARLY ASPHYXIATED

Found Stupified in Hotel and Now in Custody of the Police.

A DISCONNECTED STORY

CHIEF KIELY AT WORK SOLVING MYSTERY SURROUNDING THE YOUTH.

Claims He is An Orphan—Searching for a Man Named Keller—The Story of His Strange Career.

Stupified by inhaling illuminating gas, Louis Kohler, fifteen years old, was found in a room in the Hotel Kensington last Monday by a porter. The lad was found on the bed in a semi-conscious condition and was taken to the police headquarters where he was revived. There he told a disconnected story of a remarkable career for one so young.

It was evident that the boy's mind was stupified by the gas. He said that he had no parents, they having died when he was one year old. Since that time he has been shifting for himself. He has several sisters and brothers but he knows not where they are. After his parents died he went into a home in New York City. There he lived for some time. The next place he stopped at was at the poor farm at Hackensack. There a man took him to a Catholic home in Verona, near Caldwell. He lived there for some time and then went to live with a family at Jersey City.

He tired of his life there and so one day jumped on a freight train for New Brunswick. To a reporter of The Daily Press he told his story. It seems that he went to live at the home of a farmer, whose name he cannot remember. From the location given it is apparent that the boy lived near Milltown, three miles from New Brunswick. He said he went to a little school on a hill surrounded by trees which answers the description of the Oak Hill schoolhouse near Milltown. He declares he went there for five months. He says he was told that he could secure work on a farm there where he could receive $5 a day.

He declares he left his position there last week and came to this city, walking the entire distance. The lad says he was in search of a man named Keller, who, it was said, would give him work.

An attempt is being made by Chief Kiely to locate his friends. The stories told by the boy are at best and of fine texture and show that he has been well cared for.

POPULAR COMEDIAN.

Frank M. Bacon's Nephew Scoring a Hit Before the Footlights.

In a recent edition of a New York newspaper a pleasant comment is made concerning Frank Bacon, a comedian, who has been having so much success at the Alcazar in New York, during the past three years. Mr. Bacon is a nephew of Frank M. Bacon, of this city, and this is what the New York paper says of him:

"Frank Bacon, the delightfully droll comedian, who has been such a favorite with Alcazar audiences for the past three years, has decided to give up stock company work and next week will start out as a star. He has chosen for a play 'The Hills of California,' a rural comedy, written especially for him and one well calculated to display his best character style. After playing in a few interior cities he will go to Portland, where he plays for a week, and then is booked for ten months, going as far East as Chicago. He has engaged a capital company. * * * Mr. Bacon is a great favorite in New York and he embarks on his new venture with the best wishes of the entire community."

Martine vs. Smith.

The Camden Courier rightly seized up the Democratic estimate of Plainfield's silver-tongued orator when it said: "Farmer Martine, of Union County, is of the opinion that Grover Cleveland's nomination for President by the convention would be political suicide. As Mr. Martine is Democrat of the straightest sect, his opinion, especially among the Democrats of Union County, will have great weight—much greater than that of former Senator Smith, the State party leader. Union County Democrats, it may be relied upon, will not agree to give Cleveland the State delegation next year, as Smith and Little propose."—Elizabeth Daily Journal.

Struck by a Baseball.

James Sullivan, son of Michael Sullivan, of South Second street, was struck in the head by a baseball while playing in a vacant lot in the West End Saturday. He was stunned for a few seconds and a deep gash was cut over his eye. The injury is not serious.

SALAMAGUNDI PARTY FOR SWEET CHARITY

A Successful Entertainment Given in Aid of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home.

QUITE WELL ATTENDED

UNIQUE METHOD OF AWARDING PRIZES FORMS A FEATURE.

A Watermelon Eating Contest—Parlor Games and a Pie Eating Contest—The Affair Ending in a Dance.

Fully two hundred were present at the Salamagundi party held Monday at the Hotel Netherwood for the benefit of Miss Curry's Fresh Air Camp. Ten or a dozen of the more common parlor games were played and prizes awarded to the winners of each game. The award of prizes was carried on in a novel way as the prizes were suspended by vari-colored ribbons from the main chandelier and were tied up in packages, each winner cutting down with a pair of scissors the prize which by the shape of the package most appealed to him or her.

Much merriment was caused by this method of distribution as several times the articles were not exactly what the winners would have selected had the prizes not been tied up. The arrangements were in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Brown. The affair was quite successful and a goodly sum was realized for Miss Curry's work.

Later in the evening there was a donkey party, the winner of which was Miss Rose. Considerable jollity was furnished by the hotel hall boys who gave a varied entertainment of recitations and monologues. Lester Kennett rendered a monologue which was well received and a watermelon eating contest between teams of two colored boys and two white boys from this city. The colored team was victorious, demolishing a half melon in two minutes. A pie eating contest was finished up in a minute and a half. The affair was concluded by an informal dance.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Fourteenth Street Nat Wills in "A Son of Rest" remains the strong attraction.

Thomas A. Wise and John C. Rice continue to appear at the Garrick in "Vivian's Papas" which draws large houses.

"Beware of Men" is the name of the new melodrama at the Metropolis next week. It promises to make a great hit.

David C. Montgomery, the tin woodman in "The Wizard of Oz," returned to the cast Monday night at the Majestic Theatre.

An excellent vaudeville show attracts many to Riverside Park this week. Matinee and evening performances daily. Dancing every evening. Admission free to holders of round trolley tickets.

No single attraction at Coney Island in all its history has commanded the phenomenal attendance vouchsafed the Bostock Arena. A surprising feature of the exposition is the constant infusion of novelty from week to week, an effect easily secured by the Animal King by the transfer of ruritize from his several menageries traveling the country. Recently the Bostock Zoo at Atlantic City and Cleveland have been rich contributors to the Coney Island exposition.

It is not often that a comedian acknowledges in practical fashion the debt he owes the group of pretty girls who assist in his specialty, but Arthur Dunn is making himself very solid with the dainty widows in "The Runaways," who participate each night in the now famous kiseing song. Whenever the specialty is accorded a particularly strenuous succession of encores, Mr. Dunn marks the event by sending to the dressing room occupied by the six widows some confectionery treat.

It is doubtful if any Shakespearian event ever planned for New York has excited wider attention than is manifested in Henrietta Crosman's revival of "As You Like It" at the Manhattan Theatre September 7th. The marked interest which is felt in this artiste's re-appearance as Rosalind is shown by the fact that there is not a mail delivery but what contains inquiries about the engagement and requests that seats be reserved.

Mrs. J. Harvey Doane and daughter May, of East Seventh street, left this morning for a month's vacation at Point Pleasant.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Stevens and daughter, Miss Jessie Stevens, of East Fifth street, are stopping at "The Berwin," Asbury Park.

OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY OF WOMEN'S LODGE

Mispah Lodge, I. O. of O. L., Hold Celebration in Central Theatre.

IS FIFTEEN YEARS OLD

FARCE COMEDY ENTITLED "HESTER" A FEATURE OF THE PROGRAMME.

Short Session of Lodge Held—Refreshments Were Served—Those Taking Part in the Affair—Other Details.

In celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the organization of Mispah Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Ladies, the members held anniversary exercises in Central Theatre Monday. A one act farce-comedy, entitled "Hester," was produced by a number of friends of the lodge members. Those who took part were Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Willard, who arranged the programme and coached the performers in preparing for the play; Miss Clara Kester, Clarence E. Meade, Alfred Palmer, Claude Slater, Fred J. Huff, Harold Willard and Joseph Loughead. All did exceptionally well in their respective parts and little Harold Willard, in an Irish character song and buck dance, made a decided hit.

A short session of the lodge was held in the lodge rooms in Washington Hall and afterwards the members adjourned to the theatre below. Refreshments were served and music was a feature of the evening's entertainment. The lodge was organized fifteen years ago and has enjoyed a steady growth. The members are all active in the work and at almost every meeting new members are added.

STRANGE LAD FALLS INTO GOOD HANDS

Louis Kohler Given Lodging at Home of President of Common Council.

EMPLOYMENT FOR BOY

HIS ANTECEDENTS STILL REMAIN A MYSTERY, BUT KIELY HAS HOPES.

Given Work in Plumber's Shop—Says Father Was a Carpenter in New York—Lad Has Worked on Farms.

Louis Kohler, the fifteen-year-old lad found Monday morning nearly asphyxiated by inhaling gas in a room in the Hotel Kensington, has been given a job. Through the efforts of the police and of J. F. Buckle, president of the Common Council, he is now working for D. S. Dunavan, a plumber of Park avenue.

The boy was cared for Monday by Mr. Buckle who gave him a room to sleep in at his home on Westervelt avenue. In spite of his disconnected story of his history he seems intelligent and of good character. It is certain that he has lived in institutions for the poor practically all his life. That much has been gathered from his story. While sitting in front of police headquarters talking with the men Monday the boy expressed wonder at the crowds of people passing, judging from which it is safe to say that he has spent most of his time recently apart from cities. He still sticks to his story as told yesterday, with the additional statement that his father was a carpenter in New York City and was killed while at work. Since that time the boy has been living in poor farms from Jersey City to Hackensack and judging from the subdued nature of his references to them his treatment has not always been of the best.

Louis is a very respectable-appearing little fellow. He is small for his age, with small, pale features, brown hair and dressed in a well kept suit of gray.

John F. Auten, clerk of the Hotel Kensington, this morning told The Daily Press that the story that young Kohler, after retiring, arose to light the gas and turned it on slightly while looking for a match, was greatly exaggerated. Unable to find the match he again lay down, forgetting to shut off the gas. An attendant noticed the odor and woke the boy up. Kohler was not seriously affected by the amount of gas he inhaled as to be unable to eat a hearty breakfast.

Kohler was brought to the hotel by a man who signed the name of A. Kiel, and who paid for the boy's room and his breakfast. His statement was that the boy had applied to him for food and lodging.

Peter Bowers and George Gates, of Somerset street, are visiting at Sunmit.

HIS MIND AFFECTED; MAN WANDERED AWAY

Clarendon Woodward Missing Since Saturday, Was Found in Newark.

BROUGHT HOME AGAIN

CAME NEARLY BEING SENT TO AN INSANE ASYLUM.

Son of Edward Woodward, of Madison Avenue—Twenty-Six Years of Age—Acted Peculiarly Lately.

Edward Woodward, of 104 Madison avenue, notified the police Saturday that his son, Clarendon, twenty-six years old, had strayed from home. The young man, it is said, had been in charge of his father's business and that he had overworked himself, his mind becoming affected.

Early last Friday morning a Newark policeman encountered a stranger wandering in the darkness. The stranger was detained at the police station until Saturday. Experts in mental disorders examined him and pronounced him insane. Commitment papers consigning the man to the Essex County Hospital for the Insane were made out and arrangements were made to commit him as an "unknown" patient. The police decided to hold the man in their charge until yesterday.

When a police captain examined a pad he saw written thereon several times by the stranger the word "Plainfield."

The man's identification was established Sunday and he was brought home by relatives.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY FOR PLAINFIELD

Smith American Metal Company May Build a Place in This City.

ALL SKILLED MECHANICS

WILLIAM B. SMITH IS PRESIDENT OF THE CONCERN.

Manufacture Magnesium Bronze, Open Hearth Steel, Castings and Electric Steel—Have Plant in Philadelphia Now.

Another industry, that of the manufacture of hammers of all kinds, is quite likely to be located in this city in the near future by the Smith American Metal Company, of 130 Liberty street, New York. This company, of which William B. Smith, of Washington avenue, is the president, manufactures magnesium bronze, open hearth steel, castings and electric steel. For some time past the company has been having hammers made at a Philadelphia plant.

The fact that Mr. Smith is a resident of this city, which is close to the main office in New York, has led the concern to believe that it will be somewhat advantageous to have the plant established here where the rates for shipping are lower. The company has not yet determined whether to build a plant of its own or lease a building. The advantages of both will be considered and if a suitable structure can be found ready for occupancy no doubt it will be leased. If there is no such place then the company will build.

The concern will probably employ between twenty-five and fifty men, all skilled mechanics and desirable residents to have. The grade of hammers turned out by this concern are said to be of standard make and quality and a market for them is found in all parts of the world.

Lost on Board Walk.

Madeline, the six-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Blair, of Dover street, became lost in Atlantic City a few days ago and a general alarm was sent out. The police of the seaside resort were detailed to be on the lookout for the little wanderer. She was gone almost a whole day and was finally located.

Henry Nitschwitz and family, of Watchung avenue, returned home yesterday after a three weeks' vacation at Sciota, Pa.

STREET WORK BIDS DECLARED EXCESSIVE

Common Council at Its Meeting Last Monday Arranged For Re-Advertisement.

DUE TO COST OF LABOR

DETAILED BIDS AS OPENED BY CITY FATHERS AT THE SESSION.

Were Only Three Bidders—Secret Session—Time Set for Public Hearing of the Property Owners.

The principal object for which the adjourned meeting of the Common Council was held last Monday, was not accomplished, the session having been held for the purpose of taking definite action regarding the macadamizing of certain streets in the city. It was possible to get just a quorum present, Councilmen Buckle, Randolph, Gloak, Daniel, Pray and Garrigues being in attendance. Bids were received from A. I. Smalley, C. M. Meeker and W. H. Weldon, the last of Rahway. After they were read, the members took a recess to consider the bids. In order to obtain more light on what appeared to be and in reality were high figures, the bidders present were invited to join the members in secret session.

After the recess, Mr. Pray stated that all of the bids were too high, in fact much more so than was anticipated. The increase had been explained as due to the high cost of labor and material. He added that the property-owners on the streets proposed to be macadamized had been informed that the cost to them would be about 25 cents per front foot and it had been learned that the cost would probably exceed that by five cents. In view of this, the members considered it wise to re-advertise for bids, modify the specifications a little and make an effort to reduce the cost.

Mr. Pray then offered a resolution calling for new bids and setting Tuesday evening, September 8, as the time when the property-owners affected can appear and make such objections as they may have. The resolution also called for re-advertising for new bids in the official newspapers of the city.

The bids received last evening, showing the prices asked for the macadamizing of the various streets, the lowest bids being indicated by a pins mark, are these:

The only other business considered by the Council was a petition received from Assessor H. C. Dunn, in which the latter stated that Ida A. Opdyke had been assessed in error in 1891-1892 on a property at 606 West Fourth street. He said that there was no such property, that the property in question is at 610-612 West Fourth street. He communicated with the Council regarding the matter to prevent the property being included in those to be sold under the Martin Act. The petition was referred to Mr. Daniel, chairman of the finance committee, who will adjust the matter.

THE SPECIAL WORK IN THE SEVERAL BRANCHES TO BE A FEATURE.

Schedule for Star Course—Booklet Well Illustrated—Announcement of Opening Dates in Detail.

The annual prospectus of the Young Men's Christian Association for 1903-04 has just been published and it makes quite an attractive booklet. Aside from the usual advantages, spiritual, physical and social in the regular departments, the association, under the direction of the Boys' Work Committee, consisting of Orra S. Rogers, L. H. Biglow, Jr., Lindsey Best, Dr. M. H. Peabasco, J. A. Stafford and P. B. Sutton, a new department will be instituted. This will be known as the "intermediate department."

The Board of Directors of the association have realized the advisability of such a department, that the older boys might develop & more fraternal feeling. There will be the religious work with Bible classes, physical, with special classes in the gymnasium, educational tours to places of interest and socials and entertainments, including six entertainments for the benefit of the Intermediate and Boys' departments. The cost of membership in this department will be the same as in the boys' department.

The list of entertainments thus far arranged are these:

October 26, J. Rossni, manipulator and juggler; November 20, James B. Joy, "The Yellowstone Trail;" December 7, Charles R. Taggert, in his impersonations, ventriloquism and comic songs; January 22, Ronald Reeded, humorist, cartoonist, impersonator, prestidigator; February 15, E. R. Ackerman, glimpses of foreign lands; March 18, Prof. A. E. Hendrickson, magician and shadowgraphist.

Announcement of the Star Course entertainments is also made. These have been arranged:

Monday, October 12. The Mendelsohn Club, of New York; Thursday, November 26, S. M. Epedon, sketch artist and entertainer, Willard and Marler, instrumentalists and vocalists; Monday, December 14, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Labadie, Fred and William VanEps, banjo and mandolin soloists; Friday, January 1, New Century Trio and John F. Dillon, singing humorist; Thursday, January 14, Albert Armstrong, in his dramatic picture play, presenting "The Little Minister;" Monday, February 22, "The Edison Projectoscope Company, with Helen M. Gomes, readings from English and American authors.

In connection with the Intermediate department there will be a cabinet, comprising these members from the Plainfield High School, three from Leal's School and three from the North Plainfield High School, and they will select a president, vice president and secretary, while Kenneth Robbie, boys' secretary, will, as heretofore, have general charge.

The book also contains several excellent pictures, including one of the class leaders in the gymnasium. In this picture there is one of the late Elias Giles, who was killed in the Westfield wreck. The others in the picture are Percy Hand, Ray Smith, W. R. Neal, H. S. Brokaw, Arthur Denton, Walter Cahoone, Walter McNaughton, William Heinecke and Ray Collins.

Another picture of interest is that of the championship basket ball team, winners of The Daily Press trophy, presented to the team by the proprietor of this paper. Those in that picture are Ray Smith, Percy Hand, William Heinecke, Arthur Denton, Walter Cahoone, W. E. Neal and Harry Scull.

The opening of the various departments and fixed dates are:

Opening reception, September 26; fall term opens October 6; fall term closes December 24; spring term opens January 4; International examinations to be announced; spring term closes March 29; closing reception to be announced.

WILD RIDE OF A UNION SPY

Charles E. Sage Had Hair-Raising Adventures in Carrying Dispatches.

WAS NEVER WOUNDED

ONLY MEMBER OF HIS BAND TO SURVIVE THE BATTLE OF ANTIETAM.

Mr. Sage Died Last Week—Was a Cornetist and Spy—His Father Was a Cousin of Russell Sage, the Financier.

Through the War of the Rebellion as a soldier and later as a Union Spy with the usual distinction of having never been struck by a bullet or wounded in any way was the record of Charles Edmund Sage, who died at his farm in Union Village last week at the age of seventy years. Death was due to rheumatism contracted while living for days in the Southern swamp land evading the Rebels.

To many of his friends in this city and at his home in Union Village, Mr. Sage frequently told stories of his experiences while in the army. His son, Assessor Edmund Sage, of Warren Township, in relating some of his father's adventures to a Daily Press representative, told of several particularly narrow escapes his father had in eluding the Southerners during the time he served this Government as a spy.

Once after Mr. Sage had been fighting all day in the battle of Antietam, a courier came into camp with the news that Lincoln had proclaimed the freedom of the slaves. The general in command called for volunteers to carry the accompanying dispatches to the Army of the Potomac many miles distant. The papers to be entrusted to the carrier told of the movements of that division of the regiments during the next week and a reliable man was indispensible for the service. Young Sage, who was a cornetist in the band volunteered, and persisted though warned of the danger of his undertaking and the fact that Confederate spies were stationed at many points along the road. He took the commission and departed. The rain fell in torrents while he was leaving on his dangerous errand and the roads were almost knee deep in mud.

Several times Sage's horse fell and threw him but the plucky rider kept on with his treasured papers upon which so much depended. While making his way through a particularly dark spot in the woods he came suddenly upon an improvised hospital. Before the tent he saw soldiers standing, and thinking he was in a Union camp he rode up to the entrance. Then he found it was a Confederate camp. A call was made to him to halt and one fellow made a grab for his bridle. Sage, however, was too quick and in a second had wheeled his horse and was riding for dear life for some hills not far distant. The men in gray gave chase and fired volley after volley after the lone soldier, who leaned far out over the horse's neck to escape the bullets which were flying thick and fast in every direction.

Tired with his long trip through the woods Sage's horse began to weaken and the Confederate officers gained on him. Strategy became necessary. One bullet struck the crown of Sage's hat and knocked it off. Then the Union soldier threw away some of the newspapers he carried and his rain coat His pursuers fell behind in the chase while they stopped to look over the papers and when they resumed the pursuit they were too late and had to give it up. Sage then rode his horse into some bushes near by and with his horse tied to his foot slept the rest of the night. In the morning he was up and off again and before noon had the papers delivered to the general commanding. For safely bringing the dispatches through such danger young Sage was highly commended by General MacClellan. Often in relating his experiences of that night, Mr. Sage said that while he was leaning over his horse to escape the bullets he thought of his comrades starving in Libby, and declared there resolved that he would die before yielding himself a prisoner.

Upon one occasion while acting as spy for the Union Army, Sage stopped over night at the same house and in an adjoining room to those in which Confederate officers and spies were lodged.

Acting as courier and spy he was overtaken one night while on a trip from one branch of the Union Army to the Army of the Potomac. Twice during the day his horse became stuck in the bog. A light in the distance told of a house in that locality. The Yankee went to the door and was met by a handsome girl of nineteen years to whom he applied for a night's lodging. The girl said that her father was at that time entertaining two Confederate officers and that with them were two Southern spies. There was not another house in the vicinity and as young Sage was turning to leave the young woman, placed her hand on his shoulder and said: "If you will be very quiet I will help you, even though you do belong to that horrid Northern Army." She led him to a small room in the garret and on a pile of old clothes, many of which were Confederate uniforms, Sage slept through the night.

Early the next morning he heard the stamp of horse's hoofs in the yard below and through a chink in the wall saw the Confederate officers and spies stealing away from the house. Young Sage slept late and when he went below was warmly greeted by the father of his friend who had given him shelter. A hot meal was prepared for him and, with many thanks to his hosts, he departed. Years later he wrote to the young girl who had befriended him and after several months the letter was returned through the dead letter office at Washington, stamped "No such person known."

Although engaged in many battles Sage was never even wounded. His regiment went to war 1100 strong but at the close of the engagement at Antietam, there were only 120 members left and that number included the wounded. Sage is the only man who went into that battle in his regiment band who escaped alive. He was at one time confined to the hospital for rheumatism which eventually caused his death.

At the close of the war Mr. Sage located at Newark, where as a public carpenter and builder he erected a number of private and public buildings. In September 19, 1865, he married Mary Ann Koch, of Newark. He finally located at Union Village where he managed a farm until his death. He was a well-known lecturer and at one time toured the country lecturing on the war and its results. His son, Walter Marvin Sage, was the principal of the Fairview School, at Hoboken, nine years ago. The dead man's father was a first cousin to Russell Sage, the great Wall street stock manipulator.

Mr. Sage was buried last Thursday at Cromwell, Conn., where lie the bodies of many of the members of the band which went out to war along with the Fifth Connecticut. He is survived by his wife and three sons, all of whom live on the farm at Union Village.

4,000 AUTO LICENSES.

Granted in New Jersey Since March —Many for Delivery Trucks.

Since March 23 last, licenses for the use of automobiles in this State have been granted in the State Secretary's office at Trenton at the rate of 80 a day. By September 1, it is estimated there will be 4,000 licenses in operation in the State.

Licenses are being granted not alone for pleasure vehicles but for auto-trucks, and the number of the latter seems to be on the increase in the past few weeks. The first license for an auto-truck was granted about a month ago, and since then 200 have been granted. Most of these truck licenses are asked for by New York houses which send the machines to deliver goods through the State.

Under the law which was passed March 23, regarding licenses, the revocation of licenses is very difficult. This law seems to suit owners of autos very well, and will be held up as an example by adjoining States. It levies only one tax instead of exacting an annual fee as is done in some other States.

Delayed Announcement.

Newton Kane, of West Third street, and Miss May Staggard, of Cedar street, North Plainfield, were married by Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's R. C. Church, six weeks ago but the announcement was not made until yesterday. Martin Whalen and Miss Maggie Kane, both of this city, were the best man and bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Kane will reside on West Third street.

To Erect Frame Dwelling.

Plans have been filed with Building Inspector Doane for the erection of a frame house on West Front street near Plainfield avenue. Miss Mary Cooney, the owner of the property, intends to erect a two-story and attic house on the premises.

NEW EDISON BATTERY

Wizard Declares It to Be a Success in Every Respect.

Says Its Light Weight, Small Size and Great Mileage Will Drive Out Other Modes of Road Locomotion.

Thomas A. Edison, when questioned about the new storage battery which the public has been expecting for over a year, said:

"The popular impression seems to be that my new storage battery was more or less a possibility, but that it began and ended there.

"That is not so—one of them has been in operation for the last three weeks in a New York delivery wagon, and is doing all that I expected, and claimed for it.

"There is a great deal to be said for the new battery, and all in its favor. It will average more than a third greater mileage for half the weight than will the old lead battery. It has an additional advantage, inasmuch as it can be recharged at a much faster rate than the old battery. As much electricity as will send the motor 40 miles can be put in it in less than an hour.

"Ever since I took up this problem of the greater capacity battery I have worked with the idea of using it for street locomotion—in automobiles and trolleys. And now the auto battery is finished. Last Monday three friends and myself took a trial run to Atlantic City in a car containing a Morse frame and one of my batteries. We wished to attain great velocities over rough surfaces, and we succeded beyond any of our expectations. The idea was to find any defects in either the frame of the car or the battery and motor. The latter proved entirely successful, but there are a few things which can be bettered in the car.

"My experience shows me that we have much to learn from the French makers—they have been at it longer than we have, and are still several years ahead. Several of the auto makers in this country have sent for my

THOMAS A. EDISON.
(Wizard's New Storage Battery Soon to Be Ready for Market.)

battery specifications and are beginning to make types of their machine in which it is to be used.

"I have been experimenting with an electric coach to-day, and it is surprising how well it showed up. We climbed Eagle Rock, where the hill-climbing contests are held, with the greatest ease, and we really did not dare to attain our maximum speed.

"We cannot put the battery on the market in any quantity as yet. The best we can do now is to make one a day. By October we will make at least six daily, and about Christmas we will be in shape to meet any demand. The trouble has been that special machines had to be built. Another disadvantage I have to contend with is paying 40 per cent. duty on a certain sheet steel that must be imported from England or Germany, and then in only limited quantities. By Christmas three rolling mills will be able to make it for me here in this country, and then the present high price for the batteries will be reduced.

"This battery will drive all other methods of locomotion out of business, and in less than ten years the horrible odor of gasoline on the public highways will be unknown. As for a lack of recharging stations, that is nonsense. In the last month 45 new ones have been installed in the New England states alone, and this is going on all over the country.

"Next year I will wager that I can take a car of my own design, fitted with my motor and battery, and go to Chicago and return in less time and with more pleasure than any other machine in existence. There will be no breakdowns, no explosion of gas or gasoline, and the trip will be made at an even 25 miles an hour.

"Another thing, the battery will be made in such size, so that when fully charged it will run 25, 50, 75 or 100 miles, and if wanted, they will be made in any size larger or smaller. Of course, the running power of the battery will depend to a certain extent on the work it is called to do. If the roads are rough and there are many hills a charge will last a shorter time than if the conditions were such as are found in the city. But, taking the maximum of bad going, the battery will only be exhausted a maximum of 25 miles, while the Edison battery which replaced it weighed 600 pounds and drew the wagon 26 5-10 miles. Besides which the old battery occupied 12.5 cubic feet, while the Edison took up only 3.5 cubic feet.

AMUSEMENTS.

Not only is Fred. A. Stone's make-up as the "Wizard of Oz" remarkable but, being a contortionist and limber dancer as well, he is able to give a wonderfully realistic impersonation of a loose-jointed individual such as a scare-crow naturally would be. Mr. Stone's dressing room is facetiously known in "The Wizard of Oz" Company as "the stable." In one corner of it he keeps a small bale of hay with which to fill in the rents of his rag-bag attire.

Pain's fireworks are popular as ever at Manhattan Beach. The fire spectacle, "Last Days of Pompeii," seems to have made the usual hit and the amphitheatre, except on stormy nights, has held its full share of the summer night throngs. Some of the popular features introduced in the carnival part of the "Pompeii" programme are a ballet of 56 young women, a trio of trapeze performers, a troupe of carpet acrobats and a boxing exhibition. Each of these acts wins pronounced applause nightly.

At Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre an excellent production is being made this week of T. W. Robinson's well-known comedy drama, "Caste," with Hugh Ford as old Eccles and Miss Jessie Isettes, who made such a success in "The Suburban" as Polly Eccles. The excellent cast comprises Paul McAllister, George Edwin Bryant, Geo. Friend, Miss Beatrice Morgan, Miss Alice Gale and other Proctor favorites. The vaudeville will include Mason and Harris, acrobatic comedians; Reuyer Sisters, soubrettes; Adams and White, musical comedians; Al. Christie, novelty paper manipulator, and many others. The regular Sunday concert will begin at 2 p. m., and run continuously until 11 p. m.

The first concerted effort to bring under one roof an exhibition of every kind and style of garment worn by women with a view to setting the styles for the fall and winter season of 1908 and 1904 and subsequent years, has been inaugurated by the Fashion Show Company and under the name of the Fashion Show this exhibition will be open at Madison Square Garden, New York, Monday, August 31, and will close on Saturday, September 14th. For the two weeks the show is open, the public will have an excellent opportunity to inspect the latest Parisian models in an exhibition of one hundred gowns made by the leading Parisian dressmakers, expressly for the Fashion Show.

Chief among the Shakesperian revivals this fall is the appearance of Miss Henrietta Crosman in her celebrated portrayal of Rosalind in "As You Like It." Miss Crosman will open her season on September 7th at the Manhattan Theatre, New York City. She will remain there only one week, as owing to other arrangements she can give but a limited time to the Shakesperian comedy, and yielding to public demand has planned to visit as many as possible of the larger Eastern cities. Miss Crosman's Rosalind has been pronounced by the dramatic critics in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other big cities, the most artistic and attractive impersonation of the character ever given on the stage. Proof of its merit and charm is found in the fact that it attained a record run.

Never before in the history of summer amusements has such a record in attendance been attained as is shown this year at Luna Park, New York City's newest amusement resort. The original cost of more than a million dollars has already been paid and as the summer advances the crowds become greater and the forms of amusements wider in scope. Other seaside resort proprietors have not been long in learning the secret of Luna Park's success, but up to now have been slow in following it. Luna Park provides a continuous free performance of outdoor sensational attractions, so that it costs nothing more than the original entrance fee of ten cents to have an entire day's amusement unless one is desirous of taking in some of the large illusion spectacles.

Pain will celebrate his twenty-fifth anniversary at the firework's enclosure, Manhattan Beach, Thursday evening next, when undoubtedly the largest and most important display of fireworks that has yet been given in this famous home of pyrotechny will be seen. Twenty-five years is a long time for any entertainment to hold itself in the hearts of the community and remain unintrupsedly in one place. The growth of the pyrotechnic art has kept pace with the passing of time, and on Thursday evening the grandchildren of the babies who saw the fireworks first in the old enclosure back of the Oriental Hotel will look on with amusement while their parents and grandparents enjoy the beautiful colors and attractive set pieces which have become richer with age.

Musical comedy that has been dominant on Broadway with ever increasing popularity for past seasons has had its day. Froth is not substantial or lasting. And the public—even that part of it whose tastes are temporarily satisfied by shallow, glittering trifles—have wearied of those once popular "musical" type. That the very best of this form of entertainment is wanted by the majority of our theatre goers, is proved by the long and honored career of the Bostonians, the oldest operatic organization in America—an organization that has done more in bringing American light opera to a high standard than all the ephemeral companies that ever existed. For the past quarter century they have presented the ideal in comic opera. Messrs. Barnabee and MacDonald—the most prominent exponents of comic opera in this country for twenty-five years—will again be at the head of the company. Mr. Barnabee is indeed the "grand old man of comic opera." Mr. MacDonald in the zenith of his career, now shows the fullest development of his art. The engagement will be for only three weeks at the Academy of Music, New York City, beginning Monday, Aug. 24, when they will produce the greatest American opera ever written, the famous "Robin Hood."

ATTITUDE OF SOMERSET COUNTY

SOMERVILLE PAPER SAYS BOROUGH HAS NO KICK ON LICENSE QUESTION.

Discusses Matter of Changing Borough Into City—Condition of Things Not County's Fault.

The Unionist-Gazette, of Somerville, remarks as follows on the proposal of the borough to become a city:

"The North Plainfield Common Council is considering a change from the borough form of government to that of third class city. Whether this would be a wise step or not we have nothing to say, and we presume it interests no one except the citizens of the borough. But the reasons given for such a change are exceedingly questionable. It is said that the borough is troubled with 'speakeasies' which are permitted by the Somerset Court, and that the new form of government is sought in order that the granting of licenses may be under the control of the city.

"Now the fact is that there are no licensed places in North Plainfield that have not been there for many years. If there are 'speakeasies' the authorities of the borough have been very quiet about them, for not a single protest has been made to granting the renewal of licenses now in existence, and no complaints has been presented to the Prosecutor or the Court of improper conduct on the part of licenses. So it would look as though the borough authorities were themselves to blame if any 'speakeasies' exist, and not the court, as they would have the public believe. Moreover, within the past three years, at the request of the counsel of the borough, the license fees were increased from $250 to $400 by Justice Garretson.

"But if the borough should resolve itself into a city it would have no more control over 'speakeasies' than it does at present. These places would have to be brought to the attention of the Grand Jury then just as they ought to be now, and there would be less reason to expect action under the city government. The city might establish a board of excise to grant licenses, but the people of the borough would find that a much less satisfactory way than the present. It is easy to elect a body of men who are susceptible to the saloon influences, and who will be liberal with applications for licenses.

Bad News From the Farm.

Latest advices from southern Jersey are that melons, cantaloupes, citrons and late tomatoes are not at all promising. A total failure of the former is reported in some places. Lima beans are molding on the vines and peaches are rotting on the trees from the lack of warm sunshine. The potato rot is increasing, and to such an extent in portions of Monmouth county that several fields will not be worth the digging. In the northern section, a fairly good crop of hay has been gathered. Buckwheat is making a fine growth, but tomatoes and beans will be a short crop, owing to the prevailing cool nights. The havesting of oats is about completed, with only a fair yield of grain and straw. Corn is generally backward in all portions of the State.

Sweet Singer.

In society notes from Manhattan Beach last week, among the accounts of sweet singers who had entertained the patrons of the Oriental Hotel, the following comment was made of a well-known Plainfield singer of merit: "Mrs. W. L. Saunders is another of the Oriental patrons who possesses a voice of unusually fine quality, and was heard in the music room one morning the last of the week."

Somerset Fixtures.

The Somerset County Sunday-school Association will convene Tuesday, Sept. 8, at the Presbyterian Church, Basking Ridge. The County Board of Agriculture will meet in the Court House, Somerville, Saturday, Aug. 29.

For Churches Communion Wine.

Speer's unfermented grape juice for sacramental use is sanctioned by the prominent divines and physicians of this country.

CHILD DIES OF POISON.

Fourteen-Year-Old Chicago Girl, Weary of Work and Worry, Ends Life's Struggle.

Drudging from early morn until night, working day by day to earn food for herself and parents, Sarah Solomon, a 14-year-old Chicago child labor slave, found life's battle too hard for her frail constitution and she ended the struggle by drinking poison.

In front of her home at 6 Liberty street her aged father, Aaron Solomon, found her writhing in pain at 11 o'clock at night.

"It was the hard work, papa," she gasped, "the hard work. I couldn't stand it."

The father sought a physician, but no physician could be found, and, suffering intense pain, the little sufferer was finally taken by the police to the county hospital. But medical aid was of no avail, and after lingering and moaning for an hour she died soon after midnight.

"IT WAS THE HARD WORK."

Sarah Solomon, says the Chicago Examiner, was a laundress. Only 14 years old and yet she was compelled to do the work that mature and stronger women would have shirked.

She labored until her strength had left her and then she decided to die. In the morning she left home as usual to go to work. She returned shortly before supper and told her father she had quit her place.

"It's too hard work, papa," she said, "I cannot stand it. I just work from the time I get there until the whistle blows, and then I am so weak that it seems my head goes round and round."

She ate sparingly at the evening meal, and when she had washed the dishes and cleaned up the room she spent an hour reading the papers in search of a more suitable place.

Then she left the house and was not seen again until her father heard her pitiful moans in front of the house.

JOCKO TRIES TO DIE.

Sailor's Singing Awakens Fond Memories in Monkey and a Longing for Death.

A correspondent writes from Brooklyn, N. Y., that warship surgeons worked for hours trying to resuscitate one Jocko, monkey and mascot of the monitor Florida, who for the second time in one week tried to commit suicide in spectacular fashion.

Jocko is known along the coast from Pensacola to Portsmouth.

Born a Spaniard, he became an American when his ship, the torpedo boat Isla de Luzon, was captured during the Spanish-American war.

Recently Jocko has been ailing. Two Spaniards who are touring the country visited the navy yard on Wednesday last. Jocko was introduced to them, as a matter of course. The visitors talked in pure Castilian to the mascot, and he seemed to become homesick at the sound of the old familiar phrases.

JOCKO IN MEDITATION.

Officers say the monkey went aft after the visitors had left and actually wept, a most extraordinary thing for a monkey to do. He was found in the evening lying below a bunk and moaning piteously. Investigation showed that he had drunk potash, evidently, it is alleged, with suicidal intent.

Surgeons revived the monkey, but he seemed the victim of melancholia. Today the cook of the Florida, who understands Spanish pretty well, began to sing a Spanish love song entitled "La Senorita Bonita." The monkey listened for awhile, and then walked aft to the rail. There he sat for two hours, a far-away look in his face and his hands crossed.

Unobserved, he went below. A pail of lye was there. The monkey seized the pail, climbed to the main deck, and, turning toward the west, waved his hand to the outgoing craft and drank the poison. He was picked up by Landsman Evans unconscious.

DRIVING PARK TO BE USED FOR POLO

Players Will Mount Horse for Games Probably as Early as Next Spring.

THE APPLICATION MADE

TROLLEY COMPANY TO RUN CARS TO GROUNDS NEXT SPRING?

Former Councilman George P. Mellick Leader for Polo-ists—Mayor Smalley Talks—Grounds to be Graded as Soon as Possible.

Former Councilman George Mellick has made application to the officials of the Plainfield Driving Park for permission to locate polo grounds in the center of the circle made by the track. The officials of the driving park think well of the matter and it is said that the permit will in all probability be granted.

In speaking of the matter today one of the members of the driving association assured the reporter who saw him that polo and horse racing will be attractions at the park this fall and next spring. He said that there are a large number of expert horsemen in this city who would join a polo club and make such a game a large drawing card for the park. It is believed that Mr. Mellick can get for a number of Plainfielders who are members of some of the New York polo clubs.

Mayor N. B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, made the announcement that the local trolley officials had promised him that the matter of extending the Arlington avenue line to the driving park would receive their attention and that no doubt the line will be ready for next spring's attractions.

It is said that work in levelling off the interior of the track will be begun as soon as the officials of the driving association act upon the application. It will be graded and put in fine condition and it is probable that the first games will be played next spring.

FILLING IN MEADOW LAND

SQUARE MILE MADE INTO SOLID GROUND BY CENTRAL RAILROAD.

Task of Reclaiming Land in New York Bay Will be Completed in Eighteen Months.

Within the next eighteen months the Central Railroad of New Jersey will have completed its task of reclaiming its rivarian land in New York Bay off the foot of Communipaw avenue, Jersey City. The plans for the work were completed in 1900 and included the filling in of the tidewater flats at Communipaw south and east of the Central's property fronting on New York Bay. To date over one square mile of rivarian land has been reclaimed. There is still another square mile to be filled in before the work will be completed.

The filling in yet to be done is from a point directly off the foot of Communipaw avenue to a point over a quarter of a mile out into the bay and thence to a point two or three hundred feet from the National Docks and Black Tom Island. The filling in will not extend to the National Docks, it having been deemed advisable to leave a shipway between these reclaimed lands and the docks.

The work, when consummated, will be even more important in its bearing than is generally supposed. It will give the railroad company more than a mile and a half of water frontage and will enable the company to build piers on the redeemed land and lay many miles of track. Plans are being prepared for a series of large piers adapted and equipped for the quick handling of freight direct between ocean steamships and cars, as well as furnishing storage and warehouse facilities.

A small army of men, six or seven dredges and half a dozen dummy engines are required to do the work of filling in. No garbage or refuse whatever is being used. Contractor Taylor, who is superintending the work, intends to have the filled-in portion as solid as possible.

N. B. Consumption of Milk.

An exchange says that New Brunswick consumes 1,250 gallons of milk a day, or an average of half a pint to every resident. Elizabeth leads the list in the matter of milk consumption, the inhabitants of that city getting away with an average of one quart a day per capita.

Great Snakes!

Herbert L. Hetfield, of East Front street, has been missing chickens from his back yard recently and last Wednesday watched for the thief. He captured a long black snake said to have been four feet in length and dispatched it with a club.

THE SMALL BOY AND THE CIGARETTE

Lighted Match Thrown From Hayloft Started Blaze in a Barn.

THE BOY IN DANGER

FLIGHT CUT OFF, HAD TO JUMP TO A PILE OF STRAW BELOW.

Was Unhurt—Damage to the Barn About One Hundred Dollars—Fire Corner of Plainfield Avenue and West Front Street.

A cigarette, a match and a boy were responsible for an alarm of fire from box 43 at the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Front street this morning at 10:40. When the department arrived they found that a barn in the rear of Benjamin F. Buckman's house was afire. A stream was connected to a nearby hydrant and the blaze was extinguished before damage amounting to more than $100 was done.

Arthur, the son of Mr. Buckman, entered the barn for a quiet smoke. To avoid being seen by his mother he crawled into a corner of the barn, struck a match and lighted the cigarette. After the habit of small boys he threw the lighted match on the floor and then went into the hay loft to finish the smoke.

Some hay caught fire and in a few moments the lower part of the barn was ablaze. Young Buckman, according to Miss Fanny Walker, a neighbor, was up in the hay loft in ignorance of the existence of the blaze below, but enjoying his cigarette. When the smoke began to curl up about him he forgot his cigarette and started to climb down. The flames rushed up at him as he lifted the hatchway and he was a prisoner. Neighbors saw that the building was ablaze and organized a bucket brigade.

While they were at work trying to extinguish the fire they were startled at seeing master Arthur jump from the door of the hay loft upon a pile of straw near by. The boy was badly frightened but unhurt.

COL. BELKNAP WORKED HARD.

Son-in-Law of Plainfielder Has a Handcar to Fill Appointment.

In order to fill his appointment to make a speech at Grayson, Ky., says a Lexington, Kentucky, despatch, Col. Morris C. Belknap, the Republican candidate for Governor, was compelled to pull a handcar with Steve Willis, of that city, from Lexington to Beattyville Junction to catch a train for Grayson. They had the right of way, and kept the engagement, but Mr. Belknap was almost exhausted by his hard work on the car.

Col. Belknap is the son-in-law of J. B. Dumont, of this city.

BOROUGH REAL ESTATE.

Transactions Recorded in County Clerk's Office at Somerville.

The following transfers of real estate affecting the borough, have been recorded in the County Clerk's office at Somerville:

Borough of North Plainfield to Adizes A. Hoffman, North Plainfield, $8 03; John Herrmann et ux to Willard N. Apgar, North Plainfield, $1; James P. Homan to N. J. Bottling & Rectifying Co., North Plainfield, $450; Willard N. Apgar, et ux to Rose A. Garrett, North Plainfield, $1; George H. Craig to Frederick J. Hughes, North Plainfield, $1; Calvin D. McMartry, sheriff, to Union County Investment Co., North Plainfield, $6,500; Calvin D. McMartry, sheriff, to Union County Investment Co., North Plainfield, $9,600, 2d.

Applied for Franchise.

The Jersey Central Traction Company, now operating a trolley line from South Amboy to Keyport, Port Monmouth and Red Bank, has applied to the Atlantic Highlands Council for a franchise to give Atlantic Highlands a trolley system. The purpose of the traction company is to connect with the new pier recently completed by the Atlantic Highlands Wharf Company, at a cost of $45,000. Prompt and favorable action by the Council is anticipated.

Telephone Co. at Work.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company has a force of men employed on the streets of the city overhauling some of the overhead wires and renovating the transformers and distributing boxes. Some new conduit cables will be installed in different parts of the city to make room for enlargement of the local service.

Setting a Prisoner Free.

A man with rheumatism is a prisoner. His fetters are none the less galling because they are invisible. To him Ferry Davis' Painkiller comes as a liberator. Rubbed well into the swollen, stiffened joints it not merely drives away the pain, it makes the muscles pliable so that the prisoner becomes a free man. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'. 25 and 50 cts.

NO INCREASE IN BOROUGH TAX RATE

So Mayor Smalley Announces As Result of Meetings of Borough Council.

FULFILLS HIS PROMISE

HAD SAID ON ACCEPTING OFFICE THAT RATE WOULD NOT BE RAISED.

Assessed Value of Property Increased and Appropriations for Fire and Police Lowered to Make up for Loss of Stock.

It was authoratively given out today that the tax rate in North Plainfield will not be increased this year, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The work of the members of the Common Council in going over the books of Assessor Alston M. French was completed last Thursday and changes were made in some of the assessed valuations of property. This will make up the deficiency caused by the action of A. J. Brunson in withdrawing from the borough 961 shares of the stock of the First National Bank, of this city, and transfering them to Atlantic County.

Some of the property in the borough has been increased in value and this, coupled with the fact that reductions of $200 were made in both the fire and police appropriations, brings the tax rate down to the same figure as last year.

The increase in assessed valuations will come upon the new buildings which have recently been erected in the borough. In speaking of the action of the Council Friday, Mayor Smalley said:

"There will be no increase in the borough tax. If there is any increase it will be due to an advance in the County rate or in the school tax. When I took the office of Mayor this last term I promised the people that their taxes would be kept down and I still intend to adhere to that promise. The rate will remain the same even if it is necessary to cut down the expenses still more."

SURVIVED TWO SOLDIERS.

Mrs. Horn Who Died Thursday Twice Married Union Officers.

Mrs. Fanny Capron Horn, widow of Major Edward F. Young, of the N. Y. heavy artillery, and powder monkey of the Ericsson fleet on the Potomac, and of First Lieutenant Daniel Tieman Horn, N. Y. heavy artillery, died Thursday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Sattels, of East Sixth street, following a lingering illness. Her two husbands served together as close friends in the War of the Rebellion.

Mrs. Horn is survived by three children, Mrs. Joseph Sattels, of East Sixth street, a son, Captain Tieman Horn, U. S. Artillery, stationed at Fort Schuyler, and an unmarried daughter, Miss Bessie Horn, also of this city.

The funeral services were held Friday evening at 8 o'clock from the late home and the interment was at Hillside Cemetery.

Last Rites for Mrs. Hinckford.

The funeral services of Mrs. Stella Hinckford were held Wednesday, Aug. 19, from the late home on East Second street. Rev. J. A. Cubberly, of South Plainfield, assisted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of this city, officiated. During the services two favorite hymns of the dead woman, "More Love to Thee, O Christ" and "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross," were read. There was a very large attendance of friends and relatives. The pall bearers were Lewis Walker, Firman Walker, Isaac Dayton, Wm. Dayton, John Rose and Peter Rockwell. The interment was in the Baptist cemetery in Plainfield avenue.

Advice to Senator Hand.

It is alleged that the Hand faction in Cape May county "has adopted the tactics of Former Senator Reed's council in Somerset county." Senator Hand should visit North Plainfield, view the magnificent monument over the Reed political grave and then govern himself accordingly.—Newark News.

Fish for New Jersey.

Potent Pill Pleasures.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot, of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 20—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Our duty to the stranger—Deut. xiv, 7, 8; II Chron. vi, 32, 33. (Home mission.)

There is no more important problem before the Christian church of America today than that of dealing with the stranger or the foreigner in our land. The prayer of the church used to be, "Lord, open the doors of all lands to the gospel," and not only has this prayer been answered, but God has brought and is bringing to our shores thousands and thousands from other lands who are in serious need of the gospel of Christ.

The seriousness of the problem before the church today from the standpoint of the foreigner is evident when we take into consideration several important facts concerning our foreign population.

1. Their numbers. Our population in 1900, not including our insular possessions, was 76,303,387. Of this number, 10,460,085 were foreign born and 15,687,322 were the children of foreign born parents. Thus every third person in the United States is either foreign born or the child of foreign born parents. Moreover, immigration is increasing instead of decreasing. It has averaged for the past five years about 10,000 a week, and it has been estimated that there will come to us this year 650,000 foreigners, an average of over 16,000 a week. What a serious *problem confronts us from the stand*point of numbers alone!

2. Their character. The nations which produce the most undesirable classes of people are steadily sending us numbers that, while the best nations of Europe are more and more sending less immigrants to our shores. Formerly the best nations of Europe gave us their people, and to them we are indebted for much of our greatness. But today this is changed. While Great Britain, Germany, France and Greece are sending fewer immigrants, Austria-Hungary, Italy, and principally southern Italy, and Russia are sending us the scum. In the calendar year of 1900 we received 113,088 immigrants from Italy, 108,701 from Austria-Hungary and 92,486 from Russia, while in the same year there came from Great Britain but 40,532 immigrants, from the German empire 20,998, from Greece 4,664 and from France but 2,971. The worst nations of Europe are sending us their worst classes—foreign in speech, in customs, in religious beliefs and in character.

3. Their methods of settling in our land. The general tendency of the foreign element is to congregate according to nationalities in certain sections of our country, the chief places of segregation being our large cities, our great eastern industrial sections and the agricultural districts of the west and northwest. Thus our large cities have their "Little Italy," "Little Germany," "Little Scandinavia" and "Chinatown," all closely knit together by the tenacious they live surrounded by squalor and confusion and by moral and spiritual degradation. In our great industrial and agricultural centers similar conditions exist. In the very heart of such sections of our wealth as Pennsylvania entire communities can be found where foreign languages are spoken, customs worn, newspapers read, political and religious beliefs held and practiced.

The problems of such an element in our population are serious and great. These people must be lifted up or they will drag us down. Our social, political and Christian institutions are all endangered by their presence in our land. They must be Christianized and Americanized or their presence here will be a constant menace to our national welfare and Christian institutions. The church should measure up to its responsibility in this question. Solomon prayed "concerning the stranger which is not of Thy people Israel," and so we should pray and labor for the salvation of the "stranger within our gates."

BIBLE READINGS.

Neh. ii, 1-8; cxxxvii, 5, 6; cxlvi, 9; Isa. lii, vii; Nah. i, 15; Matt. xxv, 34, 35; John xii, 20-22; Acts, viii, 26-40; Rom. i, 14; ix, 1-3.

A Cathedral and Its Chapels.

Dr. Clark says: "No one shall go beyond me in devotion to Bible study or in advocacy of better educational methods for the young people of our churches. I believe with all my heart, as you know, in the quiet hour of communion, in systematic and proportionate giving, in every effort for Christian citizenship and for the home and other similar lines of effort that have grouped themselves around Christian Endeavor as we have had to expressed it, "like the beautiful chapels around a great cathedral."

English Methodist Endeavorers.

In England there are 55,005 Primitive Methodist Endeavorers, which is a gain of 4,806 over last year. Two hundred and one new Junior societies have been organized.

Quiz Box.

[Any question may be asked that pertains to any phase of Christian Endeavor work.—Address Lock Box 68, Binghamton, N. Y.]

94. S. M. E., Fair Oaks, N. Y.—The Christian Endeavor World is the official representative of the societies. It was adopted by the sixth annual convention. The president of the united society, as editor in chief of the paper, and the treasurer, as business manager of it, receive their support from the paper and not from the society. In many other ways the paper contributes to the growth and support of the movement.

95. E. N. O., Oakland, Pa.—The officers of the state and local unions freely give their services for the love of the cause.

NO OPPOSITION TO TRACTION COMPANY

Street Railway Line Will be Opened Between This City and New Brunswick.

THROUGH METUCHEN

RIGHTS OF WAY ALREADY SECURED OVER MUCH OF THE DISTANCE.

Public Service Corporation Will Not Oppose the Running of the Lines Into Plainfield, According to Manager Walsh.

The Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company, which is rapidly securing rights of way to open a trolley line between this city, Metuchen and Perth Amboy, is securing grants of land along the proposed route without any opposition whatever. Manager Thomas A. Walsh, of the New Brunswick line, said recently to a reporter of The Constitutionalist that the published reports that the Raritan Traction Company has made an attempt to secure rights of way in Metuchen along a certain route from that town to Plainfield are pure fiction. He said:

"We have been at work quietly securing the grants. It is our intention to operate a line between Plainfield and New Brunswick through Metuchen. As regards the published article to the effect that the Public Service Corporation which operates lines in Plainfield is opposed to the running of our line into the town, it is all nonsense.

"We have secured rights of way over a good part of the distance between Metuchen and Plainfield. We are going slowly so as to avoid suits. I cannot say when we will start work on the construction of the road but as soon as the route has been secured the work will be pushed forward to completion so that the road will be operating next summer."

Instead of running to Oak Tree and connecting there with the local lines, The Daily Press is told they will use the authority of Edward H. Radel, the secretary of the Middlesex and Somerset line, that the lines would connect at the end of the Park avenue road where the turn is made towards Hillside Cemetery. Mr. Radel said at that time if a franchise could not be secured at Oak Tree to pass through the town the line would be run through to New Market, which is in Middlesex County, and would connect with the local tracks at Dunellen.

So far as the officials in New Brunswick are concerned they know of no effort on the part of the Perth Amboy road to run a line between Metuchen and Plainfield. Mr. Walsh said he thought it decidedly improbable that such is the case.

Edict of Police Chief.

Chief of Police Kiely has issued orders to have all obstructions removed from the sidewalks in this city. The order will be rigidly enforced. This applies to awnings which hang in front of stores below the height prescribed by law.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, , was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had

The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 20, "The Latest News From China."

This is found in the daily press and recent magazines. Events move so rapidly that while a book is passing through the press changes take place which need an additional chapter. The occurrences now stirring China are of great importance from several points of view and have special interest to all who watch the progress of the kingdom of God. Russia, Japan, Britain, France and the United States are the most actively engaged powers. Each jealously watches the others as if its own interests were antagonistic to all others and were antagonized by them. Trade and territory are the prizes.

Every league chapter that can do so should at this time arrange for an evening of study of the Chinese situation. An outline map should be used. By preference it should be homemade, on blackboard, paper or cloth. The Russian railway across Siberia should be shown and described. Some one should in ten minutes give a synopsis of the best recent magazine articles on this scheme and its bearing on commerce and civilization through the opening of Siberia. The progress of Russia through Manchuria to an open Pacific port and the attitude of Japan and other powers and their reasons for the same should be shown.

The internal condition of China, with the power and policy of the empress dowager, the Boxers in the north, the great Mohammedan in the south, the incursion of French troops over the southern frontier—all should be treated in a brief address or essay.

The past progress of Christian missions, the present location and equipment of Methodist missions, can all be given in epitome and made clear by the map.

In many localities missionary meetings are still classed as dullest of the dull. This is more than unfortunate; it is almost criminal; it is surely sinful. With such wealth of material at hand, such thrilling incidents to fire zeal and rouse enthusiasm, there is no reasonable excuse for ignorance and apathy. A little exertion will place in the hands of any league more material than can be used in a half dozen evenings. There is no community having boys and girls of the grammar grade in public schools which has not in the past year issued to provide a programme that will open every ear and set pulses bounding. Pictures can easily be had in the illustrated periodicals which can be pasted on cardboard and passed around if no better way suggests. In many places some one will be found with skill to make a few outline sketches and charts on large sheets of paper, or the stereopticon can be used to supplement the addresses and papers.

The result will be deeper interest, clearer understanding, more fervent prayer and more liberal gifts for the work of missions. Every league should own a copy of the report of the Church last missionary convention issued by the Methodist Book Concern.

Living Sweetly Amid Trials.

Many of us find life hard and full of pain. The world uses us rudely and roughly. We suffer wrongs and injuries. Other people's clumsy feet tread upon our tender spirits. We must endure misfortunes, trials, disappointments. We cannot avoid these things, but we should not allow the harsh experiences to deaden our sensibilities or make us stolcal or sour. The true problem of living is to keep our hearts sweet and gentle in the hardest conditions and experiences. "If you remain the snow from the hillside in the late winter you will find sweet flowers growing there beneath the cold drifts, unhurt by the storm and by the snowy blankets that have covered them. So should we keep our hearts tender and sensitive beneath life's fiercest winter blasts and through the longest years of suffering and even of injustice and wrong treatment. That is true, victorious living.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Ever Upward.

Sin is not cumulative, but goodness is. He who does good has all things in his favor. He who does evil is resisted by all things. If this were not so progress would be impossible. This world has ever moved upward without interruption, and it will continue to do so until God reigns perfectly in all hearts.—Universalist.

"All My Need."

Though I am weak, 'tis strength to know The Arm beneath me is not so. My weakness renders me secure; The hiding place it seeks is sure.

Though I get lost and go astray, My Lord will guide me all my way. My wayward feet may heedless be, But He ne'er loses sight of me.

Though danger hover by my path, Defense for me my Keeper hath. I may not see, I may not know, But He is nearer than my foe.

Though I lack wisdom—simple, blind— Of Him I yet may seek and find. I ask, He always gives to me, Upbraiding not, abundant, free.

While, I can nothing do alone, Together with the Mighty One I can do all things, since His power Is sufficient for every hour.

When tribulation is my lot, The Comforter forsakes me not. The world brings conflict. He gives peace, His spoken. The winds and tempests cease.

Though I am poor, He maketh me Richer than kings and princes be, For I have all things and abound, The heir of earnest joys I've found.

Though I the stingh vale must tread, He shadow hath for me no dread. Death's twilight sunrise will become, And wings of light will bear me home.

He who supplieth all my need As here the pilgrim path I tread Will be my Good—and only He— And this is heaven, I know, for me.

—Rev. A. Parke Burgess, D. D.

S. S. SWACKHAMER FOR GOVERNOR

Party Leaders Sized Him Up at the Farmer's Picnic Yesterday.

PLEASED BY HIS SPEECH

THEY NOTED THE STRONG HOLD WHICH HE HAS ON THE FARMER VOTE.

His Friends Claim That He Would Make Good Run in City as Well as in County as the Democratic Candidate.

That Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, is being seriously considered as a possible candidate for Governor is shown *by the fact that there were many lo*cal and State Democratic leaders present Aug. 19, at the Farmer's annual outing at Flemington where the "Bill Nye" of Somerset made the principal address of the day.

Among the leaders who heard Mr. Swackhamer's speech were Senator John R. Foster, of Three Bridges; Senator William O. Gebhardt, of Clinton; Former Senator James VanCleet, of New Brunswick; E. B. Potter, of Port Oram; and others including David Carney, of North Plainfield.

Their object was two fold; first, to see how the farmers stood on the matter of Swackhamer for Governor; and second, to note the qualifications of the Assemblyman for such a position. They seemed pleased at the enthusiasm which the Assemblyman aroused among farmers present from almost every county in this part of the State.

Judging from the conversation of several leading Democrats in one of the down town hotels last evening, the chances of Swackhamer for a nomination are good. He not only has a strong following in the country but his friends in this city and at Somerville are working hard for him.

At first the name of Swackhamer as a possible candidate for Governorship brought a smile to all within hearing distance but now it is quite different. His friends seem sure that he could make a good run.

COUNTY ELECTION BOARD.

Elected Officers and Discussed New Primary Law.

The Union County Board of Elections and Registry met in the temporary court room in the Veteran Zouave Armory Aug. 19, and organized by the election of John L. Crowell, of Rahway, as chairman and C Addison Swift, of Elizabeth, as secretary. S. Rasling Ryne, of Rahway, was appointed clerk.

The new primary election law was discussed, especially in its effect on the appointment of local election boards. Under the old law the election boards held from September 11 of one year to September 11 of the next. The primaries, under the new law, occur on the same day as the first day of registration, which is September 8. The term of office of the old election board expires on September 10, and the question has been raised as to who is to sit on September 8. The lawmakers made no provision for this exigency, and confusion is threatened where the old boards have not succeeded themselves. The county board discovered this, but were not able to determine what disposition to make of it. It was thought the old boards will have to resign, but the old boards might not fall in with the idea.

DIED OF PARALYSIS.

Mrs. Julia C. Musgrave, a Former Resident, Passed Away in California.

B. F. Hazard, of 11 Mountain avenue, has received word of the death in Los Angeles, Cal., of Mrs. Julia C. Musgrave, wife of George R. Musgrave, who formerly lived in this city. Death resulted from a stroke of paralysis. Mrs. Musgrave was a member of the First M. E. Church, of this city. She was also a worker in the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Her husband conducted an antique furniture store on West Front street until the Klondyke gold fever struck the East. Mr. and Mrs. Musgrave remained in the Klondyke for some time and prospered, afterwards locating in Los Angeles.

Masonic Orphanage.

Masons in every part of the State have been interested in the new orphanage to be built on the grounds of the Masonic Home at Burlington. Every lodge but one in the State has been heard from in the way of contributions and that one is expected to report soon. The committee on the home met in Newark this week, and awarded the contract for the construction of the new building to J. D. Lippincott, of Burlington. His bid of $31,675 was the lowest received, there being six others.

MEN OF LOFTY IDEALS NEEDED

Democratic Nominees Should be Men of High Character Says Mr. Swackhamer.

ADDRESS TO FARMERS

INTRODUCED AS NEXT DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

The Assemblyman Was Enthusiastically Received—Republican Party Too Long in Power, He Said—Democratic Needs of New Jersey.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, was boomed as the Democratic candidate for Governor at the Farmer's Alliance at Flemington, Hunterdon County, Aug. 19, by Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook. There were at least ten thousand people present and when the nomination was made following an address by the "Tall Sycamore from Somerset," the people cheered enthusiastically. In introducing the speaker, Senator John R. Foster, of Three Bridges, paid him the high tribute as did Senator William O. Gebhards, of Clinton.

"The Democratic needs of New Jersey as shown by the last Legislature" was the topic of Mr. Swackhamer's speech.

In opening his address, Mr. Swackhamer said that the farmers are public spirited men who have the interests of the county at heart. That there are honest men in the rank and file of the Republican party he had no doubt and was also certain that in the Legislature also there were some high minded and conscientious Republicans who stood with the Democratic party in opposition to the bad legislation for the benefit of the trusts. He believed that the vast body of the Republican party deplored with the Democrats the policy that had been pursued. Continuing, Mr. Swackhamer said:

"The Democratic party should push to the front men whose lofty character and stainless lives are above mercenary tendencies and contemptible conduct in politics—men that have shown an interest in the country's welfare—men that have the brain and moral stamina which go to make up a genuine statesman, and the demogogue and narrow-minded partisan should be weeded out.

"I believe the time has come when the people are looking towards the Democratic party with some hope and confidence, and if the party should select for office men of high integrity and marked ability, success would be sure. I believe that any party or individual that has held a long lease of power tends to become corrupt. It is the law of human nature. Men will become reckless and daring and even degenerate, when they have been long in power. It is a wholesome thing to rebuke any organization that has fallen into this condition and this has been done with political parties from the beginning of our history.

"The independent voter in this country can be depended upon to right the wrongs that occur from this cause and by the action of this element in politics, the perpetuity of free government is assured. I believe the great body of the American people today could be trusted with self government as Jefferson and Lincoln had said, and I feel it is the great privilege and solemn duty of every true American citizen to assert his independence and his right as a sovereign under the laws and constitution and to look beyond the narrow confines of party to the country and national prosperity beyond. The farmers of Hunterdon County I rely upon to approach the polls as a religious altar fully conscious of the far reaching consequences of the influences wielded by the ballot. I believe you are men who have regard for the Eternal as well as the temporal, that you look through time into Eternity and realize that you are to be called upon to account for the manner in which you exercise a power which might settle the destinies of millions yet unborn."

Other speakers at the range were Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook; Senator John R. Foster, of Three Bridges; Professor John B. Smith, of New Brunswick; Senator William O. Gebhardt, of Clinton; James R. Brown, of New York, and E. E. Potter, of Port Oram.

Married by His Honor.

Miss Ellen Booth and Henry Arnold Jones, the latter a machinist employed at the Pond Machine Tool Works, were married Wednesday evening by Mayor O. L. Jenkins. The ceremony, a quiet one, was performed at the home of William Whitehead, 904 West Third street. The couple both residents of this city, will continue to live here.

HE IS A HOLLANDER.

Mr. Tulp Has Had Varied Career Preceeding Training for Ministry.

Mr. A. P. Tulp, who is the regular supply at Marcounier Chapel, and who has been occupying the pulpit at Trinity Reformed Church during the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, has had a somewhat varied career for a young man. His full name is Alke Peter Tulp and his parents are true Hollanders, his father being born at Groningen and his mother at Alkmaar, Holland. Mr. Tulp was born in New York City, and attended Public School No. 17, on 46th street, near Sixth avenue, New York. He afterward secured a clerkship in O'Neil's dry goods store. While working there a daughter of the proprietor of the store took a deep interest in him and at her expense he pursued a course of study in Amity Theological Seminary, New York. After graduating he continued his studies at Rutgers Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, where he is at present preparing for a life in the ministry. He has much ability and a bright and successful future is apparently before him.

SUCCESSFUL SALE.

The Plainfield Land and Building Company Disposes of Many Lots at Auction Sale.

The auction sale of the Plainfield Land and Building Company on Saturday was very satisfactory, considering the large number of people out of town. There were thirteen lots sold to the following persons: Seaman Williams, two lots; Chas. M. Meeker, two lots; Peter Christianson, one lot; Adam Neuman, four lots; Ernest Thompson, 1 lot; Charles Wilson, two lots; A. L. Perce, two lots. Prices ranged from $4 to $6 50 per foot. The Plainfield Land and Building Company now offer the remainder of the lots at private sale.

House Afire.

ON TRACK OF MISSING MAN

SERGEANT BOWDEN SAID TO BE WITH NINTH INFANTRY AT FORT WAYNE.

Experiences in Philippines—Relatives Trying to Locate Him—Story of Patrick Lyons.

Sergeant John T. Bowden, who has several times been reported as missing from the U. S. Regular Army, is now believed to be with the "fighting" Ninth Infantry, stationed at Fort Wayne, Michigan. Many of his whereabouts was brought to Plainfield by Patrick Lyons, of the Seventh Infantry, who has just come on a furlough.

According to Lyons' story he met Sergeant Bowden a year ago last May and found the latter ill in the Philippines with yellow fever. Bowden recovered and after being discharged enlisted in the Ninth Infantry, now at Fort Wayne, Mi. Bowden's relatives in this city will now communicate with the War Department in an effort to locate the missing man and there seems to be good reason to believe the search may be found.

Sergeant Bowden has had a long experience in the Philippine Island service, originally enlisting in the Eighteenth Infantry, then going with the Seventh Infantry and afterward enlisting in the Ninth, which is considered the "crack" regiment among the regulars.

FAR FROM A CORPSE.

Politically or Otherwise Says News of James E. Martine.

Farmer Orator James E. Martine, of Plainfield, has again announced that the nomination of Grover Cleveland for the Presidency by the Democrats would be political suicide. The farmer orator may be mistaken. He ought to remember how often he has gone down to defeat himself at the hands of his enemies, and yet he is far from being a corpse, political or otherwise. —Newark News.

Civil Service Examination.

By order of the United States Civil Service Commission an examination will be held for the clerk-carrier service on November 18. All persons wishing to avail themselves of this opportunity may receive applications of the Secretary upon application at the postoffice. Applications must be filed with Secretary W. R. Sharp for the examination at the hour of closing on October 19th.

Save the Children.

Ninety-nine of every one hundred diseases that children have are due to disorders of the stomach, and these disorders are all caused by indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is just as good for children as it is for adults. Children thrive on it. It keeps their little stomachs sweet and encourages their growth and development. Mrs. Henry Carter, 708 Central St., Nashville, Tenn., says: "My little boy is now three years old and has been suffering from indigestion ever since he was born. I have had the best doctors in Nashville, but failed to do him any good. After using one bottle of Kodol he is as well baby. I recommend it to all sufferers." Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

READY PRESENCE OF MIND

THE ONLY THING THAT SAVED A DISASTER AT HOME OF MRS. LORTON.

Stove Wrapped in Flames Carried Out to Lawn—Oil Tanks Blazed Up.

Only strong presence of mind on the part of Mrs. Eugene V. Lorton prevented a serious catastrophe at her home, 507 Plainfield avenue, Friday noon. She was preparing dinner on an oil stove, and after her cooking was concluded she turned the wicks down, intending to extinguish the flames.

The wicks must have gone down in the oil tanks, for a second later the stove was enveloped in flames. Mrs. Lorton's two children were close by her at the time and her first thoughts were of them. Putting them in a place of safety, she picked up the oil stove and carried it out doors on the lawn. The stove was supplied with two oil tanks and the cooking part was fastened by two hooks. After releasing the hooks, Mrs. Lorton pushed the stove over with her foot, thereby saving the valuable part of it, while the oil was allowed to burn out in the tanks. The experience was an exciting one, and it was only through Mrs. Lorton's carefulness that serious damage was prevented.

Boys Broke Windows.

Small boys playing baseball in the school yard behind the Somerset street school have broken a number of the windows. Some of the panes broken were large and expensive.

This famous remedy does for the stomach that which it is unable to do for itself, even if but slightly disordered or overburdened.

Like a Comet in the sky comes the star of health to the weak and weary despondent dyspeptic, curing all stomach troubles and digestive disorders.

Kodol supplies the natural juices of digestion and does the work of the stomach, relaxing the nervous tension, while the inflamed muscles and membranes of that organ are allowed to rest and heal. It cures indigestion, flatulence, palpitation of the heart, nervous dyspepsia and all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying and strengthening the glands, membranes of the stomach and digestive organs.

DOWN WITH SLOT MACHINES

JUSTICE EHLIEN, OF MT. BETHEL, INAUGURATING A CRUSADE.

His Coming Announced by Flying Cupidor at the Mt. Bethel Hotel.

Justice Richard Ehlien, of Mt. Bethel, having recently heard that slot machines are in violation of the State laws, and knowing that one was in operation at the Mt. Bethel Hotel, of which Frank T. Rice is the proprietor, started a crusade on Thursday night.

The Justice visited the hotel and his entrance was announced when a large sized cuspidor was seen flying through the bar-room at the slot machine. Of course, the proprietor objected and a tussel between the Justice and Rice followed, with the result that the machine was put out of business and the exponent of the law won a victory.

It is said that Rice had recently been warned that the machine was against the law, but that he paid no attention to the warning and continued to run it. Justice Ehlien says that he will put every slot machine in his territory out of business, if he has to resort to force to do it.

HIGH JINKS.

All Kinds of Amusements at Labor Day Shoot and Picnic of Independent Gun Club.

Great preparations are under way for the Labor Day events at the Independent Gun Club at their grounds on Maple avenue. It was announced yesterday that prizes amounting to $250 will be the cash awards to winners of the events at the targets, traps and in fancy shooting. The medals for the last year will be distributed and among them will be 10 gold ones to the winners of the special contests.

A picnic will be another feature of the day. The festivities at the grounds will begin early in the morning and will last until evening, when it is probable that dancing will be enjoyed. Visitors are expected from out of town and many members of the Singing Society Aurora, of New Brunswick, have promised to be present as guests of the local members. The committee having in charge the arrangements for the day's events consists of Matthias Mensenbach, Frank Schaefer and Otto Barry, and the officers of the club.

WED IN NEW YORK.

Frank Parsons, of This City, and Miss Jerrold, of Connecticut, Married.

A quiet wedding was celebrated in New York Monday, August 17, when Frank Raymond Parsons, formerly of Bristol, Conn., now of this city, and Miss Ida Louisa Jerrold, of Glastonbury, Conn., were married. Mr. and Mrs. Parsons have taken up their residence in this city, where the groom is employed by the Rogers' Corporation in Madison avenue.

No Place Like It.

There are seashore resorts everywhere but few sections can compare with the famous New Jersey Coast and here is nothing more beautiful. The bathing is the finest, the climate delightful and the surroundings enchanting. There are fine roads in every direction and the traveler is in the midst of a region in every way to his liking. Likewise the interior of Jersey is interesting from every standpoint. The General Passenger Department of the New Jersey Central has just issued a profusely illustrated book on New Jersey entitled "Seashore and Mountains," which is sent to any address upon receipt of 6 cents in stamps by C. M. Burt, General Passenger Agent, New Jersey Central, 143 Liberty street, New York.

Rap at Mr. Swackhamer.

Assemblyman Swackhamer, of this county, spoke at the farmers' picnic in Hunterdon County on Wednesday, where he was saluted by ardent Democrats as the next Governor. This jollying has been carried to such an extent that our Sunny Sam really regins to assume an executive air, and the Democratic papers are taking it quite seriously. The nominating convention is a year away, however, and lots of things may happen in the mean time. Should the Republicans make a strong fight this fall on Assemblyman they could defeat Mr. Swackhamer for reelection, and then his gubernatorial pie would be all dough.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

RELIANCE IS FASTER

American Yacht Wins a Hard Fought Race.

SHAMROCK A DANGEROUS ADVERSARY

Iselin's Fleet Winged Skimmer's Official Margin Over Time Allowance Was 1 Minute and 19 Seconds at the Finish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—In a glorious whole sail breeze over a triangular course, ten miles to a leg, the fleet footed cup defender Reliance again showed her heels to Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, taking the second race of the cup series of 1903 by the narrow margin of 1 minute and 19 seconds. It was as pretty and as hard fought a contest as has ever been sailed off Sandy Hook, and had the wind not fallen during the last ten minutes the record for the course, 3h. 12m. 15s. made by Columbia two years ago in her memorable race against Shamrock II., would have been broken. As it was, Reliance sailed the thirty miles within 2 minutes and 30 seconds of the record, which speaks wonders for her speed in the wind that was blowing.

CAPTAIN BARR.

The Reliance did not win by so handsome a margin as her admirers wanted to see, the Shamrock showing splendid qualities in the best to windward, which was the first leg of the course.

All of the Reliance's gains were on the two reaches that finished the triangle.

There were no mishaps, and the Shamrock showed a decided improvement over her form of last Saturday, due, no doubt, to the change in trim.

The official boat fired the preparatory gun at 10:45 o'clock.

This meant that the warning cannon, giving the contestants five minutes to prepare, would be fired at 10:55. Long before the course signals were displayed the masters of the aquatic duelists were busy in hammer and tongs fashion with each other. Barr, the master of the American boat, resorted to his old tactics of chasing Captain Wringe, the sailing skipper of the challenger, about the broad expanse of water inside the excursion fleet.

It was a magnificent test of nautical generalship for the first ten minutes, and for the first time since the two men measured brains Wringe won, being clever enough to work to the northwest of the starting line and get from under his rival.

It was a sacrifice, however, for when time was eventually taken the Irish challenger was handicapped, crossing nineteen seconds after the handicap gun was fired at 11:02. This nineteen seconds was time lost, the official start of Shamrock being reckoned at 11:02.

Meantime Barr, finding that Wringe was too clever for him, had gone over the line about his own business, his official time being taken at 11:00:26.

As the Reliance crossed the line one minute and twenty-four seconds ahead of Shamrock, it was apparent that she would have to lead the challenger at the finish by more than three minutes and twenty-one seconds to win the race. This figure was obtained by adding to one minute, twenty-four seconds, the official time allowance given by Reliance to Shamrock of one minute fifty-seven seconds.

Once fairly away Captain Wringe of Shamrock III. resumed his tactics of the previous race. He bore off a good rap full and sailed through Reliance's lee and out under her lee bow, while Captain Barr pinched Reliance close into the wind and began to cover the distance to the windward mark. Captain Wringe's maneuver gave him a clean run of interference, and when once satisfied that Reliance could not blanket his boat he flattened in his sheets and began to point closer to the wind. Captain Barr, however, was nursing Reliance up to windward in masterly fashion.

Half an hour after the start the gap between the two boats had widened materially, Reliance pointing higher and Shamrock footing faster. They were half a mile apart when they tacked off Highland Beach at 11:42. The Reliance was the first to go about. When both yachts were filled away it was clear that Reliance was gaining. Shamrock III. was far astern and very little to windward of Reliance's course. Meantime the wind had been increasing and was now blowing at the rate of seven knots. Carrying a hard full Shamrock III. was [illegible] gaining, moving through the water at a fast clip and making comparatively more fuss under her lofty canvas than Reliance, a heavy, powerful boat, [illegible] Reliance into the wind's eye. [illegible] baby jibtopsail [illegible] sought to make her gain by outpointing the British boat, while the latter endeavored to make up for what she lost in pointing by footing faster with a rap full.

At noon the wind had increased to ten knots and hauled about a point to westward, so that both yachts could lay a straight course to the turning mark, not more than two miles distant. They were keeling hard and dragging their lee rails through a lather of froth, making at least twelve knots. Without making another tack both boats made the turn of the first mark as follows: Reliance, 12h. 21m. 30s.; Shamrock, 12h. 24m. 45s.

Though the Reliance had a lead of 3m. 15s., she still lacked six seconds of making up the time allowance and the difference of 1m. 24s. at the start. Officially the Shamrock III. was still seconds ahead of the slippery Yankee craft, but it was evident that the latter had won the race barring accidents. In a breeze varying from four to ten knots an hour she had made good the time allowance in a ten mile thrash to windward, and there was every reason to believe that in reaching and running, which are her two strongest points of sailing, she would quickly overcome that official six seconds. Both captains broke out balloon jib topsails when they squared for the second turn.

The wind was so far aft that they quickly discovered that instead of being a broad reach, as intended, the course to the turn was a run. Spinnaker booms were guyed out, and the great sails added to the tall reachers of canvas. Staysails were taken in, and with spinnaker booms guyed well forward the yachts ran away for the turn. Both were heading off their course a bit in order to make their spinnakers draw well, and they ran that way for half an hour, when the Reliance smothered her spinnaker and began to set her staysail. During that time she did not appear to have gained an inch, but immediately upon laying her true course she began to draw away. Ten minutes after Reliance the Shamrock III. also took in her spinnaker, set her staysail and headed for the mark. With the wind over their quarters both yachts made fast time of it, but it was apparent that Reliance was gaining. They made the second turn as follows: Reliance, 1h. 17m. 50s.; Shamrock III., 1h. 21m. 40s.

The Reliance was leading by 3m. 55s., having gained 40s. in the run across from the first to the second mark. She had overcome the time allowance, made good the difference at the start and established a margin to her credit of 34s. With a close reach still to be made there was faint hope for the challenger.

The Reliance whirled about the mark, gybed over, trimmed in her sheets and roared away on a close reach toward Sandy Hook lightship and the finish line. She was three-quarters of a mile away before Shamrock III. rounded the mark. Both yachts were heeling before a twelve knot wind from south by west and were sailing at least one mile an hour faster than the wind was blowing. Their sheets were eased just enough to put them on almost their best point of sailing and one upon which Reliance has often demonstrated that she is faster than any racing craft ever built. She was heeled just enough to bring her long overhangs to bear and give her the benefit of her great sailing length. The guide vessel Constwise was scurrying along ahead of her at full speed, but Reliance was overhauling her inch by inch and when the lightship hove in sight, about two miles away, was not more than a quarter of a mile astern of the guide vessel. A mile farther on the Constwise sheered off and gave Reliance a clear course to the finish.

As the wind softened Reliance first set a baby jibtopsail, which Shamrock had been carrying since turning the second mark, and then exchanged it for a big reaching jibtopsail, in which Shamrock III. followed suit. The two yachts held their relative positions for about a mile. When Reliance was a quarter of a mile from the finish line the wind died away considerably, but Shamrock III. came booming along carrying a splendid breeze and fast overhauling the leader. It looked as though the British boat was going to get within her time allowance, but the finish was too near, and Reliance slipped across it with one minute and nineteen seconds to spare. Shamrock III. finished in a dying breeze.

The third race will be sailed on Thursday.

Sir Thomas Lipton said:

"The only thing I can say is that we did better than in the last race, which is hopeful. I know my defeat at a little over one minute. If I make as much progress in the next race as I did in this the race is mine. I will be a good bit ahead in the finish of the third race. I was more than pleased with the way my own boat was handled. It is hard to admit it, but the best boat won."

THIRTEEN INNINGS AND BUT ONE RUN

Scotch Plains Puts Up Great Article of Ball, Though Defeated.

WESTFIELD'S VICTORY

ONE-HAND CATCHES AND STOPS OF HOT LINERS PLENTIFUL.

Best Game of the Season—Such a Scene of Joy Has Not Been Witnessed at Recreation Park—Details of Remarkable Game.

Manager Denman's Westfield team and the crack Scotch Plains nine waged a battle royal for supremacy at Recreation Park Saturday and not a man on either side was able to cross the rubber during twelve innings and not until the thirteenth was the match decided in favor of Westfield. The support given both Waller and Davis would send some of the National League games into the paroxysms of joy. One hand catches and stops of hot line hits were plentiful on both sides, robbing both men of what seemed to be sure base hits, while the outfield for both teams played an errorless game.

Flannery's catch of Waller's long hit in Westfield's half of the eighth was one of the best running catches ever made on the ground, and steered defeat off for the visiting team, for the time being, as Jones would certainly have came home from second base had he missed it. "Red" Waller pitched one of the best games he has ever pitched for Westfield while Lefty Davis was at his best and at several stages of the game by good hard work, prevented Westfield from scoring, especially in the twelfth inning when, by bunting the home team, landed a man as far as third base and another on second base, only one man was out and the local fans were joyous, as a little hit or a long fly meant victory but Davis settled down and the next two batters were quickly retired and the game was saved again.

Before starting the thirteenth a conference was held and it was decided to bring the game to a close if neither side was able to score. Scotch Plains went to the bat in their half of the last inning with blood in their eye, the sun had long since set in the West and they knew that all Scotch Plains was depending upon them to win out in one of the greatest games ever held, but they failed, going out in one, two three order. Capt. Mallon's men went to the bat in their half, determined to win or die, but their hopes were beginning to wane as Sporhing, the first up, struck out, then came Davis' one mistake of the game, Waller was presented with the first pass to base "Lefty" had given, in the whole game. Barry followed with a hit to Allen, which advanced Waller to second base, Mallin then came up and drove out a pretty single to right center field. Waller started on this hit and by the time Flannery could field the ball in, Waller had crossed the plate and won the game by a hair, as ball and runner were there together without one second to spare.

Pandemonium reigned, Westfield rooters in their enthusiasm, lugged Scotch Plains followers and a regular ovation was given both visitor and vanquished as they left the dust of battle behind them in the arena. Mr. Cullim's impartial umpiring was one of the nice features of the game, but few kickers being registered against his decisions. The following is the box and tale of the great battle:

COUNTY TAX MAY HAVE EFFECT ON BOROUGH RATE.

Elston M. French Chosen Chairman of Board for the Fourth Consecutive Time—State School Tax Rate 3.17.

The Somerset County rate has gone up nearly five points, to a fraction above $.62, the highest county rate in the State, and it seems likely that even the efforts of the borough tax assessor will not make it possible to keep the rate at the old figure.

All this became public Tuesday at the semi-annual meeting of the Somerset County Board of Assessors in the Court House at Somerville. Every member of the Board was present with the exception of the representative of Warren township. Elston M. French, of North Plainfield, was elected chairman for the fourth consecutive year, and Frank T. Rose, of Somerville, was chosen secretary.

It was stated that there was an increase in the total ratables of the county of more than $100,000, the most of it coming as usual from the larger towns, the farming sections running behind. The increase of five points in the county rate was caused by the demand of the freeholders for $10,000 more than formerly, an advance in the appropriation from $110,000 to $120,000.

Considerable criticism was heard of this action of the freeholders. The additional demand was necessitated, it was said, by the policy of the freeholders to pay for all improvements inaugurated by them in cash. This brings the total burden upon present tax payers instead of leaving the debt to be paid in part at least by posperity.

The State school tax was announced to be the same as last year, a trifle more than $.17.

A vote of thanks was extended Mr. French for his valuable service as chairman for four years. This was Mr. French's fifth year as a member of the board. During his term in the chair he has brought about the adoption of a systematic method of preparing the ratables.

The news of the increase in the county rate does not come altogether as a surprise. In announcing that the borough rate, as distinguished from the county rate, would be kept to the old figure of $2.50, Mayor Smalley stated the other day that an increase in the county rate was to be expected.

HOSTELRY SOLD.

Fred Nelson Conveys Washington Hotel in the Notch to Hugo Maul, Who Will Reopen Resort.

Fred. A. Nelson has conveyed the Washington hotel property, in the Notch to Hugo Maul, of this city. Mr. Maul, it is said, exchanged three lots in town for the resort. E. D. Barrett consummated the deal.

The reason given by Mr. Nelson for selling out is because of the ill health of his wife. Mr. Nelson purchased it four years ago from the late Mrs. Katherine Finger, whose husband was proprietor several years previous to that. Mr. Maul will, it is said, reopen the place in the near future.

Extension of Free Delivery.

Now that two extra sub-letter-carriers have been appointed for the local office there seems to be an excellent chance for the opening up of the free delivery system in Prideville. There is a large settlement in that part of the borough and it is argued that the residents are entitled to this system. It is understood that the postal authorities have the matter under consideration.

Law Thomas at Sagay.

In a recent announcement of the school teachers employed by the Government in its new possessions, there appears the name of L. S. Thomas, formerly of Dunellen. He was appointed July 15, 1901, at a salary of $1,000. He is now stationed at Sagay, Province, of Misamis, Island of Mindano, Philippines.

Reunion of Veterans.

The annual reunion of the survivors of the Ninth New Jersey Volunteers will be held at the rooms of Aaron Wilkes Post, G. A. R., Trenton, Wednesday, Sept. 16.

Y. M. C. A. TENNIS CONTEST

A CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENT IN DOUBLES NOW ARRANGED.

Play to Start Tuesday—Pairs Completed—Appropriate Trophy to be Awarded.

Tennis teams to contest for the Y. M. C. A. doubles championship to be started Tuesday on the Association courts were chosen by lot Tuesday. There were eighteen contestants enrolled to compete and the drawing resulted in the pairing off of the following men: Collier and Woodland, Sebring and Ailholm, Collins and Mundy, Nischwitz and Long, Robbie and Anderson, Weintraub and Scull, Koons and Miller, Denton and Sampson and Rogers and Spicer.

Play will be started early Tuesday morning and will be played in the early morning and late evening to accommodate the men, some of whom are commuters. In the first round, Robbie and Anderson will meet Weintraub and Scull at 6:30 in the morning and Koons and Miller and Denton and Sampson will contend for superiority at 5:30 in the afternoon. Saturday afternoon there will be match play between Collins and Mundy and Nischwitz and Long and also between Collier and Woodland and Rogers and Spicer. Sebring and Ailholm have drawn bye.

Championship play will consist of play for the best out of an appropriate trophy will be presented to the winning team. There has been some talk of making this trophy a silver cup to be Association property, to be inscribed with the names of the winning team and to be displayed among Association trophies. Match play will consist of victory in one set and play will be continued through four rounds.

GREATEST RIFLE TOURNAMENT

CAPTAIN MARTIN MAY BE ONE OF NEW JERSEY'S TEAM.

Contests of New Jersey Rifle Association and United States Revolver Association at Sea Girt.

The shooting tournament of the National and the New Jersey Rifle Association and the United States Revolver Association opens at Sea Girt today. Captain W. B. Martin, of Company K, is at the range for a few hours' practice before the contest begins. He will in all probability be one of the men selected to represent New Jersey.

The tournament will be the biggest ever held in this country. The last State to enter a team is Michigan. This is Michigan's first visit, and ensures 16 teams for the new national match which will be shot on September 8 and 9 for the $4,000 trophy and $500 cash, provided by the recent act of Congress as first prize; the $1,000 Hilton trophy and $300 cash as second; the $900 "Soldier of Marathon" and $200 cash as third prize and for $150, $100 and $50 cash.

Private George E. Cook, a member of the victorious Palma trophy team, is one of the team that represents the District of Columbia, and another Palma trophy man, Sergeant Keough, is on the Massachusettes team.

Labor Day Picnic.

Local Union No 155, of the Carpenters and Joiners of America, will hold a picnic in Union Grove, at the end of the Somerset street trolley line, Labor Day. A concert will be held at 9 o'clock in the morning. The committee in charge consists of W. C. Bodine, chairman; W. H. Lunger, secretary and treasurer; W. Penning-ton, C. P. Thompson, J. C. Cubberly, George R. Wyckoff, Louis Neilson, Charles Johnson, J. T. Case and John Dickson.

St. Patrick's Alliance Outing.

The third annual excursion of St. Patrick's Alliance will be held on Labor Day. The excursionists will leave this city at 8:30 and will take steamer at Elizabethport for a sail up the Hudson River to Dudley's Grove, on Hudson River to Dudley's Grove, on here they will arrive in time for lunch. There will be music on the boat and at the beach. The committee in charge consists of J. F. Casey, E. J. Harding, D. Divver and M. Hegan.

Horses Effected by Colic.

An epidemic of colic has seized the horses in this city and the veterinary surgeons have been kept busy. Dr. Pocock, when asked about the cause of the epidemic, stated that it was largely due to feeding the horses new grain and prepared foods.

—Green corn, lima beans, spinach, green beans, wax beans, egg plant, Boston lettuce and tomatoes are only a few of the vegetable specials at Neuman Brothers this week.

STRAUSS' PRACTICE CONVEYED BY WIFE

Mrs. Margaret Strauss Gives His $40,000 Practice to Her Own Counsel.

NO CRIMINAL ACTIONS

DIVORCE SUIT ONLY FOR CHILDREN'S SAKE ALONE.

Mrs. Strauss, No. 3, Still Retains Affection for Erring Man—Law Library Said to be Owned by Margaret Strauss.

Margaret, No. 3 of the three wives of Baldwin F. Strauss, the much married Brooklyn lawyer, who a few days ago announced her intention to bring criminal proceedings against Strauss for bigamy soon as her pending divorce suit was disposed of, has changed her mind regarding this step, it was learned yesterday, and will be satisfied with a civil action. According to her lawyer, Mrs. Strauss still continues to retain affection for her husband, although she is aware that she is able to lay claim to only a third part of his affections. For the sake of her boy, says Mr. Russell, Mrs. Strauss has decided not to strive to make his father a criminal in the eyes of the law.

Mr. Russell said he was of the opinion that Strauss would settle the divorce case out of court, and decide to hereafter live with Ida (wife No. 2), who, the lawyer thinks, has the greatest claim upon Strauss on account of the fact that the pair have several children. Harrison Cedington, Albert Runyon, Dr. J. H. Cooley, William C. Smith, J. J. Stahl and Robert Clark, Jr.

Mrs. Margaret Strauss, it was learned yesterday, is endeavoring to obtain possession of the large law library and office effects of Baldwin F. Strauss. She declares that she is entitled to these, although the mother and sister of the Brooklyn lawyer have put in a counter claim. Mr. Russell has instructed Superintendent Higgins of the Arbuckle building not to surrender this property until he can get an injunction from the courts. The lawyer client has already obtained all the law papers of Baldwin F. Strauss," Mr. Russell said yesterday. "These she acquired by a written consent, sent to her soon after her husband fled. By this document my client is entitled to give her husbands practice to any lawyer she cares to name. She has named me as the successor to Mr. Strauss, and I have acquired possession of all his papers and cases. He had a practice estimated to be worth about $40,000 a year. The cases I have acquired consist of divorce cases, real estate cases, accident cases against the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, etc. I expect also to acquire Mr. Strauss's law library, consisting of ten cases of books, and all his office furniture. I have given his mother and sister until tomorrow to hand them over."

Asked if his client would be satisfied with this settlement, Mr. Russell replied: "Why, my client expects to obtain a settlement from her husband whereby he will consent to support her for the rest of her life."

A Noble Charity.

The success attending the work at the City Union King's Daughters baby camp on the mountain is particularly gratifying to those in charge. A number of babies, as well as their mothers, have been well cared for at the camp, making it possible for them to enjoy the summer better than they otherwise would. Any person wishing to contribute to its support will find that a contribution is appreciated by the King's Daughters.

Borough Firemen to Participate.

Wesley Dunn, of Sandford avenue, a call man of the fire headquarters, will drive the hose wagon of the West End Hose Company to Boonton, Saturday night. The first stop en route will be at Morristown, where the horses will be allowed to rest until Sunday afternoon when the trip will be resumed. The members of the company will go to Boonton either Sunday afternoon or early Monday morning.

Father's Anniversary.

Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Buchanan, of Doer street, will leave today for Pemberton, where they will attend the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Dr. J. C. Buchanan, of the Pemberton Baptist Church. Dr. Buchanan is a son of the minister.

NORTH PLAINFIELD ELECTION OFFICERS

Nominations for Delegates to Republican and Democratic County Conventions Filed.

SELECTIONS ALL MADE.

SOMERSET COUNTY BOARD OF ELECTIONS MAKES APPOINTMENTS.

North Plainfield Township's Officers Named—Canvas of Voters Now Being Made—Lists to be Revised Tuesday.

At Somerville Tuesday the Somerset County Board of Elections made public the following appointements for election officers for North Plainfield: First district, Charles G. Wood, Benjamin Schenck, William W. Hoverley, Daniel J. Gulick; second district, Lambert B. Bodine, Levi G. Kline, William F. McLaughlin and Edward Smith.

For North Plainfield township: George Mobus, John Radtke, Christopher Blume and Daniel Ackor.

The North Plainfield nominations for delegates to the County convention to be held at Somerville were filed with Borough Clerk Frank Rowley Friday night. With the filing of these names the political pot in North Plainfield again begins to boil. Those whose names have been handed in are: First district, Republican, Charles Place, Dr. J. Harvey Buchanan, Charles A. Lee, Dr. A. A. Dundon and William G. Debèle; second district, Republican, Harrison Cedington, Albert Runyon, Dr. J. H. Cooley, William C. Smith, J. J. Stahl and Robert Clark, Jr.

The Democratic nominations filed are: First district, Charles Keller, George W. Bush, William J. Kiely and John T. Case; second district, L. B. Bird and C. W. Harden.

An efficient corps of men is at work in the borough making a house to house canvass of the voters. It is expected they will complete their labors tomorrow. A meeting will be called Tuesday evening in the vacant store on Somerset street, opposite Harmony street, for the purpose of revising the lists. It is said that there will be a noticeable increase in the number of voters in North Plainfield this year.

FUNERAL OF ALBURTUS WEEKS

SERVICES AT HOME IN WEST SEVENTH STREET YESTERDAY.

Sketch of His Career—Interment to be in Cypress Hills Cemetery, Brooklyn, Tomorrow.

Funeral services of Alburtus A. Weeks, of West Seventh street, who died Sunday, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the late residence in West Seventh street, and was conducted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist Church. A quartette consisting of M. C. Van-Arsdale, Fred Cutter, Mrs. Charlotte Rose and Miss Clara Miller, will sing "Homeland" and "Abide With Me," and Elmer E. Runyon sang "Rock of Ages." The body was taken for burial to the Cypress Hills Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Mr. Weeks was a resident of Brooklyn for sixty years, leaving that place for this city about four years ago when he purchased the Heniger property on West Seventh street. He had been an importing and manufacturing stationer in Gold street, New York, since 1867, conducting his business in a conservative way and prospering as an advocate of the business principles of truthfulness and justice. He was largely interested in church work in Brooklyn. When the Trinity Presbyterian Church of that place was dissolved, it was through the efforts of Mr. Weeks, as a member of the Presbytery, that the site on Jefferson avenue was donated to the Central Presbyterian Church upon their agreement erect a building large enough to accommodate the two congregations. Mr. Weeks was an elder in the Central Church and interested in various charitable organizations. He was seventy-four years old, and is survived by a widow and two sons, Frank A. and Henry W. Weeks.

Attacked by Vertigo on Street.

C. H. Rogg, of West Fifth street, was taken ill on the street, yesterday, and later removed to his home, where Dr. D. C. Adams is in attendance. He suffered an attack of vertigo, which he has been subject to of late.

CHAMBERLAIN AFFAIR STILL A MYSTERY

Gassner, His Brother-in-Law, Now Detained at the County Jail.

POLICE ARE AT WORK

HEARING TO TAKE PLACE IN THIS CITY TODAY.

Robbery Not Supposed to be the Motive—Chamberlain Had No Known Enemy—Gassner Was in the House With Him.

The case against Walter Gassner, charged before Justice Huff yesterday afternoon with atrocious assault upon his brother-in-law, Herbert Chamberlain, rests on circumstantial evidence. Gassner is now in Elizabeth awaiting a preliminary hearing in the local court this afternoon at 2 o'clock, the delay being due to the necessity for waiting a turn for better or worse in Chamberlain's condition.

Gassner, on his own admission, was the only person in the house besides Mr. Chamberlain at the time the two retired for the night. To rifle a trunk of $40, in accordance with Gassner's story, one would have been obliged to break open the trunk, search through the trays and probably light matches to aid him in his search. In addition to this, it is argued, one could not have entered the house through the door or windows, which, it is said, were locked, without making at least some noise.

The fact that casts most discredit upon the burglar theory is that no man intending to commit theft was ever known to assault another unless himself attacked. His plan of action would be to do his work and then make his escape. If detected and cornered he would probably fight, but the last thing he would do would be to assault murderously a sleeping man in the manner that Chamberlain was assaulted. It has been stated that Chamberlain was found on the floor, but this is now said not to have been the case. He was discovered in his bed from which he had probably never arisen.

The man that assaulted Chamberlain had a motive, of course, and the police think they can establish one. If it was not known previous to the assault that Chamberlain had an enemy. He was quite inoffensive, universally popular and bore a most excellent reputation.

Church Picnic.

An outing was enjoyed near Johnston's drive yesterday by the children and members of the German Lutheran Church. The young folks played games and spent an enjoyable day. The committee in charge was Mrs. M. E. Stengel, Miss Anna Richter and Mrs. M. R. S Willard. Ice cream and cake were served to the children.

Temporary Removal.

Owing to the extensive improvements at Boehm's store, J. H. Van Winkle & Son, the lawyers, have been compelled to secure quarters elsewhere for a short time. The firm is now situate in Room 3 as the Coward building.

Clambake at Grove.

The Omer C. Moore Association expects to hold a clambake September 17. Patrolman W. J. Mather is chairman of the committee in charge. It is possible that the festivities may be held at Smalley's Grove, Somerset street.

Injured by Fall.

Henry Southard is suffering from severe injuries to his right hip sustained by a fall from French's haymow on Monday. While not confined to the house, he is in pain all the time and walks with the aid of a stick.

Miss O'Neil's Death.

Miss Mary T. O'Neil, eldest daughter of the late Richard O'Neil, died last evening at her home on New street. The notice of the funeral will be made later. The interment will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Warren to be There.

At the meeting of Warren Engine Company last night a fife and drum corps from Elizabeth was engaged to accompany the members to Somerville at the firemen's outing there.

Stork Visits VanWyck Home

A son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Van Rennesaler Van Wyck, of Stelle avenue.

A. R. Darby, of Grove street, is registered at the Edgemere Inn, Asbery Park, where he plans to remain for a week.

SCARED BY GASOLENE FUMES

TENANTS OF STILLMAN FLATS MYSTIFIED BY A STRANGE ODOR.

Miss Randolph, An Assistant to Dr. Hillman, Used Gasolene to Kill Moths.

Thoughtlessness in the use of gasoline caused much alarm last night in the Stillman flats and for some time the tenants were in dread of an explosion. Ascertaining of its use as a moth preventive in Dr. Hillman's apartments finally cleared up a mystery.

Miss Randolph, of Oak Tree, assistant of Dr. Hillman, feared moths had gotten in the carpet in the doctor's office and sprinkling the edges of the carpet with a plentiful supply of gasoline to kill the pests. Shortly afterwards she closed the office for the day and went to her home. With the office windows all fastened, the fumes soon found their way to the cellar of the building and were first noticed by John H. Doane at about 6 o'clock.

Thinking that there was a leak in the gas pipes, Mr. Doane instituted a careful search for the trouble in company with the janiter of the building. The men feared to strike a match in the fume loaded air and were unable to find the cause of trouble. The tenants were questioned but no one had any explanation for the odor. Finally Chief Doane was summoned at about 10 o'clock and he also made a thorough investigation, but without results. The halls soon became filled with odor and no one dared to strike a match in the fumes for fear of an explosion.

Miss Randolph cleared up the mystery on her arrival this morning.

CONGRATULATE CENTENARIAN

MRS. SWARTOUT-REMSEN SURROUNDED BY RELATIVES AND FRIENDS.

Young and Old Take Part in Celebration of One Hundred Birthday—How Day Was Spent.

Happy at her privilege of greeting so many of her descendants and friends, Mrs. Letitia Swartout-Remsen Tuesday concluded what was perhaps the proudest day in her full century of life. She received the warmest congratulations and best wishes during the entire day but especially during an informal reception from 2 until 6 in the afternoon. She exhibited few signs of fatigue as a result of the day's excitement, repeatedly expressing her pride and pleasure in the event and its celebration.

The residence of Mrs. Remsen's son, Abram G. Remsen, of Sandford avenue, was beautifully decorated with all kinds of flowers which were the gifts of relatives and neighbors. One especially fine set piece was of 100 dahlias with the figures 1808 to 1903.

About forty representatives of three generations besides Mrs. Remsen's own were present during the day. A daughter, Mrs. Joseph Cates, of Richmond, Va., with her husband and daughter, Mrs. Taylor Curtis, of Richmond; William Remsen, a son with his wife and son, of Brooklyn; Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Probasco, of Plainfield; Mrs. Mafsh and Mrs. McKinley, of Jersey City; Miss Newman and brother, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Maria McDowell, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Elizabeth Hazen and family, Mrs. Elizabeth Klein, E. D. Murphy, Mrs. Fred Dunn and daughter, and Miss Ruth Murphy, Dr. Olin L. Jenkins, Mrs. E. V. Shotwell, Mrs. A. L. Cadmus, Mrs. Karner, Miss Nell, Mr. and Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Edsall, Miss Sydenham, all of Plainfield; W. E. Anthony, Roy F. Anthony, of Newark; Miss Arrowsmith, of New York; Mrs. Maylock, Mrs. MacKermen, of Jersey City.

Too Heavy a Load.

A wagon belonging to William Schoonover, of Mountainside, collapsed shortly after 9 o'clock this morning at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Front street. The wagon was heavily loaded with bags of grain and in turning off from Front street, the rear wheel became dished in the curve of the trolley tracks. The axle broke, throwing the load into the street. Mr. Schoonover was thrown heavily but escaped with a few bruises and a plentiful supply of mud.

Mr. Tulford's Denial.

Henry J. Tulford denies a report that he intends to become the Plainfield correspondent of the Elizabeth Evening Times. It was rumored that he had been engaged to supply Democratic campaign ammunition to that paper and this he declares to be without foundation.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT ROSELLE CASINO

Crack Players Contesting for Prizes in Matches Under Auspices of N. L. T. A.

SCHEDULE ARRANGED

TOURNAMENT OPENS TODAY AND CLOSES ON MONDAY.

Club Events—Dance in Casino a Feature—Committee in Charge of Affair—List of Players—The Various Prizes.

Under the auspices of the United States National Law Tennis Association an open tournament is arranged for today, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday afternoons at the Casino grounds at Roselle. Prominent tennis players will be present and take part in the contest and the prizes offered are elaborate. The finals will be played Labor Day when the prizes will be awarded. It is expected that some Plainfield tennis players, members of the Park Club, will be among those listed as contestants.

Some of the players who have already entered are: R. D. Little, of the Crescent A. C., Bay Ridge; F. D. Alexander, who, with Little, is the champion in doubles at Princeton University; T. R. Pell, of Princeton University; S. C. Westphal and A. C. Anderson, of Kings County; R. S. Prentice, of Harvard; Edward Larned, of the Orange Lawn Tennis Club; Harry Allen, of Philadelphia; and D. W. Mulford, J. L. Warner, Gardner Milledr, J. E. McGiffert, James Stifler and Hugh Mills, of Roselle; N. F. Charlock, B. F. Foster and Edward Pendergast, of Elizabeth; the Wren Brothers and Gus Ely, of Cranford.

The singles will be played today and tomorrow and the doubles Thursday and Friday. The mixed doubles will be played Wednesday and Labor Day. The latter event will be played between the Bergen Point Tennis Club, the Cranford Casino, the Sewaren Tennis Club, the Roselle Casino and the Crescent A. C., of Bay Ridge. All games will be refereed by Harold B. Atkins.

A feature of the tournament will be its social side. A committee is arranging to hold a dance at the Casino at Roselle Friday evening. The committee having this in charge is composed of Gardner H. Milley, chairman; D. W. Mulford, J. L. Warner, James Stifler, J. E. McGiffert and Hugh Miller, assisted by Miss Elsie D. Blancke, Miss Helen Miller, Miss Delarue Howe, Miss Sarah McGiffert, Miss Florence Moore and Miss Muriel Atkins.

The prizes offered are: Singles, first prize, gold and bronze loving cup; second prize, silver loving cup; first prize doubles, gold medals; second prizes, dress suit cases; first prize mixed doubles, gold medals.

Trolley's Loss.

It is stated in trolley circles that the trolley system embrace under the present Public Service Corporation's control loss $90,000 last year. This is made up in part of damages paid for accidents. Considerable that is classed in loss of receipts will probably be credited this year to the newly inaugurated transfer system. A great many tickets will be missed hereafter that will be represented by transfers.

Through Trolley.

When the Camden and Trenton railroad is completed, which will be within a few weeks, there will practically be a through line between Philadelphia and New York within the bounds of New Jersey. There will be a through car from Market street ferry, Camden, as far north as Trenton, where one of the New Brunswick cars can be boarded for this city.

Fair Estate Testimony.

Lawyers representing the relatives of Mrs. Charles J. Fair were in Caldwell Monday taking the testimony of Mrs. Hannah Nelson, Mrs. Fair's mother, who is seeking to get a better settlement of the estate. Mrs. Nelson has been in poor health for some time, and when the examination became too trying for her it was thought best to postpone it.

Confiscated Stone.

While carting some heavy stone trough Park avenue, yesterday morning, a driver dropped several large blocks used for building purposes. Instead of arresting the man who drove the wagon the blocks were confiscated by the Street Commissioner who had them placed in the culvert, being erected at the corner of Putnam and Carlton avenues.

THE WORM TURNED.

What Kind of "Hen Folks" Did These Women Have?

Two women were talking of ways and means and how to increase their incomes on a farm. Both had husbands. One was the up to date farm woman. She had beautiful, plump, crimson combed chickens by the hundred, turkeys galore, and geese, shining fierce sword that were a source of revenue the year round. What is more, the sole revenue from the cows and poultry was hers and hers alone. In cooking and making a home and "doing for" her husband she considered she made ample return for the feed of her cows and poultry, and her husband agreed. If he had not he would have been reasoned with in a way to make him see a great light, for Mrs. Farmer was fully aware of the respect due to both wifehood and womanhood—likewise to the individual citizen. But in her case the respect and consideration were willingly accorded. Mr. Farmer ever carried her butter and eggs to market in a neat receptacle in his buggy when he went to town, faithfully handing her over the money on his return. So all was well in the Farmer family.

Mrs. Farmer said to the other woman that there certainly was good money for women in rearing poultry if they managed it properly. The other woman agreed, then made the following remarkable remark:

"Unbeknownst to the men folks me and Marthy Ann has set a hen."

Mrs. Farmer stared, for she did not catch the woman's meaning at first; then she snickered, but suppressed the snicker, dying to explode with laughter all the while. Then as the situation became quite clear to her she thought to herself how she could help that poor, ignorant, benighted slave of a woman to an understanding of her own worth and deserts.

Set a hen unbeknownst to the men folks!

Of all things! Are there still men of that sort in this land of Bibles and free schools and new women?

One could not have believed it. Yet the story is fact, no made up fake. Poor Mrs. Slavey was married nearly forty years ago, and had gone to live with her husband in a poor little house on a poor little bit of land. Like a slave she had toiled, like a slave she had been rewarded. Marthy Ann was her daughter. The "men folks" were her husband and a widower son. The son had brought to his mother a towheaded boy in his own lanky, slow moving, tumble down image, and that image was the exact reproduction of the old man, the boy's grandfather.

"HE AND MARTHY ANN HAS SET A HEN"

Marthy Ann and Mrs. Slavey cooked and washed and tended those not handsome men folk, going around and picking up things after them and cleaning up the kitchen dutifully when the old man brought his harness in there to clean and oil, making a fearful mess and the wife never said a word. She had milked cows and made butter to sell—rather poor butter it was, for she was too spiritless to demand modern dairy conveniences—and old Cale, her husband, and the son had marketed it and bought chewing tobacco with the money, whether Marthy Ann had any new spring hat or not. The two women raised poultry and sent occasionally some likely pullets and dozens of fair eggs to the town. Old Cale took them to the customers, got the money and put it away in his own thin leather wallet to help out with the taxes. Wasn't what was his wife's his, and wasn't what was his own? Old Cale would have regarded as a dangerous anarchist one who thought that what was his wife's was not his—that is, if he could have conceived of anybody holding ideas so subversive of law, order and religion.

Soul and body, he had owned that wife and worked a fourth forty years and enjoyed the fruits of her toil, and never thought he was getting any more than his just dues. He would have been astonished if anybody had hinted that in all this time he had been any other than the best of husbands.

But forty years give a woman time to learn something. It was beginning to dawn on Mrs. Slavey that she was an individual, and one who had been badly used. She discussed the point with Marthy Ann. They put their heads together and resolved to assert themselves. It was a daring step for two ground down women to take. But the women's rights Men prevailed. They refused—and the utmost they dared was to—

"Set a hen unbeknownst to the men folks."

SUSAN PEPPER.

NEW SUITS FOR FALL.

Costumes That Will Be In Vogue This Autumn—Some Suggestions.

Every year at the end of summer the stores endeavor to sell off all the warm weather goods left on hand and thus it is possible for the farseeing woman to get her dress material and many kinds of standard trimmings for less than half what they would cost at the beginning of the season. We shall probably have many more warm days this year, but the object should be to get good standard qualities of such things as do not change from one season to another.

I recently saw silk foulard, taffeta, organdie, pongee, veiling and any amount of white suits, all made, and prettily made, too, but as they were not sold at the first onrush they are now offered for actually less than the material cost. Japanese corded silk, taffetas, brocades and habutais, and no end of the light printed and checked silks may be obtained at a price most attractive to the wise buyer. The fashion in these will not change materially for two or three seasons. I also saw any amount of brilliantines of various designs, all wool cheviots in black and navy, a standard stuff that never goes out of fashion, and veilings without end.

The handsome new fall suits are ready for the trade, and the coat suit is first and foremost. Some have one shape of coat and some another, but I think the coat of the shape shown in the illustration will be the best liked. This shape is developed from all sorts of heavy material, principally cheviots and mixtures, and also in fine broadcloth for dressy occasions. There are so many of these coats varying slightly from each other that it would be a task beyond my power to describe them in one letter, but the standard is the tight waist and skirt more or less long and more or less trimmed. The best style is to have few but very fine buttons and strictly tailor finished. One feature seen in all, except the corset coats, is the pockets, of which there are generally three, two below the waist and the other for the watch.

Walking skirts in plain cloths and mannish mixtures often have the coats to match. But there are many short box coats of the same material that are rather preferred for wear with the short skirts. These box coats are large around the bottom, so that they flare out stiffly. They are stitched several times around on purpose to make them set out. They are all double breasted, have square pockets and are made of kersey, heavy cloth, tweed and many other kinds of suitable stuff. When not made to match skirts they are usually in tan, biscuit, beaver and browns in the lighter shades. Most of them have flat velvet collars, and the revers are of the coat material and stitched in many fancy designs. Some are quite plain across the shoulders and others have fancy capes, but the plain ones are by far the most elegant. All the sleeves are bishop shaped, with fancy stitched cuffs. Nothing could be nattier than these short box coats.

In this connection I may mention the coats for misses from eight to fifteen. They are all in the box shape, but reach almost to the feet, and are indeed to allow the child to grow in them, still not out of them. They are of the same materials as I mentioned for women's box coats, made very plainly about the bottom, but trimmed considerably at the shoulders in the way of capes of the material with fancy braid, velvet bands and stitching, sometimes all three on the same cape. The majority have the bishop sleeves, but a few have the old fashioned coat sleeve. We also find the latter among the garments for women. Some do not like the baggy things that are so bungling around the wrist.

Dresses for little girls have rather short and very nearly plain skirts. Some have stitched seams down the sides, the fullness falling loose at the bottom. But the waists are very ornate. They are laid in plaits, have many fancy buttons, some lace appliqué and velvet belts for every day and handsome ribbon sashes for Sunday.

Possibilities in Brown Holland—Navy Blue Linen Dresses.

Yellow and white are popular shades this year, and as far as wash gowns are concerned there are great possibilities in brown holland with a baby bodice and a simple skirt eased in at the waist and finished with a prettily shaped wide band and perhaps a suggestion of embroidery. When this is worn with a smart little stock and bow and a simple hat you have a costume which is eminently simple and becoming.

For street wear during the late summer and early fall nothing can be in better taste than simple little gowns, whether of serge, foulard or wash material, made without trimming, and a simple, well cut waistband matching an equally simple stock. Serge gowns in automobile red, blue and cream and prettily plaited silk linens make admirable costumes of this description.

Navy blue linen has much to be said in its favor. Some pretty tailor made coats and skirts made of this are strapped in white.

A smart frock was of coarse navy blue voile embroidered with red. This was worn with a navy blue hat trimmed with scarlet berries. The dress had a wide navy blue sash tied in a bow of becoming proportions which was much to be preferred to a red band.

The gown in the cut is of figured crepe de chine, with the cape of the same material.

Flannel is a delightful fabric in blue and white and black and white. For the country this may be made in simple blouse and skirt fashion, but if it is required for yachting you must resort to the tailor and avoid all imitations.

Coarse hopsackings and white homespun are really smart fabrics for yachting and out of door sports. The presence of white will continue far into the fall, and after white navy blue and brown are the favorite colors.

Accordion plaited walking length skirts are among the features of this season. They are particularly smart in navy blue and black and white checks.

The loose three-quarter coat of double faced cloth is a most useful part of the mountain girl's outfit.

A great many plaid silks are being worn this year. They are made up into little shirt waist suits and trimmed with bands of plain silk.

The cut shows a waist of white crepe trimmed with yellow lace and white silk tassels.

CHARLOTTE CANTY

A Girl of Grit

"I KNOW you are death on women," said Mr. Starr. "Wouldn't you like to hear about Charlotte Canty, the young California story writer?"

"I would, indeed, if she's a girl of grit and power and one other girls would like to read about."

"She is all that and more, too," said Mr. Starr. "The Canty family of brothers and sisters are notable for their ability and aspiration, and, above all, for their faithful love toward one another. There never was a more united family. They were born in San Francisco, but the family removed to Oakland, where they still live and where Charlotte began her literary work. Their father died when Charlotte was thirteen, and the mother struggled on as best she could."

CHARLOTTE CANTY.

The simple story of this one girl's life is deeply interesting.

"Our mother called us absolutely, and her only law was love," Charlotte told Mr. Starr once. Charlotte had planned out her life gloriously. She would write—she always meant to do that—but to be thoroughly prepared for her profession she intended to be a college graduate—get the literary style. When a child at school she wrote her compositions with the dream in her brain of one day getting stories printed and being an author. But five years ago the mother whose only law was love died. Charlotte uncomplainingly put aside her own cherished hopes and dreams and became the head of the family. No college now, apparently no hope of writing stories, either. The very bread the family ate had to be earned by Charlotte and her sister. They took their places in a large store in Oakland, Charlotte as cashier, Sister Nan in one of the departments. Sister Mary kept the house for them and the brothers.

But the girl who was a born writer could not forget the radiant dream of her childhood. It fairly broke her heart to give up being an author. She wrote something of her grief and disappointment to a friend.

But you will see how the Power that rules human destiny plans for us better than we can plan for ourselves if we only do the manifest duty that lies nearest us day by day.

Charlotte's friend who received this letter showed it to a literary lady whom she knew. The literary lady was struck with the power and grace of expression even in this everyday letter. She immediately commended Charlotte to William C. Morrow, a well known writer of San Francisco. Charlotte went to see him.

"Write me something on a subject I will give you," said Mr. Morrow.

She wrote it nights and Sundays, a fairy story, and it hit the mark so exactly that Mr. Morrow gave her further instructions how to proceed. In the scant and precious spare time allowed to a department store cashier she began teaching herself to compose. She and Sister Nan served in the business establishment from 8 o'clock till half past 6, on Saturdays till 10 at night, and yet this determined girl snatched bits of time to write. Sometimes 1 o'clock in the morning found her at her desk, when Sister Nan, who embodies common sense for two, would make her stop and go to bed.

By and by she got some stories printed. Of course she did! Nobody who strives perseveringly, and strives in faith, ever is finally disappointed. It is in Charlotte Canty's favor, perhaps, that she has had little time to compare her own work with that of so called classic authors. She is therefore bravely original. Living with her brothers and loving them dearly, as they likewise loved her, she was able to enter into thorough sympathy with them, and through them with all youthful masculinity. She has written some spirited and charming stories for boys. This, for lack of knowledge of them, women seldom are able to do. One of the best known of Miss Canty's general stories is "The Whistling Girl," which has been widely published.

The brothers for whom she worked are young men now, and in this case, at least, men appreciate what women have done for them. This no doubt is owing to the influence and remembrance of the sweet mother whose only law was love.

Charlotte Canty now looks forward with reasonable assurance to the day when she will write books and spend all her time in the tasks she loves. Not yet, however, does she still sit at her cashier's desk and does the work her hands find to do, not grudgingly, but cheerfully, thankfully, willing and working for all concerned, and writing, as it were, sweet tempered and strong, in the sure faith that she will accomplish her kingdom.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

Gauze Frock With Chantilly Lace. A Striking Princess Gown.

A gauze frock seen recently was in an ivory shade incrusted with large motifs of chantilly lace. The pelerine of this was composed of finely plaited mousseline and chantilly lace finished by a sky blue waistband. The hat which accompanied this was of white crinoline trimmed with blue ostrich feathers.

A striking evening gown seen recently was cut princess, with a triple skirt of black tulle and an overdress arranged in long points of jet paillettes softened by a bertha of black mousseline de soie incrusted with sequined flowers. The loose hanging sleeves were of black tulle studded with paillettes and bordered with black chantilly lace.

White and green and white and rose are combinations much in evidence among the new frocks. A smart chiffon frock cut somewhat princess was trimmed with rose and pink embroidery down one side of the bodice and all around the hem. It had a shaded sash of green and pink taffeta trimmed with alencon lace, this same lace forming a fichu and tiny chemisette.

A good many hats made of lace and tulle are worn with these light dresses.

For traveling and country hats the picture toreador shape has been revived, while a four cornered hat is offered instead of the old three cornered model.

The picture shows a gown of black crepe de chine, with an old rose chiffon underdress.

MILLINERY STYLES.

Hats With Higher Crowns—Wings and Bird Trimmings.

Later on hats will assume more height in crown. The early autumn headgear shows a return to Tyrolese shapes. Some of the simple ones are trimmed only with fantastic rosettes in moire, with quaint buckles.

Birds and wings will play an important part in autumn headgear. There is a new bolero which is a kind of early Victorian sack coat with a pompadour sleeve. The prettiest model is in very fine cloth trimmed with moire rosettes and undersleeves made entirely of lace applique.

If a woman is to wear skirts which clear the ground she must be careful in the selection of her shoes, as only the smartest should be worn with such a costume.

Linen and alpaca coats are very nice as a protection from the dust, but a fawn or blue cloth coat lined with plaid is useful for cooler days and is always smart.

The black, wide taffeta bows tilted back on the coiffure are most attractive. Last year they were worn at the back of our hats, but now they are worn as a headdress, and very charming they are. Of course they do not suit all styles, but a few women look delightful in them. How long the furore for taffeta has lasted!

The cut shows a hat of rough straw trimmed with brown silk and two brown birds.

Linen Morning Costumes—Lace and Net Gowns.

Crash is excellent for morning costumes, but the fine linens are smarter and can be rendered quite dressy with piped strappings or medallions of lace inlet at wide intervals in sloping lines on the skirt and bordering the bolero in suitable points or scallops. The wide lace collar is quite a favorite on linen bodices, but is of moderate size when used on the bolero.

Lace and net gowns are cool and comfortable mounted on batiste or satteen, and, now that the mercerized finish gives a silky effect to these inexpensive materials, they make admirable linings, which under net or lace, with the usual interlining of chiffon, have almost the appearance of silk.

Some of the figured muslins of the heavier type make up delightfully without any lining. They are worn over a low, sleeveless batiste bodice, and the silk petticoat, which is now being worn almost to touch the ground, serves well as a slip. The printed toiline and the satin foulards are quite charming when simply made with a little insertion lace and a few gathered frills, but the plaited skirts are prettier in plain materials.

The picture shows a gown of gray veiling trimmed with gray embroidery.

CHANGES IN DRESS.

Transparent Collars and Yokes. Skirts Are Growing Fuller.

Navy blue cheviots and serges make ideal between season gowns. They are trimmed with Persian embroideries, and the hat has a chiffon veil to match the gown.

Transparent collars and shallow yoke effects are features of the new gowns. Indeed it is rare to see a lace collar lined with anything heavier than thin chiffon even on heavy gowns.

Skirts are growing much fuller around the feet, which is perhaps one reason why the long skirt has been banished for ordinary street wear, as its weight makes it very difficult to hold up properly.

Cape effects and broad collars distinguish the old fashioned gown from the new, but by means of a dip yoke and a wide collar of lace even quite an old dress may be given a modern air.

Short capes with long tabs matching the skirt, with which they are worn, will be a feature of the early fall.

Plaid effects are seen in French sailor hats. They are of braided satin or felt straw and are trimmed very simply with quills or wings.

The picture shows a dressy waist, with a lace yoke and undersleeves edged with velvet.

WHAT IS WORN.

Tailor Modes For the Morning. White All the Rage.

The plateau hat and the French sailor are worn with the walking skirt. Picture hats, with their ostrich plumes, are reserved for dressy wear. Strings are much worn, and the 1830 hat is by no means out of favor. The latter will be revived again for the autumn, and brown will be again the color, although navy and pastel blues will also be much worn.

In the morning the smart woman still clings to the tailor made, and it is for her that the tailor invents his little softening effects of embroideries, tassels, etc., which appear on even the most useful coat and skirt costumes.

White is still all the rage, and this embraces every sort of fabric from veiling to cloth and hopsacking. A white china silk gown seen recently was inserted with medallions of black chantilly lace, with an outer edging of coarse cream crochet. The bodice, made in blouse fashion, had a kind of double pelerine collar cut open to show a vest made entirely of lace medallions. The medallions also outlined the shaped hip piece and were continued down the front. They also decorated the frill flounce which was put in just below the knees.

The picture shows an elaborate gown of chiffon trimmed with fine cream lace and black velvet.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Taffeta Coats—Plaid Dresses Are the Latest Thing.

During the summer some charming coats have been made of taffeta, and of course this is an ideal fabric, for the dust is very easily brushed off, and with a plain silk or satin lining it is beautifully cool. Some of the Paris models are made with a hood.

A good many French women are wearing plaids, and a very effective costume seen recently had a kilted skirt of the plaid reaching just to the ankles worn with a plain dark green silk skirt to tone and a three-quarter length coat, also of plaid, finished with a plain green silk hood which could be brought right over the head.

A TAILOR MADE.

For traveling three-quarter coats are certainly the most useful, but full length ones are often more becoming. These, however, are apt to drag down the skirts and add to their weight.

The picture shows a serviceable tailor made of gray homespun.

Doings of Tobu, Pet Mine Cat

Boards Flying Trains in the Inky Blackness and Does Other Things Not Sanctioned by Aristocratic Feline Society.

THE smartest cat in all the city of Scranton, Pa., the miners say, lives at the Cayuga mine, a Delaware, Lackawanna & Western property at Providence, a suburb of Scranton. Toby is a medium sized Maltese, about three years old, and that he has not had his neck broken before this is a perpetual wonder to the 800 miners and colliery operatives at the Cayuga mine. The Cayuga is one of the deepest shafts in the Lackawanna coal fields, the lower working, where Toby makes his home, being more than 600 feet deep. It is a model mine in its equipment, and Toby, apparently, is trying to live up to its reputation as an up-to-date mining plant. Electric lights and electric hauling motors were installed in the mines three or four years ago, when Toby was a baby cat, and he got used to the somewhat terrifying appearance of the bug-shaped motors, with gleaming headlights, darting through the winding chambers 600 feet from the sunlight, dragging after them "trips" of ten or a dozen small coal cars, holding two tons of freshly mined coal. Toby rides on the motors from one end of the mines to the other. The northern end of the lower working is under Priceburg, three miles from the bottom of the shaft in Providence, and Toby makes the trip on one of the motors every day and sometimes twice a day.

According to the New York Tribune, Toby has his favorite motormen. His affection toward them apparently is somewhat graduated according as they save him choice bits of meat from their dinner pails. Toby will blink unconcernedly as some of his more "distant" acquaintances among the motormen whisk by, but when a real good and tried friend come bowling through the blackness Toby will brace himself, exactly time the speed of the motor and then—"Plump!" he will jump from alongside the track to a spot just behind the headlight.

The motormen used to hold their breath when Toby tried this leap, fearing that he might miss. But he never misses. Whether the train is going fast or slow Toby alights close to the legs of the motorman, and then holds on "right" while the little train, with a deafening roar, pings on forward on its way. He's a sight with his eyes wide open and his tail waving, standing on the front of the motor. The miners from one end of the mine to the other know Toby, and it would go hard with the man or boy who hurt or teased him. Toby pays his way by keeping the lower working of the mine free from rats. A few mules still are used in the mines, and wherever there are mules and fodder there are rats. In some of the upper workings of the Cayuga there are rats a-plenty, but never a rat in the lower working, where Toby lives. He has been out of the mines once or twice, but he prefers the dark, with the rumbling motors and the soft words and petting from his hosts of grimy friends.

The fire boss in the Hampton mine, near by, has a dog named Covey that goes the rounds of the mines every morning with the "boss." Covey is a smart animal, too. His master has taught him to put out fires wherever they are discovered. If a miner in lighting a pipe drops a scrap of burning paper Covey flies at it and paws out the fire. With all his intelligence, however, he is no match for Toby, of the Cayuga mine.

TOPICS OF CHICAGO

A Budget of Timely Gossip from the Western Metropolis.

ECHO OF THE PULLMAN STRIKE

Population Statistics Are Expanding —Winners and Losers at the Local Racing Tracks for the Season— A Street Car Problem.

Chicago.—An echo of the Pullman strike of 1894 is heard in the selling of that portion of the real estate in the town of Pullman that is not needed for the manufacturing business of the company.

A Street in the Town of Pullman.

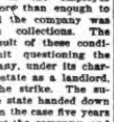
Pullman was one of the first of the towns built by manufacturing corporations for its employees. It is a beautiful town, beautiful because one master man designed all its buildings, laid out its parks and driveways and streets, but it was not a popular idea with the employes who were to live there. The company owned every building in the town, including the schools, the churches, the hotel, the theater, the stores, etc. The residences varied from very pretentious homes to rows of well kept tenements, each of which looked and was exactly alike.

All of these buildings were rented by the company to its employes, the rent being deducted from their earnings in the factory. During 1894, when wages were at their lowest in the factory, many of the employes made but little more than enough to pay the rent, and the company was inexorable in its collections. The strike was the result of these conditions, and the suit questioning the right of the company, under its charter, to hold real estate as a landlord, was a result of the strike. The supreme court of the state handed down the final decision in the case a year ago. It was against the company, and ordered a sale of the land not needed for manufacturing purposes. Before the last of October the company must have disposed of all of this surplus land. That which is unoccupied is being sold in large tracts to other manufacturing concerns. Portions of the town may be razed to make room for new factories.

Fortunes on the Races.

The local racing season is practically over. Washington park closed its gates some time ago, after $45,000,000 had passed through the hands of the book makers. From the betting standpoint it was the heaviest season that track has known, and for some of the bookmakers it was the most disastrous.



Pouring It Into the Bookmaker's.

But throughout the season it was the small better who took the money. Such plungers as Parks, Drake and Lambert quit the season heavy losers. They had one pooled bet of $60,000 and left that sum with the fortunate bookmakers. On another race Drake placed $40,000 on Runnels with the bookmakers Weller, O'Leary and Cartwright—and lost.

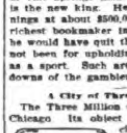
It was the season of the man who places $100, or some such sum, on each race. This class of betters carried away with them heavy winnings. They flocked the long shots, and it was a season for long shots.

For the same reason it was a more than usually profitable season for the women, who are partial to the horses on which the largest odds are offered, and their instincts have inspired a betting fever among the fair sex such as the city never knew before. One La Salle street establishment engaged in the business of making books has gone so far as to furnish special rooms for lady customers, and the place is heavily patronized every day.

Of the bookmakers Joe Yeager, he of Hot Springs gambling house fame, is the new king. He counts his winnings at about $500,000. O'Leary, the richest bookmaker in the world, says he would have quit the track if it had not been for upholding his reputation as a sport. Such are the ups and downs of the gambler.

A City of Three Million.

The Three Million club is typical of Chicago. Its object is to boom the city, and every patriotic Chicagoan is not only entitled to, but is expected to enroll himself as a member by conforming to the constitution of the club, which provides that he must maintain at all times that the city has more than 3,000,000 people, and that he must be willing to fight to maintain that position.



Three Million Club's Button.

The Three Million club is but the expansion of the Two Million club, which was organized about the time of taking the last federal census. Members of the club, and all patriotic Chicagoans, have never ceased to maintain that the figures which credit Chicago with less than 2,000,000 people are untrue and unreliable.

The expansion of the club is due to population figures secured from several sources. The new city directory contains 654,000 names. New York figures her population by the multiple of five and one-third for the names in the directory. Granting Chicago the same multiple and her population would now be 3,483,000. Figuring that 10 per cent. of the population of the city are registered voters the city would contain in the neighborhood of 4,000,000 people.

It is a fairly safe estimate to say that Chicago has in the neighborhood of 2,500,000 people at the present time, and judging from the past history of the city it will be surprising if the census of 1910 does not show many more than 3,000,000 people in the city. For the past 20 years the city has been practically doubling its population every ten years, and while the ratio of increase cannot be expected to continue, it will undoubtedly be large enough to give the city 3,000,000 people by the time the next census is taken.

A Worthy Charity.

Every large city has what might be styled peculiar charitable institutions. They are outside the regular line of recognized charity, and are often conducted on peculiar lines, and founded by people with a hobby. Some of these peculiar charities are worthy of support from the general public, others are not.

Type of the Shelter Home's Women.

One that is worthy, though it is seldom heard of in the city, is the Shelter Home in Chicago. It is the only institution of the kind in the country, though Boston has a charity organized along somewhat similar lines.

At the unpretentious building on Fifty-first street boulevard and Vincennes avenue any woman, no matter who she is, may find shelter from the world for a time, and no questions asked, and to some all sorts and conditions of women. They are assured of a place to sleep and something to eat for a time at least, while they may make an effort to pick up the lost threads that have made them an object of charity.

More than all else, it is a haven for old women. They go there seeking an opportunity to do something that will pay for the care they receive, and, if possible, find a home with some family that is willing to keep them for what little assistance they can render. It is surprising, too, how many of these old women find employment of this kind through the Shelter Home, and how much of the assistance is rendered by people of the poorer classes. It is to this class, more than to the wealthy, that Mrs. Marguerite Price, the matron, looks for assistance for her charges.

Open Cars May Have to Go.

At the same time the city is attempting to force concessions from the street railway company, and seems to be determined to secure better service for the people before granting new franchises, the companies are seriously considering a move which will impose new hardships on the public.

The Peril of the Open Car.

It is probable that the open summer cars will be abolished, and the closed, or winter, cars, used throughout the entire year. Officials of the companies say this is necessary because of the increasing number of accidents caused by the open cars.

Nine out of every ten of the accidents for which the open cars are blamed happen to women who persist in getting off backwards. With the closed cars it is possible for the conductor or motorman to watch the passengers, as they must get off at the ends of the car, but this is not so with the open cars, and women have never learned to wait until a car stops or to face the front when getting off.

Aside from these accidents the car companies favor the open car. It will carry a third more passengers, which means a third more receipts. It is also possible to make better time with them than with the closed cars, as the passengers can get on and off more quickly, and the saving of a few seconds at each stop means many dollars in the companies' pockets in the aggregate.

But these advantages are more than offset by the loss through personal injury suits brought by women who persist in getting off backward.

WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

Weeping Animals.

It is true that some animals really shed tears. Ruminants in particular, are noted for crying very easily. All hunters know that the deer can weep. But also of the bear it is claimed that he sheds tears when he feels that his last hour has come. The dog weeps easily, and often from the joy. It is well known that the elephant weeps when wounded or unable to escape the hunter. Some marine mammals are also said to weep. Thus the dolphin is said to shed abundant tears in his hour of death. But we must not imagine that these tears are due to emotion or fear of death. They are merely a connection between the wounded part of the body and the lachrymal glands, which are strongly developed in many animals.—N. Y. Tribune.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

A new era in international sport began with the coming of the team of the Oxford and Cambridge Golfing Society to the United States. True, English amateurs have come and played, as did W. Girdwood Stewart in 1897, and English and Scotch exponents, like H. J. Whigham, Findlay S. Douglas and A. G. Lockwood and others less well known, have come and joined American clubs, adding to the prestige of their particular clubs and professionals, especially from "auld Scotia," have come in great numbers, but this is the first time an international flavor has been given golf matches. The contests are like the international cricket matches, and tours of tennis teams, and are the first international matches in the country, excepting those with Canadian golf teams. The members of the team were: J. L. Low, C. N. Day, H. A. Ellis, D. F. Ranson, P. W. Leathart, C. H. Alison, H. W. Beveridge, N. F. Hunter, J. A. T. Bramston, T. M. Hunter and G. D. Barne. The Englishmen showed up to advantage in their matches, showing American patrons of the game several new points about it.

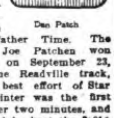
John L. Low, captain of the team, has figured most prominently of any of the men in the British championships and big tournaments. He has won the first scratch medal of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, the first scratch aggregate prize at the Royal and Ancient, the Calcutta cup, Jubilee vase, bronze medal in the British amateur championship in 1901, in which he was beaten after a tie; won a bronze medal in 1898, when he lost after a tie, and in 1901 he won the silver medal, being beaten by a hole. The captain also has won thirty scratch prizes at Cambridge, Blackheath, Perth, Carnoustie and elsewhere. His putting game is said to be almost invincible. Mr. Low's wife died last year, and he has played little golf since, so the undertaking of leading the present team was done as a friendly great pleasure. Mr. Low has been captain of the Cambridge, Cirencester and Woking Golf clubs and is now captain of the Royal Blackheath Golf club, the oldest golfing society in the world, which dates its records to 1608. Last year Mr. Low was chosen to represent Scotland at Hoylake, but did not accept. Mr. Low is the only one of the visitors who is not of the younger school.

When Dan Patch paced a mile in 1:58 on the Brighton Beach track, at New York recently he lowered a world's record, which was established first six years ago by Star Pointer, which made the circuit of the track at Readville, Mass., Aug. 31, 1899, in 1:59¼. This record stood for five years, until Dan Patch became a factor in the fight on Father Time. The speedy son of Joe Patchen won his spurs when, on September 23, 1902, on the same Readville track, he equaled the best effort of Star Pointer. Star Pointer was the first pacer to get under two minutes and he succeeded he beat the 2:01¼ of Robert J., which record was made at Terre Haute, Ind., September 14, 1894. To wipe the name of Star Pointer off the record sheet Alexander Dan Patch has his work cut out for him. The sheet shows the quarter mile in :28 standing to Star Pointer's credit, the half in :57¾ and the three-quarters in 1:28¾. The quarter was made at the time of the mile, the half was done September 17, 1898, a year later, while the three-quarter was reeled off September 1, 1898. Dan Patch's fractional times were, :29¼, :58¾ and 1:29¼.



Dan Patch

Horsemen are now figuring on a cut in the trotting record, which stands at 2:02¾ to the credit of Cresceus. The speed shown by C. K. G. Billings mare, Lou Dillon, in her trials against the watch this year gives the enthusiasts hope and the 2:02¾ already credited to her seems to look for her easy to beat. With the cut in the trotting mark the three leading turf records will have been lowered this year. The thoroughbreds have twice beaten their best—Allan-a-Dale made 1:37¾ and at Washington park, Chicago, and Dick Welles later cutting it to 1:37 3-5 at Harlem. Dan Patch's 1:59 fixes the pacers and now the fans have their eyes on the trotters.

A king was dethroned, a new monarch crowned and a world's record of 2 minutes 58 seconds established when Africander, the 3-year-old son of Star Ruby and Afric Queen, won the twenty-fifth running of the Sheepshead Bay Derby, N. Y., the other day. Water Boy was the unbeaten favorite, but he ran third to Heno.

M. Walsh, of Boston, Mass., broke the world's record for throwing the 56-pound weight Friday at South Framingham, Mass., hurling the big weight 39 feet.

In the last games of the tournament of the National Roque association, played at Norwich, Conn., recently, C. G. Cox, of Malden, Mass., won the championship in the expert division. Mitchell of Philadelphia was second in the second division, and S. E. Davenport of New York, in the third division.

Lights and Shades of Love

Romance That Ended in Deep Sorrow and Sentimental Attachment That Ended in Happiness—Funny Mistake About a License.

NOT all stories are so sorrowful as that of Miss Mayme MacLaren, of Indianapolis. In Chicago a year ago she met Harold Baker, a young Englishman on a visit to this country. He was won by her and proposed marriage. She refused him at first and he left for England.

Not discouraged, he persisted in his proposals, making them by letter, and the young woman reconsidered. It was agreed that he should come to America again and that they should be married.

The young woman was preparing her wedding garments, when her mother was taken ill and died. The young man came across to find his fiancee heartbroken over her mother's death. She was so absorbed by her grief that she did not notice her lover's peculiar actions. It was discovered that his mind was becoming deranged.

His father was sent for and arrived in time to take the son, now unbalanced mentally, back to England.

For three months Rose Bennett, 17 years old, was a wife without the knowledge of her parents, with whom she lived at 332 Evergreen avenue, Brooklyn. She was wedded to Edward E. Richards, 23 years old, on March 23, in the Church of St. John the Baptist, Lewis and Willoughby avenues.

Mrs. Peter G. Bennett, mother of the bride, did not know of the romance in the family until last week, when Rose dropped her wedding ring. Mrs. Bennett forgave the girl, as all good mothers do, and when Mr. Bennett came home she broke the news to him. Mr. and Mrs. Richards are now living with the old folks.

Mrs. Bennett would not permit the bride to talk about the wedding, but said for her: "They are two foolish young persons. They got married on the quiet and we knew nothing about it until a few days ago. Rose is young and he is a mere boy. I have a lot of sewing to do for her. You know girls need a lot of sewing for anything like this, and I am one of the old-fashioned kind who believe in having it done at home. They will go to housekeeping soon, and I must get the sewing done, so you will excuse me." Marriages like that seem to run in our family, for my son went away and came back with a wife."

A comedy of love was enacted recently at Olney, Ill. A bashful young man, Edward P. Bird, of Noble, went to get a marriage license which would enable him to marry Miss Rose Mosser. He approached the license clerk, who had just finished making out a hunter's license. Turning to Bird he asked: "Do you want one?"

"Yes," said the bashful Mr. Bird.

Therefore the clerk made out a document, describing the color of his hair and eyes, giving his height, weight, and age, and other characteristics.

Taking the license, the young man set out to find his fiancee and then to find a minister. The clergyman was about to perform the ceremony when he looked at the license.

"Well," he said, "this authorizes you to hunt various kinds of game, but I don't see anything authorizing you to take a wife."

He handed Mr. Bird the document, and the astounded bridegroom found that he had a hunter's license and not a marriage license. The bride promptly did what all self-respecting brides would have done. She fainted. The bridegroom left other persons to bring her back to life while he hit the pike for the license office again. The Chicago Tribune says that there is now in the clerk's office a detached certificate pinned to the stub of the hunters' license book, and across the face in red ink is written: "Canceled; not needed."

A Cincinnati couple feared the things which their kind and energetic friends might have planned for them. William Hickey and Miss Minnie Savage dodged the rice throwing and other outbreaks customary on the festive marriage occasion by hiding their getaway clothes in some part of the city not yet known, stealing away from their friends, dressing at the unknown spot, and leaving for parts unknown on some unknown train. The friends still are standing about the house with shoes and rice in their hands waiting for someone to show up at whom they can fire the parting shots.

C OPPERHEAD SNEERED.

John Burroughs' Tale of a Mighty Smart Reptile and the Man Who Teased It.

The naturalist, John Burroughs, is opposed to nature books that treat of animals too imaginatively—that impute to animals sentiments of love, pity, tenderness and refinement which mankind has no way of proving that they possess.

"Sometimes in reading one of these fictitious nature stories—stories that many persons believe to be true—I am reminded," Mr. Burroughs said one day, "of the story of the intelligent copperhead. This story is quite as true as many that are implicitly credited.

"According to it, there was a man who had the habit of teasing copperheads. He would find a copperhead's hole, and then he would wait beside it until the snake returned—till it had got so far into the hole that only the end of the tail protruded.

"This he would seize and with a quick movement he would throw the snake 20 or 30 feet away. When the snake returned to its hole the operation was repeated, and so on until the jolter was weary.

"One day the man did this to a copperhead of unusual intelligence. The snake, on alighting the first time, did not make for its hole again immediately, as the others had always done, but it lay still and regarded its tormentor, thinking. For a long while it thought.

"Then, very slowly it approached the hole, turned round and entered backward—entered tail first—sneering slightly at the man whom it had thus duped."

Odd Piscatorial Discoveries.

A fishing firm of Wickford, R. I., has recently made some odd discoveries regarding the finny tribe. Some time ago a male sea trout was discovered that had in its internal economy both a male and female roe. A day or two since another queer sea trout was caught. When it was opened a stone, weighing over a pound and shaped like a paving stone, was found in its stomach, and how the fish, with such a cargo aboard, was able to swim is a mystery.

RELEASED EACH OTHER.

Matrimonial Bureau Courtship Ends Somewhat Abruptly, But to Mutual Satisfaction.

James B. Good, a wealthy cattleman of Navarre, Texas, and Miss Mary Andrews, of Covington, Ky., who had won each other's heart by mail through the medium of a matrimonial bureau, met at the courthouse at Leavenworth, Kan., to be married. Each had what purported to be a photograph of the other, and it was expected that the recognition would be mutual, but it was not.

The two walked through the corridors for three hours, passing each other a score of times, without a suspicion as to the true state of affairs. Finally both made inquiries of the marriage license clerk, and thus they met.

The Texan grasped says the Chicago Inter Ocean, when he realized that the over-plump, none-too-fair maiden before him had for four months been the one object of his heart's desire, and reflected that she had letters from him which would give her a verdict without the jury leaving the box.

The maiden, too, was apparently a bit disappointed in her cavalier. She drew his photograph from her pocket, looked first at it and then at the Texan, finally remarking, evidently referring to the photograph:

"Well, I don't see how he ever did it."

This broke the ice, and in three minutes the matrimonial deal was off, and there will be no breach of promise suit.

"I am not a beauty myself," Miss Andrews remarked afterwards, "and wouldn't expect too much in a husband, but no woman under 80 in her right mind could marry that man."

"He wasn't much on looks, was she?" was the Texan's only comment.

Miss Andrews left for Covington and Good for Kansas City, "to forget about her," he said.

Living Is Cheap in India.

It costs very little to support a family in India. Millions of men in that country live, marry and rear healthy children upon an income which, even when the wife works, is rarely above 60 cents a week.

PAUL WON THE BET.

How a Chicago Hobo Pooled Police Sergeant and Got Free Ride to the Lockup.

Unable to secure a night's lodging through his persuasive oratorical powers, Paul Ernester, of Chicago, picked up a plank and beat his way into at least six months of both free board and lodgings, much to the surprise of the police who had just turned down his well-worded request.

Ernester, who has a club-foot, applied for a bed at the East Chicago avenue police station, but was told that the city's hotel was on the West Side.

"You'll have to furnish me with carriage fare, then," said Paul, "for with this bum pedal of mine I couldn't get there much before breakfast."

"Not so that you could notice it," replied the desk sergeant, "you walk or you don't get a bed."

But Ernester knew a system worth two of the sergeant's, and he vanished from the view of that officer—just for a minute.

A crash just outside of the station aroused seven policemen, the lieutenant and several hundred unsuspecting neighbors, who rushed to the street armed for a battle.

Paul had facetiously waved a plank through a plate-glass window in the front of a saloon, and was waiting to be arrested.

"Do I get my lodgings now?" he asked. "You win," responded a copper, and also predicted that about six months of stonebreaking would help him to earn it.

Forty Legless Veterans.

There are 40 veterans of the civil war who lost both feet in battle. It is as one of these that Corporal Tanner's pension was increased to $100 a month, which is the rate as that for the loss of both hands.

KILLED BY SNEEZING.

Strange Case of a Kentucky Girl Whose Father Guards Her Grave in the Cemetery.

A daughter of Benjamin Ball, who lives in Dix River bottoms, Harrisburg, Ky., died with an ailment that puzzled the physicians. On the second day of last March the young lady, who was just 16, robust and large for her years, began to sneeze and kept it up constantly for four weeks, the longest interval between any two sneezes being about one minute. At the expiration of the four weeks the sneezing stopped, and it was hoped that she would not again be troubled. Three weeks later, however, she was again attacked with sneezing, and notwithstanding that she had the best of medical attention, kept it up constantly until death relieved her.

During the first attack the girl remained in her usual perfect health, but during the last spell she suffered excruciating pain and wasted away. Her limbs and hands doubled up and it was impossible to straighten them. She made repeated endeavors to bite herself and to pull her hair out, and days before her death it took several strong hands to hold her in bed.

The remains were buried in the Christopher graveyard, and every night since the interment the broken-hearted father has pillowed his head on the mound that covers his girl, with a shotgun by his side, for fear her grave may be distrubed in the interest of medical science.

Pneumonia to the Front.

In Chicago and New York, according to recent statistics, pneumonia has now superseded pulmonary tuberculosis as the cause of greatest mortality.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, ... Proprietor

Isn't a mistake to naturalize these foreigners when they have little or no knowledge of the English language or American institutions? A political party should not resort to such schemes to increase its vote.

The Westerly, R. I. Sun says:

"Mr. Roosevelt will not be re-elected president in 1904. That is so sure a fact that one cannot even make a bet on the proposition."

There's a wonderful man in The Sun's editorial chair.

One of our suffering contemporaries delivers himself as follows:

"The men who spend the most money with the paper kick the least. "If you expect a man to find a compliment about himself, you must put it on the front page in boldface type."

In its report of the failure of Assemblyman Hall, who was bitterly opposed at the polls for his party in this city, The Trenton Trus American says that one of his principal creditors is Chairman Hamilton Kean, the amount of the indebtedness being $1,800.

It might be added that he owes Mr. Kean a greater debt than that representing a pecuniary obligation.

Former Orator J. E. Martine, whose fellow citizens here admire him for his optimism, aggressiveness and consistency, believes that Mayor Tom Johnson is the logical candidate of the Democratic party for a presidential nomination provided he wins the gubernatorial battle in Ohio. Mayor Johnson is fortunate in having "Jim" as a friend, but as for a prophet—well he could do better.

Rather a dangerous form of amusement is that indulged in by boys who shoot arrows into the air on the public streets. Some youngsters on Grove street recently were enjoying the pastime, sending the missiles towards the clouds in utter disregard for the possibility of their landing on the heads of passers-by. The only precaution taken against accidents was the shouting of the warning "heads," in tones sufficient to excite the stoutest heart, and tending to induce the victim to raise his head involuntarily and thereby incur the danger of receiving the arrow in his eye. There can be no objection to the bow shooting; it is doubtless the best of sport. The only "kick" coming is on the choice of the shooting gallery.

According to the Union Democrat, of Rahway, Senator Kean and Congressman Fowler are going to fight it to a finish in this county. In an editorial on political gossip it states that:

"The Republican Assemblyman candidate pot is getting a lively simmer on. There are candidates galore in Plainfield, representing the Kean and Fowler factions, which are still 'looking daggers' at each other; and there are some of the same indications in Rahway. Freeholder Tillman is being boomed by Fowlerites, though some are trying to side-track him for Mayor and his friends may conclude a renomination for Freeholder will be sufficient. The Receiver Charles E. Reed's name has been mentioned as an Assembly candidate for the Kean faction."

The Jersey City Evening Journal says:

"Last winter the irreverent in the Assembly Chamber got into the habit of saying, 'Oh, Lord, Popcorn and Tackhammer,' but that was as nothing to the libertine which have since been taken the sinuous sibilance of the name of the Somerset Assemblyman. He has been mentioned in print as 'Old Swack,' 'Swackie,' 'Smiling Sam,' 'Sunny Sam' and other abbreviations, as if he had been a pencil and had been gradually worn down from Samuel S. Swackhamer, solicitor, Assemblyman from Somerset, to a mere nub of a name like Swackie, which is very wrong. Now the Camden Post-Telegram calls the prominent statesman 'Samuel Swingarm Swackhamer,' and is promptly and properly taken to task by the Plainfield Press, which says: 'Call him swingarm or what you like just now, brother; it's just possible that you may feel honored to call him Governor some day—' That's right, Press, stick up for Samuel S. Swackhamer, of Somerset. He hails from Plainfield. By the way, what does the middle S stand for any way? Was it just thrown in to make the triple S a little more scollopy?"

The middle S stands for Stansbury, brother, and The Daily Press, an independent newspaper, stands for Swackhamer as an able man.

He doesn't live in Plainfield, however, but will (against his wish) when the majority of North Plainfielders vote that annexation and consolidation is to their advantage.

J. F. BUCKLE OPPOSED BY THE KEAN FACTION

Nominations for Assembly, Justices of the Peace and Other Offices Filed.

FIGHT TO THE FINISH

CHARLES L. MOFFETT AGAIN BROUGHT OUT FOR ASSEMBLY.

Nominations Not Made in Some Districts—Lists Filed for County Committeemen—Primaries on Tuesday, September 9.

Nominations were completed and filed with the City Clerk Saturday night by both the Republican and Democratic parties of the city. Aside from the question of a choice for the Assembly there does not seem to be much of any great interest, at present. The "regulars" in the Republican party from the four wards have come out in support of Councilman J. F. Buckle, of the First Ward, for that nomination, as predicted by The Daily Press a few weeks ago. In the Third Ward there is the looked-for opposition from the Rushmore-Murray faction. This faction, it is said, will nominate and support Former Sheriff W. T. Kirk, of the Third Ward. There is also some support from the other wards for Kirk, delegates being selected from those wards who are believed to be friendly to his candidacy. Of course, this faction represents United States Senator John Kean, while the "regulars" are the friends of Congressman Charles E. Fowler. It is simply a continuation of the old fight.

As for the Democrats their candidate for Assembly will probably be Lawyer Charles L. Moffett, of the Fourth Ward. It is argued that he ran twice for this office under somewhat adverse circumstances and it is believed that this year he would stand a far better show of an election.

It will be noticed in the two lists that in some wards and districts nominations have not been made, the parties preferring to allow them to go by default. The primaries will be held Tuesday evening, September 8, when the first round of the fight will be witnessed.

Excursion to Coney.

The fifteenth annual excursion of the Plainfield Grocers' Association to Coney Island, Labor Day, promises to be an enjoyable event. The trip will be made from New York by one of the iron steamboats. The train will Dunellen at 8 o'clock and Plainfield five minutes later. Returning the excursionists will leave Coney Island at 7 o'clock.

Fifty Years Wedded.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. George Lyman VanEmburgh, of 391 East Second street, for the observance of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. The event will be celebrated on Tuesday, September 15, from 4 until 10 o'clock. The minister who married them is still living and he expects to be present at the celebration.

SEVEN POSTED SCORES

FINAL PLAY IN HALSTED COMPETITION AT WESTFIELD.

Saugstad Made the Best Score at the Hillside, and Now Leads in Total Standing for Golf Committee Cup.

Despite the driving rain storm and the disagreeably cool weather of Saturday several enthusiastic members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club braved the elements and made the rounds of the course in competition for the Golf Committee cup. There were just seven contestants who posted scores. Olaf Saugstad won first honors and the lead for the trophy with a total of 15 points. Frank C. Talmadge and H. R. Stockton tied for second, each making a net score of 84 and taking a point and a half each. This makes Stockton tie Peterson for second position with a total of 14 points and gives Talmadge a total of 2 1-3.

These scores were posted for the Golf Committee cup:

Olaf Saugstad, 92, 9—83; Frank C. Talmadge, 86, 2—84; H. R. Stockton, 88, 4—84; Wilter Peterson, 90, 5—85; E. T. Newkirk, 96, 10—86; E. T. Barrows, 99, 12—87; H. D. Hibbard, 97, 9—90.

This is the standing by points for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club:

Westfield, Sept. 20—The final play in the Halsted best-hole competition on the Westfield Golf Club course, on Saturday, was won by R. I. Townley with a score of 35. This competition has been in progress during August. The preliminary play for the President's competition was also completed on Saturday. H. W. Gladwin with a net score of 90 and Edgar I. Serrell with a net score of 94, were the last two of the sixteen to qualify for the President's cup, at match play, during September. This play will begin next Saturday.

The Golf Committee has arranged for Labor Day morning a men's foursome, 18 holes, handicap play. There will be no scheduled event in the afternoon as nearly everyone will attend the horse races at Fair Acres.

ENDEAVOR OFFICERS.

Nominating and Anniversary Committees of Trinity Reformed's Society Appointed.

A nominating committee to nominate new officers for the ensuing year was appointed at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society, of Trinity Reformed Church, Monday. These persons were chosen: H. P. Seader, E. F. Sheppard, Charles Zimmer, Miss H. M. Kreitling and Miss M. L. Pugh. This committee on anniversary was also appointed: Miss May A. Randolph, Mrs. H. F. Crawford, Miss H. M. Keitling, Charles M. Dolliver and W. J. Trenbath. The appointments were made by Miss Mabel Wilson, president of the society.

Expansion in Business.

W. H. Kiroh, contractor, is branching out and has added the plumbing and tinning business to his carpenter business. He has bought out E. D. Barrett's plumbing business, including tools stock and the like. Mr. Kiroh has employed a first-class plumber and tinner and hereafter will do all the plumbing and tinning on his contracts instead of letting them out.

Horse Races Sure.

The horse races, which were scheduled for last Saturday at the Plainfield Driving Park, have been postponed to Saturday, September 12. The same attractive programme will be presented and there will be a band concert as previously arranged.
